The W.M. in his reply said he trusted that Bro. Little's prognostications would be amply verified during his year of office. Among Masons there should be a unity of purpose, and that unity of purpose had been exemplified by the manner the brethren had responded to the toast. It augured well for the future of the Stuart Lodge, and he felt confident that in this lodge there would always be unity of purpose. He would wish to impress upon the brethren the necessity for such unity of purpose between the W.M. and the brethren. He thought they had a bright year before them. The question of admission of members to a lodge was one of great importance. They should be very particular about the brethren they admitted, and he trusted that with reference to any candidate that might be brought forward blackballing would never be known. There was a way in which blackballing could be avoided. If a brother found that there was any one proposed for initiation with whom he could not sit harmoniously and work in the lodge, or against whom he entertained the slightest feelings of animosity, or, even to go further, with whom he could not sit down at the social table, let him go to the W.M. and state his case confidentially to him; he would at once advise that the name be erased from the list, rather than that the Stuart Lodge should in any case blackball any one, whether as an initiate or as a joining member. It was a matter he felt very strongly upon. When he spoke of unanimity, perhaps he might say this of his officers, that although, through circumstances which he need not mention, a considerable time had elapsed between the sending in of the petition for the Stuart Lodge and the consecration of the lodge, yet the first cast of officers was the same as it was to-night. Circumstances in the life of every man necessitated change, and circumstances in the life of every Mason gave him opportunities in his own lodge for advancement. Those advantages had been offered to officers of this lodge, who had banded themselves together as a band of brothers, to inaugurate and bring to a successful issue the Stuart Lodge. Having such officers around him, good men and true, the barque of the Stuart Lodge must of necessity be launched on the sea of prosperity. He had been that night overwhelmed with the congratulations of friends, friends with whom there were many associations he looked back upon with a great deal of pleasure; and it would ill become him now he was installed, and a brother Mason too, if he forgot his father in Masonry, a man who long since was dead and gone, but who, though not in the flesh, was in a portrait looking down upon him as the W.M. of the Stuart Lodge, a man who inducted him into Masonry—Bro. John Thomas, who initiated him in the Sphinx Lodge in 1872. Bro. Thomas watched over his progress in Masonry with pleasure, and now that he was installed as W.M. of the Stuart Lodge, his portrait was looking down upon him, as though he were anxious that in whatever he (the W.M.) did there should be the tinge of prosperity. There was also another friend of his present, the W.M. of the Sphinx Lodge, Bro. Past Master Nairne, and that brother also he greeted with the greatest sincerity as a well wisher. There was another friend present, Bro. Seex, W.M. of the Industry Lodge. He was glad to see them all gather round him, and there was nothing throughout the whole of the ceremony that impressed him so much as the adherence of his friends to him in the moment which to him was one of very great trial. (Hear, hear.) The W.M. then gave "The Visitors," and mentioned the fact that the Board of Installed Masters numbered twenty-five brethren, among whom the purple was amply represented. He hoped that on future occasions the lodge would be well supported by visitors.

Bros. Grabham, H. Thompson, John Seex, and P. A. Nairne responded, all congratulating the W.M. on the consecration of the lodge, and his own advancement to the chair, and wishing prosperity to the lodge.

Bro. Little proposed "The Charities," and thanked the W.M. for having undertaken the office of Steward for the next festival of the Girls' School. The time was short, but he hoped that by the help of numerous friends he would be able to come to the festival with generous donations. Of the Institutions he would say, "May they all flourish," esto perpetua.

The W.M. responded, and dwelt on the principle of brotherly love, relief, and truth. He had been pressed to become a Steward, and had refused; but, like Donna Anna, "saying she would ne'er consent, consented." The Girls' Institution's festival was the nearest, and so he took that. The Institution was eighty-nine years of age, the oldest of the Masonic Institutions. It had been said of Scotchmen that they kept their hands in their pockets, and always shut. He did not believe it. He intended to go up to the Girls' School, and also to take with him a good list. Bro. Little saying the time was short, evidently did not expect much. He trusted he should take him by surprise, and that the Stuart Lodge should not only be a success itself, but in its support of the Institutions of the Order. The W.M. next proposed "The Joining Members." One of them he had appointed to office that evening. He had had the pleasure of investing one to office whom he was very well acquainted with—their Bro. Treasurer. He appointed him to that office for the very reason that he had long been his (the W.M.'s) Treasurer. Time after time when he wanted money he knew where to go to get it. He thought, and the other founders of the lodge also thought with him, that he could not do better than associate with the lodge his own father—a man for whom he should say nothing now—his feelings were beyond utterance in that respect, and he had a sense of delicacy about the matter. He could say this, that he had not appointed any man to office with greater feelings of pleasure than his own father, because he found his father giving countenance to his proceedings. His father was older in Masonry than he was; but it was a matter of great pride and congratulation to him to invest his father with a collar of office.

Bro. Stuart Barker (Treasurer) responded. He said he had never felt himself in a position of so much difficulty. It was not that he did not know where he was, but he was the subject of a peculiar sensation, for he did not know what he was. For thirty years he had been the father of his son; recently he had become his brother. His wife for thirty years had been his son's mother; but now, he being his son's brother, she was his sister-in-law. As he had another son, that son must be his son's nephew. He had a daughter who had been his son's sister hitherto, but who, being his brother's wife's daughter, must be his son's niece. In fact, he wanted to know the precise relationship he held to the W.M. (Laughter.) But joking apart, he must say, with a great many of the other speakers, what great pleasure he had had at being present at that day's ceremony. If it had been a pleasure and gratification to the brethren who had presided, how much greater must the pride and gratification of the W.M.'s father have been to see him presiding over the lodge, and to see gathered around him many old and dear friends. He was an older Mason than his son, and when he was made a Mason his son wanted him to tell the secrets of Freemasonry. Of course he would not do so, and his son told him that he would go and find them out for himself. He did so, and he had that day found out a secret which his father did not know. He should always take great interest in the success of the Stuart Lodge, from the fact that his son was its first W.M. In going through life it had always been his study to endeavour on all occasions to train up his son "in the way he should go," as that old Book, the Book of the Law, said that when he grew up to manhood he "should not depart from it." He undertook the office of Treasurer of the lodge under somewhat different feelings to those which his son mentioned when he invested him. He had always understood that it was the duty of a Treasurer to take care of the Treasury, but he did not know that it was the duty of a Treasurer to be drawn upon. His son had been drawing upon him for a long time, and he thought he could draw on him through the lodge. (No, no.) He was delighted to hear that emphatic "No," but however that might be, there would be no difficulty on that score. The Stuart Lodge would be always able to meet any claims that might be made on it. After the successful opening of the Stuart Lodge there was no doubt what it would be in the future. He trusted that the brethren might often meet together again, and that nothing might occur to interrupt the harmony that ought to exist among the brethren of a Freemasons' lodge.

The W.M. afterwards gave "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge," to which the S.W. responded. "The Press" followed, and was responded to by Bro. H. Massey (Freemason) and H. Thompson, and the Tyler's toast concluded the evening, which was most delightfully spent.

I have been asked within this week to attend a consecration of a new Masonic lodge, No. 1671. Now, less than a year ago I was present at the consecration of No. 1601. Figures are more eloquent than words in this case, and these two prove to demonstration the great increase "Modern Masonry" is making. Another and a far from pleasant proof of the spread of Masonry was furnished the other night at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge. When the procession of Grand Officers entered the "Temple," the place was not simply full of "rulers of the Craft," but it was overflowing with them. If lodges continue to increase as they have done recently, some additional accommodation must be provided, or the number of those entitled to attend must be considerably reduced. —Mayfair.

CONSECRATION OF THE MIZPAH LODGE, No. 1671.

On Tuesday evening last the Mizpah Lodge, No. 1671, was consecrated at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, who was assisted by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain; Bro. Jas. Terry, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies; Bro. Herts, as Director of Ceremonies, and numerous other brethren. The chair of Senior Warden was taken by Bro. J. B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes, and the chair of Junior Warden by Bro. C. A. Murton, Past Grand Deacon. The full list of brethren comprised the following: Bros. C. Schmidt, 217; Saml. Gamman, P.M. 206; Nelson Reed, 38, 1572; A. J. Duff Filer, P.G.S.B.; Jas. Terry, Prov. G.D.C. Herts; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; John Hervey, G.S.; John B. Monckton, President Board of General Purposes; Mont. Scott, C. B. Payne, G.T.; W. G. Jennings, T. J. Maidwell, J.W. 27; George Kenning, Treasurer 1657; W. S. Whitaker, W.M. 1572; J. Chavey, 180; E. B. West, 142; F. H. Willcocks, 1572; N. T. Pearce, 1572; W. J. H. Klotgen, 1247; R. Pawson Hooton, 1572; Bertram Noakes, J.W. 92; Saml. Gamman, P.M. 206; John Green, P.M. 27; Geo. Carew Steele, 1572; Montagu Scott, P.M. 765; Charles J. St. Alphonse, S.D. 108; Philip Bulloch, 1572; Edward Humphrey, 538; Robert Allen, 1395; J. Brown, W.M. 765; and Rev. W. Taylor Jones, W.M. 1601.

After the lodge had been formally opened in the different degrees, the Presiding Officer, Bro. Hervey, proceeded to address the brethren on the nature of the meeting in the following terms:—

Brethren,—I need not say what we have met to do this afternoon, because you are all well aware that we have assembled here for the purpose of consecrating a new lodge, one which I trust will be a credit to the Craft and an honour to the great city in which it is about to be located. I have so often addressed the brethren upon one or two points, and it is difficult upon these occasions to find anything fresh to say, that I am not going to give you a lecture again to-day upon the necessity of being careful whom you introduce into your ranks, or to dilate upon the uncharitableness, I may say wickedness, of blackballing those of whom you know nothing, and merely for the purposes of casting a slight to or stain upon a Worshipful Master or upon the proposer of the candidate. But I would still reiterate that those are subjects, and legitimate subjects, to discuss in a Masons' lodge, and it is very desirable indeed that they should be enforced in a new lodge, which is about to be consecrated, and about to be launched into existence. Brethren, there are one or two things which I thought I would mention this afternoon, one or two statistical matters which might interest some of those present, which would make a little difference in the address, the very short address, which I am about to give you this evening. In looking over the Grand Lodge records, which I was doing the other evening for a particular object, it struck me that it might be a satisfaction to the brethren here to know how the Craft had progressed during the last few years, and going back merely to the time of the union, I jotted down one or two points which I think those here may be glad to know. I take it for granted that all those who are in this room know that, prior to 1812, or prior to 1813, rather, there were two Grand Lodges in existence in the City of London, one under the Grand Mastership of His Royal Highness the then Prince of Wales, who was afterwards Prince Regent and George IV., and the other under the Grand Mastership of the Duke of Athol, and that these two Grand Lodges went by the respective names of these distinguished persons. I find that the number of lodges in 1812, on what was termed the Prince's side, was 640; and in 1813 the Athol and Prince's Lodges joined together, and formed what is now termed the United Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England. I find also, that while on the Prince's side there were 640 lodges, those on the Athol side I have no means of ascertaining, because they did not keep their books in any very regular way, and they had no calendars to which reference can be made; yet when the two Grand Lodges were joined together, the Athol Grand Lodge and the Prince of Wales's Grand Lodge, although the number of lodges on the Prince's side was 640, yet when the dormant lodges were eliminated upon the two sides, the two Grand Lodges could only muster 647 lodges. This went on till 1813, therefore we started with 647 lodges, and in the year 1832 the lodges were all renumbered, the vacant places closed up, and I find that in 1832 the number appeared to be 865 lodges, or an increase on the number of 647 of 218; but as the new number began with 594 lodges, it really appears that in these 20 years there was a reduction of 53 lodges; and in 1832 we started with the last number, 594. The receipts of money in 1812 were, on the Benevolence account £970, and on the General Purposes account £1350, but we had improved in that respect, as in 1832 the Benevolence amounted to £1189, and the General Purposes to £2209. The next renumbering of the lodges was in 1863, the number of lodges being 1267, or an increase on the number in 1832 of 673 lodges in 31 years, the new numbers beginning with 574, shewing a positive increase of 380 lodges, although during the period Canada had declared itself independent. The funds also had much increased; the Fund of Benevolence being £3081, and the General Purposes £3794. Well, brethren, to shew the progress of the Craft at the present time, the last warrant granted is No. 1682, shewing a gross increase of 708 lodges; and deducting the Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and other places which have established Grand Lodges of their own, it gives a net increase of 588 lodges in fourteen years. The funds also have increased in like proportion. The receipts of the Fund of Benevolence for the last year, 1876, were £7804, and of General Purposes £12,474. So much, brethren, for the increase in the lodges and the increase in the Craft; and I do most sincerely trust that the increase in the respectability of the Craft is in a like ratio with the increase in the number of lodges. I do not think we have any cause of complaint on that head. I think we go on increasing, and certainly, looking back to the records of Grand Lodge I do not think we have as much bickering or as much difficulty of keeping together now, at any rate, than we had in former times when the numbers were far scantier. That there is a good deal, and a great deal more dissension in the Craft than there ought to be, I am afraid my good friend, the brother who is now occupying the S.W. chair, would say was the fact, occupying as he does the very onerous position of President of the Board of General Purposes, before whom come a great many of the difficulties of the Craft; but if brethren would do their utmost in their own lodges to try and smooth difficulties down, to endeavour, when an opportunity occurs, not of fanning the flame, but of allaying any little excited feeling which may present itself, I think those difficulties would still further decrease than they do now. Brethren, I told you I would not delay you many minutes to-day, and I think I have kept my word. Probably the little detail which I have given you may not be uninteresting to you (hear, hear); but be it as it may, I think you will listen with far more gratification to my reverend friend on my left, who will presently address you, than you would to the weak and feeble words which I can put together. I will now ask the brethren to stand to order while the Grand Chaplain gives the opening prayer.

The ceremony was then proceeded with, and the Rev. R. J. Simpson delivered the following address:—

Worshipful Master, Wardens, and brethren,—It was my privilege on a late occasion, in connection with our highly esteemed brother in the chair, to assist in consecrating the Skelmersdale Lodge, and on that occasion I took the opportunity of saying a few words upon a subject which is, and must be, of interest to all Masons—I mean the subject of Masonic unselfishness, both in the lodge and out of it. I propose on the present occasion to say a few words upon a branch of that subject, which, I think, may be highly desirable, especially at a time when, as our Master has told us in the very interesting resumed he has given us, Masonry has become so largely increased in numbers, and with those numbers there has come so large an amount of discussion. I propose to say a few words upon the subject of moral courage. There are two lights by which we, as men and Masons, are guided; one is the light of conscience, that inner light which burns within the breast of every Mason who is an educated and a civilised being; the other is the light of the Holy Law of the Great Architect of the Universe, revealed to men in his mercy and goodness. Now, in the latter we find no insignificant opportunities of remarking upon the practice of that virtue of which I have spoken. In the very earliest time we find the great preacher of righteousness standing forth amidst his fellows, and standing forth as the witness of God's most Holy Law, as delivered to mankind at that early period of our history. And he was honoured by becoming the builder, by the Divine inspiration of that by which the fragments of the human race were preserved and a new generation was left to the world. We find Moses, the great lawgiver, in like manner standing amidst his fellows as a witness for the truth. We find him followed by Joshua, the great general of the Lord, who carried out his duties in such a manner, that he was made on his death to say, "As for me and my house, whatever others do, we will serve the Lord." Job, in his generation, though tempted to "curse God and die," was likewise, though solicited in many ways to forget the Great Architect of his fortunes, as well as of his life, still manfully persevering in the course of duty. King Josiah came to the throne, young, it is true, but noble-minded, pure-hearted, and determined, amidst "a wicked and adulterous generation," to do his duty and to bring Israel in the right path. We find a little later on one of the greatest prophets standing on Mount Carmel, and, surrounded by a host of idolatrous priests, standing up as the single witness of Jehovah, a sight on which the angel hosts must have looked down with admiration to see a child of Adam doing so for Jehovah. And we may remember the three common men, neither prophets, kings, nor lawgivers, but three ordinary men like ourselves, declining to bow down to the golden image upon the plains of Dura, and willing to sacrifice life itself rather than act contrary to their conscience. This noble roll of worthies which we have handed down to us in that Holy Volume, which is given for instruction and for example, point out to us clearly, I think, our duty and our privilege as men to exercise that conscience with which God has endowed us for his high glory and the benefit of our fellow men. It is impossible that we can ignore the fact that that which essentially separates us from all the other creatures of God is this, that He gives us the power of choice. We have a will even under God's will; and if we had not the power of choice and will we must sink into mere machines. If we have that power of choice and will, what is the next clear duty of every man of independent and of noble and religious principle? It is to express it. No man has a right to take the light with which God has blessed him and put it "under a bushel." He is bound to place it on a candlestick, that he and others may see; not that he may use it for his own boastful purposes, but that he may "glorify his Father in Heaven." If that be the case, how incumbent it is upon us as men and Masons, that we should observe this rule in our dealings not only with our brethren but with the outer world; and I venture to say, sir, though it may appear a paradox, that it is the want of this honesty and independence of character and opinion that too often creates that strong discussion and those bickerings which we all of us in common deplore. If men would speak out, not unkindly, not uncharitably, not dictatorially, but honestly, bravely, as Englishmen and Masons, and as if acting under a higher power, what they think, whether it be right or wrong, I believe that we should have much fewer discussions, bickerings, and misunderstandings than we have at present. Now, in public matters, outside of Masonry, I need not say that this is highly valued, and that, whether in one department of society or in another, the man who openly, frankly, and conscientiously states his opinion may possibly at the time meet with unpleasantness, but eventually must claim respect, may even from those who may differ from him. And coming to Masonry itself, it is very clear, sir, that in a society which counts so many members, and, therefore, so many minds, minds constituted differently, men of temperaments very varied, which must be, when men act upon conscience, considerable difference of opinion must prevail, not in our principles, but in the application of our principles, for it is, after all in the application of principles to the acts of common life that we really find a great difficulty. Now there are many subjects in Masonry, ay, even at this moment, which demand very great consideration, and there are some which probably will come up causing considerable discussion. But I venture to think that if we wish to find a solution of those difficult problems, for some of them will be difficult, whether they be problems in connection with the subject to which allusion has been made on a recent occasion by our most respected, and I will almost say our beloved Grand Secretary, which has been taken up and made almost a world-wide question—whether that great question, or whether the smaller questions which agitate the Craft, come up, let us frankly, and clearly, and honestly state our opinions, and have the moral courage not to follow any man or any set of men, but simply and honestly to speak, and do, and think as we feel. This will avoid an immense amount of misunderstanding; for I very often find it to be the case that men utter one opinion when they are talking to their fellows in private, and when they come into public their opinions seem to have altered in a remarkable manner. I think, therefore, that consistent moral courage to speak, whether in the presence of opponents or of friends, will save an immense amount of heart-burning and of trouble. Now, I think there is a still more important field upon which we may show our moral courage—I mean our moral conduct and example as men. There are, I believe, in the heart of every man those principles of right conduct in the work of life, especially in regard to moral truth, which would often find their way to the surface were it not for the want of moral courage. A man fears, perhaps, "the finger of scorn" more than he would fear "the cannon's mouth." But why should he? Why should not every man among us, when we feel that that which is right is what we feel and wish to do, never fear to express before our fellows that which we believe in our hearts to be the right? "Be just, and fear not," says one old poet, and I am sure that the man who follows out those principles of purity, and temperance, and truthfulness, and honesty in our dealings with men and among our brother Masons, the more we shall attract their respect at any rate, and the more we shall bring upon us the smile of God. But, "bowing down to the golden image," or to mere rank, has been well portrayed by that same old poet in a remarkable passage, well known to us all, where the favourite of the king says, as a reflection at the end of life,

"Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal
I serv'd my King, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies."

But, brethren, be assured that whether it be the Mizpah Lodge or any other lodge, we shall best carry out the design in our own creation, as well as the creation of that aggregate body to which we belong, by displaying the moral courage which is the immediate offspring of our good conscience, and which, I am quite sure, will lead to the happiest results. I trust that in this lodge, begun under such happy auspices, that as well as every other Masonic virtue may not only be planted but flourish, and that we may, carrying out the good example set by noble Masons who now adorn the Craft, whether in high or subordinate positions, not only look to them, but to those who have gone before, and, in the words of old Longfellow, they may feel those words, which I believe are peculiarly Masonic:

"Lives of great men all remind us
We may make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.
Footprints that, perhaps, another,
Travelling in life's troubled plain,
Some forlorn and shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, may take heart again.
Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate,
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labour and to wait."

The reverend brother resumed his seat amidst loud cheers, and the ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with and concluded.

After the consecration of the lodge, Bro. Hervey installed Bro. Nelson Reed as W.M., and the following brethren were invested as his officers:—Bros. David R. Still, S.W.; Walter W. Medcalf, J.W.; James Jackson Avery, Treas.; H. G. Buss, Sec.; W. Vilven, S.D.; J. Bergmann, J.D.; Schmidt, I.G.; and Henry Shaw, Tyler. The addresses were delivered by Bro. C. A. Murton, James Terry, and Montagu Scott. Votes of thanks were passed to the consecrating brethren, and the honorary membership of the lodge was conferred on them. Bro. Murton acknowledged the compliment on behalf of himself and Bros. Hervey, Simpson, Terry, and Monckton. Ten guineas was voted to the list of the W.M., as Steward for the next festival of the Girls' School. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The ceremonies of consecration and installation were musically accompanied by Bro. G. C. Searle, Org. 1572, who in the course of the proceedings played Bro. Seymour Smith's "Installation March."

After the banquet the usual toasts were honoured. Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson responded for "The Grand Officers."

Bro. Monckton, in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," said that all the brethren would, from what they had seen of the W.M.'s working that day, agree with him in the line he quoted from Shakespeare,—"The Master, he is a good one, and his workmen doth challenge much respect." If one of the brethren differed from it, let him stand in his place and say so. They knew that they had met on an exceedingly interesting occasion; they knew beforehand that they would see the work well done in the youngest lodge under the British Constitution, and they were entitled to expect perfection on the part of the consecrating officer because he knew his work by heart. But they were not altogether entitled to expect such working as they had from the Master, because there was that work which a new Master need not do unless he pleased. But the W.M. had done it, and whenever he (Bro. Monckton) sat in the lodge it was remarked that the new Master was up to his work. He would be painting the lily if he said more, and he should simply ask them to agree with the great man Wm. Shakespeare, in the line he had quoted from him.

The W.M. replied, and in the course of a very brief speech said he was glad to see at the table the brethren who proposed and seconded his introduction into Freemasonry. He added that it was only two years that evening that he was raised to the degree of a M.M.

Bro. Hervey replied to the toast of "The Consecrating Officer," Bro. Filer for "The Visitors," and Bro. Terry for "The Charities." Bro. Buss responded for "The Secretary," and Bro. Still for "The Officers," and Bro. Shaw having given the Tyler's toast, the brethren separated.

Under the direction of Bro. Searle, Bros. Wilcocks, Brown, Whitaker, Bergmann, Clarricoats, Pearce, and Stevens sang some excellent songs, and Bro. Montagu Scott gave a recitation.

The Bayard Lodge (No. 1615), has within twelve months of its consecration become a Vice President of the three Masonic Charities. We are also informed that its first W.M., Bro. Lieut-Col. Somerville-Burney, will have had the gratification of initiating no less than 30 candidates, at the six meetings which have been held under his able Mastership during the year, a striking proof of the estimation in which the W.M. is held by the members of this distinguished lodge, and is an example worthy of emulation by both old and new lodges.

Bro. H. Gabb, the chairman of the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum for the year 1876, was on Tuesday entertained at a banquet at St James's Hall, given him by his late colleagues on the Board of Management and a number of past officers and other friends of the institution, and presented by them with a silver epergne, in recognition of his eminent services during his year of office.—City Press.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO MALTA.

Our Royal Grand Master and the Princess were to have left for Malta, via Calais, Paris, and Marseilles, on Monday, but the journey has been postponed for a few days in consequence of a slight indisposition of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Probably when next we greet our readers, we shall have to record the departure of our Grand Master and his charming consort to the continent. As Freemasons we shall trust that this little holiday and absence may be of great benefit to the health of two persons so dear to all classes of the community, especially to our loyal Order, as all will have seen with regret that for some little time past Her Royal Highness especially has not been so often in public as an admiring people would wish, nor gone through with her usual grace and energy the routine of Court ceremonial. May all of good go with our Royal Grand Master and the Princess of Wales, and may we soon again, after a pleasant stay at Malta, that little "military hot house," and Athens, welcome them safe and sound back again to old England. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will hold levees on the 7th of May and the 2nd of June.

OUR WORSHIPFUL MASTERS.

Freemasonry, like everything else just now, has to suffer from the inroads of a morbid sensationalism. Much of our Masonic writing, the didactic twaddle of "dull dogs," the hopeless meanderings of unbright Masons, is marked by the prevailing tendency of the hour. Statements are made, not because they are true, but because they are startling, or spicy, or what not, and because, in fact, like a good deal of modern composition, verity and reality, are secondary considerations for those who please to write, and "write to please." Hence we see so often alike, in un-Masonic and Masonic columns the "magna indigestaque moles" of crude ideas, unveracious assertions, unsound premises, and utterly illogical conclusions. Such is a recent attack on our Worshipful Masters, which appears to have been originally a Transatlantic fault-finding with American officials, but is now transplanted to our tranquil shores. What can be the use or propriety of such a sentence as this, with reference to our Worshipful Masters, whether metropolitan or provincial? "Were there Grand Lecturers in England at this present time, we doubt if one half of the lodges would be able to acquit themselves even moderately well, much less with credit, in the labours of the lodge; while in far too many cases, the attempt at working would amount simply to a most pitiable display of absolute—we feel almost disposed to add—crass ignorance on the part of the Worshipful Masters." Now we deny this statement in toto, by whomsoever made, and declare it to be most unjust to our English Worshipful Masters, whether in the provinces or in town. We state unhesitatingly that any such representation of the ceremonial or intellectual efficiency of our Worshipful Masters is nothing better than a bit of sensational writing, utterly valueless as a correct description of our contemporary Masonic lodge work, and actually untrue as a statement. Is it in any sense an accurate description of our Worshipful Masters? We repeat that it is the very reverse of correct, or even of what is considerate. We have belonged ourselves to two most distinguished provinces, and the lodges there are all marked, some "strikingly so, by the uniform thorough performance by the Worshipful Masters of the duties of the chair. This can also be said of other provinces, and of a very large proportion of the lodges in the metropolis. That here and there we find "slovenly work" in our lodges, and inefficient Worshipful Masters, we do not deny, but they are, very happily, the exception, and not the rule, and to say that in about one half of our lodges the work would be only moderately well done, and that in far too many cases the Worshipful Master is utterly ignorant of his duties, is a parody on veracious statements, a burlesque on the facts of the case. We therefore give to any such assertion as this an unqualified contradiction, as we consider it to be most unsound in itself, and most unjust to our Worshipful Masters. Indeed, such a sentence must have been penned by a brother who has had but little experience of Lodge working, and has seen but very few lodges in London or in the provinces. But, as we said just now, the temptation is to write in that sensational style which is doing so much harm to literature on every side of us. There is, we repeat it, at this moment a recklessness of quotation, an unscrupulousness of assertion, which render so much of what we daily read utterly worthless as a trustworthy record of passing time and customs, and facts, and history. For though writers will differ, we prefer, and we fancy that our readers prefer too, what is true to what is telling, what is the naked reality without any of the meretricious adornments of paint or enamel. Above all, we detest and despise the more sensational writers just as we turn away from, because unreal and unsatisfactorily in the highest degree, that sensational writing which is only spiced up in truth to suit the tastes of the ignorant and the credulous.

THE "MONDE MAÇONNIQUE" AND "THE FREEMASON."

At page 476 of the last Monde Maçonique Bro. Caubet returns to the charge that those who use the word "bêtise" are "mal élevés." We "au contraire," contend that such an argument is alike precisian and puritan in the highest degree, inasmuch as the word is very commonly employed, and is in itself alike forcible and expressive. The truth is that "bêtise" really was the "word" to use in respect of the remarks of our brethren Grimaux and Caubet and their little "fiasco." And Bro. Caubet felt it to be so, "Hinc illæ lachrymæ." For what other or better word could we have employed? Let our readers remember why and how we used it. Our excellent and esteemed Grand Secretary, at the consecration of the Crichton Lodge, had, as was his right and duty, alluded, not as the Grand Secretary officially, but as Bro. John Hervey, the Consecrating Officer, to some recent proceedings in France in respect to a new agitation to remove from the French Constitution the pre-requisite condition of belief, of a general assent to the existence of God and the immortality of the soul. He had remarked, that he regretted, as all must regret, the exclusion of the Bible from the French lodges, and observed, further, that if this great change took place he was afraid that it must lead to a cessation of intercourse as between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Orient of France. Very weighty and sensible words, my Masters! What is the reply that Bro. Grimaux makes to this friendly and unofficial "avertissement" of the Grand Secretary of England, a brother who always speaks plainly, manfully, modestly and moderately, and whose words are therefore always listened to with much attention and respect? Bro. Grimaux's reply, fully endorsed by Bro. Caubet, is to this effect,—that there is in England a society which will sell the French lodges Bibles at the cheapest rate, (a remark of the greatest impertinence), and that as long as Bro. Hervey continues the all-powerful Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England such opinions will probably prevail; equally to English brethren a most offensive statement. Were we not fully justified in calling such a line of argument issuing from such an animus of irritability and intolerance, a "bêtise"? We think we were, add we are quite ready to be judged by the educated, the "bien élevés" of our French brethren. Such is not the way to meet a friendly remonstrance and a kindly warning when offered by so considerate and so able a Mason as Bro. Hervey, and we resented such utterances, by whomsoever made, knowing that we shall carry with us the hearty concurrence of all our English Fraternity. Bro. Caubet amusingly declares that because we do not take his views we are not

"partizans," therefore, of "liberty of conscience," and even kindly compares us to "Ultramontane writers." We fancy that we are truer friends to real liberty of conscience than that most bigoted faction, which in France is seeking to ignore the very first principles of true liberty of conscience, by outraging the feelings of all other Masonic bodies in the world, and which is simply playing into the hands of the Jesuits and the Ultramontanes by the specious arguments it is putting forward, and the non-natural position it has assumed. We must all be struck with the fact, not singular in the history of the world, that ultra scepticism and ultramontaniam seem to have shaken hands once again in this "Débâcle" alike in the hollowness of their propositions, and the utter unscrupulousness of their assertions. If that violent faction of "libres penseurs" gets the upper hand in French Freemasonry, it will only apparently relegate French Freemasonry to the barbarism of avowed unbelief, and in the interest of many French Masons of kindly sympathies, religious feelings and enlightened understanding, as well as of universal Freemasonry, we protest once more to-day against the revolutionary proceedings of a noisy Camarilla, and the violent invectives of a fanatic intolerance.

THE NEW GRAND SECRETARY FOR SCOTLAND.

We recur gladly to this subject (according to our promise), to which we shortly called attention in our last. Bro. D. Murray Lyon has been elected Grand Secretary by 210 votes, as against 128 for Bro. Wylie, in the place of Bro. Laurie, resigned. As we said last week, we congratulate both parties on this result, the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and Bro. D. Murray Lyon. The former has shown its desire to give the office for merit sake, simply and Masonically, and has obtained, as we believe, a most skilled and admirable official. Bro. D. Murray Lyon has had his Masonic labours and high character properly appreciated by his Scottish brethren. No one could possibly stand better than Bro. Lyon's distinguished opponent, Bro. Wylie, in the favourable opinion of all who knew him, and it is indeed no little tribute to the thoroughly Masonic excellences of Bro. D. Murray Lyon, that he has, by the suffrages of his brethren and the sheer force of his own Masonic works and worth, been enabled to bear off the palm of victory from so well-known and eminent a competitor in the Masonic arena as Bro. Wylie. We feel sure that Freemasonry in Scotland will now receive an impetus which will lead it on successfully to needful changes and happy reforms. We wish all prosperity and good to our kind Scottish brethren, and we shall watch with deep and sincere interest the official career of our very able and excellent brother the new Grand Secretary for Scotland.

THE OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE BOAT RACE.

We fully sympathize with the excitement of many of our younger readers, (though we are old ourselves), in respect of this great and remarkable annual struggle. It is alike intensely interesting to the patriotic Englishman, the genial Freemason, the lover of athletic sports, and the admirer of that manly youth which adorns our great Universities. Far from us be that idle cant, that mournful "Stigginism" of the day, which seem to be bringing "Mawworm" again to the fore with a vengeance, and which apparently would revive a puritan regime, with as good effect as of old amongst us, and put an end to all national amusements and active sports, through fear of possible and probable evil. The race has been rowed, and it has been declared a dead heat, before countless thousands, and while nothing can exceed the remarkable training and rowing powers of Cambridge, so we have never read of, heard of, or seen anything more plucky or more remarkably, than the rapid stroke and tenacious endurance of Oxford. Some older boys will think of the seven oarsmen of Henley over again. We are deeply sorry to note, however, that this yearly gathering is assailed from two different points of view just now. First, it is asserted that it tends to gather together enormous masses of people and encourages idleness, secondly, that it affords a premium to betting and the like. We quite agree with the able remarks of our contemporary the Standard, and reproduce them here: "The 'Varsity race has become a great holiday even among our working classes, and we are glad that it has done so—they could not choose a more healthy, more innocent, more manly, more fair, and straightforward object of interest. It is just because it is a healthy excitement that the languid intellectual ones object to it; it bores these rose-water philosophers to see that other people can feel a genuine and healthy enthusiasm—a thing that they themselves have never felt a touch of since they fairly got into their teens. We sincerely hope that it will be long before the genuine interest felt by all classes in the most manly of our national sports suffers the slightest diminution." An old University man, who, by the way, must be an old "slowcoach," horrified by the betting, proposes, that the "venue" should be changed, and the race should be rowed away from London. Bright idea! Excellent old boy! Well, will a change stop betting? We fancy not. It will, in our humble opinion, only intensify it. People do bet in England and will bet, about almost anything, and it becomes a great nuisance and greater bore, to have well intentioned but weak-minded fanatics always "testifying" against betting. We are not ignorant of the evils of the betting ring, very far from it. But the true philosopher, the real reformer, and the best religionist, in our opinion, is he who seeks to amend, not to destroy, to ameliorate, not to revolutionize. As a mere matter of abstract argument all endeavours to make any gains by means of the "factor" of chance, are, per se, objectionable on grounds of public and private morality, though we are aware that they have been most ingeniously defended. But be this as it may, we strongly hold all such persons to be most unwise and unreasonable, who attempt by some export facto legislation, whether of successful fanaticism or unwise excitement, to uproot what is so deeply implanted for good or evil in the habits of us perverse and pigheaded Anglo-Saxons. It will be seen, therefore, by our remarks, that we cannot join in any of those shallow "cries," which declare things evil which in themselves are productive of innocent enjoyment to thousands to-day. And when we remember the myriads who do not bet at all, compared with the hundreds who do, that great Public, for instance, which simply seeks for a day's outing, holiday, amusement for young and old, we cannot but lift up our voice against that worse than mistake zeal which confuses things lawful with things unlawful in themselves, which forgets that abuse never takes away the use of a thing, and that very many thousands of our countrywomen and countrymen find annually much of legitimate pride, interest, and exultation in this gallant exhibition of English skill and pluck. Long may the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race flourish, we say, on the bosom, too, of Old Father Thames.

KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPÆDIA.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

When I wrote you last, I hoped to have seen the termination of my labours at the end of the last year, and the delivery of the work to the subscribers at the commencement of this, but you know what unforeseen difficulties delayed my undertaking, and for a time even staid the work of my pen. I am now, however, hard at work again, and hope to complete the book by the end of the summer.

I append a letter from Bro. D. Murray Lyon, which will, I hope, convince the subscribers that they lose nothing by granting me a little more time to complete my laborious work on the principle on which I am conducting it, most laborious and tedious to all concerned, especially in the use of foreign words and names. I had a friendly letter from Bro. W. J. Hughan to the same effect, and have no doubt that he will kindly repeat it in the next Freemason. I am aware that some brethren are a little impatient at the delay, but they do not, I think, quite make allowance if the work is to be thoroughly reliable for the time demanded to collate, extract, compare, and verify. Since I first began to study the archæology of Freemasonry, much new evidence has accrued, and old theories have to be abandoned, and new facts have to be dealt with.

As, however, you have often observed, any subscriber can have his subscription, already made returned to him if so inclined, and those who wish to withdraw their names can do so, though as a fact they all get more value for their money the less the work is hurried. I think it well to give your readers an idea of what I am now sending to the printers, asking your readers to remember that for nearly three months I gave up writing for the Cyclopædia, and attended to other matters.

Yours very fraternally,
March 28, 1877. A. F. A. WOODFORD.

Dear Bro. Woodford,—

I observe from the proof sheet of "Encyclopædia" with which you have favoured me, that the letter H has been reached. To some the progress that has been made may appear unnecessarily slow, but considering the nature and importance of the book, and the desirability that it should be correct and trustworthy, features which your care and diligence and extensive information will undoubtedly stamp upon the work, I regard your progress as entirely satisfactory. To hurry such a work would defeat the object for which it has been undertaken. I shall be well pleased if the "Encyclopædia" comes to me with Xmas greeting for 1877. Judging from those parts of it that I have seen, your treatment of the varied matter coming under your notice is at once succinct and exhaustive. Don't alter your pace, progress as hitherto, and in due time your work will be one in every respect worthy of the pains that have been bestowed upon it. I spent four years on the preparation of my "History of Freemasonry in Scotland!"

With kindest regards, and returning you the compliments of the season, I remain ever faithfully and fraternally,—D. MURRAY LYON.

Landmarks of Freemasonry.—The first use of these well-known words appears in Anderson's Constitutions Book of 1723, where, at No. XXXIX. of the General Regulations of 1721, we find the words, "Old Landmarks." This is repeated in the Constitutions of 1738, and henceforward the word has been in use amongst us. A landmark by itself is a stone, or line of stones, set up to mark a boundary. "What are the Landmarks of Freemasonry?"—an often used phrase—is, we apprehend, a question very difficult to answer. Oliver found it so in his time, and points out how opinions vary—how explanations of the phrase differ among Masons. Mackey, following some American writers, has laid down 25 as the Landmarks of Freemasonry, and he has been followed by others, but we regret we cannot entirely accept them as a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, as many of them certainly are not Landmarks proper of Freemasonry. A question of course comes in here:—In what sense did Anderson use these words—"Old Landmarks?" We are inclined to believe that while on the one hand he alluded to the Ancient Charges and Regulations, he also included, so to say, on the other, the truths and principles contained in those ancient formularies well-known to Masons. He understood evidently, that there were, so to say, certain leading principles of Masonic ceremonial and symbolism (though then more limited than now) which were to be regarded as essential and continual Landmarks of the Order, a defence against innovation on the one hand, and neglect on the other. Mackey's 25 Landmarks are as follows:—

1. Laws and Regulations of Recognition which may be assumed to be Landmarks of the Order.
2. The Three Grades of Freemasonry; which are certainly Landmarks of Craft Masonry, to which is added in England the Royal Arch Grade.
3. The Teaching of the Third Grade, as Mackey has it, we cannot accept as a landmark, because it is incorporated in the preceding ones.
4. The Government of the Fraternity, by a

Presiding Officer, called a Grand Master, through a Grand Lodge, is, we apprehend, fairly a standing Landmark of our Order. And the Prerogatives of the Grand Master (5), and the Privileges of Grand Lodge (6), are, we quite agree, to be considered Landmarks of the Order, though contained in No. 4.

7. Granting Dispensations at irregular Times is contained in No. 4.

8. The Power of Granting Warrants and Dispensations is also included in No. 4.

9. The Making Masons at Sight we reject.

10. The Division of the Craft into Lodges, and their government by the legal officers, is no doubt a Landmark, but the Tying of a Lodge (11) is hardly, we are inclined to think, a Landmark. Neither is the right of representation in English Lodges (12) a Landmark, as our representation is not deputational, but by ex-officio qualified officers of the particular lodge, intended, no doubt, to represent the interests of that lodge, and as such they are called "representatives." But the lodge does not elect; they sit in Grand Lodge virtute officii, as we said before, though they may be instructed by their own lodge. But as formerly all Grades appeared, it would seem, in Grand Lodge, we may fairly maintain that it is a Landmark, that each lodge should be represented in the Grand Lodge by delegation, pure or in part, or jurisdiction, or by official representation, as with us.

So 13. The Right of Appeal may be properly asserted to be a Landmark.

So 14. The Right of Visitation of Lodges, subject to the laws of safety and precaution laid down by the Grand Lodge.

Equally 15. The Right of Proving, is a Landmark.

As regards 16, the non-interference of one lodge with another, and not conferring Grades, except on joining members, is no doubt a Landmark. But we apprehend that by our English law, a brother may join a second lodge, and if elected, might ask to be "crafted" in the lodge in which he is affiliated, or even without joining.

17. The Amenability of all Freemasons to a Masonic Jurisdiction is no doubt a Landmark, with some needful exceptions, as we apprehend that though abstractly, a non-subscribing Mason is subjected to Masonic Authority, practically he is not so, inasmuch as "cessat ratio cessat lex," unless from special circumstances of an aggravated character.

18. The Qualification of Candidates may be fairly considered a Landmark of the Order.

19. A Belief in the Existence of God is a necessary Landmark. No avowed Atheist can be made a Freemason. But as regards,

20. The Immortality of the Soul, though it is clearly taught by our ritual, and though a disbeliever in it can hardly comfortably continue to attend our well-known ceremonial, yet we hardly think it safe to lay down that it is a Landmark of the Order, as every great truth inculcated by Freemasonry might be considered equally a Landmark, and there are many Masons equally impatient. The only test of admission which our Order actually require is belief in God.

21. The Holy Bible is an essential Landmark in all English lodges, and we utterly disavow the opinion that, in any English lodge, under any circumstances, any other book can take the place of the Word of God. That we receive in Mahomedan lodges, for instance, or Hindoo lodges, those who seek admittance in the way most binding on their conscience is freely admitted, but the Koran and the Vedas cannot take the place of the Bible in an English lodge, we repeat, nor can any other religious book be substituted for it. The Great Light of Freemasonry can never be banished from a lodge under the English Constitution; though perhaps another "Sacred Book" may be used, as we have already said, to meet the requirements of the candidate.

22. The Equality of all Masons, abstractedly, in the lodge, is a Landmark of the Order practically, but as in the world, grades and various steps must necessarily exist amongst us.

23. The Secrecy of Freemasonry is no doubt an imperishable Landmark of the Order, just as

24. The Speculative Character of Freemasonry, founded on an operative symbolism, is a true representation of our Order.

25. The unchangeability of our Landmarks cannot be accepted without some little qualification, as it is not quite so easy to lay down what Grand Lodge cannot do.

Thus it will be seen that we accept the greater part of the Landmarks set forth by Mackey and other writers, as a fair statement of the subject, though we cannot agree with them all; and we feel also that such a representation does not accord entirely with Anderson's original words, and some may fairly raise the question whether many of these points assumed to be Landmarks are not duties, qualifications, customs, rather than Landmarks. It is a mistake, it appears to us, to make such explanations too detailed or too complicated, and we therefore feel that it is most advisable to consider properly the "Landmarks of the Order" to be probably, those leading and essential characteristics which are generally received amongst us and so bound up with the very existence and condition of Freemasonry. But it is a subject on which much may be said, and little, after all, can be dogmatically laid down.

THE HEBREW QUESTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

One point cannot be too strongly insisted upon, that we must not forget or overlay the facts of the case. In only one Grand Lodge of Germany is the exclusion of Hebrews upheld, the "Great Countries Grand Lodge," Berlin, and in that body the exclusion is only kept up by the want of a necessary two-thirds vote to pass the resolution of admission, and to bring about the befitting result, a proper and lawful toleration.

Yours fraternally,

JUSTICE.

In fact it might be a question whether the better course would not be to address the Great Countries Lodge itself directly, and in that movement Hebrews and Christians could unite.—J.

INTERESTING AND NOVEL INFORMATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I cannot help, in justice to Bro. Kenning, calling your attention to an amusing system, just now in vogue of ignoring the Freemason, and reproducing your information, as novel and interesting "bits." You received from a friendly correspondent some short time back, as you said in a leader, an extract from the Correspondance Scandinave, to which you called special attention, and which you wisely printed in French. This has run the round of the Masonic press, and has recently appeared in the Monde Maçonnique "without any reference however to you, and has since been announced in England as a novel piece of intelligence, and credited to the Monde Maçonnique."

I cannot think this fair, though I know something of the unavoidable nature of "clippings," and the stern requirements of "padding."

"Palmar qui meruit ferat" is my motto, though I beg to subscribe myself, IGNOTUS.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Many brethren have doubtless been hoping to see some authoritative reply to the letter from Bro. Tombs in the Freemason on the 10th, in which he distinctly says that the matron, "admitted that there were no means at her disposal whereby instruction in the art of cookery could be afforded."

"I.P.M.," it is true, in your issue of to day says of his own two sisters that "at the time of leaving the school they were both well versed in the art of cookery. He does not however tell us where their knowledge of that art was acquired."

Possibly they had the advantage of a home and friends and were enabled to profitably employ the school vacations in acquiring domestic knowledge.

Many, very many, of the girls at the school have not those advantages, and to these—to all in fact, but to these more especially—the school ought to supply the place of the home training, of which misfortune has deprived them, that is, indeed as far as it is possible for any such an institution to do.

In this view no education can be considered complete which does not embrace that knowledge of those domestic duties, the possession of which on the part of the mistress of the household is so essential to the welfare and happiness of every home.

All these advantages could be—perhaps now are—afforded by our excellent Institution for Girls, but I feel sure that some particulars of the system of education there adopted would be hailed with general satisfaction and would awaken an interest that would not fail to shew itself to the benefit of the school on the lists for the ensuing festival.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,
WILLIAM NOTT, P.P.G. Reg. Wills.,
P.M., P.Z., P.M.M., &c.

Devizes March, 1877.

MASONIC QUERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I observe in your columns some correspondence and a notification to the effect that all receipts for payments of £2 and over are to have a penny receipt stamp attached.

As this is a matter which in the course of time will involve the payment of a good deal of money, it is very desirable we should be quite sure that we have been correctly advised.

The question answered by the government official, and reported in your paper, may not have been quite understood by him.

I have always been under the impression that friendly societies and charitable institutions are, by the Stamp Act, exempt from stamp duties. Thus building and burial societies are free, and no stamps are used on the receipts for subscriptions to our hospitals and medical charities.

The subject is worthy of consideration, and perhaps some legal brother will, in the interests of the Craft, overhaul the Stamp Act and set us on the right track.

Yours faithfully,
RICHARD BROWN,
P.M. 241, Treas. 138, &c. &c.

[We apprehend that unless a special exemption is made by the Stamp Act no society whatever can break the law. Can any legal brother give us a clause in the Stamp Act which exempts building and other societies from the receipt stamp. We doubt the exemption.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir, and Brother,

If Bro. Case, writing to-day under above heading, will refer to Book of Constitutions, (ed. 1871), p. 84, he will I think find reason to modify his assertion that "it is irregular for any brother to be balloted for at any lodge of emergency."

The latter part of the clause (No. 2), to be there found deals expressly with the proposing and balloting for candidates out of the regular course, and provides, inter alia, that a proposition may be inserted in the "summons for a lodge of emergency" (on seven days notice), "and if the candidate be then approved he may be initiated into the First Degree."

Yours truly and fraternally,

663.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to your correspondent "T. E." I have much pleasure in informing him that the M.W. Pro Grand Master, the Earl of Carnarvon, was initiated in the Westminster and Keystone Lodge, No. 10, meeting at Freemasons' Hall on the 5th February, 1856, and that his lordship twice served the office of Master of the lodge, in 1857 and 1858.

Lord Carnarvon is still a member and a Past Master of the Lodge.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,

OCTAVIUS HENRY PEARSON, W.M. 10.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In reply to part of the enquiry of "T. E." in your last issue, I can inform him that Lord Carnarvon was W.M. of the Westminster and Keystone Lodge, No. 10, in the year 1857.

At the same time it may also interest your correspondent to know that Lord Skelmersdale was initiated in the Apollo University Lodge, No. 357, Oxford, in 1856, and was W.M. of the Lodge of Harmony, No. 580, Ormskirk, in 1862.

Yours fraternally,

APOLLO.

THE DUNDEE MS.

Dear Bro. Kenning,

Bro. W. J. Hughan alludes in the Voice of Masonry to a curious MS., in the possession of Bro. Yarker, of which he has seen a transcript.

It seems to be a compound of Pritchard, the Great Mystery, and Essex's MS., British Museum, but it may be an independent MS., or rather a transcription of some common original. The fact of the date of 1727, being given is not by itself decisive, but, if Bro. Yarker would kindly let us publish in the Masonic Magazine a facsimile of any portion of the MS., we should soon obtain an approximate idea of the true date. It may be that towards the end of the last century and the beginning of this, many similar documents were printed in Scotland, as I have a copy of the Mason's Word, printed at Glasgow in 1803. To what ritualistic MS. in the British Museum does my good Bro. W. J. Hughan refer?

Yours fraternally,

EDITOR "MASONIC MAGAZINE."

THE GRAND MASTERS OF THE "ATHOL MASONS" OR "ANCIENTS."

In answer to Bro. A. T. I must refer him to a complete list of the Grand Masters of the Athol Masons, to be found in my "Memorials of the Masonic Union of 1813."

Should he not have access to that work, and as it is out of print, I have consented for the introduction to be reprinted in the Rosicrucian for January, 1877, &c., the first number of which volume contains the list in question, and I hope its publication in that form will induce many brethren to subscribe for that most readable publication, edited by my learned friend and brother, Robert Wentworth Little, D. Prov. G.M. Middlesex.

I may state that the list of all the Grand Masters connected with the different Grand Lodges in England has also been reprinted in Bro. Mackenzie's excellent Royal Masonic Cyclopædia, and a revised list is printed in the portion so far ready of Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford's Cyclopædia, which I hope will soon be issued, for judging from the proof-sheets already submitted to me I think its publication will be hailed with delight.

Bro. Preston and other writers were misled as to the Ancients having no Grand Master until 1772, but he in his "Illustrations," and other brethren, never made the mistake, many have of late years, in thinking these Athol Masons were in reality the York Masons.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

IVY LODGE, No. 1441, AND CORRECTION BY W. BRO. B. CASE.

I am very pleased to note the correction by our indefatigable Bro. Robert Case, Prov. G. Sec. of Dorset. How sad it is that so many members will not read the laws, and that Worshipful Masters so often pledge themselves to obey and enforce the "Constitutions," which, apparently, they never take the trouble to read.

I met with an instance the other day of a brother who desired to refer to our regulations, and from his drawer produced a copy of the Constitutions of 1784 to settle the question under consideration, and as he had nothing later the matter was deferred.

I am glad to see the lodges now more generally adopting the plan, so frequently advocated by others as well as myself, to present to each initiate a copy of the Book of Constitutions, and the bye-laws of the lodge and Prov. Grand Lodge.

In time this plan will cut down many irregularities of the kind pointed out by Bro. Case, and the younger members will be able to instruct the "chair."

With respect to the office of "W.S." as a "total abstainer for life," I think I can help Bro. Case to unravel the difficulty. It is not Wine Steward.

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF HERTFORDSHIRE.

A meeting of this Provincial Grand Chapter was held at the Shire Hall, Hertford, on the 21st March. The officers present were E. Comps. H. C. Finch, P.Z. 404, Grand H.; J. R. Cocks, P.Z. 403, Grand J.; F. H. Wilson Hes, P.Z. 404, Grand S.E.; T. S. Carter, P.Z. 1385, H. 403, Grand N.; A. J. Copeland, P.Z. 404, Grand Treas.; R. T. Andrews, Z. 403, Grand Std. Br.; J. Halsey, M.P., regretting his inability to be present on account of his being on a Parliamentary committee, on an opposed bill which may sit until the end of April, and deputed the Grand H.E., Comp. Finch, to preside in his stead. The report of the committee upon the bye-laws was read and adopted. E. Comp. Copeland, on the proposition of Grand N., was re-elected Grand Treasurer. The following companions were appointed and invested officers of Prov. Grand Chapter, viz.: E. Comps. T. S. Carter, Z. 403, P.Z. 1385, Grand H.; the Rev. G. Finch, P.Z. 404, Grand J.; F. H. Wilson Hes, P.Z. 404, Grand S.E.; H. G. Martin, Z. 404, Grand N.; G. Ward Terry, Z. 1385, Grand P. Soj.; J. E. Dawson, 404, Grand 1st A.S.; E. A. Simson, H. 403, Grand 2nd A.S.; the Rev. H. F. H. Burchell Herne, J. 404, Grand Reg.; David Roberts, J. 403, Grand Std. Br.; J. Livingston, J. 1385, Grand Std. Br.; J. Terry, P.Z. 403, Grand D.C.; Thomas and Wright, Grand Janitors. The companions expressed their deep regret at the unavoidable absence of the Grand Supt. Among the other companions present were Comps. Keyser, 404; the Rev. L. Deedes, 403; J. Purrott, 1385; W. Watrener, 403; C. C. Dick, P.Z. 403; H. L. Thomas, P.Z. 403; J. B. Scriven, P.Z.; J. Linzell, 174; Craven Cobham, 1329. The companions afterwards partook of a capital dinner, served by Mr. E. M. Davis, of the Salisbury Arms Hotel. A very agreeable evening was spent.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatic and Nervous Pains are often more provoking than serious complaints.—The chilly mornings and evenings will provoke these tortures in constitutions susceptible of these maladies. Nothing affords so much relief as Holloway's Ointment well rubbed upon the skin after repeated fomentations. Thousands of testimonials bear witness to the wonderful comfort obtained from this safe and simple treatment, which all sufferers can instantly and successfully adopt without any further advice than is afforded in the accompanying directions. Holloway's Ointment, assisted by the judicious use of his Pills, is especially serviceable in assuaging the sufferings from cramps, other muscular pains, and the great inconvenience of varicose veins.—ADVT.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF MIDDLESEX AND SURREY.

An important meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street, on Wednesday, the 21st March, and the attendance and the proceedings were of the most gratifying nature.

Prior to the opening of the Provincial Grand Lodge the Grosvenor Mark Lodge, 144, was opened at four o'clock by the W.M., Bro. W. G. Brighten, the Grand Secretary of the province, and as soon as the ordinary business of the lodge was disposed of four brethren were in regular order duly advanced, viz., Bros. Chas. Coupland, 706; F. W. Goddard, 19; A. D. Everingham, 569; and J. H. Evans, 1017; Bro. F. H. Cozens officiating as Organist, and with Bros. Theodore Distin and H. D. Martin conducting the musical and choral part of the ceremony, which was thereby rendered the more impressive.

By the time the advancements were completed the lodge-room was full in every part, on account of the Provincial Grand Officers and many visitors arriving to witness the working of the Grosvenor Mark Lodge.

The W.M. then called upon the brethren to salute the Provincial Grand Master. The same was done, and the Provincial Grand Master, Col. F. Burdett, replied in most suitable terms.

The ceremony of installation was then proceeded with, and Bro. W. Wigginton presented Bro. G. A. Rooks, the W.M. elect, to Bro. Brighten, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. The usual questions were put and answered satisfactorily by Bro. Rooks, and Bro. Brighten then formed and declared a duly constituted Board of Installed Masters, probably one of the largest in the Mark Degree.

After the installation of Bro. Rooks in due form the brethren were re-admitted, and listened to the various addresses, delivered by the Provincial Grand Secretary in an able manner, as testified by the applause he frequently received.

The new W.M., Bro. Rooks, then presented the retiring Master with an elegant and valuable Past Master's jewel, voted to him by the brethren of the Grosvenor Mark Lodge, and that lodge was closed soon after six.

A procession of the officers of Provincial Grand Lodge was then formed and entered the lodge-room, and was received by the brethren present in Masonic form.

The officers of Provincial Grand Lodge present were the R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Col. Burdett; the V.W. Dep. Prov. G.M., Bro. F. Davison; Col. Stallard, G.S.W.; J. Baxter Langley, L.L.D., G.J.W.; Rev. D. Shaboe, P.G. Chap.; E. S. Baikie, G.M.O.; Wm. Wigginton, G.S.O.; Chas. Pulman, G.J.O.; C. Hammerton, G. Treas.; J. M. Klenck, G. Reg.; W. G. Brighten, G. Sec.; G. A. Rooks, S.D.; J. T. Ritchie, J.D.; E. B. Bright, Supt. Works; J. B. Shackleton, D.C.; J. K. Pitt, Assist. D.C.; H. Court, Swd. B.; W. Taylor, Std. B.; F. H. Cozens, G. Org.; and C. H. Rogers Harrison and R. P. Spier, Stewards; and amongst the numerous brethren present were Bros. R. G. Glover, P.G.S.W.; Thomas Parker, P.S.D.; R. J. Moore, P.M., O.; H. C. Levander, G.R.; Geo. Yaxley, 198; A. Wolton, 104; John Close; H. Court, 181; E. Hopwood, 181; A. W. Hall, Chaplain 7; H. A. Pocock, 198; E. Passover, 5; A. W. Hunne, 5; H. B. Cooper Smith, 7; Thos. Distin, 104; A. D'Almanie, 1; Geo. Huddock; Major Harding, 7; Bernard Meyer, 176; Chas. Legg, 198; W. J. Nicholls, 198; S. Griffiths, 198; R. W. Brown, 198; Dr. Ramosey; Louis Beck, E. H. Thielley, 1; and several other brethren of the Grosvenor Lodge, in all upwards of seventy at Provincial Grand Lodge.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting, held at Richmond in July last, having been read and confirmed, the roll of lodges was called over by the Provincial Grand Secretary, whose report thereon was received with much satisfaction, the great increase in the number of members during the past year being observable, and a new lodge, the "Croydon," having been consecrated.

The Provincial Grand Master then said that the special business of the meeting was the nomination of a Provincial Grand Master for the ensuing three years. He had been already re-elected for a second period of three years, which latter period had passed by so pleasantly and quickly, that it seemed scarcely a year ago since that time. As he thought it his duty to leave the brethren free and unfettered in the full discussion of the matter, he would leave the lodge while that business was being settled, and the Rev. Bro. Shaboe at once stated that such a course was not required or wished for by the brethren present (universal applause), and in a few suitable remarks he proposed the re-election of Bro. Col. F. Burdett.

Bro. Col. Wigginton seconded the nomination. The motion being put by Bro. Col. Stallard, it was carried unanimously and with acclamation.

Col. Burdett then thanked the brethren, and congratulated them upon the great and increasing prosperity of the Order in general, and this province in particular.

The list of Provincial Grand Stewards not having been filled up last July, owing to the apathy of some of the lodges, who had failed to recommend any brother for such honours, the Provincial Grand Secretary stated how those vacancies arise, and read over certain recommendations now to hand, when the Provincial Grand Master appointed Bro. Sanderson, of the Mallet and Chisel Lodge; Bros. Legg and Pocock, of the Croydon Lodge, and a brother to be named by the Macdonald Lodge, as Prov. Grand Stewards.

The Provincial Grand Master then adverted to the great family bereavement lately sustained by the head of the Order, the Grand Mark Master of England and Wales, &c., &c., the Earl of Limerick, and proposed that a letter of condolence on the death of Lady Limerick be written by the Provincial Grand Secretary, and sent from this province to our Grand Master.

The motion having been seconded by Bro. Dr. Ramosey, it was duly put from the chair and carried unanimously.

No further business being before the lodge, the same was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an elegant banquet, at which the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master presided, assisted by the Provincial Grand Wardens. On his right was the Very Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and on his left was the Worshipful Master of the Grosvenor Lodge, the banquet for which was provided at the same table, and, accordingly, Bro. Brighten was assisted by the Wardens of the Grosvenor Lodge in such duties as were required of him and that lodge.

The toasts of "The Queen," "The Prince of Wales," "Prince Leopold, and the members of the Royal Family" were duly honoured, as was also that of "The Grand Master, the Earl of Limerick;" each of the above toasts, as well as the subsequent ones, were followed according to programme by suitable music, wherein the services of Bro. F. H. Cozens, the Provincial Grand Organist, and Bros. Theo. Distin and Th. D. Martin were rendered in a most agreeable and pleasant manner.

Bro. Levander responded for the Grand Mark Officers.

Then the toast of Colonel Burdett, as proposed by the Deputy Grand Master, was received with much enthusiasm, and the Grand Master replied in terms of unmixed satisfaction, not only with the progress of the province and Mark Masonry, but with the gathering round that table, and expressed his pleasure at being again nominated, for although he felt they might have nominated a better (no, no), he would not conceal the fact that he was pleased to be further associated with the province as Presiding Master now they had reached to their present height of prosperity, which promised yet to increase.

Bro. Brighten then proposed "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, Bro. F. Davison, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers," and bore testimony to the manner in which they performed their duties, and all took their part in the work, and to Bro. Davison and the officers was due much of the success they then met to celebrate.

Bro. Davison at the close of his reply said he should turn the tables upon Bro. Brighten, for he was sure that all the brethren would agree with him (Bro. Davison) that Bro. Brighten had been proposing his own health in reality, for the province now owed much to him, and the brethren had this evening been able to see his work as Master of a lodge, and through the ceremony of advancement, and again as installing Master, and the gathering this evening bore testimony to his ability as Provincial Grand Mark Secretary.

After Bro. Brighten's reply, in which he referred with regret to Bro. Rooks having been compelled to leave, he then proposed "The Past Masters of the Grosvenor Lodge, Bro. C. Hammerton, the first Master of that lodge, the first Grand Secretary of that province, and the present Grand Treasurer, also Bro. Parker, Past Grand Deacon."

Those brethren having replied, the next toast was that of "The Newly Advanced Brethren," to each of whom Bro. Brighten briefly referred, viz.: Bros. Coupland, Goddard, Everingham, and Evans, and, in reply, Bro. Goddard returned thanks in the most able and entertaining manner, surprising from one new to the Order, for it seemed that during the ceremony he had grasped the whole object thereof.

The toast of "The Visitors," Bro. Dr. Ramosey and Major Harding, was replied to by the former, and soon after concluded an evening which was frequently spoken of as one of the most pleasant and successful ever remembered.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

MONTEFIORE LODGE (No. 1017).—The meeting of this lodge was held at the Regent Masonic Hall on the 27th ult., Bro. Victor Myers, W.M., in the chair. After the raising of a brother to the sublime degree of M.M., the W.M. announced he had received a letter from the Joppa Lodge, 188, requesting the consent of the Montefiore Lodge to join with their committee, and also the Tranquillity and Israel Lodges. Bro. S. V. Abraham said the letter received from the Joppa would naturally affect the discussion which would take place that evening, and it was his intention to move a resolution to the effect that they should agree to meet the committee of the Joppa Lodge on the question, and as no doubt that resolution would be carried, he would bear that in mind in the few observations he was about to make, and he hoped the lodge would endorse the acts of the committee, and they would consider whatever was done was done in a truly Masonic spirit, without attempting to put the Montefiore Lodge forward, but that it was an endeavour honestly to carry out an alteration in that law which appeared to be against the principles of Masonry. The committee's first duty was to make known the resolutions to the various lodges in the United Kingdom; and within seven days of the last lodge meeting every lodge in the United Kingdom was in possession of the petition. The best result he (Bro. Abraham) could show was the bundle of petitions which had been returned to him signed by the various lodges. (Cheers.) There were 120; but he feared there had been a spirit at work which prevented some lodges signing the petition. He said that because communications had been made to some of the London lodges. But at any rate there were sufficient to show they had succeeded. The press had noticed the matter very favourably, and though there had been some anonymous correspondence, yet the moment persons wrote anonymously, finding fault, they might be sure there was not much fault to find. Accompanying the petitions were very many letters from various lodges, sympathising with the movement. He would trouble the lodge only with a few—Harmony, Plymouth; the Province of Worcester; Abbey Lodge, Nuneaton, Warwick; De Grey and Ripon. One letter was from a W.M., enquiring if it was necessary to call an emergency or wait for the regular lodge meeting. This showed how warmly the matter was being taken up; and under those circumstances he felt the committee might safely come to the lodge with some degree of confidence. They did not desire the Montefiore Lodge to be prominently put forward, and they were anxious to join heart and hand with any and every other lodge willing to enter on the subject, to give all the information they could, and to ascertain what assistance and information other lodges could give them. They were told they had said three Grand Lodges had excluded certain men, whereas it had turned out there were only two; but it was not quite so, as it would appear from the correspondence that had passed with Bro. Wendt. Jews were only admitted to the three Blue Degrees, which implied that was all the concessions that were made. A letter had been received from Bro. Findel, who was on the spot, which letter justified the Committee in the course they were pursuing. After some further observations, Bro. Abrahams concluded by expressing a hope that the lodge would continue the confidence they had already placed in the committee. Bro. C. Eskell moved, and Bro. Brall seconded, that having heard the statement of the committee, a further sum of £5 be voted towards the expenses. Bro. S. V. Abraham said, with reference to the letter from the Joppa Committee, the Montefiore Committee would be perfectly willing to meet them, or any other lodge, and discuss the question. But there was one point he must mention. We have (said Bro. Abrahams) a large number of petitions which do not belong to us; they have been returned to us in trust to hand them over in due time to Grand Lodge. It must be borne in mind that whatever position is taken up by the Montefiore Lodge, is bound Masonically and morally to hand over these petitions to Grand Lodge. It is not right to take them up, and what terms we are anxious to meet any other committee. We are most desirous, and shall be very glad, to meet and consult with them with regard to any resolution likely to result in an effective and favourable movement. But on this point we must stand. We were the first to communicate with other lodges throughout the kingdom; it is not for personal aggrandisement, not because this lodge is anxious to be first, but because we have asked others to give us their names that we are bound to hand them up to Grand Lodge, whatever the result. What we should ask you to do is to refer the Joppa letter to the committee, who tell you, through me, they are willing to join with any other committee and discuss the matter. Bro. C. Eskell moved, and Bro. Braule seconded, that the letter from the Lodge of Joppa be referred to the Montefiore Committee. Bro. Breidenbach moved, and Bro. Cooper seconded, that the W.M. do sign the petition. This having been carried the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, after which the customary toasts were honoured.

URBAN LODGE (No. 1196).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 27th of March, at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, Saint John's Gate, Clerkenwell. The old Gate is interesting, and within its walls many antiquities are to be seen. Here, in this old building, the Gentleman's Magazine was first started by Cave. In the large hall, above the bust of Shakespeare, we read that "Garrick made his first essay in London, as an actor, in that particular place." Savage, Johnson, Goldsmith, Boswell, and many other literary characters, were frequent visitors to the Gate, and it was noted as the home and haunt of learning. Here the Urban Club meets, an institution composed of literary, scientific, and histrionic gentlemen, from which the Urban Lodge sprang. Amongst the members of this lodge we find gentlemen of all branches of the profession. In general literature the well-known names of Bros. William Sawyer, F.S.A.; S. S. Bacca, J. Redding, Ware, J. Dionysius Loverdo, F.R.S.L., and J. E. Carpenter, Ph.D., M.A. Singing: Bros. W. H. Cummings and Patey. Music: Professor Lehmer, Bianchi, and Braide. Dramatic critics: Bros. E. L. Blanchard and J. Callingham. Artist: Bro. Boucher (the cartoonist of Judy). Actors: Harry Marston and Creswick. Brethren connected with the law: Edwin Legge and Japhet Tickle; and others more or less connected with the profession. On the last occasion a goodly company of brethren assembled under the gavel of Bro. Simpson, the W.M., assisted by his officers:—Edwin Legge, S.W.; Blanchard, J.W.; Heath, S.D.; Loverdo, J.D.; Carpenter, P.M., Sec.; Eckenstein, I.G.; Harry Marston, P.M., D.C.; Radford, W.S.; H. S. Pearson, P.M., Treas.; and Lehmer, Org. The first business was to confirm the minutes of the previous meeting and to pass the following resolution:—"That in the opinion of the members of this lodge it is desirable that a Royal Arch chapter should be attached thereto, and the sanction of the lodge (upon application having been regularly made for the same) be given to the request of the petitioners." Proposed by Bro. Carpenter, P.M., seconded by Bro. Jonathan Pearson, P.M., and carried. Bro. Cheadle having proved an efficient F.C., was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. Ballots were taken for Messrs. Joseph Walter Tacon and Caspar Clarke for admission into the fraternity, which proving in their favour, they were duly initiated. It was nearly nine when the lodge closed, after which the brethren adjourned to supper, provided by the host, Bro. Gay, in his usual liberal style. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given and honoured, the toast of "The Visitors" meeting with the very warmest reception, Bros. Isaacs, P.M. 795; Frederick W. Koch, P.M. 820; Mullet, P.M. 256; Wells, W.S. 1539, and other visitors, replying in appropriate terms. Bro. Hawksley sang a capital song, the brethren joining in the chorus. Bro. Cummings, although suffering from a cold, sang "Tom Bowling," which gave extreme satisfaction, judging by the loud applause which greeted him at the finish. Bro. George E. Fairchild gave, in his best style, "My Pipe," a short dramatic sketch, the declamation of this popular artist drawing forth hearty commendation. Bro. Lehmer played in fine style a value of his own composition, the brethren feeling highly gratified by the professor's splendid performance. It was a late hour before the brethren separated, and no doubt an agreeable evening was well spent and enjoyed by all present.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—This prosperous lodge held its regular meeting on Thursday week, and was well attended. Amongst those present were Bros. J. B. Shackleton, W.M.; Fieldwick, acting S.W.; B. Meyer, J.W.; T. C. Chapman, I.P.M., Treas.; W. H. Lee, P.M., Sec.; W. H. Brand, J.D.; H. S. Meyer, I.G.; and Young, Organist. Members: Bros. H. G. Buss, P.G.J.W. Midz.; John Varney, John Stokes, A. Ferrar, E. Dietrich, J. L. Payne, C. W. Smyth, G. Dignam, R. George, F. Brasted, E. A. Harding, C. Larkin, and F. A. Kelly (Freemason). The visitors present were Bros. Wardell, Eastern Star Lodge, No. 95; Thorn, Domestic Lodge, No. 177; Jones, Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 907; Marsh, Corinthian Lodge, No. 1382; and Fieldwick, S.D. No. 1364. The business of the evening consisted in the raising of Bros. Bonner, Stevenson, G. Ferrar, and O. Dietrich, and the initiation of Messrs. Cracknell, Braine, Watkins, and Benson. Lodge having previously passed a resolution to remove, it was decided that in future the meetings should be held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, the usual toasts being given and duly responded to.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The above lodge held its monthly meeting at the Swan Hotel, on Wednesday, the 28th ult. The officers and acting officers were Col. Stuart, P.S.G.W. England, W.M.; Alderman Bull, J.P., P.M. and Steward, acting S.W.; Capt. Colburn, J.W.; Capt. E. Green, J.P., I.P.M.; Colburns, S.D.; Allan, J.D.; Thody, I.G.; Dr. Prior, Sec.; Alderman Sergeant, Treas.; Pipet, Org. The P.M.'s present were Bros. Cuthbert, Cookson, Whyley, and Billson; the brethren, Rev. F. Ward, Thompson, Harris, Roe, Carter, Kilpin, Stafford, Capt. Glubb, and others. Visiting brethren were Hillhouse and Green, of Lodge United Strength, 228. The minutes having been confirmed, a ballot was taken for Mr. R. P. Jarvis, of Bedford, who was unanimously elected, and accordingly initiated by the W.M. Other business having been transacted, and another resident of Bedford duly proposed and seconded, the lodge was closed, and twenty-seven brethren partook of refreshment.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—A very numerous assemblage of the brethren of this flourishing lodge met on Wednesday, the 21st ult., at the Sussex Hotel, Tunbridge Wells, the only business being the installation of Bro. Benjamin Sidney Wilmot as W.M. of the Holmesdale Lodge, Bro. H. H. Riach, P.M. being the Installing Officer. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Graham Kingston, P.M.; Moore, S.W. 862; Stephens, P.M. 1365 and 1489; and Grist, D.C. 1489. The ceremony was most carefully rendered, and the officers appointed as follows: Bros. W. B. Bacon, S.W.; H. D. M. Williams, J.W.; E. Rawlings, S.D.; W. H. Hodgkin, J.D.; Dunkley, I.G.; J. Burton, D.C. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a very excellent banquet. The cloth having been removed, the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. In proposing "The Provincial Grand Master," the W.M. stated that they were more intimately connected with him, and it was a source of gratification to know he not only took great interest in every matter connected with the province, but was all that could be desired as a ruler. "The Deputy Prov. G.M., Bro. East, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers" was most feelingly proposed. Bro. East would have been present, but illness prevented him; his speedy restoration to health was given most sincerely. Bro. Nicholls, Prov. G. Supt. of Works, responded. In proposing "The Health of the W.M., P.M. Riach spoke of his genial temper and amiable qualifications as a Mason and his knowledge of all the duties appertaining to the office. He had selected good officers, all of whom they were justly proud. The W.M., in responding, was most enthusiastically received. He thanked the brethren for the honour they had conferred on him in placing him in the highest position in his lodge. He regarded Freemasonry for the doctrines it teaches, its main object being charity, not merely almsgiving charity alone, but charity in respecting the opinions of others; should we ourselves differ, it cemented the strongest ties of friendship, and gives the opportunity of rubbing off the rust which would otherwise exist and of meeting on an equality free from the cares and battle of every-day life. "The Visitors" and "The Officers" were duly proposed and responded to, and the meeting was brought to a close with the Tyler's toast.

MOLD.—Sir Watkin Lodge (No. 1477).—The great annual event in the history of every Masonic lodge was celebrated by the brethren of the Sir Watkin Lodge, Mold, 1477, on the 25th ult., when Bro. Algernon Potts, S.W., was installed as W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year. Although the Sir Watkin Lodge has only been in existence three years it has now upwards of ninety members on the books, and may be regarded as one of the foremost lodges of the Principality. There was a large number of visitors present, many of them being of high rank in the Craft. The annual festival of the lodge this year was marked by an act of true Masonic generosity. The lodge-room of the Sir Watkin has often elicited the admiration of brethren from a distance, but its attractiveness has been enhanced tenfold by the artistic embellishment which it has recently received at the hands of Bro. H. Francis Smith, P.G. Superintendent of Works for Cheshire, who has covered the ceiling with Masonic emblems, executed in the highest style of art. The decorations were designed especially and presented as a free gift by Bro. Smith, who is a decorative artist by profession, and who is also an honorary member of the Sir Watkin Lodge. The ceiling is admirably executed, and has a beautiful effect, the principal enrichments consisting of eight large medallions, each bearing a Masonic emblem. These medallions are supported by the cornucopia, or horn of plenty. From these spring the acacia leaf, which is carried round the entire ceiling, and at intermediate scrolls are pendant the square and compasses. At the corners are panels, with shields in the centre bearing the jewel as worn by the Grand Master of England and that of the Deputy Grand Master. In the centre is the star, or sun, with golden rays radiating from the same, the whole being surrounded by the twelve signs of the Zodiac; in the centre of which is to be seen the triangle, &c. The brethren are indebted to Bro. Smith for a lodge-room of marvellous beauty, worthy of the province, and of the distinguished Mason whose name the lodge bears. A letter was received from Bro. Sir Watkin Wynn, the Grand Master of the province, expressing regret at his inability to be present, but stating that his health had much improved—an announcement which elicited the hearty acclamations of the brethren. Bro. Potts, whose election to the Master's chair had given every satisfaction to the members of the lodge, was installed by Bro. James Salmon, P.J.G.W., who rendered the ancient ceremonies in his usual able and impressive style. The W.M. then appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. J. Williams, S.W.; J. Birch, J.W.; R. Lewis, Treas.; R. Williams, Sec.; D. Rowland, S.D.; Dr. Roberts, J.D.; J. Salmon, Dir. of Cers.; R. C. Griffiths, I.G.; — Parry, Tyler; — Corbett, I.P.M.; and G. E. Lyle, Org. Among the brethren present were Bros. Horatio Lloyd, P.P.S.G.W. Cheshire; W. H. Spaul, P.G.S.; Boucher, P.G.O.; R. J. Sissons, P.G.R.; F. Smith, P.G.S. of W. Cheshire; J. P. Platt, P.P.J.G.D. Cheshire; James Taylor, W.M. 415; Thos. Wilcock, P.M. 425; W. Matthews, W.M. 721; T. Lockwood, J.W. 425; R. C. Edwards, S.W.

721; R. J. Davids, I.P.M. 606; and J. Dennis, P.M. 721. At the close of the installation Bro. F. Smith, at the request of the W.M., graphically described the decorations of the lodge-room. They were, he said, from an original design, and it had given him very great pleasure thus to testify his respect for the lodge and his esteem for his friend Bro. Salmon, to whose Masonic labours they were all so much indebted. The installation banquet was held in the Ball-room of the Black Lion Hotel, the chair, in the unavoidable absence of the Worshipful Master, who is in delicate health, being occupied by Bro. Horatio Lloyd. A very excellent repast was served, and at the close the Chairman gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts. In proposing "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master, Sir Watkin W. Wynn," the Chairman remarked that he had only to mention the name of Sir Watkin to ensure a most enthusiastic reception at the hands of all Masons. Unfortunately, the state of his health did not permit him to be present at their Masonic festival, but he hoped the time would shortly come when he would be restored to his usual health, and again honour them with his genial presence. In proposing "The Health of the Newly-installed Worshipful Master," the Chairman remarked that he had known Bro. Potts all his life, and he felt sure they all regarded his election as Master as a great acquisition to the lodge. He was a gentleman of great intelligence; one whose heart was in the right place, and in every way fitted to perform the duties of Master with credit to himself and satisfaction to the lodge. It was a very great source of pain to Bro. Potts that the state of his health would not permit of his being present at the banquet. He had assured him (the chairman) that he had looked forward during the past three years to that evening, and nothing but the state of his health could possibly have prevented him being present. He was sure, however, he was with them in spirit, and was thinking of them at that moment. The toast was most enthusiastically received. In proposing "The Health of the Installing Master," the Chairman said he had now to ask them to honour a brother to whom they were, perhaps, more indebted than any other. If they wanted anything they naturally turned to Bro. James Salmon, who was at all times ready to give them his help. He had installed that day their new Master, and had rendered the ceremony in his usual able style. It was at all times a pleasure to him (Bro. Lloyd) to be present when any ceremonies were conducted by Bro. Salmon; and he was sure they were all of the same opinion. Bro. Salmon had not only originated the Sir Watkin Lodge, but had assisted other lodges in different parts of the province, and he understood that he was now to be installed first Master of a lodge at Rhyl. The toast was received with Masonic honours. Bro. Salmon, in responding, said the chairman had referred to him in very flattering terms; but in doing what he had done he felt that he had only done his duty. He had undertaken to steer the Sir Watkin Lodge through all difficulties, and he could not have done that if he had not had the hearty assistance of the brethren of the lodge. The Sir Watkin Lodge had only been in existence three years, but it had made wonderful progress, and was a credit in every way to their Provincial Grand Master, whose name it bore. It was well known that the province of North Wales deservedly stood high, whether they considered it as a centre of Masonic working, or as a centre of Masonic charity, but it was not generally known that in addition to these cardinal excellences it had the merit of being the most ancient province under the Grand Lodge of England. North Wales was the first province formed by the Grand Lodge of England, in the year 1727, by the Earl Inchiquin, then Grand Master of England. The warrant was dated 10th May, 1727, and Bro. Hugh Warburton was the first Provincial Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) In the same year, on the 24th June, Sir Edward Mansel was appointed Prov. Grand Master for South Wales. They knew what the division of Masonry into provinces had done to consolidate the Craft, and to diffuse its beneficent principles, and it was therefore pleasing to them that the initiation of so important a reform in Masonic government should have been intrusted to the Masons of the Principality. (Applause.) Their beloved Provincial Grand Master, Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, was the third oldest Grand Master in England, and during his reign Masonry had greatly extended throughout Wales and Shropshire. Previous to the year 1852, when Sir Watkin was appointed, there were only two lodges in Shropshire, and two in North Wales, but there were now 13 lodges in North Wales, and seven in Shropshire. Bro. Francis Smith, in responding to the toast of his health, which was proposed in flattering terms by the Chairman, said the decoration of the lodge had been to him a labour of love. He had at all times taken an interest in the province of North Wales, having been connected with a very old lodge at Welshpool. During the evening several excellent songs were given by Bros. H. Ellis, of Chester; Williams, Adams, and Lewis. Bro. Francis Smith and his son also materially contributed to the harmony of the evening.

LIVERPOOL.—Dramatic Lodge (No. 1609).—The usual monthly meeting of this "crack" lodge, which has shown so much healthy vitality since its consecration last year, was held on Tuesday week, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, where there was a very numerous attendance of members. The visitors, however, did not attend in the usual strong force. The lodge was opened at 2.30 prompt by Bro. Joseph Bell, the esteemed W.M., and there were also present Bros. B. B. Marson, P.G.S., P.M.; J. W. Chapman, S.W.; Lindo Courtenay, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treasurer; J. Skeaf, I.G.O., Organist; W. W. Sandbrook, J.D.; J. Atkinson, I.G.; A. Collinson, S.S.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; Henry Leslie, Frank Emery, W. Hildyard, E. Wilkinson, J. Hill, Ballard, Dr. Whittle, Cotton, Savage, Blamphin, P. Buck, Lowe, Burgess, &c.

The W.M., in his usual masterly manner, passed three brethren to the second degree, and raised five brethren to the Sublime Degree of M.M's. At the conclusion of business, the brethren adjourned to banquet in the old Lodge Room, where a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

INSTRUCTION.

LOUGHBORO' LODGE (No. 22) was opened in due form on Monday, 26th ult. Bro. G. Phythian, S.W. of the Neptune Lodge No. 22, worked the ceremony of initiation; Bro. E. P. Storr, W.M. of the Neptune, the Second Degree, when Bro. White, our able instructor, took the chair, and gave a lecture on the first of the five points, or brotherly love, afterwards working the ceremony of raising, &c.

ST. LUKE'S LODGE (No. 144).—The Fifteen Sections were worked in this lodge of instruction, held at the White Hart, King's-road, Chelsea, on Good Friday evening, Bro. Jas. Ardin, P.M. 511, in the chair. Officers: Bros. Bley, S.W.; Sedgwick, J.W.; Cameron, S.D.; Markland, J.D.; Bullen, I.G.; and Birch, P.M. The Sections were worked by the following brethren:—

Proposed by Bro. Birch, P.M. of the parent lodge, and seconded by Bro. Dr. Egan, that a vote of thanks be recorded for the able manner the W.M. performed the duties of the evening. The W.M., in thanking Bro. Birch (whom he had known for forty-five years) for his kind observations, and also Bro. Dr. Egan for the high compliment he had paid him, and in thanking the brethren for their support, expressed himself highly pleased not only with the correct, but the very impressive manner which each brother worked his Section. The lodge was closed at 10.20. The lodge meets every Friday evening at 7.30.

Red Cross of Constantine.

PORTSMOUTH.—Naval and Military Conclave (No. 35).—The quarterly meeting of this conclave was held in the Masonic Hall, Portsmouth, on Tuesday, March 27th. The conclave was opened by Sir Knt. J. Harrison, M.P.S., at 6.35. The minutes of the former conclave of Dec. 5th, 1876, were unanimously adopted, as also was the balance-sheet for the past year. The ballot was taken separately for Bros. Izod; Cawte, P.P.G.W.; Ellis, P.Z. 342; and E. J. Smith, and proved unanimous in each case. Bros. A. Holbrook, S. W. Ellis, and E. J. Smith being in attendance, were duly obligated and installed; and also proclaimed by the acting H. The historical oration was delivered by P.S. Hillman. Sir Knts. Osborne and Reading signed Grand Conclave certificates. The M.P.S. addressed a few remarks to the Sir Knights expressive of regret at the unavoidable absence of the Dep. Int. Gen. and H.P., from whom he had received letters of apology; more especially as the pleasing duty devolved upon him of presenting to the much beloved Int. Gen., Dr. Knott, the very handsome and costly jewel of a P. Sov., unanimously voted at the last meeting. Sir Knt. Harrison, in contrasting the position of the conclave previous to the appointment of the doctor twelve months since with the present flourishing and hopeful prospects, hoped that he might be spared many years to this conclave, and the division he had the honour of presiding over for the advancement of our beloved and chivalric Order. In reply, the Int. Gen. thanked the members most heartily for this very handsome expression and token of their appreciation of his services. The conclave had certainly increased in numbers and position, and it would be his determination to still further advance the Order in this division; in fact, he trusted that before long the formation of at least one other conclave would have his recommendation. Earnestly impressing upon the Sir Knights the necessity of great care in the selection of candidates, exhorting them at all times to consider quality before quantity, and to be most careful to propose only brethren of good repute, he in conclusion paid a well-earned compliment to their indefatigable Recorder, P.S. Robinson, for his unremitting services to the conclave from its formation to the present moment. The revised bye-laws, as recommended by the Perm. Council, were then read and adopted. The conclave was closed in solemn form at 8.35.

Mount Olivet Sanc. K.H.S. and Com. St. John was then opened by P. Com. Bro. Knt. Alfred R. Robinson. The minutes of the commandery held on Dec. 11th, 1876 (as also the balance-sheet), were unanimously adopted. Bro. Knights below the rank of P.P. and M.E.C. having retired, Bro. Knt. J. Harrison was inducted in ancient form by the acting Com. Bro. Knights were re-admitted and saluted Sir Knt. Harrison as M.E.C. On account of several members being absent, the appointment of officers was omitted until next meeting. Sir Knts. Harries, Adames, Reading, Ellis, and Copus were received K.H.S., and installed Knights of St. John, the traditional oration being delivered by the Int. Gen. The commandery was duly sealed at 10.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

A banquet by the members of the Masonic Craft was given to Bro. H. E. Downer, D.D.G.M., on the eve of his departure for Europe, at Adelaide, on Monday, January 22. About 140 brethren sat down to dinner, including representatives from the three Constitutions—English, Scotch, and Irish—and also visitors from Gawler, Strathalbyn, and Mount Barker. The chair was occupied by Bro. Arthur Hardy, D.G.M., who was supported on the right by the guest of the evening, D.D.G.M., H. E. Downer; S.P.G.M. Muecke, S.C.; and P.D.D.G.M. Dr. Whittell, E.C.; and on the left by D.G.S.C. Bros. Justice Gwynne, E.C.; D.D.G.M. Crowder, I.C.; and D.G.C. the Rev. Henry Reade, M.A., E.C. The vice-chair was filled by Dr. W. Gosse, P.D.D.G.M., who was supported on the right by Bros. P.M. W. Barlow, I.C., and J.W. Townsend, M.P., E.C.; and on the left by Bro. C. Peacock, Mayor of Adelaide, E.C., and W.M. Mais, E.C. Bro. R. Rees acted as Master of Ceremonies.

The Chairman read apologies for non-attendance from Bros. Chief Justice Way, Von Doussa, and Willshire, and D.P.G.M. Page, S.C.; also from the G.M. elect and brethren of the Clare Lodge.

The Chairman gave "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M.," and "The Three Constitutions, English, Irish, and Scotch," which were drunk with the usual Masonic honours.

The Chairman next proposed "The D.G.M.'s and D.D.G.M.'s of the I.C. and S.C. of South Australia."

S.P.G.M. Bro. Muecke responded for the Scotch Constitution, eulogizing the services of Bro. Downer, and speaking of the high esteem in which he was held by the brethren of the Scottish Constitution.

D.D.G.M. Bro. Crowder, I.C., responded for that Constitution, expressing a hope that the time would come when they would not be called English, Irish, and Scottish Constitutions, but would become the Provincial Grand Lodge of South Australia.

Bro. P. M. Clarke gave "The District Grand Lodge Officers, E.C.," which was well received.

Bro. D.G.S.W. His Honor Judge Gwynne responded, and after some humorous remarks anent his own shortcomings as a Mason, spoke highly of the energy of Bro. Downer, and his zeal for Masonry. He hoped that when on his visit to England Bro. Downer would have the opportunity and privilege of attending some of the grand Masonic gatherings there. Brother Downer in the external world gave expression in his actions to the great principles of Masonry.

The Vice Chairman proposed "The Health of the Guest of the evening—Bro. H. E. Downer." He said if ever he felt a difficulty in his life it was at that present time. When he was asked to assist in the banquet to Bro. Downer he said and felt that nothing would give him greater pleasure, but when he did so he had no idea that a letter would be put into his hands asking him to propose the toast of the evening. He felt the greatest difficulty in expressing his sentiments when speaking of their guest, whether as a man, a gentleman, or as a prominent citizen. In any capacity he was one who was deserving of the warmest commendation and support, but that night they had to consider him as a Mason. In that capacity he would like to recall to the brothers a period about ten years previously, at which time he was sorry to say Masonry in South Australia was in a state of chaos. Certain circumstances occurred at that time which were to be greatly regretted; but that happily had all passed away, and the brethren were now working together in friendship and unity. He spoke more particularly of the English Constitution. The present state of things he attributed in no small degree to the action and influence of Bro. Downer. All knew how he had worked in the cause of Masonry. He (the speaker) was not a man of many words, and would merely ask them to join with him in wishing their guest a pleasant voyage to England, a pleasant sojourn there, and safe return and a warm welcome back to South Australia.

The toast was drunk with full Masonic and musical honours.

Bro. Downer, in rising to respond, was met with applause. He said, if Bro. Gosse thought it at all necessary to make any apology, how much greater was the necessity for him in asking them to accept his very best thanks for the very cordial way in which they had received him there on that occasion. He would that he were possessed of much more power, both mentally and physically, to thank them, not only for this, but for the many other acts of kindness which he had received at their hands, for coming there as they had done, and wishing him every kind wish that one's heart could wish oneself. He only wished that he were deserving of half the kind things that had been said of him. If he could go away that night and feel that one quarter of them, or much less, were in any way deserved, he would go away feeling a prouder man than he had ever felt in his life—that was if he thought that he deserved them really, and that his brethren of the Craft were truly recognising what little he had done. As to what had been said about him, he must say that to his mind the man who called himself a Mason could not get his shoulder to the wheel without lending all the force he was capable of to drive the wheel round—that he could not be a true Mason without putting all his strength to help Masonry forward, and that he could not hold office in the Order without devoting a large amount of time and much attention to making himself proficient in its duties. He had joined the Craft when he was 21, and had held office nearly all the time from that period to the present, not as Deputy District Grand Master all the time. He had begun in the humble office of Junior Deacon in the United Tradesmen's Lodge, and he was sure there were those present who had held even lower offices. During the time he had been a member of the Craft it had had a good many ups and downs, but he thought he might truly say that at no time in South Australia had the Masonic Craft stood in a better position than at the present time. That was not, however, from any effort on his part. Bro. Gosse had referred to the confusion which reigned about 10 years ago. He did not know that it was so long ago, but he knew that the state of the Craft was anything but flattering. If any person connected with the working of their lodges had the misfortune to attend a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge he would soon have found that things were not as they ought to have been; but he was glad that that state of things was now changed. In what he had done he had only walked in the footsteps of one who was energetic in putting Masonic matters on a better footing—Bro. Whittell—who had been mainly instrumental in promoting that harmony and good feeling which had grown ever since. Brother Whittell had had to retire from the office of D.D.G.M. because his private practice required the whole of his attention, and he thought he was correct in saying that the Right Worshipful D.G. Master had, on the advice of Brother Whittell, asked him to take the office. He had accepted it, and had tried, as far as he could, to tread in the paths in which Brother Whittell had trod. He now looked back with pleasure to find that the harsh feelings which had existed had died out, and that the lodges were in better working than they had ever been before, and that there was true Masonic feeling, not only in their own lodges, but amongst the members of the sister Constitutions. Brother Muecke, as representative of the Scotch Constitution, had made some very complimentary remarks regarding him, but he could not think that he had raised the love of Freemasons in South Australia in the slightest degree; officers of lodges required only to be looked at by the Provincial Grand Lodge officers. He would only take credit to himself that he had endeavoured to do his work as Deputy District Grand Master, and assisted in the working of the lodges in every way in his power. To that extent alone he took any credit for carrying on the work which Brother Whittell had begun. One thing that had tended to bring down Freemasonry here was that they had been larger in their ideas than in their pockets. It was not once or twice that the Freemasons here had tried to begin by being big men instead of climbing up gradually. He referred to the matter of Masonic Halls. Three times they had tried to have a Masonic Hall of their own, but on each of these occasions had failed. And on each of these occasions men had severed from active work in the Craft who had taken a deep interest in Freemasonry. Time, however, had, he thought, salved over any feeling, and he saw one brother who had become inactive smiling, as if he agreed with the remark. He hoped that he had found that the rise in the value of property had prevented loss. He hoped that men quite as capable would continue to serve as had served in the past work of the lodges. As he had said, it was the duty of the higher officers rather to watch than to act. They did not want over-legislation, and if it was carried out in Freemasonry they would see many men not taking a part in the work of the Craft that they ought to take. He had merely looked on and assisted when it became necessary. In the town lodges the assistance that the Deputy had had to render was very small indeed, as there were men in those lodges able to do their work well. In the country the services of the Deputy had been more useful, and here his interest in Masonry, and consequent knowledge of it had enabled him to help them. The Worshipful D.S.G.W. Bro. Gwynne, had overwhelmed him with the good things that he had said of him. Every one who knew Bro. Gwynne knew how good a friend he was—always the same. He had never wanted the aid of a sound judgment, but Bro. Gwynne had been ready with assistance and advice. In regard to a remark that he had made as to his (Bro. Downer's) energy, as shown by his dancing at a Masonic Ball at Kapunda till 4 o'clock in the morning, and being at the opening of a lodge in the afternoon, he could only say that Masons proverbially went from labour to refreshment. On both the occasions Bro. Gwynne had referred to, he had been upon Masonic business, the ball, however, being at Clare. A good Mason was thoroughly able to work or to enjoy himself where pleasure was going, and in the latter especially he considered himself a very good Mason. In conclusion, he could only say that he felt himself truly thankful for the kind way in which Bro. Gosse had proposed his health, and for the very cordial manner in which they had received it. It was a matter of very great pleasure to him to find that he was held in such high esteem by the brethren of the Craft, as was shown by their presence on that occasion. He saw that Masonry here was thoroughly represented by brethren of all classes around the table, and that many of his brethren had put themselves to great inconvenience because their residences were a considerable distance from town, and they had sacrificed their time and business in coming to town to show him this mark of respect. It was almost impossible for him to find words to say how very pleased he was, and how grateful he felt for their kind wishes. He hoped when he reached England that he would have an opportunity of watching the working of some of the Masonic lodges there—and seeing whether the working of Lodges here was like the working of those in England. He would go home with a strong opinion that some of the Lodges here were worked as well as they could be worked. He must heartily thank them for this and other acts of kindness that he had received at their hands, and trusted that the time would not be very long before he might return to carry out the duties that he had now the honour to discharge. He had thought it right when he received his leave of absence to offer to tender his resignation of the office of D.D.G.M., as he thought it unfair to retain the position, seeing that he had all the powers delegated from the D.G.M., and could regulate and rule the Craft without consulting the D.G.M. on the subject. He felt that it would not be fair to the D.G.M., that it would not be fair to the Craft, which was more important still, for him to go away without offering to resign. The interest of the Craft and not his presence was involved. The D.G.M. had been kind enough to say that he ought to be considered in the matter, and so it been finally arranged that he should not tender his resignation, but should go away and come back again with the Masonic title that he held. In conclusion, he wished once more to thank them most heartily for the kind way in which he had been welcomed.

Bro. C. Peacock (Mayor of Adelaide) proposed the toast of "The W.M.'s of Lodges of South Australia."

Bro. W.M. Mais responded for the English Constitution, Bro. W.M. Robertson for the Scotch Constitution, and Bro. W.M. Simpson for the Irish Constitution.

Bro. D.G. Chaplain the Rev. Hy. Read, M.A., proposed "The Past Masters of South Australian Lodges."

Bros. P.M.'s Cunningham, Barlow, and King responded.

Bro. Dr. Whittell proposed "The Banqueting Committee," and Bro. Cunningham responded, saying that the committee had worked hard to make the affair a success, and had spared neither trouble nor expense. They were not responsible for the hitches which occurred in the catering during the early part of the evening.

Bro. H. E. Downer proposed "The Health of the Chairman, the D.G.M., Bro. A. Hardy."

The D.G.M. responded, thanking the brethren for the confidence expressed in him, and conveying some advice on the working of the business of the Craft.

Bro. R. Rees proposed "The Vice-Chairman."

The Vice-Chairman responded, and the proceedings terminated at a late hour.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION STONE OF THE NEW TOWN HALL AT STONEHAVEN.

All Stonehaven and the whole of the surrounding district turned out en masse to witness the ceremonial with which the foundation-stone of the new Town Hall was laid by Lord Inverurie, on Tuesday, 20th ultimo. The event which culminated in this interesting and highly picturesque display has been looked forward to for some length of time, and the arrangements having been properly matured, everything passed off in the most pleasing and agreeable manner, there being a very marked want of "hitches"—those frightful bugbears of public ceremonials, which so often reduce them to the level of the ludicrous, and even the contemptible.

The hall, when completed, will be a handsome, compact building, and will supply what has long been a felt want in the county town of the Mearns. The total cost, including furnishings, will not be much less than £4000. Mr. Baird, of Urie, superior of Stonehaven, and who has always manifested a warm interest in its prosperity, has subscribed £200 to the building fund, and liberal subscriptions have also been received from other county gentlemen, from Sir G. Balfour, Bart., M.P., and from the leading citizens. The committee, however, are still short by about £1000 of the requisite sum, and to assist in meeting that deficiency a bazaar is to be held on an early day.

The commencement of the proceedings was fixed for half-past one o'clock, but long before that time large numbers of people, attracted by the excitement of the occasion, as well as by the excellence of the weather, had assembled in the large Market Square, where the procession was to be marshalled by Chief Constable Weir, and whence it was to start on its perambulatory tour. In the square a large quantity of firewood had been gathered, along with other inflammable material, while a large boat, whose sea days had been done for a long time now, and for whose possession an enthusiast invested the sum of 15s. of Her Majesty's current coin, lay for the last time "high and dry" all ready for the great bonfire of the evening. Strings of bunting crossed the streets at intervals, and flags and all the other paraphernalia incidental to this sort of "blow-out" were to be found at every corner. The children from the two public schools of the town—Fetteresso and Dunnottar—were the first of the processionists to appear, and better pictures of happiness and enjoyment than were presented by them could not have been desired. There they were, dressed in their best and out for a holiday, cheering—as only full-hearted youngsters can cheer—to the echo as each new arrival debouched on to the square. Then, after the children, came in quick succession the trade representatives with badges and devices, the Masonic brethren, the Foresters, and the Good Templars, with their insignia, the Town Councils of the old and new towns of Stonehaven—for a river is in the midst of her, which is the line of demarcation—and so on till the hour of the ceremony approached.

Chief Constable Weir, who was on horseback, marshalled the procession.

Most of the lodges were well represented, there being over 200 Masons in full costume in the procession.

After perambulating the principal streets of the town, all of which were lined with spectators, the procession returned to the New Hall, where the foundation-stone ceremony took place, and to witness which a grand stand was crowded with ladies and gentlemen. Prior to Lord Inverurie laying the stone, ex-Provost Soutar presented his Lordship with a beautiful silver trowel for the performance of the work, and expressed a hope that his Lordship would retain the same as a memento of the day's proceedings.

Lord Inverurie having returned thanks, proceeded to lay the foundation-stone in true Masonic style, the usual libation of wine and oil being poured on after his Lordship had administered the orthodox three knocks, the Urie Band playing appropriate music. Three hearty cheers were raised after his Lordship had finished the work. In the cavity beneath the stone was placed a glass jar containing a parchment on which was written a copy of the prospectus of the hall undertaking, with list of subscribers annexed, and copies of local newspapers, and ten current coins of the realm, &c.

Lord Inverurie then mounted the stone and said—Brethren, ladies, and gentlemen,—I am going to begin the few remarks I have to make by expressing my mingled sense of lively satisfaction and regret—regret at the absence of the Provincial Grand Master, and satisfaction at being myself able to be present. I feel regret that Lord Ramsay could not have been here to-day, feeling as I do that the ceremony would then have been performed by far abler hands than mine; yet I feel great satisfaction in having this opportunity of meeting so many of my Masonic brethren on such a happy occasion. This is the first occasion which has fallen to my lot to preside at such an assembly as this, and I cannot but feel a peculiar satisfaction that this first occasion should be at the county town of a county with which, along with Aberdeenshire, I am more intimately connected than any other, and one to which my forefathers have been similarly attached for generations. It is not my forte to make long speeches, nor have I the time; but I cannot stand down without expressing, in the name of the brethren present as well as in my own name, our best wishes to the Provost and Town Council of this town for the undertaking of which we have now laid the foundation-stone. Stonehaven, if it cannot boast of many noble buildings, can boast of something far better, something for which we are known all over the world—I mean the hardiness and bravery of its fishermen—men who will go anywhere and brave anything to save life if placed in jeopardy on this rock-bound coast. It is with great pleasure I see them represented here to-day. In laying this foundation stone of a more fitting hall for the use of the magistrates and Town Council of this town, I feel sure you will all join with me in wishing both them and the town all success and prosperity in the future; and in conclusion, I pray that this hall may exist through future years alike a memorial of Masonic work and an ornament to this our good town.

Provost Wood congratulated the company on the successful proceedings of the day, and on the prospect of having within a month a commodious Town Hall. He acknowledged the hearty and liberal response that had been made by all classes to the appeal for subscriptions and support. Many of the landed proprietors of the county had shown their genuine liberality in the handsome subscriptions they had given, amongst whom were the present Lord Lieutenant, the Convener of the County, the Earl of Kintore, and Mr. Baird of Urie, the superior of the New Town, who with his wonted liberality was the first to head the subscription list, and who, along with many others, had repeated their donations. To all classes and to all individuals he desired to express his own thanks and those of the members of the Council and Hall Committee. He had in a special manner to thank the noble lord who came forward so readily on this occasion, and who had so gracefully performed the interesting ceremony.

Provost Wood then called for three cheers for his Lordship, which having been enthusiastically given,

Lord Inverurie said that he would like, in the first place, once more to say how much obliged he was for the way in which the company had kindly cheered his name, and in the second place, to say how sorry he was to have to leave before the banquet. At the same time, he would leave what would be an equally good substitute—a little money.

The ceremony then closed, after which a banquet followed.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

CONSECRATION OF THE SOUTHERN CROSS LODGE, No. 1590.

On Wednesday, 28th February, the brethren assembled at the new lodge, for the purpose of dedicating it to Masonic service, and also for installing the W.M. elect. At four o'clock Bro. P.M. Bain took the chair, being supported by P.M.'s Bros. Nettleton, Kemsley, Smyth, J. Bell, Tonks, H. W. Pearson, and Hill, Bros. Dunsterville and Alabaster acting as S.W. and J.W. respectively. The formal business completed Bro. the Rev. G. Smith, Chaplain of the Good Will Lodge, Port Elizabeth, performed the dedication service, and the brethren formed in procession to St. Katherine's Church, where a short sermon was delivered by the same reverend gentleman. This completed, a return to lodge was made in the same order as before, and Bro. Bain, assisted by the other Past Masters, installed Bro. Dr. S.J. Meintjes as the first Worshipful Master of the Lodge Southern Cross, No. 1590. The W.M. elect then proceeded to invest his officers as follows:—Bros. B. Harvey, S.W.; T. Tunbridge, J.W.; C. Holmes, Treasurer; D. S. Esselen, Secretary; Lemon, S.D.; Gibbon, J.D.; Atkinson, I.G.

CONSECRATION OF THE AMATOLE LODGE, No. 1640.

This lodge was opened at Alice on the 28th February, and drew together a very large number of Masonic and other visitors, including the Fort Beaufort Brass Band, whose efficient services added materially to the success of the demonstration. The brethren assembled at half-past three a.m. in the Court-room, and proceeded to St. Bartholomew's Church. On arriving at the church, the procession opened to the right and left, so as to enter in inverted order. After service the procession moved in the same order to the lodge-room, and on arrival again opened to the right and left, entering in inverted order. Ladies were admitted (by ticket) to view the lodge. The lodge was opened in due form and the constitution ceremony proceeded with. The ceremony of consecration commenced with a prayer by the Chaplain; the lodge being then uncovered and consecrated in form; when being again covered and a blessing given an anthem was sung. The brethren of the new lodge having rendered homage to the Installing Officer, he then constituted the lodge. Bro. P.M. C. J. Egan, D.G.M. designate, then installed the officers of the new lodge, after which the brethren proceeded to luncheon. The following is a list of the officers installed: Bros. E. J. Smithies, W.M.; H. Rowland, S.W.; P. Nightingale, J.W.; G. Murray, Sec. and Treas.; J. Attwell, S.D.; D. Watson, J.D.; W. Wynne, I.G. A concert took place in the evening at the Masonic Hall, which was crowded. About twenty ladies and gentlemen took part in the proceedings. The concert was a splendid one, and we have no hesitation in saying it was one of the best ever given in Alice. Several ladies and gentlemen from Fort Beaufort aided a great deal in the musical line.

A ROMANCE, entitled FREEMASONRY IN THE COUNTY COURT.

"Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." So said the great Hebrew bard, father of the Royal Solomon, and if our readers will only read to the end of this sketch, how delighted they will be to find it exemplified in the Province of Devon even unto the present day. Where more suitable for the practical illustration of the foregoing sentiment than Devonshire, for is not the revered and Christian minister the Rev. John Huyshe, M.A., the Prov. G.M.? Is it not also close to the residence of the Devon Masonic orator who has for years told the members what their duties are to God, their neighbours, and themselves? But to the point! It appears that a well known, respected, and able Past Master in Plymouth (and a Past Provincial Grand Officer), borrowed a little insignificant and useless MS. ritual, of a portion of the Royal Arch ceremony, long ago obsolete, at least the owner of the said pamphlet declares he did, but the P.M. fails to remember the occurrence. However the owner being a Mason, and the borrower one likewise, they soon amicably settle the matter, for the P.M. promises to search through his numerous papers (being a literary man, a work of time therefore), and proceeds to do so. He fails, alas, to find the missing but useless little MS., and though he regrets the fact, the owner gets wrath, and proceeds to consult a solicitor as to the matter. Herein will be seen the advantage of Freemasonry, and its superiority to any other institution under the sun, for the lawyer so consulted happened also to be a brother, a P.M., a Provincial Grand Officer, and so many things else in the Craft, that he himself rarely succeeds in recounting all his honours to his friends at any one meeting, for "their name legion."

On hearing the name of the P.M. who was charged by his client with the loss of this valuable nothing, he at once reminded the owner thereof that as Freemasons we should all adjust our difficulties amicably, and, therefore, he would strongly advise him (the client) to leave the matter in his hands, and he would obtain a few pence to give some poor beggar from the said loser of the MS. The owner, however, would not hear of this, but decided to seek the aid of the law to recover the value of his property, whereupon, the brother thus consulted, the P.M. of honour, position, usefulness, influence, and appearance, declined to be party to any such abuse of Freemasonry, refused the fee for consultation, and informed the brother that if he, as owner of a paltry and valueless MS., chose to summon a well known and respected brother before the judge of a county court for the value of the same (which was nil), he washed his hands clean of the whole affair, and in most indignant terms rebuked the said owner and brother for asking him to be party to such an intensely mean, shabby, and un-Masonic transaction. He then stopped, the vehemence of his whole nature being so roused that words failed to come, and, being a stout gentleman, the said owner made his exit, being fearful of apoplexy ensuing.

We are happy to state that better feelings in the end predominated, and owing to the fraternal advice of the solicitor in question, the affair was arranged amicably, a few shillings being handed by the P.M. to the South Devon Hospital, in acknowledgement of his supposed carelessness.

FREEMASONRY IN THE COUNTY COURT—A STERN REALITY.

On Wednesday, the 21st ult., before his Honour the Judge, was heard "T. Passion, plaintiff, v. S. Honesty Defendant."—The plaintiff claimed a large sum of money for a MS. ritual of a portion of the Ceremonies of the R.A. (long ago obsolete), which he declared had been lent by him to the defendant and not returned. The judge gave a verdict in favour of the defendant, who had wisely paid into court a sum of money much in excess of the value of the MS. in question. When we mention that the sum thus paid did not exceed three half-crowns, our readers will easily compute the small but real value set on the petty little "Ritual." The plaintiff hereafter will doubtless take a lively interest whenever the play of "The Biter Bit" is being acted.

There is, however, a sad fact connected with the case. The plaintiff all through the case was assisted by his lawyer, who is a distinguished Mason, and who knew well the trivial character of the so-called "R. A. Ritual." Had this legal brother but remembered the teachings of the society, which has so bountifully showered upon him honours and offices, and advised his client to accept the sum previously tendered, there would not have been enacted such a disgraceful exhibition of charlatanism and lack of Masonic fraternity.

ROMANCE AND REALITY OF FREEMASONRY.

The majority of brethren have little experience of the advantages derivable from a connection with the Craft, other than those which spring from their enjoyment of meeting steadily with fellow members and visiting brethren, in lodges adjacent to their own homes. There is a deep and valuable reality in this, but ordinarily there is not much romance. Our every-day life, in the Craft as in the world, is so stereotyped, that it brings us little that is new under the sun. But Freemasons that travel in distant lands have a wider and more varied experience. If in the army or navy, they are continually brought face to face with strange scenes and individuals, and not infrequently as well as with great danger; and even if they be only ordinary travellers, their experience is new every day. Valuable as Masonry is to them at home, it proves doubly so abroad, and they are not slow to acknowledge it. Bro. General Sir Charles Napier, while commander-in-chief in India, once said, in response to a toast at a Masonic banquet: "Few Masons can say they owe so much to Masonry as I do. I have been forty years a Royal Arch Mason, and I am glad of an opportunity of acknowledging it to the Craft." He then went on to detail how he was once taken prisoner by the French, without a hope of being exchanged, when he remembered that he was a Mason, and soon found a brother in a strange land, and speaking a strange tongue, who had conveyed safely a letter from him to his family in England (at that time a hazardous undertaking for a French officer), and the result was his speedy and honourable return to his own land.

There is scarcely any country so remote from civilisation as not to have some of its inhabitants initiated into the humane and self-sacrificing principles of Freemasonry. One would not naturally look for brethren among the wild Arabs of the Great Desert of Africa, and yet the tenets of the Craft have more than once been illustrated there, and will be again. For example: "Some twenty years ago a member of Oxford University Lodge was travelling in Egypt, accompanied by his servant, and in proceeding across the desert was attacked by robbers. Finally they were overpowered, but not until they had slain two of the band, and naturally the travellers supposed that their own lives would pay the forfeit of their skilful bravery. But the robber chieftain no sooner found that he had as prisoner a brother Mason than he restored to him every article of property that had been taken from him, and bid him resume his journey in peace. The lessons of Freemasonry are thus the very last that are forgotten. There seems to be a magic force in them, that impresses them indelibly on the tablets of the heart."

Many are the romantic incidents that are narrated of Freemasonry on the battle-field. This one is characteristic, and was related by Bro. Sir Archibald Alison, at a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow. In the Crimean war an English officer led a small party of soldiers up to one of the guns placed in an embrasure in the Redan. The majority of the men fell, in the deadly fire to which they exposed themselves. Those remaining were gallantly met by a body of Russian soldiers, and the English officer was about to be bayoneted, when he was Masonically recognised by a Russian officer, who struck up the bayonets of his soldiers, led his newly-found brother to the rear, and treated him with the kindness of a Mason.

The following incident of our Revolutionary war is worthy detailing in this connection:

On the plains of Camden, after the militia which composed the principal part of the American forces had left the field, the brave old German, Bro. General De Kalb, was left to bear the brunt of the unequal conflict, with a few tried veterans. They fought valiantly, but could not win against superior numbers. Borne down in the red hurricane of battle, the brave De Kalb fell, covered with wounds, close to where the British general was commanding in person. Prostrate on the ground, though still living, a dozen British soldiers, with savage cruelty, would, in a moment more, have pierced his bosom with as many bayonets. His aide, who was within a few feet of him when he fell, seeing the terrible fate his general was about to meet, rushed towards him, and stretching his hand towards heaven, cried out:

"Save the Baron De Kalb! Save the Baron De Kalb!"

Cornwallis, attracted by the cries, rode to the spot where the old hero was lying in his blood. Springing instantly from his horse, with his own sword he struck aside the bayonets of his soldiers, hailed the German general with a brother's welcome, staunch his wounds, took him from the cold bed of the battle field to his own quarters, where every comfort that wealth or power or sympathy could suggest was afforded him; and if care, attention, and relief could have preserved the life of De Kalb, it would have been done by Cornwallis. But death had fastened its fangs upon him, and although Cornwallis was unable to prolong his earthly existence, he consigned the body to the tomb with all the pageantry of a soldier's burial, and himself performed the grand honours of Masonry at the grave.

Even the possession of Masonic emblems by a brother has proved of signal service to him. Dep. Grand Master Bro. Blaquiére, the veteran Anglo-Indian Mason, had bequeathed to him a snuff-box, covered with the emblems of the Craft, that had a memorable history, and he prized it accordingly. It belonged originally to a medical gentleman, to whom it had been presented by his lodge, as a testimonial. He afterwards went to Brazil, where he realized a fortune in diamonds and other precious stones. These he placed in a small box, in which he also enclosed his Masonic snuff-box, and returned across the ocean to England. Off the coast of Cornwall the vessel in which he sailed was wrecked, and he reached his native land poorer than when he left it. About a year afterwards a stranger called at his lodgings, drew from under his coat the identical box that contained his lost treasure, and delivered it to him, as a Mason. The Masonic snuff-box, with his name upon it, led the strange brother to find the owner, and his Masonic principles led him to restore to him his lost property.

And not only does the American Mason and brethren in the deserts of Africa and Arabia, but Chinese brethren are promptly recognised when they journey westward, and come to our shores. Some years ago, at a communication of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, a card was sent in inscribed with the name of a visiting brother. The officers scanned it up and down, down and up, crosswise and obliquely, but to no purpose. It looked more like a spider's caligraphy than anything else. It chanced at last that a brother, learned in the Oriental languages, detected "Celestial marks," and suggested that a Chinese brother was knocking at the outer door. He was then examined and found to be a bright Master Mason, and promptly admitted to the circle of the Mystic Tie.

These are a few of the instances that illustrate at once the romance and reality of Masonry, and added to our own intimate knowledge of the advantages, intellectual, social and convivial, the Craft forms at home, they intensify our admiration for the oldest, noblest and strongest tie ever devised by man for binding together good men and true of every clime, nation and language.—Keystone.

FREEMASONRY, PAST AND PRESENT.

Masonry is the most ancient, and, so far, has been the most enduring of all human institutions. From the earliest times of the world's history until now, associations and orders have existed among men; some have left their footprints on the sands of time, but most have perished, without the shadow of a name, or one gilded cloud to mark the glory of their setting suns. Nations as well as institutions have arisen and been swept away; dynasties have sprung up and perished; the genius of revolution, with her ever-revolving kaleidoscope, has ceaselessly worked in the transformation of governments—converting, now kingdoms into republics; and now republics into empires. The old nations of the East have passed with the gorgeous civilisation of semi-barbaric opulence and power, down to the dark Plutonian shore, and have bathed in its Lethæan waters. Fair and classic Greece and Rome, eternal and imperial, purpling her seven hills with countless triumphs, have sunk into the decrepitude of age; the new and unknown Muscovite has sprung up like a giant and stretched his long arms and huge proportions over half Europe. The great Christian city of the East, the rival of univalued Rome—the city of the Golden Horn and of the Christian Constantine—has sunk into the arms of the victorious Turk, and become the sacred city and metropolis of Ismail. The Moorish crescent has pushed back the Christian cross from the Mediterranean to the Pyrenees, and in turn the conquering cross has driven the crescent to the sea, and been planted by the Christian Knights of Masonry upon the sacred walls of Jerusalem. New worlds have been discovered and opened to the admiring gaze of men, and our own continent, from a trackless wilderness, has risen by the magic of events to a power and population that transcends belief.

Throughout most of this wreck and reconstruction of the past; throughout most of this alternate chaos and order; throughout most of these mutations and revolutions, which history, in her great moving panorama, has presented to our sight; throughout most of these dissolving views, appearing, disappearing, and re-appearing on the tablets of time, like the tracings of phosphorus on a whitened wall; before many of the ancient dynasties had perished; before most of the nations and governments of the modern world had had their birth, Freemasonry existed and has flourished, and to-day, after the lapse of centuries, it exists and flourishes, striking its roots into every land of civilisation, and distilling from its spreading branches over the people of many nations the precious and healing dews of its benevolence and good works.

We must cherish and preserve it, and do our part to perpetuate it. To do this we must emulate the virtues of those honoured fathers whose death we mourn; we must preserve our vows inviolate; we must execute without departure the obligations we have assumed, and we must show to the profane world, by our actions rather than by our professions, that we keep the faith that we profess.—Grand Master Bro. Wm. B. Taliaferro, of Virginia.

Freemasonry is a peculiar system of morality, having eternity for its duration, and the universe for its space. Its attraction is the mystery in which it is veiled, its key is allegory, its bond morality, its object philanthropy, its result benevolence.—Masonic Herald.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WARWICKSHIRE.—A meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Leamington, on the 3rd inst., under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Leigh, R.W. Prov. Grand Master. After the transaction of the usual business of the Prov. Grand Lodge, the brethren proceeded to lay the foundation-stone of St. John's Church, Leamington, with Masonic ceremony.

The Grand Festival of the United Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-st., on Wednesday, the 25th inst. For full particulars see advertisement on front page.

THE FORTHCOMING FESTIVAL FOR THE GIRLS' INSTITUTION.—Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C. West Lancashire, has kindly undertaken the duties of Steward in connection with the 89th anniversary festival for the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls; and from the well-known popularity of our brother in Liverpool and throughout the province, there is every prospect that he will receive a goodly sum with which to appear at the festival. Bro. Goepel has already served the office of Steward to one of our three noble institutions.

LIVERPOOL MASONIC HALL.—From the recently published statement of accounts in connection with the old and new Masonic Hall, Liverpool, of which Bro. J. R. After all payments there was a balance to the credit of the Treasurer of £5 4s. 2d.

Bro. Emra Holmes delivered a lecture on "The Art of Public Speaking," on the 21st ult., in the Lecture Hall of the Mechanics' Institute at Ipswich, in connection with the Working Men's College. The lecture was an entertaining one, and there was a good attendance. Bro. Holmes has since lectured on "Tom Hood," at Saxmundham, to the members of the Mutual Improvement Society of that town.

PRESENTATION TO MR. JOHN GRAHAM IRVIN.—The managers and staff of the London and Westminster Supply Association, 10, 11, & 12, New Bridge street, E.C., presented a very valuable gold chronometer watch on the 28th ult., to Mr. John Graham Irvin, the esteemed general manager of the company. The work will be issued shortly by John Hogg & Co., Paternoster-row. Mr. James Hogg, sen., who was intimately associated with Mr. De Quincey during the last ten years of his life, will contribute some reminiscences, and the appendix will contain the "Medical Aspect of Mr. De Quincey's Case," throwing fresh light on the opium eating, by Dr. Eatwell, formerly principal of the Medical College, Bengal.

The Queen has sent a donation of £50 to the Princess Mary Village Homes.

OUR MEAT SUPPLY.—A correspondent living at Ottawa, who is a large meat and poultry salesman, writes to claim credit for Canada, and not the United States, being the first country which sent a supply of fresh meat and poultry to England. He says that the Canadians will endeavour to compete with the Americans in keeping the markets in this country well provided with cheap and good food.

The Craft in Scotland, we are glad to learn, are once more to have a Masonic newspaper organ, Bro. Kenning having commenced the fortnightly publication of the Scottish Freemason, in Glasgow. We wish it the success that has deservedly greeted all of Bro. Kenning's literary labours in behalf of the Craft.—Keystone.

MORE CLANDESTINES.—Some years ago a number of persons, probably French political refugees, being in London, established a lodge, calling it "Les Philadelphes." For this they had no warrant whatever, even from the facile Grand Orient. Recently they have resolved themselves into a so-called Grand Lodge, and now they will doubtless seek to enlist sympathisers, and grant warrants wherever they can find dupes. In this we see history repeating itself, for their course is but another phase of that pursued by Hamburg, France, and others, with a longing eye to catch the Yankees.—New York Courier.

It is expected that Bro. T. Brassey, M.P., will arrive home from his trip round the world in the course of next month.

At the Provincial Grand Lodge of Warwickshire, held at Leamington on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., Lord Leigh, P.G.M., in the chair. Bro. Isaac Silverstone, W.M. of the Lodge of Israel, Birmingham, presented the petition on behalf of the exclusion of Hebrews from certain German lodges. Lord Leigh, P.G.M., promised every support in Grand Lodge.

The Tatler states the true story of the birth and parentage of the Marchioness de Caux is that she was born neither in Spain, nor in the United States, nor in Whitechapel. Her real name was neither Patey nor Isaacs. Her real name was Patti—Adelina Patti. Her father and mother were Spaniards; she was born in Turin, and was taken to America in her infancy. Spain, therefore, claims the honour of her ancestry, Italy of her birth, and the United States of her earliest education. I know that this account is not piquant enough for gossip, but it has the merit of being true.

Mr. Frank Topham, one of the oldest members of the Watercolour Society, died suddenly at Cordova on the 31st ult. He left England for Spain with a party of friends less than a fortnight ago. Mr. Topham was about seventy years of age, but was so hale and active that his departure on a long and fatiguing journey was not regarded by his friends as anything extraordinary.

A Quarterly General Court of the Governors and Subscribers of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, on Saturday next, the 14th day of April, 1877, at Twelve o'clock precisely, on the general business of the institution, to consider notices of motion, and to elect thirteen girls into the school by ballot from a list of fifty-four candidates. The Whitehall Review understands that the Queen and the Prince of Wales have recently had submitted to them by Bro. Wills, the florist, and Mr. Bedborough, the architect, the drawings of a very novel structure which it is proposed to erect as a covering to the Prince Consort Memorial in Kensington-gardens. The proposal is to construct a large building of iron, copper, and glass, octagonal in form, 200 feet in diameter, with projections on four alternate faces of the octagon, 80 feet by 27 feet. The figure of the Prince Consort would stand under a domed roof 340 feet high. East and west of the central structure, and connected with it by corridors, it is proposed to construct gardens containing trees and plants representing the vegetable kingdom of the world. The main entrance would be from Kensington-gore. Could the proposal be carried out in its integrity, London would boast a resort absolutely free to all comers such as no other capital in Europe possesses. Whether or no the Queen expressed any opinion of the design we, however, cannot say, but the Prince of Wales is said to be much pleased with the plans, and to have accepted a photograph of the design.

The German excavators at Olympia report fresh valuable acquisitions. They have discovered a colossal torso of a statue of Jupiter and several heads from the gable-piece of Pæonios; also some bases of statues bearing inscriptions.

Active preparations are going on for the immediate commencement of the long-projected work of draining the Zuyder Zee.

AN ACTOR IN HANDCUFFS.—The Bath and Cheltenham Gazette reports that an amusing circumstance occurred in connection with the termination of the first piece at the theatre on Monday night. Mr. Cumberland, the popular stage manager, enacted the character of Captain Levison, the "villain" of the piece, and, as every one knows who has seen "East Lynne," is handcuffed, preparatory to going to gaol for murder. All went off successfully till after the "curtain," when the actor applied to the proper person to take the "darbies" off, but the key being worn out would not unlock them. Search was next made in the theatre auditorium for some "active and intelligent officer" who would have in his possession a key to unlock the manacles. No time was to be lost, as Mr. Cumberland had soon to appear in the second piece; but unfortunately no "blue bottle" could be discovered. What was to be done? The actor could not certainly "go on" as Jacob Earwig in handcuffs, and, furthermore, could not take off his coat to dress for the part. As a last resource the erstwhile Captain Levison, growing desperate, rushed from the building, and at last, near a house of entertainment, espied a helmeted guardian of the peace, who, on being assured that it was "all right," released the (stage) murderer.

During the month of March 150 ships passed through the Suez Canal. The receipts of the Company amounted to 3,090,000f.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Safe, yet Effective.—No other Medicine combines the same purifying, alterative, and tonic properties, which have raised these Pills so highly in the estimation of the public. In diseases arising from unhealthy situations, close apartments, and sedentary occupations, no means so potent for cooling, cleansing, and regulating the human body can be found. Holloway's Pills wonderfully improve a weak digestion by augmenting the gastric secretion and moderately rousing the functions of the liver, hence their well-known power of removing tainted breath, and remedying every other dyspeptic unpleasantness. They entirely overcome the lethargic symptoms attending bad digestion, and have for years been esteemed the best and safest family aperient. They are particularly suitable for young females and children.—Advt.

OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER'S VISIT TO MALTA.

For the following statement we are indebted to our contemporary the Lancet: "The Prince of Wales is suffering from an abscess attributed to the effects of an injury received while hunting. His Royal Highness's stirrup slipped, and a severe strain resulted. The abscess has been opened, the patient being under the influence of an anæsthetic, administered by Mr. Clover. Perfect relief has ensued, and the Prince is doing well, although some time must elapse before the healing process is complete. The locale of the present injury is probably determined by the fact that induration—the result of inflammation, which first appeared after the attack of typhoid fever to which his Royal Highness was subjected some years ago—still affects the seat of the abscess. The inflammatory induration recurred two years after the fever, and it reappeared previously to the departure of the Prince for India. Some return of the affection was experienced about a fortnight ago, and the strain received, as above narrated, caused considerable ecchymosis. His Royal Highness is under the joint care of Sir James Paget and Mr. Oscar Clayton."

The Medical Examiner announces the uninterrupted progress towards recovery of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. There has not been a single unfavourable symptom, and Sir James Paget and Mr. Oscar Clayton confidently hope that their Royal patient will be able to start for the Continent early next week.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales left Marlborough-house last evening shortly after 9 o'clock on a visit to the King and Queen of Greece at Athens. The Princess, attended by Colonel Teesdale and Miss Knollys, drove to the Charing-cross station of the South-Eastern Railway, where a special train had been prepared for the conveyance of her Royal Highness to Folkestone. Her Royal Highness, on alighting, was received by Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador, Lord Colville, General Probyn, and Colonel Ellis, Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., the Chairman, Mr. J. Shaw and Mr. Cockburn, representing the South-Eastern Railway Co. The Royal train, under the charge of Mr. John Shaw, manager and secretary, and Mr. Cockburn, superintendent of the line, quitted the station at 9.20 p.m., and proceeded by the short and direct route to Folkestone, which was reached at 11.15 p.m., and upon the saloons arriving at the harbour the Princess and suite embarked immediately on board the South Eastern Railway Company's steamer Victoria, Captain Dane, in which Her Royal Highness' luggage, which had been despatched from Charing-cross at 4.45 p.m., was already stowed. A special cabin had been erected upon the deck for the use of the Princess. The Victoria left Folkestone without delay, and steamed across the Channel to Boulogne. Her Royal Highness would leave Boulogne at 2.13 on Thursday morning and travel by the mail train over the Chemin de Fer du Nord, via Amiens, to Paris, which would be reached at 6.20 a.m., the journey from London being accomplished in eight hours and fifty minutes, with a saving of 28 miles. On Thursday the Princess of Wales and suite will rest at the Hôtel Bristol, in the Place Vendôme, where a handsome suite of apartments had been prepared, and in the evening Her Royal Highness would leave the French capital shortly after 8 o'clock by the Mediterranean line, the Princess travelling from Paris, via Mont Cenis, Turin, Bologna, and Ancona to the port of Brindisi, where the Royal yacht Osborne has been waiting, and whence Her Royal Highness will proceed at once to Athens, where, as already stated, she will be the guest of the King and Queen of Greece for a week or two. The Prince of Wales is expected to leave London on Tuesday or Wednesday next, should His Royal Highness's health permit, and will proceed to the South of France, returning in about a month with the Princess of Wales to England. We take this from the Times.

A telegram from the Boulogne correspondent of the Times (Thursday), adds:—The Princess, accompanied by Miss Knollys, Colonel Teesdale, and suite, landed here at 1.40 a.m. after a passage of one hour and fifty minutes from Folkestone on board the steamer Victoria, Capt. Dane, which experienced a strong wind and heavy sea. The landing was strictly incognito, being witnessed only by the officials on duty. A supper-room and two retiring-rooms have been specially fitted up at the railway-station, and tastefully decorated with flowers.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

In the Chaine d'Union for April we find proof, if proof be needed by any dispassionate observer, of the extreme folly and unseasonableness of the revolutionary agitation in the French Grand Orient. It will indeed be very lucky if the effect be not to throw back Freemasonry into the chaos of atheistic and socialistic reveries altogether, and to make it "stink in the nostrils," so to say, of all religious and reverent minded Frenchmen. There never was, in our humble opinion, and we have studied the question very carefully, alike from its historical and actual point of view, a more senseless and hurtful movement, without any real basis or meaning, or possible utility, or probable good, than the present one, by which Freemasonry is convulsed from one end of France to the other, and which can only result, in our opinion, in playing into the hands of the Ultramontane party, isolating the French Grand Orient, and discrediting French Freemasonry generally in the appreciation of intelligent and serious Frenchmen of all classes. Bro. Hubert declares himself, in the Chaine d'Union, manfully against the change on his own ground, though he admits that he is somewhat afraid that the popular current of the hour is carrying the French lodges and brethren in just the opposite direction. He, like us, declares the change to be meaningless, mischievous, and inopportune, and equally agrees with us that French Freemasonry, like English, has always declared a belief in God, The Great Architect of the Universe, a needful and pre-requisite condition for admission into our great brotherhood. He mentions that in one lodge in Paris, the "Alsace and Lorraine," the question of the "rejection of the formula" had been shelved by the acceptance of the "Ordre du jour," or "the previous question." He gives us an account of a debate on the subject in the Lodge "Emules de Montyon," Orleans, which practically negatives the proposal. The lodge had remitted the matter to a commission of five, (representing a special committee with us), by whom the "Ordre du Jour," or previous question, was also proposed unanimously. Two modifications of this proposition were submitted, simply denying the opportuneness, which were rejected, and then the Vénérable (W.M.) Gavot proposed the following amended "order of the day":—"La Loge les Emules de Montyon, Or. d'Orleans, considerant que la philosophie deiste et de traditions dans la Maçonnerie décide qu'il n'y a pas lieu de supprimer le sec 2 de l'Article 1, de la Constitution." This "Ordre du Jour" was carried by 17 white balls to 10 black, and the Lodge "Emules de Montyon" of Orleans therefore votes against the change. When we look into the discussion we shall see at once the unwholesome agitation thus fostered by this love of revolutionary alteration, the sad "inopportune" of the entire question, and the harm it must inevitably do to Freemasonry even in France. What the effect may be outside France we do not profess to estimate or realize. One brother, A, says he is a "Positiviste;" another, B, declares he is a "Materialiste;" a third, C, affirms that he is a "Deiste;" a fourth, D, repeats that he is a "Materialiste;" and a fifth pronounces himself a "Voltairean," though he makes a very sensible speech, and these unanimously desire to shelve the question. The argument of the W.M. is simply this, that "if French Freemasons reject the formula of the belief in God, there will be produced, not only among Freemasons, but in the profane world, a great reaction against the Grand Orient, and it will simply fatally become a school of positivism." (The leading positivists in French Freemasonry seem to be advocating the change.) "The Freemasons of other Grand Lodges will renounce French Freemasonry; it will become smaller and smaller by degrees, and its eventual fall is certain." We may beg to observe here that these are almost our own words on a previous occasion. What good, then, can result from such a "discussion?" We in England shall emphatically, not only reply none, but, on the contrary, the "greatest positive harm." In fact it is apparent, even to the most superficial observer of the struggle in France, that the only persons who profit by this insane controversy are those who detest and denounce Freemasonry. Monsigneur Dupanloup will come out with another "Etude," and will appeal to all the faithful and all the Freemasons with great effect, whether his original words of warning are not made good, in that French Freemasonry has taken the needful and logical step he declared it must take, that it could not stand where it was, and, no longer Theistic, even in outward profession, openly declares its distinct negation of God. We do not actually know who is the leading spirit in this unwise movement, otherwise, (for history always repeats itself), we should be tempted to look, as the Americans say, for a Jesuit "Affinity."

THE CANDIDATES FOR THE GIRLS' AND BOYS' SCHOOLS.

There are, "place aux dames," 54 candidates for the Girls' School election, April 14th, and 13 to be elected. Of these 54, 2 come up for the 5th application, 1 for the 4th, 13 for the 3rd, 2 for the 2nd, and 26 for the 1st application. We beg our brethren to note this last fact, that since the October election 26 fresh candidates have cropped up for the Girls' School. Of the status of the applicants some curious facts appear before us. There are 21 orphans of tradesmen, 8 of merchants, 5 licensed victuallers, 3 agents and clerks, hotel proprietors, brewers, officers in the army, non-commissioned officers, employers of labour, and solicitors, 2 each; while engineers, officials, architects, surveyors, and farmers are each represented by one candidate. Such an analysis suggests many considerations, as it demonstrates what we have often stated before, that we have, as Freemasons, to provide for the education of contrasted classes, and that therefore any theory of a education purely eleemosynary, the maximum, so to say, of a pauper district school, is most mistaken and mischievous. And we feel ourselves that "maximum" is rapidly and happily, rising, as if education is to be education in everything but name, we must educate up to the actual intellects of the children, and not down to an artificial standard of a dull uniformity. This is now happily an axiom of all true educationalists. In the Boys' School list there appear 59 applicants and 12 to be elected April 16. Of these 1 comes up for a 7th application, 1 for a 6th, 5 for a 5th, 8 for a 4th, 5 for a 3rd, 20 for a 2nd, and 19 for a 1st. As in the Girls' School, the status of the applicants is suggestive of many observations. Of the orphans of tradesmen we have 17, of clerks and agents 8, of officials 6, of merchants and manufacturers 6, of commercial travellers 5, of hotel managers and brewers 3 each, of engineers, master mariners, 2 each, and of schoolmasters, civil engineers, farmers, licensed victuallers, clerk in Holy Orders, no occupation, 1 each. Can any simple facts or figures more clearly testify to the worth and need of our two great educational institutions?

OUR NATIONAL FINANCES.

Though, as we have often before observed, we are not politicians in any sense of the word, much less have we, as Freemasons, anything to do with this political party or that, the "ins" or the "outs," yet, as it appears to us, there are many questions of social and general importance which may well attract our own notice, and be considered by us to merit the special attention of our many patient and friendly readers. Thus the question of the National Finances is one which affects us all greatly in many ways, some more, some less, and as it comes before us at this season may well serve to give variety and interest to the careful columns of the Freemason. It has long been a question, with all who study and consider such matters, whether the estimates of the Chancellor of the Exchequer would be realized, whether our National balance sheet would "square," to use a common expression, or whether there would not be a deficiency to announce. Troubled times, bad trade, slack returns, and want of confidence in many departments of business, have greatly affected the returns of the last twelve months, though the result equally verifies the careful and cautious estimates of Sir Stafford Northcote a year ago. He took the returns, as will be remembered, at the sum of £78,412,000. If up to the 24th of March, 1877, from April 1876, they have reached £76,799,676, and when to this is added the return of the week ending April 1st, which may fairly be calculated at a liberal amount; (there are always "sweepings" at the last moment), we may have a small deficiency in the estimate for the year, about £100,000, though even that is doubtful. Supposing that the last week's return does not reach £1,600,000, we do not think that the amount of the actual deficit will at any rate exceed £200,000, and even that is more nominal than real, and is practically matter of very little moment. For the last twelve months up to March 24, the customs have produced £19,580,000, as against £19,665,000 last year; excise, £27,418,000, as against £27,324,000; stamps, £10,670,000, as against £10,779,000; land tax and house duty, £2,249,000, as against £2,446,000; property and income tax, £4,941,000, as against £3,926,000; Post-office, £5,958,000, as against £5,500,000; Telegraph Service, £1,250,000, as against £1,200,000; Crown Lands, £388,000, as against £395,000; and miscellaneous, £4,142,576, as against £3,968,658—in all, £76,799,576, as against £75,673,658. In respect to actual income of the year, there is already over a million of increase, and if the last week be a good one, it will bring up that increase on the year to nearly two and a half millions. But still, the result is below the estimate, and it is stated that the budget for last year, owing to supplemental estimates, and other matters, will exceed £79,000,000. It would appear at first sight as if the look-out was not, financially considered, a cheerful one for the British Tax-payer. But we believe that with reviving trade, if peace is happily preserved, or a close brought to a harassing and embarrassing "statu quo" in the East somehow, the pecuniary difficulties of the Chancellor of the Exchequer will rapidly vanish away, and we have no fear but that 1878, if all goes well, will witness increased returns, and a substantial surplus to relieve the difficulties of our Finance Minister, and to gladden the hearts of a confiding public. Since we wrote these words, the return of the last week is announced, and so much larger is it than estimated, as we fancied, that the estimate of the cautious Chancellor of the Exchequer has been actually exceeded, and he has a balance of £152,883 to his credit. Let us hope that the season of depression is over, and that better days are in store for trade and business amongst us! We may add, that the whole amount received by the Chancellor of the Exchequer is £78,565,036, as against an estimated income of £78,412,153. The return of the last week was £1,760,360.

THE METROPOLITAN AND CITY POLICE ORPHANAGE.

There are several benevolent and humane societies which appeal strongly to our sympathies and pockets year by year, and as Englishmen we may always feel very proud, in our opinion, of that noble charitable system which is alike both a living proof of ever zealous sympathy for others, and a lasting credit to advancing civilization. Most of us have, probably, some one pet society to which we devote a good deal of our time, thoughts, and means, and very wonderful and very praiseworthy is this great army of self-sacrificing workers in this crowded metropolis, on behalf of that ennobling and goodly principle of active and sympathetic charity, in its widest form and in its truest sense. There are numberless useful and beneficial societies, which deserve our active countenance, as we said before, but just now, more than ever (when we are talking so much, perhaps just a little too much, of discriminate almsgiving), we seem to look for certain "marks" or features of well-managed associations and institutions. The first of these is, that it shall be self-supporting if possible; the second, that it shall be indigenous, so to say, shall be kept up to a great extent by those by whom it was started, and for whom it was intended; thirdly, that it shall be economically managed; and fourthly, that it shall be doing well its proper work. Perhaps few institutions so answer to these characteristics of a well-managed and effective orphanage as the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage, which, though amongst the youngest, is already hardly second to any in the reality of its work, and the practicality of its kindly mission. It is located comfortably at Twickenham, and is carefully educating 200 orphans of the Metropolitan and City Police, of whom 115 are boys and 85 are girls. The Rev. D. Anderson, Vicar of Holy Trinity, gives a favourable report of the Institution, its actual work, its careful progress, and as Mr. Anderson has had much experience in school work, his testimony is very valuable. Those of us who know anything of police work itself, the "wear and tear" of human life it entails necessarily, the strain upon corporeal powers and mental faculties, the accidents to which it is liable, and the dangers which, in a population like that of London, always attend the discharge of police duties, must be aware that by no profession, save that of the soldier and sailor in war time, is the need of such an institution so great, nor by any are its blessings so truly felt. We rejoice to think that the very great and deserved success which has attended the labours of those who have set on foot and have so far carefully conducted this truly valuable institution, valuable both for what it is and for what it yet may be, to a body of men, whose faithful discharge of their duty under often trying circumstances, deserves to be remembered and appreciated by us all—is not only happily maintained, but seems to point even to still greater results. By the balance sheet to the end of 1876 it would seem that there was—

There is now in Metropolitan Stock the sum of £3050 8s. od. to the credit of the Institution. We need hardly point out to our readers how singularly healthy and satisfactory is the balance sheet thus submitted to their notice. To one point in it let us, however, give our attention, as it is, we venture to think, the clue to the great success of the Institution itself, namely, that the force itself, one way or another, raises considerably above the half of the whole income of the Orphanage. Here then is the claim for the continued sympathy of all who in this great capital of ours are sensible of the value and importance of the Metropolitan and City Police, of all who are friends to what is useful and benevolent, practical and charitable, at the same time sympathetic and helpful to our brother man.

THE MASONIC ENIGMA.

The proprietor of the Masonic Magazine has had very great pleasure in sending to his numerous correspondents who have answered the Enigma nearly simultaneously, a copy of the "Cosmopolitan Calendar."

ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Sir,—

May I be allowed to ask, through the medium of your widely circulated publication, the reason why "tenders" were required at all by the committee for a musical party for the above festival, when surely it cannot be denied, that the preference was given to one—if not the most inferior party—submitted on Friday last? I had often heard (and with no slight amount of truth) that the musical management at "these affairs" were "foregone conclusions." This, however, I will say for the institution represented by our esteemed Bro. J. Terry, that nothing but bona-fide transactions are entertained under his management. I will now mention, for the information of your readers, that the party submitted by me to the "Musical Committee" of the above institution consisted of two sopranos, two contraltos, two tenors, and two basses; also two pianists, and a third instrumentalist (trumpet or flute)—all first-class artistes. And as there were also other lists submitted infinitely better than the one "chosen," I would beg leave to suggest that instead of putting several persons to great inconvenience and expense in furnishing lists of artistes, when, as a matter of course, the better lists are discarded, such committees, now subject to "private influence," and possibly not being competent to judge between one list and another, do, for the future, place the management of the music in the hands of the person whom they believe will give them satisfaction, and thereby "spare the feelings" of many an individual by not throwing it open to competition, which is, in truth, a "baseless fabric."

I am, Sir, yours truly,
24th March, 1877.

MASONIC QUERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

"663" does not appear to see the point of my letter in your impression of the 24th ultimo. It had no reference "to the proposing and balloting for candidates out of the regular course," but to the fact, very frequently overlooked, I fear, that the Constitutions do not permit a joining brother to be balloted for at any lodge of emergency.

This regulation is a very sound one, as it is no doubt intended to prevent the admission of a brother, as a joining member, in an irregular manner; and there can be no reason why exception should be given in this respect, as it is not a question of being made a Mason, for which the Constitution provides.

Yours fraternally,

ROBERT CASE,
P. Prov. G. Sec., Dorset.

THE DUNDEE WORK.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

This is the revelation of a person admitted at Dundee in 1727, and considered in conjunction with the old constitutions and documents is very valuable. It could not be printed in your pages, but is totally unconnected with Prichard in any conceivable form. On comparing it with pre-1717 Masonry in England, I should pronounce it a genuine record of old Freemasonry (operative) in Scotland, as it had come down from ancient times.

It solves the query of your late correspondent a "Mark Master," by proving, as every unprejudiced enquirer knows, that the only Mark ceremony was, what De Quincey terms "fork out," the payment of a fee for registering the Mark.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

THE COMMEMORATION LIFEBOATS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Sir,—

Can any of your readers inform me if either of the two lifeboats given by Grand Lodge is to be placed at one of the Scilly Islands?—a part of the dominions of Great Britain where it is so greatly needed.

Yours faithfully,

LUCRETIUS.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir, and Brother,

Will you kindly allow me to plead for votes for the forthcoming election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, on the 16th April, in behalf of George Samuel

Cox. It is his seventh application, and he has only one more chance. His father, James Cox was initiated into Freemasonry in 1862, and was W.M., and afterwards, indeed up to the time of his death, Secretary of the Fortitude Lodge, 105, Plymouth. Our brother was highly respected and esteemed by all who knew him. He filled the situation of Master of the Stonehouse workhouse for eleven years. On leaving this post in order to take the mastership of the Model Workhouse at Devonport, he received a very handsome testimonial from the Guardians and others. He died after a few weeks illness, leaving a widow with five small children entirely dependent upon her. Mrs. Cox then obtained a situation as national Schoolmistress at Stamstead in Suffolk, where she has been for the past four years, and where she bears a very excellent character. She has succeeded in apprenticing her eldest son, and is most anxious to provide for the present applicant. The case is recommended by the M.W. Bro. The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G.M.; the R.W. Bros. The Lord Waveney, P.G.M., Suffolk; W. W. Beach, M.P., P.G.M. Hants, and Isle of Wight, Rev. J. Hayshe, P.G.M. Devonshire; Rev. J. C. Martyn, P.G.C., D.P.G.M., Suffolk; L. P. Metham, P.G.D., D.P.G.M., Devon; Rev. Dr. Ace., P. Prov. G.C., Lincolnshire, and several others, including Bro. the Rev. J. R. Portal, Past G.M., Mark Masters, Bro. James Fowler, P.G.S.W., Lincolnshire; Bro. S. Jew. Stonehouse; Bro. W. J. Poley, Sudbury, Suffolk, &c.

I would most earnestly solicit the help of Brethren to carry the case this time; but great efforts must be made, as the boy has only polled about 380 votes. I shall be delighted to receive proxies, and to give every information, as the case is very well known to me.

I have the honour to be yours faithfully and fraternally,
CHARLES J. MARTYN, P.G.C., D.P.G.M., Suffolk.
Vice-Patron of the Institution.
Melford Rectory, Suffolk.

Review.

A MANUAL OF THE HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT OF ART.
By G. G. ZERFFI, Ph.D., F.R.S.L., &c. (London, Hardwicke and Bogue, 1876.)

Bro. Dr. Zerffi, already favourably known as the author of "Spiritualism and Animal Magnetism," and other high-class works, also as one of the lecturers of Her Majesty's Department of Science and Art, has published this comprehensive volume of the Historical Development of Art, Pre-historic, Ancient, Classic, Early Christian, with special reference to Architecture, Sculpture, Painting, and Ornamentation. The volume is brought down to the art of the Mahomedans, and in a future work the author will trace the historical development to our own times. We fully agree with Dr. Zerffi that in all our educational establishments, colleges, and ladies' schools, the study of art history, which ought to form one of the most important subjects of our educational system, is entirely neglected. The aim of this book is to suggest and excite such a study. With regard to King Solomon's Temple, Dr. Zerffi gives a minute account; and, speaking of the chambers above the Holy of Holies, concurs with the learned Ben David, in a letter to Lichtenberg, in the Berlin "Archive der Zeit," that this chamber must have contained an electric battery, for golden chains connected the room with the pillars of Jachin and Boaz, which are hollow, and could be placed in communication with the altar of brass. At the consecration of the temple, clouds, produced by incense, suddenly filled the interior of the temple, and a flash of lightning ignited the sacrifice. Michaelis tells us that the temple was never struck by lightning—the lightning, therefore, setting fire to the sacrifice must have been produced within the temple. Dr. Zerffi has a very bad opinion of Hebrew art; in fact he says, "Little or nothing can possibly be said of Hebrew art, for it is a nonentity. . . . The temple, whatever its magnificence might have been in precious stones, gold, silver, carved cherubims, brass and silver vessels, washing basins, and candlesticks, was architecturally an utter failure." Chapter VIII., treating with Greek art, is a most exhaustive essay. Art with the Greeks was cherished, cultivated, and loved for its own divine sake. We are sorry that our space will not allow us to give any extracts, but we consider the volume a valuable contribution to Art History, and heartily commend it to our readers.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of this Institution was held on the 20th ult., in the library, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Griffiths Smith presided. The other brethren who attended were Bros. Robt. B. Webster, Major Finney, Thos. F. Peacock, Thos. W. White, H. Massey, (Freemason), F. G. Baker, Jesse Turner, A. H. Tattershall, Hyde Pollen, Dr. Ramsay, H. A. Dubois, H. Potter, J. Faulkner, H. C. Levander, and R. Wentworth Little (Secretary).

Bro. Dr. Ramsay gave notice of an amendment which he would move at the Quarterly Court to Bro. H. G. Warren's motion for the increase of security to be given by the Secretary and clerks, that the matter be referred to a committee to consider and report upon, and that such committee consist of Bros. W. Hyde Pollen, W. Roebuck, D. M. Dewar, Raynham W. Stewart, and Dr. Ramsay.

Bro. Jesse Turner enquired whether this was necessary, as the matter would be considered by the brethren at the Quarterly Court. For himself he believed that the best plan to adopt would be for a guarantee society's guarantee to be taken, the Institution paying the premium. It was a plan adopted by the Corporation, and was found to work very well. The City Chamberlain had a great many clerks under him, and the security of a guarantee society was taken for all of them, and the corporation paid the premium.

Dr. Ramsay said that several brethren objected to the Institution being put to the expense of some £90 a year for such a purpose.

On the motion of the Chairman, £5 a year was added to the salary of the drawing mistress, Miss Larkin.

A notice of motion by Bro. Raynham W. Stewart was handed in, to the effect that the Quarterly Courts in January and July be held at four o'clock in the afternoon, instead of at twelve o'clock.

A vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings, and the Committee then adjourned.

THE FUNERAL OF THE LATE BRO. QUARTERMASTER WOON.

The funeral of the above-named highly esteemed and respected officer took place at Walmer on Tuesday afternoon, the 13th ult. The procession, which was a very grand one, started from the official residence of the deceased at the North Barracks, past the military church and the South Barracks, turning the corner opposite to Mr. Fleet's house (from whence the procession reached as far as the entrance to the North Barracks), and from thence proceeded to the Military Burying Ground. The procession was composed of all the officers and men off duty—upwards of twelve hundred in number—besides several friends and officers from other divisions, and members of the Wellington Lodge, Deal, of which the deceased had been Past S.W.

The coffin was borne on a gun carriage drawn by four horses draped in funeral garniture, escorted by the Army Service Corps. On the coffin was placed the cocked hat and sword of the deceased officer, also a number of flowers and wreaths tastefully entwined. Immediately behind the coffin walked Lieut. Woon, of the Royal Marine Artillery, and Master Harry Woon, two sons of the deceased, Dr. Bremner, and other officers, the pall-bearers being personal friends of the deceased, amongst whom we observed Colonel Stewart, Colonel McArthur, Major Travers, Captain Fuller, Captain Le Grand, Major Ellis, Colonel Evans, Lieut. Byrch, Capt. Wright, Quartermaster Herring, &c. The band of the 24th Regiment was kindly placed at the disposal of the commanding officer at Walmer by the major general commanding the district, and played the Dead March.

The coffin was met at the Cemetery-gate by the Rev. A. Symonds, the curate in charge of St. Saviour's—the coffin being borne from thence on the shoulders of a party of soldiers who had served with him during the war in China. The funeral service for the dead was then impressively read by the reverend gentleman in the presence of as many spectators as could possibly obtain admission to the ground. After the body had been lowered three volleys were then fired over the grave, and thus terminated the imposing ceremony. After a last parting look into the grave and the dropping of wreaths of flowers on the coffin containing the remains of this gallant, respected, and highly-esteemed officer, the procession re-formed and returned to the barracks to the strains of the excellent band. The weather unfortunately was exceedingly unfavourable, rain having descended from the time of the procession starting till its return. Many hundreds of spectators were, however, not deterred from being present.

THE INSTALLATION OF BRO. SIR GEORGE ELLIOT AS PROV. G.M. FOR SOUTH WALES.

On Wednesday last, Bro. Sir George Elliot, M.P., was installed at Aberdare into the important office to which he has recently been appointed by the M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Bro. Aeneas J. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, performed the ceremony of installation, and amongst other distinguished brethren who were present and assisted in the ceremony, which was conducted in the most impressive manner, were Bros. Col. Burdett, R.W.P.G.M., Middlesex; John B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes; J. C. Parkinson, J.P., P.G.D.; Thomas Fenn, P.A., G.D. of C.; and Capt. S. G. Homfray.

There was also a very large attendance of brethren from lodges in South Wales and Monmouth.

At the close of the proceedings, the Hon. Baronet, who is deservedly popular in South Wales, received the hearty congratulations of the brethren present. The following account of the proceedings we take from the Daily News :—

Aberdare, April 4.

This little town, the centre of Welsh mining enterprise and industry, to-day received a very considerable addition to its population in a large number of "working Freemasons" from all parts of England and Wales, who had assembled to do honour and give effect to the Letters Patent of His Royal Highness the Grand Master of the English Freemasons—the English Order including Welsh Freemasonry—these letters creating Sir George Elliot, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of the Eastern Division of South Wales, in place of the late Bro. T. M. Talbot.

The position of Provincial Grand Master under the Constitution of the United Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England is one of great honour and dignity, as is seen by the fact that the present holders of the rank in the various provinces are noblemen and gentlemen of the highest standing in society, among them being his Royal Highness Prince Leopold (Oxfordshire).

The Grand Master, who is elected by the representatives of the Craft in open Grand Lodge, exercises the right to appoint his representatives in all the Provincial Grand Lodges, as well as the District Grand Masters in the many parts of the world where the Craft is "worked" under the jurisdiction of the English Constitution, and the English has the widest range of all the Grand Lodges in existence. Sir George Elliot, who has been called to this high Masonic rank, has regularly "worked" through the Craft, having served as Warden and Worshipful Master of the Bard of Avon Lodge—a lodge which he assisted to bring from Shakespeare's birthplace to be a Middlesex lodge, which is now known as a lodge of literary and artistic brothers. Sir George was afterwards selected by the Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex as his Deputy Grand Master, so that by his elevation to be the immediate representative of the Royal Grand Master he has only received one step in the Masonic ranks. The new Provincial Grand Master has been selected for this high position amid the universal acclamations of the province, for Sir George has a seat, Aberaman House, at Aberdare, and his name is closely connected with the industrial progress of this part of the Principality.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the largest building in Aberdare—the Temperance Hall—which is capable of holding upwards of a thousand persons. The building was capable of being effectively "tyled," and the duty of superintending the arrangements devolved upon the brethren of the St. David's Lodge, No. 679 on the registry of the Grand Lodge of England, and of this lodge Sir George is a member. A large number of brethren came from the neighbouring province of Monmouthshire, and the Welshmen generally seemed to feel that the occasion was one upon which they could do honour to their Prince, as well as to one who has spent no small part of his life in developing the trades in which Wales takes an especial interest. The large hall was finely decorated, and made to represent a grand Lodge as nearly as can be done in a building not specially built for the purpose, and it looked especially bright when filled with the brethren decorated with the varied colours of the order—the purple and gold of Grand Lodge, the scarlet of the Stewards, and the blue and silver of the Craft, all standing out in contrast with the smart hangings of the hall. The G. Registrar of England, Bro. Aeneas McIntyre, Q.C., was the Acting Provincial Grand Master, who opened the lodge, and he was assisted by Brother J. C. Parkinson, Past Grand Deacon of England, and Past Deputy Grand Master of Middlesex; Bro. Colonel Burdett, Provincial Grand Master of Middlesex; Brother Thomas Fenn, Past Grand Deacon of England; and Brother J. Monckton (Town Clerk of London), and many other local celebrities. Sir Albert Woods (Garter) was at the last moment prevented from taking the long journey, and his position as Grand Director of Ceremonies was undertaken by Brother Thomas Fenn, who has special qualifications for the office. The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form and with prayer, the Secretary, at the command of the acting Provincial Grand Master, read the letters patent, signed by H.R.H. the Grand Master, appointing "Sir George Elliot, Baronet, Member of Parliament," to the full enjoyment of the position of Provincial Grand Master of the Eastern Division of South Wales. A deputation was then appointed to seek the Provincial Grand Master elect, and these brethren having retired, returned presently with Sir George Elliot, who was warmly greeted with the spontaneous cheers of the assemblage. The brethren were then called to order, and they saluted the Provincial Grand Master elect. The acting Grand Master then put the usual interrogations to the candidate for this high position, exacting from him the usual pledges to guard the rights of the brotherhood, to adjudge equally between all, and to discharge the duty of Provincial Grand Master subject to the Grand Lodge and to the Grand Master. The pledges having been given, Sir George was formally installed into the chair, till then occupied by the Grand Registrar, who presented the newly-installed Master with the emblems of authority, and "clothed" him in the gorgeous raiment of a Provincial Grand Master.

After the usual Masonic honours had been paid to the new Grand Master of the Province, he exercised his prerogative by appointing the following brethren to be the officers of the province for the year:—Provincial Grand Registrar, Bro. J. Jones Hewson; Senior Grand Warden, Bro. J. E. Price; Junior Grand Warden, Bro. John Rogers; Senior Grand Deacon, Bro. T. G. Glass; Junior Grand Deacon, Bro. D. Hopkins; Grand Treasurer, Bro. John Jones; Grand Chaplain, Bro. the Vicar of Aberdare; Grand Director of Ceremonies, Bro. W. P. Garrett; Grand Tyler, Bro. George Butterswell; Grand Superintendent of Works, Bro. J. R. Robinson; Grand Sword Bearer, Bro. R. Webb; Pursuivant, Bro. G. H. White. The officers were invested, and the Provincial Grand Lodge was in due form closed.

The company then proceeded to the Market Hall, and the strangers to the town had an opportunity of seeing an ample proof of the high estimation in which Sir George is held, for with great public spirit the town had roofed in the market in order that the guests and visitors might be Masonically entertained at a banquet. The hall, too, was beautifully decorated, the floral ornamentation being specially fine. The usual loyal toasts were given and accepted with Welsh heartiness. The Provincial Grand Master's health was cordially toasted, as were the Grand Officers', who responded. The principles of the Craft were spoken of by Bro. J. C. Parkinson, who, in giving "The Visitors," said that they had come not only to testify their interest on the occasion, but to pay public homage to abstract principles, and he then proceeded to speak of the teachings of the Craft under the English Constitution—that every member of it was to be a good citizen, to support the institutions of the country, to pay absolute obedience to the law, and throughout, he said, the duties of toleration and charity were enforced, and symbolically the great truths of religion were taught. Thus, he said, the Order was a strength to the nation.

A fully detailed account of the proceedings will be given next week.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

FAITH LODGE (No. 141).—The last regular meeting of this old city lodge was held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on the 27th ult., and was fairly attended. Amongst those present were Bros. M. Davis, W.M.; Mallett, S.W.; Daney, J.W.; Carter, P.M., Treas.; Stuart, P.M., Sec.; Rumball, S.D.; Bye, J.D.; Morrison, A.W.S.; Walls, A.D.C., acting I.G.; and Past Masters E. Hopwood and Thomas. The visitors were Bros. Platt, P.M., P.P.G.D. of Cheshire; and Smith (Pannure). The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the agenda of business, which was not a very full one, was proceeded with. Bros. Jordan, Marchant, and Allan, were raised, and Bro. Smith passed. The two different and impressive ceremonies were carried out by the W.M. with his customary ability. Bro. John Marks, late 141, having been unanimously elected as a joining member, and Bro. Titley appointed to represent the lodge at the Girls' festival in May next. The attention of the lodge was then called to the case of Bro. Seagram, a very old member of the "Faith," who is a candidate for the benefits of R.M.B.I. at the forthcoming election. The case of this brother, which is a very deserving one, was earnestly recommended to the brethren by Bros. Stuart, Hopwood, and others, and ultimately a vote was taken that the committee of the benevolent fund attached to the lodge should take the matter in hand, in order that the distressed brother might receive some immediate assistance. The lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren adjourned to the last Tuesday in the present month. There was no banquet.

KENNINGTON LODGE (No. 1381).—This lodge held its last meeting for the season at the Surrey Club House, Kennington Oval, on the 3rd inst., when there were present, amongst others, Bros. Higgins, W.M.; H. Reeves, S.W.; T. C. Walls, J.W.; Everett, P.M. 177, I.P.M.; E. Page, P.G.S., P.M., Treas.; Stuart, P.M. 141, Sec.; Kohler, S.D.; Speedy, J.D.; Webb, I.G.; Robinson, D.C.; Stokes, A.W.S.; Past Masters Koch, Gardner, and Drysdale. The visitors were Bros. Palmer, S.W. 177; Downie, Industry, and Lovell, late 1381. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. initiated Mr. Pakeman and passed Bro. Higgins, the ceremonies being well performed. The lodge having been formally closed until the first Tuesday in October next, the brethren adjourned to refreshment. This being an "off night," the toasts were but briefly given. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by the I.P.M., who congratulated him upon the great success that has thus far attended his occupancy of the chair; and in concluding his remarks, hoped that upon the renewal of their meetings that state of prosperity would continue to the completion of his (the W.M.'s) year of office. The W.M. briefly said that he had entered upon the duties of his position with a certain amount of diffidence, but being subsequently conscious that he should have the hearty support of the whole lodge as well as the assistance and co-operation of the I.P.M. and the rest of the Past Masters, he looked forward with pleasurable anticipation to a very prosperous official year. "The Health of the Initiate" followed. In introducing this toast the W.M. said he hoped that what their newly admitted brother had seen and heard that evening would make a deep impression upon him, and that, moreover, he would always endeavour to act up to the Masonic principles and precepts that had been thus disclosed to him. This toast having been warmly received, the initiate made a short but appropriate reply. The W.M. then, in quick succession, proposed the remaining toasts, viz., "The Visitors," "The Past Masters," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers." Bros. Palmer and Downie replied for the visiting brethren; Bros. Everett, Koch, and Gardner for the Past Masters; Bro. Stuart for the Treasurer and Secretary; and Bros. Reeves, Kohler, and Webb for the officers. The proceedings were enlivened by the vocal contributions of Bros. Gardner, Walls, Webb, and others.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge, (No. 913).—The monthly meeting of the above lodge, which has the distinguished honour, this year, of having among its large array of Past Masters the present Provincial Grand Junior Warden for Kent, as well as three other Past Provincial Officers, took place on Thursday, the 5th inst., at Bro. Tucker's, the Lord Raglan Tavern, Burrage Road, and was a most successful and happy occasion, calculated not only to leave many pleasant memories behind it, but at the same time to still increase, if possible, the high prestige that it undoubtedly has among the lodges of the province and district. Bro. W. T. Vincent, W.M., was present, supported by the following officers:—Bros. A. Penfold, I.P.M.; C. Coupland, P.M. and P.G.J.W. for Kent; J. McDougall, P.M.; C. Ellis Fermor, P.M.; H. Butter, S.W.; T. D. Hayes, J.W.; A. Jessup, Treas.; E. Denton, P.M. and Sec.; W. B. Lloyd, S.D.; Jas. Chapman, J.D.; R. J. Cook, I.G.; C. Cooke, Org.; R. Lester, Tyler. Among the visitors present were W. Weston, W.M. 1536; T. W. Butt, W.M. 700; F. G. Pownall, W.M. 13 and P.M. 1536; S. Goddard, P.M. 700; G. R. Davies, P.M. 13; J. H. Hoyle, 934; G. Kennedy, 1536; J. A. Cahil, 1424; H. Carline, 1536; J. Watkins, 1536; F. J. Sharpe, 1536; T. Forrest, 1293; &c. The lodge having been opened in due form, Bro. G. Lawrence was passed to the Second Degree, and Mr. J. Haslett initiated into Masonry. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren, after supper, reassembled for refreshment, when the W.M. gave the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the brethren loyally responding. In proposing "The Health of Lord Holmesdale, P.G.M. for Kent," the W.M., in the course of a warm eulogy upon the merits and character of our distinguished brother, said he was one in whom they had every confidence, and in all matters connected with Freemasonry he was a conspicuous star in its firmament. (Applause.) The next toast was "Bro. Eastes and the rest of the Grand Officers," coupled with the name of Bro. Coupland, who, the W.M. declared, was the pride and ornament of the lodge. (Cheers.) Bro. Coupland in reply said it gave him great pleasure to have his name coupled with so important a toast; he naturally felt proud of being in such an exalted position, which he attributed, not to any merits of his own, but to the influence of his mother lodge, the Pattison, in the province. (Cheers.) He felt sure that if Bro. Eastes were present he would keenly appreciate their truly Masonic reception of his name; he was a hard-working Mason, earnest and indefatigable in the discharge of his duties, and although he had not yet visited the lodge, they would have him soon, and when he did come they would give him a true and hearty welcome. (Cheers.) Bro. P.M. Ellis then, at the request of Bro. Penfold, the I.P.M., proposed in glowing terms "The Health of the W.M." who he said must be gratified to witness the kind feelings entertained towards him by every member of the lodge; not only under him prevailed that harmony that was characteristic of it, but "law and order" became something more than synonyms under his firm but judicious sway. It had often struck him that there must be some peculiar influence at work in the happy choice they made of their W.M.'s, an influence that shed a halo of success round them and their efforts, and which had for many years attended, and still continued to attend, the Pattison Lodge, and every succeeding Master seemed to catch the lustre shed upon his predecessor. In all societies the one thing necessary for success was to have a leader, who must at times stem the tide not only of interest, but of opinion, and by a judicious but kindly courtesy turn that current into courses that would lead gently and surely to the one grand object in view, viz., communal good and stable prosperity, and in their W.M. they had such a leader. He was a rising man, not only in his present position,—for there he was constantly rising to say something; but better than all he was rising both in Masonry and in their good feeling. Bro. Vincent in reply did not think himself at all equal to his ideal of the Master of a lodge. He thanked Bro. Ellis for his many graceful and kind remarks so elegantly put in proposing his health. He considered it the duty of the Master not only to carry out the duties of the lodge in it, but to act as a sort of arbitrator in all those little differences that at times spring up among the brethren, and so promote continued harmony and good feeling. He was happy to think they were an united and prosperous lodge, and he trusted that when he was relegated to the left of the chair he should have the satisfaction of knowing that in their opinion he had faithfully discharged his duty. "The Health of the Initiate" followed, Bro. Haslett modestly returning thanks. "The Visitors" followed, coupled with the names of Bro. Weston, W.M. of the United Military, and Bro. Butt, W.M. of the Nelson, who returned thanks most appropriately. In proposing "The Health of the Past Masters," the W.M. spoke highly of their good work done, and justly designated them as the "backbone" of the lodge. Bros. Ellis and Penfold eloquently responded. "The Officers" followed, and in putting it the W.M. said there were two officers, who, because they were generally very silent and subdued in lodge were passed over in the general eulogy, but they were nevertheless the most trusted and valuable officers. He referred to Bro. Jessup, their Treas., and Bro. Denton, their Sec.; they had long and faithfully filled those offices and deserved well of the lodge. Bro. Butter, S.W., replied, thanking them for their enthusiastic reception of the toast, and Bro. Hayes, J.W., added his thanks, and then the Tyler's last concluded one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by this excellent and influential lodge.

ECCLESHILL.—Eccleshill Lodge (No. 1034).—On Friday, the 23rd ult., this prosperous lodge held its annual festival at the Freemasons' Hall. The lodge was called at the early hour of 3 p.m. There was a numerous gathering of brethren, a considerable number of the Past Masters of the lodge, and many visitors, amongst whom were Bros. Chas. Crabtree, W.M. 600; R. T. Harrison, W.M. 1018; Jas. Powell, P.M. 1301; Ed. Nixon, 1108; Wm. Margerison, W.M. 1522; Jos. Hammond, P.M. 1522; S. O. Bailey, P.P.G. Supt. of Wks., W.M. 1648. The lodge being properly opened in the First Degree at 3.30, the ballot was taken for Mr. Wm. Parkinson and Mr. Richard Revell, who were duly elected, and afterwards were each separately and properly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry, by the W.M., Bro. Jas. Hartop, assisted by Bro. Wm. Beanland, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. of Wks. The initiations and other business being concluded, the J.W. called the brethren from labour. After a short interval the business of the lodge was resumed, and the W.M. called upon Bro. Wm. Beanland, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. of Wks., to present Bro. Benjamin Walker Flaxington, P.S.W., for installation as W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. Flaxington having been unanimously elected at the preceding lodge meeting. The Secretary, Bro. J. W. Nicholson, P.P.G.O., having read the ancient charges, to all of which the W.M. elect gave his unqualified assent. A Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. B. W. Flaxington was duly and properly installed in the chair of K.S. Bro. C. Pratt, P.M., P.P.G. Supt. of Wks., acted as Installing Master, and performed the duties in a masterly and most impressive manner. The ceremony of installation being completed the Worshipful Master thanked the brethren for the honour done to him, and pledged himself to maintain to the utmost of his power, the high position of the lodge. He then proceeded to appoint and invest his officers as follows:—Bros. Jas. Hartop, P.M., as I.P.M.; John Davis, S.W.; Joseph Hardwick, J.W.; Rev. A. L. Cooper, Chap.; John Procter, P.M., Treas.; Fred. W. Nicholson, P.P.G.O., as Secretary and Organist; James Southworth, S.D.; Fountain Read, J.D.; Richard Thomson, I.G.; Joseph Lightfoot, O.G.; A. Elsworth, A. Wormald, S. Robinson, Jas. Busfield, W. B. Woodhead, Jos. Hainsworth, Stewards; George Ball, P.J.W., as Master of Ceremonies. Bro. W. Pratt, P.M., was unanimously elected to the office of Charity Steward, and in him the charities will have a most efficient advocate. The late Charity Steward (Bro. J. G. Hutchinson, P.M., P.G.S., who has since been appointed Prov. G. Registrar for the province of West Yorks), thanked the brethren for the support they had given him, and expressed his great pleasure at the appointment of Bro. Wm. Pratt, P.M., as his successor. Bro. Pratt, in acknowledging the honour done him, hoped to be able to render a good account of his Stewardship, by keeping the lodge, in respect to its charities, A 1 in the province. After the usual business, alms were collected for poor and distressed Masons, and the lodge was closed in peace and harmony, and according to ancient usage, at 6.25 p.m. The brethren then adjourned to celebrate the festival of St. John the Evangelist. A most recherche banquet was provided, at the close of which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and duly honoured. Some excellent speeches were made, the visiting P.M.'s speaking in the highest terms of the manner in which the business had been conducted. Songs, recitations, &c., followed in rapid succession, and the whole of the proceedings passed off in the most agreeable manner possible.

WALTHAMSTOW.—Beaconsfield Lodge (No. 1662).—The general meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 7th inst., at the Chequers, Marsh-street, Walthamstow. The following brethren were present, Bros. W. T. Christian, W.M.; W. Groom, S.W.; W. B. Brand, J.W.; J. Pinder, P.M.; F. Hallows, Hon. Sec.; C. T. Saunders, S.D.; T. Franklin, J.D.; A. Oldroyd, I.G.; T. Upward, Org.; J. H. Cambridge, W.S.; W. Gilchrist, Tyler. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and confirmed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and the following brethren were passed, viz., Bros. Dendy, Carter, Hunt, Delvalle, and Clark. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and the ballot taken for Mr. W. Moffatt, which proved unanimous in his favour, and he being present was initiated into Freemasonry according to ancient rite and custom. The By-laws of the lodge were then submitted to the lodge by the W.M., and carried unanimously. The lodge was then closed in due form and adjourned until Saturday, the 5th May. Amongst the members present were Bros. W. G. Hallows, and A. Field. Amongst the visitors present were Bros. Crouch, W.M. 1297; R. Allison, 1602; B. Blimson, 742; J. J. Bere, 1178; E. Brown, 1598; C. # INSTALLATION OF SIR GEORGE ELLIOT, BART., M.P., AS PROVINCIAL GRAND MASTER OF SOUTH WALES (E.D.)

On Wednesday, 4th April, a large and influential gathering of Freemasons took place at Aberdare, under the banner of St. David's Lodge, on the occasion of the installation of Sir George Elliot as R.W.P.G.M. for E.D. of South Wales. The ceremony took place in the Temperance Hall, which was fitted up as a lodge-room. At one end, upon the platform, which was draped with crimson and purple cloth, fringed with gold, was placed the throne, enriched by a zone of imitation marble, surmounted by a crown. Banners and bannets were tastefully arranged at various points, and the open spaces of the platform at each end were filled with flowering plants and shrubs from the floor nearly to the ceiling. Imitation marble pillars graced the walls all round the interior, and the gallery was covered with crimson drapery. The windows were all draped with blue and chocolate-coloured drapery, looped up with orange-coloured rosettes, the whole having a very striking effect. Soon after one o'clock the brethren assembled in large numbers, notwithstanding the unfavourable state of the weather, as the rain came down in torrents.

At 1.30 Prov. Grand Lodge was opened by Bro. Aeneas McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, supported by Col. Burdett, P.G.M. of Middlesex, as D.P.G.M.; J. B. Monckton, President of Board of General Purposes; J. C. Parkinson, J.P., P.G.D.; and Thos. Fenn, P.G.D., who acted as Director of Ceremonies.

An announcement was then made that the D.P.G.M. of Monmouthshire, with over twenty of his P.G. Officers, was at the door waiting admission.

Capt. S. Geo. Homfray was then introduced by Bro. Fenn, and took his seat on the dais, and was saluted according to ancient custom.

The warrant of installation was then read.

A deputation, consisting of P.M.'s of the province, was then formed to wait upon the P.G.M. elect.

Sir George Elliot was then introduced, and after being invested and installed, was saluted. He then appointed the following brethren as his officers:—

J. E. Price .....	Prov. G.S.W.
John Rogers .....	Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. J. W. Jones .....	Prov. G. Chap.
Rev. W. Watkins .....	Prov. G. Chap.
J. Jones Hewson .....	Prov. G. Reg.
Evan Jones .....	Prov. G. Sec.
T. G. Glass .....	Prov. G.S.D.
D. Hopkins .....	Prov. G.J.D.
J. R. Robinson .....	Prov. G.S. of Wks.
D. Watson .....	Prov. G.D.C.
W. P. Garrett .....	Prov. G.A.G.D.C.
R. Webb .....	Prov. G.S.B.
A. S. Streeve .....	Prov. G.O.

Geo. Bullerwell .....	Prov. G. Tyler.
G. H. Noel, J. Williams, H. Briscoe, W. Dobbs, W. T. Canton, and W. Young .....	Prov. G. Stewards.

Contributions were then voted for Masonic charities, and cordial votes of thanks accorded to Bro. McIntyre for the able manner in which he had performed the installation; to Bros. Col. Burdett and J. B. Monckton for their presence, and to Bro. Fenn for the ability displayed by him in conducting the ceremony.

Prov. Grand Lodge was then closed by Bro. Sir George Elliot, and the brethren proceeded to St. Elvan's Church, where an excellent sermon was preached by Bro. the Rev. J. W. Jones, P.G. Chap.

Amongst the numerous brethren present, numbering over 400, we noticed Bros. Capt. S. G. Homfray, Past A. G.D.C. and D.P.G.M. Monmouthshire; C. W. Newmarch, D.P.G.M. Gloucestershire; Rev. W. L. Stradling; T. Marsden; W. B. Broad, P.G.O. Monmouthshire; C. Olliver, P.G.W. Monmouthshire; R. C. Chambers, P.G.W. Monmouthshire; W. Williams, P.G.S.D. Monmouthshire; W. Watkins, P.G.S. Wks. Monmouthshire; J. Piggford; J. Richards; G. Phillips; W. Brown, of Homfray Lodge; W. H. Rees, J. T. Davis, J. Bidder, J. Westren, of Neath Lodge; W. D. Preswell, of Pleiades Lodge, Devon; S. Hern, S. Weichert, C. Manders, J. Newton, J. Woodman, T. Haynes, of Bute Lodge, Cardiff; C. Miles, Neyland, Sladen, Rosser, White, Livingston, Williams, Mitchell, Andrews, Perrin, Roberts, Davis, D. C. Jones-Clare, of Caradoc Lodge, Swansea; and Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary Boys' School.

Banquet was held in the Market Place, which had been tastefully decorated and fitted up for the occasion. The P.G.M. presided.

Dinner being over, the P.G.M. gave "The Queen and the Craft," which was heartily responded to. He then proposed "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," and suggested that it should be given with "three times three." The next toast, "The Pro G.M., D.P.G.M., and G. Officers" was coupled with the names of Bro. Monckton, McIntyre, and Fenn.

Bro. J. B. Monckton, in response, said he esteemed it a distinguished honour to reply to this toast, for it was a pleasure to represent one's highly esteemed colleagues—officers of the Grand Lodge—even for a few moments. In their names he begged cordially and briefly to respond to the kind remarks of the Provincial Grand Master. But he was compelled to allude to a further and greater pleasure; he alluded to the privilege of being present in the eastern division of South Wales on this most interesting and most auspicious occasion. There were many present older in Masonry than himself, and although his connection dated many years ago, he could not remember having attended a meeting which had given him greater Masonic pleasure and satisfaction than that of to-day. These might appear somewhat formal words, but it was not because this was a Provincial Grand Lodge met, to do ordinary provincial work, nor because the lodge was gathered together on an exceptional occasion, installing the new Grand Master, but it was because there was such devoted loyalty to the man whom they rejoiced to see placed over them that induced him to pronounce this an extraordinary occasion. They who had come from the metropolis had been more and more astonished as the day had gone on, and he would tell them frankly that when he was invited to be present at this installation, he thought he was coming to a new country place called Aberdare, and that they would have to get on as best they could. He had no conception when he arrived at the little place called Aberdare that he was going to see such splendid and business-like preparations as were witnessed in the two buildings that day. (Cheers.) And when he heard it whispered that a great deal of the good taste displayed was to be attributed to a young Mason, and a member of the youngest lodge in the province, he affirmed that there must be a great deal in Masonry that could evoke such enthusiasm from a young brother; but that good taste of the young brother would have gone for little without kindly fraternal hands to assist. (Cheers.) It would have been most ungracious to come here and enjoy the hospitality and Masonic pleasures of the day if he failed in the names of those far off to acknowledge the manner in which they had received the toast of the Grand Officers. He, in conclusion, wished prosperity to all present. (Cheers.)

Bro. McIntyre then said the Craft looked with the greatest affection upon their Queen, as well as upon His Royal Highness the Prince who took his chief title from the principality in which they were then assembled, as the chief ruler of the Craft. The Prince of Wales reflected credit upon Freemasonry throughout the whole of England, and particularly in Wales whose title he bore. But when they began to look nearer home, when they found a gentleman whom they all knew personally presiding over Freemasonry amongst those with whom he also was personally acquainted, and among whom he laboured, as Sir George Elliot did, they could not but look upon him with an intensified fraternal feeling as their ruler, and hail him as such with all the warmth of feeling and loyalty at their command. He felt it to be a high honour to propose, as he now did, "The Health of Sir George Elliot" and a very great pleasure to wish him long life and prosperity. (Cheers.) He could not desire to see Sir George Elliot more happily circumstanced than he was then, surrounded by neighbours and friends, nor could he doubt but that he would be at all times as warmly supported, because he would always be found maintaining their Masonic rights and privileges, seeking to retain their regard, and always desirous of promoting good feeling amongst them. (Cheers.) Every man present knew Sir George, and had long known him, and he was quite sure that as years rolled on they would come to regard him as their Masonic ruler with even more affection in the future than they had done in the past, for they would find him a man whose kindness of heart and true Masonic feeling would animate every brother of every lodge in the province, in the exercise of those very qualities which he possessed in so eminent a degree. He proposed with much pleasure "Health and Long Life to the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master." (Loud cheers.) The toast was drunk with "three times three."

The Provincial G.M., who was warmly received, said that he spoke the feelings of his heart when he declared how proud he felt at hearing his name mentioned so kindly and received so warmly as had then been the case. It was surely from no personal excellence on his part, at least, he was not able to discover it himself if it were so. It seemed to him that there must be some secret worth about him which had brought about this great result, and all he could say was, that he was ignorant of it. Masonry had its secrets to the outer world, and those who were privileged to exercise the rights of brotherhood, saw in the system something which they could not explain, but which brought about results of which the outer world knew nothing. Whether this arose from its moral, social, or religious aspect, he could not tell, but there the something was amongst them which drew them together in the bonds of brotherhood, and friendly intercourse, and he supposed he must look to that something for an explanation of the very kindly way in which he had been received by them. If it were possible for the world to be made acquainted with all they themselves knew and felt, he thought the great acquisition to the Craft which had characterised it of late years, would be even still greater, and the momentum which it had received be still further accelerated. Speaking of himself, if he could be at any time a medium of Masonic strength between a brother and a brother, or between a province and a province, he should esteem it a pleasure to exercise his functions in that behalf, and could only say that throughout his Masonic life he should deem it his duty to further their interests to the fullest extent of his ability. He said this not in a moment of festivity, nor was it a feeling of a common moment only. It arose from a desire to exercise towards Masonry a solid sentiment of fidelity and enduring usefulness at all times, and as long as his Masonic life lasted. (Loud cheers.)

The P.G.M. then proposed "The Health of the Installing Master, Bro. McIntyre," which was drunk with three times three.

Bro. McIntyre responded to the toast, and thanked them heartily for the kindness they had shown towards him since his advent into South Wales. He had not been long amongst them, but he had made more friends during that short time than he could ever have been made aware of. He invited those who were eligible to attend Grand Lodge to visit them in London, and to see if they would not be received with befitting hospitality. He assured them that this would be the case. He hoped they would visit Grand Lodge often, and would thus help, by giving them in London an insight of what Masonry was in the provinces, to further the interest of Freemasonry and the welfare of mankind.

Bro. J. C. Parkinson said: As a P.M. of the Aberdare Lodge, and as one who is connected with the adjacent Province of Monmouthshire by the closest ties of friendship and of material interest, I have peculiar pleasure in proposing the toast of "Our Visiting Brethren," and in asking you to pay special honour to the other Provincial Grand Lodges here represented. The St. David's Lodge of Aberdare deems it a high honour that this Provincial Grand Lodge should have been held under its banner, and I am only expressing the feeling of its members, and of the Eastern Division of South Wales generally, when I say that we shall always refer with pride to the number of visiting brethren who have assembled, many of them from long distances, to testify their interest in the occasion. And as no innocent pleasure is ever entirely lost, but abides to enrich the memory and sweeten reflection, so the pleasant fruits of this meeting will remain with us, when this day shall become historical, and when South Wales Masons will date incidents as they happened before or after this great fraternal gathering at Aberdare. We trace in our mind's eye our visitors to their homes. We see them disinterestedly arranging their private concerns, perhaps for weeks beforehand, so as to enable them to be with us to-day; and we all know from personal experience of the struggles, of the turmoils, and the exactions of this work-a-day world, how much may be involved in keeping an engagement, the end and aim of which is to serve no interest, but to pay a semi-public homage to abstract principles, for I place the vast attendance to-day upon no lower ground. There has been no doubt a generous desire to pay honour to the new Provincial Grand Master on his formally assuming the dignities and responsibilities of his high position; but beyond and above this has been the resolve of every man present to testify his deep attachment to the Order, and his determination to uphold it at all times and in every practical way; for Freemasonry, apart from its mysteries and solemn rites, which we all value so highly, is a voluntary association, wherein men are pledged solemnly to principles which are clearly defined. A Mason's first obligation is absolute obedience to law, and throughout our elaborate symbolic system the vital truths of religion, and the duties of toleration and of charity, as well as those stringent rules which are at the foundation of social order, are enforced with great and increasing solemnity, and the discipline of the Craft might be compared not inaptly to the institutions which form nations, make themselves self-contained and endow them with lasting power. Our form of Masonic government, our zealously guarded rights, our absolute obedience to our constitutional head and the wise limitations of his power, our reverence for law, our perfect system of representation, our respect for tradition, our free exercise of private judgment, and our enlightened conservatism, all tend to foster a love for good government, and are brought home to the mind and made familiar by illustration to every working Mason. These are the principles our visitors represent and share, and in the name of which we bid them hearty welcome. There are other and equally important sides to Freemasonry upon which I have not touched. Of its beneficent and far-reaching charity we know our neighbours and friends to be most efficient exponents; and for that we thank them, satisfied that they reap their reward not merely in the successful, but not ungenerous rivalry, but in the highest sense of duty performed and obligation discharged. I give you "The Visitors," coupling with the toast the name of Col. Francis Burdett, P.G.M. of Middlesex, and Capt. Geo. Homfray, D.P.G.M. of Monmouthshire.

Bro. Burdett briefly responded to the toast. He said that Sir George Elliot had held office as his deputy for Middlesex, and he received Sir George's resignation with great regret. He could assure them that no member of the province was a greater lover of Masonry, or had the Craft more at heart, than Sir George, and the more they knew of him the more they would like him. (Cheers.)

Bro. Capt. George Homfray thanked them sincerely for the kind reception which they had given him, and also thanked his Provincial Grand Officers for mustering in such force as they had done that day. Although Sir George had been installed at Aberdare, they did not forget that he had a large stake in the county of Monmouth, and it had been the wish, this being so, that as many as possible should attend the installation from his province. He assured Sir George that they would always be found co-operating in every way to further the cause they all had in hand. He thanked Bro. Parkinson for the kind way in which he had spoken of him, and for the readiness with which he at all times held out the right hand of fellowship to him, and for the assistance he had given him whenever he desired it.

"The Health of Bro. Fenn" was proposed and responded to, and several other toasts were proposed and duly responded to, amongst them being that of "The Masonic Charities," to which Bro. Binckes, Secretary to the Boys' School, responded in his usual forcible manner. A correspondent writes:—There are few social positions in England which are more indicative of high standing than that of Provincial Grand Master of the Fraternity of Freemasons. From the time, now more than sixty years ago, when the Duke of Sussex, as the chief of one portion of the Fraternity in England, and the Duke of Athol, as representative of the other branch, agreed to a solemn act of union, and the Craft worked henceforth under one constitution, its position of trust and dignity have been filled by men of the highest station. Freemasonry has been the special care of the reigning family. Their late Royal Highnesses George IV. (when Prince Regent), the Duke of Sussex, the Duke of York, the Duke of Kent, and the Duke of Clarence, afterwards William IV., all filled high positions in the Craft, and in our day, under his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, there has been no diminution in the social prestige of the Provincial Grand Masters of England. A mere glance at the present lists of Provincial Grand Masters sufficiently proves it. Lord Suffield, K.C.B., who is the last appointed, was installed Provincial Grand Master for Norfolk in April, 1876, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales himself performing the ceremony. The next junior Provincial Grand Master is His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, who was installed Provincial Grand Master of Oxfordshire in December, 1875. So that it will be easily understood that the youngest Provincial Grand Master to-day, Sir George Elliot, his good reason to be satisfied with the position which has two immediate predecessors fill, and running rapidly over the names of the Provincial Grand Masters of England, and selecting almost at random, we find Sir Watkin Wynn, Bart., M.P., for North Wales, the Lord Leigh for Warwickshire, the Lord Methuen for Wiltshire, the Lord Sherborne for Gloucestershire, the Marquess of Hartington for Derbyshire, the Viscount Holmesdale for Kent, the Lord Waveney for Suffolk, the Duke of St. Albans for Lincolnshire, the Duke of Manchester for Northamptonshire, the Earl of Limerick for Bristol, the Earl of Bective, M.P., for Cumberland and Westmoreland, the Lord Pelham, M.P., for Sussex, the Earl of Carnarvon for Somersetshire, the Earl Percy, M.P., for Northumberland, the Earl of Shrewsbury for Staffordshire, the Earl of Hardwicke for Cambridgeshire, the Lord Skelmersdale for Lancashire (W. Division), the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe for Cornwall, the Earl Ferrers for Leicestershire and Rutland, the Earl of Zetland for Yorkshire (N. and E. Riding). Sir George Elliot's name is now added to this illustrious list, and it will be readily understood that the somewhat unusual delay in filling up this appointment on the death of the late Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Theodore Mansel Talbot, heir to one of the oldest families in Great Britain, has been due to a natural anxiety on the part of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to select the fittest man for the responsibility.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WARWICKSHIRE.

By command of Lord Leigh, the Provincial Grand Master, a Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Leamington on the 3rd inst. The officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge present were the Right Hon. and Right Worshipful Bro. Lord Leigh, P.G.M.; W. Bro. Lieut-Colonel Machen, D.P.G.M.; Bros. J. T. Collins, P.G.T.; Geo. Beech, P.G. Sec.; John Vaughan and E. Worrall, P.G.W.'s; Rev. T. N. Rigby, P.G. Chap.; S. C. Cowan, P.G.R.; C. B. James, P.G.S.D.; J. Gilbert, P.G.J.D.; W. Hammond, P.G.S. of Works; R. Dawson, P.G.D.C.; W. Manton, P.G.S.B.; A. J. Sutton, P.G. Org.; W. H. Haseler, P.G.P.; J. Mavus, P.G.A.P.; J. F. Kekwick, P.G.S.; J. Loverock, P.G.S.; G. V. Hefford, P.G.S.; J. Pursall, P.P.G.W.; C. Lee, P.P.G.W.; Captain Salt, P.P.G.W.; T. Howkins, P.P.G.C.D., There was a large attendance of P.G. officers and of visitors not members of the P.G. Lodge.

The Guy's Lodge, No. 395, was first opened, and the Right Worshipful the Prov. G.M. and his officers were then received.

After the calling of roll, the minutes of the P.G. Lodge, held at the Elkington Lodge, No. 1016, Birmingham, &c., were confirmed.

The report of the Benevolent and Annuity Fund Committee was next received, and the committee's recommendations of applicants for relief were considered.

A collection was then made in aid of the building fund of the new church, and the sum of £52 was collected.

The lodge was then adjourned, and the brethren, headed by the Militia band, marched in procession to the site of St. John's Church, the foundation-stone of which was laid, with Masonic rites, by the Prov. G. Master.

Although the rain was pouring in torrents, a large number of persons witnessed the procession and ceremony.

When completed, the church will accommodate about 1000 persons on the ground floor, the internal dimensions being 152 feet in length and 57 feet in breadth, with a height of 55 feet to the apex. It is being built with the red bricks of the neighbourhood, having windows and other dressings of Bath stone. The style is of very plain early English character, with lancet windows, having nave and chancel, with north and south aisles, and vestries for the clergy and choir. Grants have been made by the Incorporated and Diocesan Societies, but at the present time about £800 is required in order to complete the nave and aisles, which it is hoped will be forthcoming, that this part of the church may be at once completed for use, as the temporary church is altogether insufficient. The architect is Bro. John Cundall, P.M., on whom the plans reflect great credit, and the builder Mr. John Fell, of Leamington.

After the Chaplain and brethren had alternately recited a psalm, the P.G. Master announced the purpose for which they had assembled.

The P.G. Secretary (Bro. Geo. Beech) read a copy of the inscription placed in a phial and deposited with the coins of the realm in a cavity of the stone.

The inscription was as follows:—"Provincial Grand Lodge of Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons of Warwickshire. At a special meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, held at the Guy's Lodge, Leamington, on Tuesday, the 3rd April, in the 41st year of the reign of Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, this, the foundation stone of St. John's Church, Leamington, was laid in solemn form and according to ancient usage by the Right Honourable William Henry Lord Leigh, Lord-Lieutenant, and Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of Warwickshire; assisted by the Worshipful Brother Colonel Machen, Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Warwickshire; the Worshipful Brother John Vaughan, Prov. Senior Grand Warden; the Worshipful Brother Edmund Worrall, Prov. Junior Grand Warden; Brother the Rev. F. M. Beaumont, Brother the Rev. T. N. Rigby, P. Grand Chaplains; J. T. Collins, P.G. Treasurer; George Beech, Provincial Grand Secretary; and in the presence of a numerous body of P. Grand Officers, Past P. Grand Officers, and Brethren of the Province of Warwickshire."

The stone having been lowered, the architect presented to the P.G. Master a splendid trowel, for which his lordship tendered his warmest thanks to Mr. Cundall.

The P.G. Master then addressed the spectators as follows:—Men, women, and children here assembled to-day to behold this ceremony, know all of you that we be lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, and established of old with peace and honour in most countries to do good to our brethren, to erect magnificent structures, and to fear God, the Great Architect of the Universe. We have amongst us, concealed from the eyes of all men, secrets which cannot be divulged, but these secrets are lawful and honourable, and not repugnant to the laws of God or man. They were entrusted in peace and honour to Masons of ancient times, and have been faithfully transmitted to us, and it is our duty to convey them unimpaired to the latest posterity. Unless our Craft were good, and our calling honourable, we should not have lasted for so many centuries, nor should we have been honoured with the patronage of so many illustrious men in all ages, who have ever shown themselves ready to promote our interests and to defend us against all adversaries. We are assembled here to-day in the presence of you all to assist in laying in ancient form the foundation-stone of this church, which we pray Him to prosper for the promotion of godliness, harmony, and brotherly love, till time shall be no more.

After other formalities had been observed, the P.G. Master gave the stone three knocks with a mallet, and declared it properly laid in accordance with the ancient rules of architecture.

The P.G. Master then placed grains of wheat upon the stone as emblems of plenty; poured wine and oil as emblems respectively of cheerfulness and joy, and prosperity and happiness; and sprinkled salt on the stone as the emblem of wisdom, fidelity, and perpetuity.

The Prov. G. Chaplain offered a short prayer.

Lord Leigh, having laid the stone, then addressed the assembly. He said he had now had the great pleasure and the privilege of laying the foundation-stone, in that important town, of a church, which he prayed the Great Architect of the Universe might prove of inestimable benefit to the district. When he had the honour of being asked to lay that foundation-stone he felt great hesitation in doing so, as he felt that a lady who lived in the district, and who was sitting on his right, Mrs. M. Wise, should do so. It was not until he was assured that neither that excellent lady nor any member of her family would undertake the duty, that he consented to lay the stone, with the assistance of the brethren of their ancient Craft in that province. It was well known and universally allowed, that the old travelling Freemasons in ancient times had erected many of the most beautiful temples of the world. Although Masons of this day could not claim to be, like their brethren of old, practical Masons, still they were as ready as their predecessors to promote any good work that might be for the benefit of their fellow-creatures. If it was necessary to prove that statement he might mention that that was the eighth memorable occasion on which the old and well-worn mallet which he held in his hand had been used. It was the property of the Guy's Cliff Lodge of Freemasons in that town, and, as the inscription would show, it was used in 1832 by the lamented Lord Charles Percy in laying the foundation-stone of the Warneford Hospital. In 1837 the late Bishop of Worcester laid with it the foundation-stone of Bishop Ryder's Church, Birmingham. In 1840 it was used by a predecessor of his own in the office which he had the honour to hold—Lord Howe—in laying the foundation stone of the Queen's Hospital, Birmingham. He (Lord Leigh), as P.G.M. of the province since 1856, had five times used that mallet in connection with occasions similar to the present. He congratulated the district of South Leamington on the commencement of the present work. In reference to the many friends who had so nobly assisted the movement, he must especially mention Mrs. Matthew Wise, who had given £1000 towards it. Her son, the Rev. W. G. Wise, had promised £500. Mrs. W. Hitchman, widow of the lamented Dr. Hitchman, had given the site of the church and £100. Mr. F. Manning, of Leamington, had also given £500; and Mr. and Mrs. Watson £300. He hoped that the rich and important town of Leamington would speedily raise the required sum of £1000, so that in the autumn the Bishop might consecrate the church.

The Rev. T. E. Franklyn, the minister of the district, tendered to Lord Leigh, in the name of the committee, their thanks for his kindness in laying the stone, and their thanks to the brethren of the province for their handsome donation of fifty guineas.

The Rev. T. N. Rigby, P.G. Chaplain, then delivered the following address:—

Right Hon. and Right Worshipful Sir, Brother Wardens, and Brethren,—Although I am fully conscious of my inability to do justice to the object for which we are met together, yet I must express the gratification I experience in giving an address on this occasion, and I am sure I speak the sentiments of the brethren present when I say that it is with peculiar pleasure that we are here assembled in answer to your summons, Right Worshipful Sir, to assist you in laying the foundation stone of a building—a building hereafter to be dedicated to the service of our God. At all times we as Masons are ready—yes, esteem it a privilege, to aid in any good work, but more especially in the erection of a temple for the worship of Him in the advancement of whose glory every man, but more so every Mason, should take a deep concern; for we know that He who inhabiteth eternity and dwelleth not in temples made with hands is yet pleased with the devotions of His people. Constituted as man is, his duties to his Creator must be expressed by sensible acts, and if we travel back to earlier times we shall find Noah and the patriarchs building altars and offering sacrifices to Him. Coming down the stream of time, we find David purposing to erect a temple for the worship of Jehovah, and although he was not permitted to carry out his heart's desire, yet the same was approved of by God. "Thou didst well that it was within thine heart to build." That high honour was left to Solomon, his son, as a legacy, and he, our Proto Grand Master, carried out the work with a magnificence and a grandeur that exceeded, perhaps, even what his father David had he lived to see it could have pictured. 'Tis true the records of the laying the foundation-stone of that temple have not been handed down to us. We read of its master-workman and of craftsmen; we read of the dedication thereof, with its splendid ceremonial and costly offerings; we read of its marvellous erection, during which

No hammer fell, no ponderous axes rung—

Like some tall palm, the mystic fabric spring—
Majestic silence.

And now, Right Worshipful Sir, you have just declared the foundation-stone of this church to have been properly laid according to the plumb, the level, and the square, in the erection of which the hammer will fall and the ponderous axe will ring, and we would hope, though not amid majestic silence, the sacred fabric will also be successfully completed. It will not, of course, approach many, if one, of those grand and wonderful piles reared in former days by the skill and aid of those members of our ancient and honourable Craft. It will stand, by way of example, at a very, very remote distance indeed in architectural beauty and structural grandeur from that majestic edifice—one of the glories of our land—St. Paul's Cathedral, the fruit of the brain and the masterpiece of the creative genius of one of our Craft, Sir C. Wren—a large-hearted and unselfish brother, in whose epitaph is said, "Qui vixit bono publico," and who has no other monument to his memory than a small tablet on the side of the window of the crypt, on which is inscribed, "Si monumentum queris, circumspice." But still the house will not be without its beauty and its glory, consecrated as it will be to the hallowed services of our common Father. I will not now, Right Worshipful Sir, enter into any laudation of Masonry. In this county of Warwickshire, where it has borne such fruit, surely that were unnecessary. No words of mine—no words of any man—could add to its lustre, nor could the calumination of any man detract therefrom. It is based on principles which are immortal—immortal because Divine. But I trust I am not in error in making a practical use of those Masonic emblems which have already been referred to in this ceremony. As the building is being raised each stone must obey the plumb-line, the level, and the square, so that all contribute, the one with the other, to the stability of the common structure. So may we hope that the living stones hereafter to be built up within these walls as a spiritual temple to God, by dedication to His service, may answer in all respects to the teaching which these our Masonic emblems so forcibly suggest. May the emblem of corn remind them of the plenteous blessing that comes from Him who is the author and giver of all good things; may the emblem of wine, that maketh glad the heart of man, remind them how much there is of refreshing cheerfulness and joy in squaring their lives according to God's established rule; may the emblem of oil remind them that prosperity and happiness can only be secured by a cultivation of peace and brotherly love, so beautifully imaged in the figure of the oil which flowed down from Aaron's beard, even to the edge of his clothing; may the emblem of salt remind them of that higher wisdom such as that with which our Proto Grand-Master was endued, and which comes only from God, of fidelity to their promises of obedience made, and of perpetuity, in holding fast that which they have that no man take their crown. But what, Right Worshipful Sir, is the foundation upon which this spiritual building is to rest? I unhesitatingly say it is our Great Light—the Book of the Law of God. That alone is the plumb-line by which men are to adjust their actions so that they walk uprightly. That alone is the level that will enable men to regard themselves as equal in the sight of God, and rich and poor to worship together as his common offspring. That alone is the square by which the teaching in that temple should be tried and adjusted, bringing it at all times to the standard of the law and the testimony. And sure I am, Right Worshipful Sir, that if this spiritual work which I have cursorily touched upon, so far as the services of this earthly temple are concerned, be thus carried out, then those who have partaken thereof will see the topstone crowning their faith, and love, and hope, shining under the bright beams of a never-setting sun in another—that upper temple, not made with hands, but glorious in the heavens; and with harps tuned to the most perfect melody will sing—Grace, grace, unto it.

Other formalities having been observed, the procession was re-formed, and the P.G. Lodge was resumed and closed in due course.

In the evening the brethren dined at the Crown Hotel.

It is stated that the Emperor of Russia will not go to Ems this year to take the water as usual. This decision is said to be "unconnected with pending political questions, and adopted solely on medical advice." His Majesty is in excellent health.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

[We take this from the Bradford Observer, kindly forwarded to us by Bro. H. Smith, P.G.S. for West Yorkshire.]

On Wednesday, 4th inst., the annual meeting of the West Yorkshire Freemasons was held at the Church Institute, Bradford, under the banner of the Pentalfa Lodge, No. 974, when about 200 brethren of the province assembled. The customary salutations having been heartily accorded to the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, Sir H. Edwards, Bart., and to the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. T. W. Tew.

The Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master, in reply, said: Brethren of West Yorkshire, we have assembled by the generous invitation of the Rev. R. W. Loosemore, W.M., and the officers and members of the Pentalfa Lodge, No. 974, for our annual meeting, in the centre of one of the greatest industries of the North of England. Amongst the marvellous towns of the West Riding of Yorkshire Bradford has a remarkable commercial history as interesting as either that of Sheffield, Leeds, Batley, or Dewsbury. Certainly with these the town in which we meet to-day has had a development equally rapid, and in a very brief period of time its inhabitants have done as much as those of any other town in the province to increase the wealth of the nation. In 1811 Bradford had a population of 7767, in 1871 of 146,000, and this population has unquestionably conferred a boon even upon the world at large. Development has succeeded to development; improvement has been made upon improvement, until to-day its commercial importance and magnificence are concurrent with the gigantic prosperity of its trade and the tastes of the times. Let us hope that the present suspension of the intense activity of its pursuits is due not to a diplomatic postponement of painful eventualities in the East, but to the simple awaiting the commencement of a settled basis of affairs, and that Bradford will start again on a course of development as brilliant in the future as in the past (applause). As is recorded in its history since 1811, Freemasonry in Bradford has developed with its commercial developments. Under two previous Chairmen of our Charity Committee—Bro. Manohar Rhodes and Bro. Thomas Hill, names brilliant in Yorkshire Freemasonry (applause)—a policy of Masonic prosperity and success has been built up, which has placed the Freemasonry of West Yorkshire on an influential footing, unsurpassed by any other province in the Grand Lodge of England. Pentalfa Lodge is an offspring of the famous Lodge of Hope, No. 302, and it has striven to emulate in charitable deeds the efforts of its munificent parent. The Pentalfa was established in 1863; in 1864 it was consecrated by Bro. Bentley Shaw, and has now sixty active members. Since its establishment up to this day it has liberally contributed to our charities. We thank Pentalfa for this day's invitation, for its support of our institutions, and Bradford for its fraternal welcome accorded to the Provincial Grand Lodge. Called myself by our Royal Grand Master to the government of this great province, I have now to observe that this day's ceremonial closes another year of my occupancy of this chair, and the commencement of another period of its tenancy. Therefore, in accordance with a practice of my illustrious predecessors, I shall trespass upon your attention with some comments upon the more prominent features of interest to the Craft in this province during the past year. Without flattery to the province, I may venture to say this, perhaps, is the only province in England containing a like number of lodges—sixty-three—of which it could be said that every lodge has made its annual returns for the past year, and thus enables me to put before you its position in the Craft. The income from quarterage fees has been £357 6s. 6d., and we have a balance in hand of £921 2s. 3d. to the credit of next year. But the balance for charitable purposes will be at least six times the amount. I shall be able to say more on that subject at our July meeting. The number of active members returned for this province is 3065. During the past year the lodges have enrolled 250 new members. Fifty-three members have died, and in some of them valuable charitable votes have lapsed, thus increasing the difficulties of the Charity Committee with regard to voting powers. Let me earnestly impress upon Worshipful Masters and Treasurers the importance that subscriptions should be applied for and paid at the commencement of each year instead of at the end of the year, and thus the list of arrears would probably be reduced to insignificant proportions, and many excellent but negligent brethren would be retained on the muster-roll of this province. I have made a written communication to Lord Carnarvon that one of the Masonic lifeboats (in commemoration of the Prince of Wales's safe return from India) should be placed on the Yorkshire coast, and have pressed the special claim of Robin Hood's Bay upon the attention of his lordship, and am glad to inform this Provincial Grand Lodge that, assisted by the co-operation of North and East Yorkshire, the Pro Grand Master has said the application shall have the fullest consideration of himself and the committee (applause). I cannot allow the retiring Provincial Grand Officers to vacate their chairs without expressing to them the obligations of the province for their zealous and able services. To the Mayor of Wakefield and to the Provincial Grand Junior Warden my sentiments towards them are those of unbounded gratitude for the time and ability they devoted in the performance of their executive responsibilities. In the nomination of officers to fill their places I feel myself confronted with the grave and difficult task of selection of a few from a band of brethren of exalted merit, and to entrust these few new officers with the practical administration of the government of this province for the ensuing twelve months, viz., to carry out the duties of a well-organised Provincial Grand Lodge, whose ruling and guiding principles alone are framed and directed on the written as well as the unwritten laws of the Craft, and which all thoughtful and patriotic Provincial Grand Officers regard as of supreme importance. Whatever difference of opinion may exist as to the discrimination of this selection, I feel sure you will one and all recognise the justice of the claims of the brethren it is my duty to appoint to office, and that you will give them loyal and hearty Masonic support, and obey faithfully our Prov. Grand Lodge bye-laws, accepting my prerogative and resting your approval in accordance with my own upon the sure and solid foundation of that beneficent self-government the superstructure of which has been built up by the letter and spirit of fidelity to the Book of Constitutions. (Hear, hear.) I call, therefore, upon the old and new officers to unite with the brethren in unselfish efforts to secure, as heretofore, to our province, under the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe, the faithful development of justice, piety, and virtue, and the practice of a liberal charity, the principles upon which Freemasonry is founded, that we may exhibit to the outside world that amongst us we fervently decree:—"That all things may be ordered and settled upon the best and surest foundation; that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety, may be established amongst us for all generations." (Loud applause.)

After the usual preliminary routine business had been gone through, the officers for the ensuing year were invested as follow:—

L. Booth, 61	Prov. S.G.W.
J. Hurst, jun., 337	Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. R. Oldfield, 275	Prov. G. Chap.

The report of the Charity Committee was then read and received, and the lodge was closed.

The July meeting will be held at Sheffield, and will take part in opening the new Masonic Hall there.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of subscribers to the Masonic Boys' School met on Saturday last, in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Benj. Head in the chair. Among the other brethren who attended were Bros. Geo. Murray, A. H. Lilley, S. Rosenthal, John Boyd, Herbert Dicketts, W. A. Barrett, John W. Dennison, Frederic Davison, C. F. Matier, Geo. Angold, H. Browne, G. M. E. Snow, A. Durrant, Capt. N. G. Phillips, Col. J. Somerville-Burney, James Booker, Hyde Pullen, H. Massey (Freemason), Jesse Turner, Robt. B. Webster, W. F. C. Moutie, D. Clarke, Rev. Dr. Morris (Head Master), J. G. Chancellor, Charles Horsley, W. Pass, Geo. J. Palmer, A. J. McIntyre, Grand Registrar; Henry W. Hunt, F. Adlard, and F. Binckes (Secretary).

After the reading of the various minutes, some outfits were granted to boys who after leaving the School had obtained situations. The report of the head master of the School was read to the brethren, and from it the information was given that twenty-eight boys from the School attended the Oxford and Cambridge local examinations, and out of this number only two failed. Fourteen passed with honours, and twelve obtained certificates. This is the greatest success that has ever attended the examinations of boys from this Institution, and the brethren expressed their great pleasure at the result.

Bro. Binckes then read the following report of the House Committee on the subject of providing accommodation at the School for a larger number of boys than are at present maintained there:

The House Committee, to whom, by resolution of the Quarterly General Court of Monday, 15th January, 1877, it was referred,

"To consider the entire question of increased accommodation at the Institution at Wood Green, and to report, through the General Committee, to a Quarterly General or Special General Court," submit as follows:—

They have carefully considered various suggested plans for the contemplated enlargement, and are unanimously of opinion that the best and most feasible is that which provides for the removal of the present laundry and drying ground, and for the erection on the site thereof of a spacious dining hall 100 by 50 feet, extending from east to west, to which access may readily be obtained both through the present west (kitchen) corridor, and by means of the existing covered way from the school and classroom in the main building. One prominent advantage of the locality of the dining hall is its propinquity to the kitchen, which it is believed, by the annexation of the scullery adjoining, will be amply sufficient for the cooking and supplies requisite for the fullest number of boys the increased premises would be capable of accommodating. Scullery room would be found by a re-adjustment of the present store-room and offices.

The new block of buildings would cover an area of 110 by 55 feet, and would comprise three floors. It would start in a line from the eastern end of the new dining-hall and extend northwards.

On the ground floor would be commodious class-rooms, four in number, with assistant master's sitting-room, lavatory, map-room, and other requisite provisions, with convenient exit to closets, urinals, &c.

The second and third floors would contain six dormitories, each for twenty boys, assistant master's bed-room, assistant matron's bed-room, and servants' bed-rooms, isolated, and with separate staircase.

The number of boys thus provided for is 120, in addition to the 184 in the main building.

The cost is estimated at about £12,000, or, perhaps, it may be more safely stated at £25,000.

In recommendation of this scheme, which may be thought by some to be more expensive than is absolutely required by present exigencies, it may be stated that to provide for a smaller number say 70 boys, would reduce the cost only £3000.

The question of annual maintenance of so large an addition to the present establishment has not been lost sight of by the Committee. It is one which deserves most serious consideration, and at the first blush would seem to present insuperable difficulties; inasmuch as if the whole 120 boys were admitted as soon as the building was ready for their reception, the annual ordinary expenditure could hardly be estimated at less than £12,000, and might possibly exceed that amount, to say nothing of the sum required for "special expenditure," which varies from year to year, the average probably being about £1000.

It must be remembered, however, that heavy and continuous as are the demands upon the resources of the institution, there happily does not exist the necessity at present for the admission of extra boys to anything like the extent of those provided for, nor is it contemplated that such will be the case for some years to come. The Committee are of opinion that an addition of 60 boys would fully meet the wants of the present generation, as it is not considered advisable, or for the interests of the Institution, that every boy qualified as a candidate under the laws of the Institution should as a matter of course be admitted, or, indeed, that election of candidates should be rendered too easy, and indifference and carelessness in selection be thus fostered and encouraged.

The immense and rapid increase in the numerical strength of the Order is an admitted fact, as is also its advance in material prosperity, while the largely augmented contributions in support of our institutions are matter of heartfelt congratulation. The considerations arising out of this favourable condition of affairs are not without weight with the Committee, but they cannot forget the arduous duties of the last 16 years in connection with this Institution, and how much has been done by the Craft at large in assisting them in bringing it to its present position.

The crucial question with the Committee is—Is the Masonic body prepared to find the means to carry out the proposed extension?

In the absence of a favourable response the Committee do not feel justified in undertaking so serious a responsibility within so comparatively brief a period of the release of the Institution from a burden of debt, its invested capital being only £3000, which on no account can they consent to be utilised for the object under consideration.

The Committee therefore conclude:

1. They recognise fully the legitimacy of the demands for further accommodation.
2. They have ascertained the feasibility of carrying out the extension.
3. The issue—Shall such extension be proceeded with?—they leave entirely to the decision of the fraternity.

The Committee, before closing this report, desire to add one word on a suggestion published with reference to a "Preparatory School." They express no opinion as to the advisability of making provision for the sons of Freemasons at an age earlier than at which they can now be received, 8 years, contenting themselves with stating that the suggested scheme, if adopted, would enable the pupils from 8 to 12 to be accommodated in the new building, the elder boys, from 12 to 16, being retained in the present building. The advantages of this arrangement, both educational and disciplinary, the Committee feel will be so apparent as to render unnecessary any enlargement thereon.

Bro. George Snow then rose to move "That this report be not submitted to the Quarterly Court on Monday next." He said that if the report was adopted, and the brethren resolved to carry out the scheme for enlargement mentioned in the report, every child admitted to the Institution would cost £200. What would any of the brethren say to a family of seven children costing £700 a year? It was something preposterous. The London Orphan Asylum formerly accommodated 500 children, and when their school at Clapton was sold to the Metropolitan Asylums Board it fetched £35,000. The Masonic brethren were now asked to expend £22,000 for the accommodation of 100 children. What did the brethren say to going on with this continual expense? Let them advertise for competitive drawings, and let them say in the advertisements that they wished for accommodation in their schools for 100 more children, and required drawings, designs, and plans of a building for that purpose; also that they would not bind themselves to accept any plans, but would give a premium of £50 for the best, £30 for the second, and £10 for the third. He ventured to say that they would get plans for what they wanted, which would show that the building could be erected, not at this enormous cost, but at the rate of 5d. per cubic foot for glorious each child. The Institution was going in for glorious results no doubt. There was a large amount of Masonry afloat at the present moment, and there were a great number of Masonic brethren at the present moment seeking the benefit of the Institution. At this very time there were 60 or 70 candidates for the next election of this Institution, and only one-fourth of that number could be accommodated. The Institution was not a college—that was where they were going wrong—they were not to provide a collegiate education for the children, but a home into which they might be taken and kept from being starved. Why should they see so many of the poor brethren left with children on their hands? There was one case which he knew of where a widow was left with seven children, and why should not this Institution provide a home for three or four out of that number. Let them see if they could not erect a building that would be a home, and give board and lodging for the children of the brethren, and afford them an education equal to the board schools. He maintained that the children could be accommodated at £35 a head. The idea of being asked to erect a building for 100 boys for £22,000 was simply absurd and disgraceful. He would propose that the report which had just been read should be sent back to the House Committee, with the message that it was not wanted. He had not had an opportunity of stating before that the head master's house, which was but a small one, had been painted and papered under the direction of the surveyor. What did the brethren think that work cost? Why, £83. Did the brethren mean to submit to this sort of thing? He would not see the fraternity robbed in the wholesale manner in which they had been robbed by builders, for it was nothing more or less than a downright robbery. (Laughter.)

Bro. S. Rosenthal said that the brethren were used to strong language from Bro. Snow, and consequently heard these observations without surprise.

Bro. F. Binckes remarked that the report said "either this or some other well-considered plan." When the matter was referred to the House Committee, he felt it his duty to take care that the House Committee should not meet without having before them a sketch to guide them in their deliberations. The Committee had carefully guarded themselves against being pledged to a recommendation of the present plan. If the report was read at the Quarterly Court, that Court might recommend that the Institution should advertise for plans. The House Committee would do that, and then when the plans were obtained they would be submitted to a Quarterly Court. The brethren were not going to pledge themselves to spend this sum, or any sum of money. If Bro. Snow told him that they could provide for 100 or 120 boys for £4200, he must beg leave to differ from him.

Bro. A. Durrant said that at the last meeting he supported the proposition that the school should be enlarged, but he did not go the length that Bro. Snow went. He proposed that they should stop at 70 more boys. Could not they have 30 or 40 more, or some number in reason? For his part, he thought the House Committee had not grappled with the matter in the manner they should have done. They were not tied to the number of 120 boys. He agreed with Bro. Snow to this extent, that they should be left in the hands of no one person to give an estimate, but they should have estimates from several people. Bro. Snow had mentioned the subject of education, but that was not the question on this occasion. He thought the House Committee should again consider the matter, and instead of wasting the time of the General Committee with such a report as they had prepared, they should be prepared with some other plan that would be feasible, and enable the committee to do something for a larger number of boys than were at present in the Institution. The Institution was not able to admit as many boys it should. The list for next election was very large—he did not know of any Institution where the candidates were so numerous; and he greatly regretted that the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys could not provide for the admission of more than would be elected next Monday. In conclusion, he considered that the report of the House Committee was not in a fit state to be carried to the Quarterly Court, and he would suggest that the matter be referred back to the House Committee to see if it was not possible to devise some plan by which an extension could be carried out in moderation.

Bro. Binckes: Restricted to what number?

Bro. Durrant: 60, 40, or any number.

Bro. Jesse Turner thought the committee deserved great thanks for bringing up the report, for it opened the question, though it was not an exact report. If there were any of those dreadful mistakes in it which had been forecast by his friends who had spoken, the brethren had now an opportunity of discussing them; and he would move that the matter be deferred to the next meeting, in the meantime the report to be printed and circulated among the members of the committee. This would afford them an opportunity of looking into the report and considering whether its statements were true or untrue. The report was in a very crude form, at least it so appeared to him. He had never heard it read before. He could not help thinking that the statements of Bro. Snow were open to a great deal of debate. The statements of the report might be true or untrue; but there was also such a thing as hypothesis. The matter had been submitted to the House Committee to enquire into, and the House Committee brought forward what they considered facts. Now, it was for the brethren to consider whether they were facts. He did not know what the Craft might do. The Institution had been very successful, and he could not help thinking that it was possible to get intoxicated with success. No doubt the brethren had done a great work, but they might do too much. There was such a thing as over educating. The proposition for enlarging the Institution was one of such large proportions that this committee should weigh every part of it well. It might get into the newspapers, and the Craft at large would know all about it. The matter should be discussed in detail, and then it would go before the Quarterly Court and meet with the approbation of the Craft. He would propose "That the report of the House Committee in reference to the enlargement of the School be deferred to the next meeting of the General Committee, and in the meantime that the report be printed and circulated among the members of the committee."

Bro. George J. Palmer, P.M. No. 11, seconded the motion.

Bro. George Snow moved as an amendment, "That the House Committee be authorised to advertise for competitive plans and drawings for increasing the Institution so as to accommodate 30, 40, 50, 60, or 120 more boys, and that the sum of 30 guineas be awarded for such plans; that the plans be sent in only in lines, and that the cost of enlarging should not exceed £50 a head."

This amendment, meeting with no seconder, fell to the ground, and Bro. Jesse Turner's motion was put and carried nem. dis.

The petitions of candidates, to the number of eight, were then considered, and the proceedings closed with the customary vote of thanks to the chairman.

CONSECRATION OF THE PROV. GRAND MARK LODGE OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

A Masonic ceremony of more than ordinary interest to Freemasons took place at Newport, on Thursday, the 4th inst., being the constitution of a Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons for the Province of Monmouthshire. The district had not previously been formed into a province, but steps were taken to have it so constituted; and the Grand Lodge of England and Wales having been memorialised, a constitution was sanctioned, and Bro. Lorenzo Augustus Homfray, whose name was submitted from the district, was accepted as the first Right Worshipful Grand Master for the province. The installation of Bro. Homfray took place on the 4th inst., together with the ceremony of consecrating the Grand Provincial Lodge. There was a large attendance of brethren of the Mark degree. The ceremony was performed in the Masonic Hall by the Most Worshipful the Rev. G. Raymond Portal, M.A., Past G. Mark Master Mason of England, and Past Grand Master of Hants and the Isle of Wight. A full report of the proceedings is in type and will appear in our next.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF WEST LANCASHIRE.

The annual convocation of the Provincial Grand Chapter of the Western Division of Lancashire (as briefly announced in the Freemason last week) was held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Wednesday afternoon, the 4th inst. There was a numerous attendance of companions of rank and influence, nearly every chapter in the large province being represented, some very numerous. Comp. the Right Honourable Lord Skelmersdale, Prov. Grand Superintendent, occupied his place in the Provincial Grand Chapter.

A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

It is said that we are to have two volumes of poems from distinguished authors, viz., Prince Leopold and the Marquis of Lorne. This is the first occasion of publication by His Royal Highness, but he has always been devoted to literary pursuits and studies. The Marquis has already marked his stature as a poet, and his fresh effort in competition with Mr. Tennyson shows that the hereditary courage of the Campbells is not lacking in the heir to the dukedom.

On Thursday the Duke of Connaught, who had been staying with the Earl of Cloncurry, went over to Parsonstown and presented the 53rd (Shropshire) Regiment with new colours.

The Duchess of Edinburgh has appointed Lady Harriet Grimston to be Lady-in-Waiting, in the room of Lady Mary Butler, now an extra Lady-in-Waiting to her Royal Highness.

The Empress Eugenie has left Florence for Naples. Prince Louis Napoleon has gone to Spezzio.

THE BRITON LIFE ASSOCIATION.—We have pleasure in directing attention to the financial and first annual report—see last page current issue—of the Briton Life Association. The stability and progress of the company is deserving of all praise, and will especially commend itself to Masonic brethren from the fact that a large majority of the directory are fellow members of the Craft. Under the able management of Bro. John Messent, P.M. 231, Actuary and Secretary, (whose experience of Assurance business extends over a quarter of a century), combined with extensive town and provincial connections, the association ensures a great success, and we commend it to the favourable consideration of our readers. Among the special features comprised in the system of business of the Company is absolute security, the company having made the customary government deposits of £30,000; moderate rates of premium and specially advantageous terms for assurance on Invalid lives and on lives proceeding to India or China. Also a new system on assurance by which policies are made payable during lifetime.

Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M., P.G.P., will preside at the working of the 15 sections in the La Tolerance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538, on Wednesday week the 25th inst.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked by the members of the Hyde Park Lodge of Instruction, No. 1435, for the first time on Monday next at 7 o'clock, at the Westbourne Restaurant, 1, Craven Road, Paddington. Brethren are invited to be present.

Masonic and General Tidings.

THE LATE PRINCE CONSORT.—A fine statue in terra cotta of the late Prince Consort, by Theed, and generally considered to be one of that artist's masterpieces, presented to the town of Southampton by Sir F. Perkins, M.P., has just been mounted on a pedestal on a vacant piece of ground under the walls of the old Castle, near the platform, looking eastward down the Southampton water.

Some recent English travellers in Palestine relate that near Mount Carmel they came upon a small German settlement belonging to a band of Christian sectaries who called themselves "Templars." Among other opinions, they hold that as soon as the whole of the soil of the Holy Land is cultivated the Messiah will come. With a view to hasten the millennial period they have become cultivators themselves, and founded colonies at Jaffa, Jerusalem, and Caiffa. Their settlements wear a most prosperous aspect. Small neat houses, substantially built of stone, cluster round their chapels. There is always a good school, and the well-farmed land (such a contrast to the barrenness of the surrounding country) testifies alike to the industry and profits of the colonists.—Church Bells. [Query who are these Templars?—Emma Holmes.]

We are authorized to state that Her Majesty's birthday will be kept on Saturday, and of June, instead of Saturday, the 25th of May, as originally announced.

Although it is not officially announced, I believe it is understood that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, as Grand Master of English Freemasonry, has bestowed the Provincial Grand Mastership of Dorset on Mr. Montague Gurst.—Mayfair.

It is not generally known that the gifted lady amateur who recently stirred the pulses of the critics in London, at the Opera Comique, is the wife of Mr. John Braddick Monckton, the town clerk of London. The fact of "Bro. Monckton" being a high Masonic as well as civic official, perhaps accounts for Mrs. Monckton's next performance being in aid of the two great Masonic schools.—Mayfair.

The Tailor states nearly the whole of the house has been sold for the performance for the benefit of the Freemasons' Schools on May 5th at the Opera Comique. "Tears," with Mrs. Monckton and Captain Gooch, and "Cox and Box" will be performed.

The new Mark Lodge, designated Scarlet, No. 189, was consecrated with great eclat at the Burnley Mechanics' Institute, by Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, on Friday the 6th.

The brethren of the Peckham Lodge, No. 1476, intend giving a Masonic ball at the Surrey Masonic Hall, on Monday the 23rd inst., the net proceeds of which will be devoted to the Masonic Charities. Brethren will appear in Craft clothing, a special dispensation for the same having been procured.

Lady Skelmersdale was present at the annual meeting of the Liverpool Branch of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, held at the Town Hall, on Thursday week, and, on behalf of the Ladies' Committee, her ladyship presented a number of carters, cabmen and donkey drivers with rewards for their general kind treatment of the animals under their charge. Her ladyship also presented prizes to a number of boys and girls who had written essays on "Kindness to Animals." A cordial vote of thanks was given to Lady Skelmersdale on the motion of Mr. Melver, M.P., seconded by Mr. Clark Aspinall, J.P., Borough Coroner.

SOUTHERN STAR LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, (No. 1158).—The ceremony of Installation will be worked in this lodge on Thursday, April 26th, not Tuesday as we stated in our last.

Bro. Wm. Malthouse, of the Smithfield Lodge, No. 1623, has issued an address to the electors of the Ward of Farringdon Without, offering his services as representative in the Court of Common Council, when a vacancy should occur. Having had many years experience in parochial matters, Bro. Malthouse considers himself qualified for so important a position.

Bro. His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, R.W. Prov. Grand Master Oxfordshire, has most kindly promised to lay the foundation-stone of the new Infirmary of the Asylum for Idiots, Earlswood, Red Hill, Surrey. Bro. Wm. Nichols, Secretary, will give due notice of the day and proposed arrangements.

We are requested to announce that the Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, which formerly met at Winsley-street, Oxford-street, on Wednesday evenings, no longer exists, but "La Tolerance" Lodge of Instruction, No. 538, to which all the members of the late Royal Union belong, is held the same evening at 7.45, at the Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, under the able Preceptorship of Bro. T. A. Adams, P.M., P.G.P.

A report of the consecration of the Royal Leopold Lodge, No. 1669 is unavoidably postponed until next week.

ST LUKE'S LODGE OF INSTRUCTION No. 144. In this lodge on Friday next, the 20th inst., at the White Hart Tavern, King's-road, Chelsea, Bro. Dr. Egan, W.M. 858, will work the Installation ceremony. The lodge will be opened at 7.30 p.m.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—If the action of the skin be suppressed, internal congestion of the Liver, Stomach, and Kidneys often results. This fact should be borne in mind during the Spring months, when a bright sunny day tempts one to throw off clothing and neglect other precautions. Care must be exercised at this season of the year, and if unfortunately unpleasant symptoms arise an alternative should at once be taken. Holloway's Pills soon relieve internal congestions of all kinds, and have a mild aperient effect on the bowels, without causing griping or undue purging, this renders them suitable for all persons, their mode of action being at once simple and yet thoroughly effective. They are thus confidently recommended.—ADVR.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14, 1877.

THE MOVEMENTS OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

According to the Times and the Daily News H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, accompanied by Bro. Lord Suffield, R.W. Prov. Grand Master Norfolk, and Bro. Knollys, left the Charing-cross station of the South Eastern Railway on Wednesday evening by special train, at 8.30, for Paris, via Folkestone and Boulogne. Prince Christian, the Duke of Teck, Count Schouvaloff, M. Villebois, and other gentlemen were assembled on the platform to receive His Royal Highness. The train was in charge of Mr. John Shaw, the manager and secretary, and Mr William Cockburn, superintendant of the line. The Prince of Wales arrived at Folkestone Harbour at 10.14. Here he was received by Sir Edward Watkin, M.P., Chairman of the Company, and immediately went on board the special steamer Victoria. The steamer left for Boulogne at 10.20. The Prince is expected to stay but a short time in Paris, and then to leave for the South of France, en route to Villa Franca, to meet the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh. Our Boulogne correspondent telegraphs that the steamer Victoria arrived at 12.20 this morning, and that His Royal Highness, after a brief rest, would proceed to Paris by special train. With reference to the health of his Royal Highness the Medical Examiner says:—"The progress of the Prince's case has been in all respects extremely satisfactory, and, in the opinion of Sir James Paget and Mr. Oscar Clayton, his Royal Highness's health at the present time is excellent." The Lancet has great satisfaction in recording the rapid and well-nigh complete recovery of the Prince of Wales. The malady indicated in its previous article has been relieved. The Prince's condition has greatly improved, and it is hoped an early sojourn in a warmer clime may conduce to perfect restoration and renewed strength. Meanwhile, it is but a loyal hope to express, that His Royal Highness may recognize the need of rest, and such abstinence from exertion, physical and mental, as may render the full benefits of change of scene and climate available. It was no mere passing interest which the people of England evinced in the welfare of the Prince of Wales when he lay on a bed of sickness, and it is no mere formal solicitude which this suggestion is intended to convey. H.R.H. the Princess of Wales arrived at Brindisi on the 8th inst. The civil authorities were in waiting at the railway station to receive her Royal Highness, who left at midnight for Athens on board the Royal yacht Osborne. The Osborne is expected to reach Corinth on the 10th inst. Her Royal Highness is in good health. The Princess of Wales arrived at Athens on the 10th inst., at 4.30 p.m., and was greeted with an enthusiastic reception. She was met at Corinth by the King, who accompanied her across the Isthmus to Kalamaki, whence she proceeded in the Royal yacht to the Piræus.

THE MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY AND FREEMASONRY.

At the approaching meeting of the Grand Lodge of England, which will be held at the Freemasons' Tavern on Wednesday, the 25th of the present month, the Prince of Wales will be formally proposed for re-election as Grand Master, and will, of course, be accepted by the lodge. His Royal Highness will then nominate, either personally or through the Earl of Carnarvon (Pro Grand Master), His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught as Senior Grand Warden, and His Royal Highness Prince Leopold as Junior Grand Warden. Their Royal Highnesses will, in that case, succeed the present Grand Wardens, the Earl of Donoughmore and Colonel the Hon. William Vernon. The other Grand Officers will include the Rev. W. L. Onslow (Chaplain in ordinary to the Prince of Wales), Grand Chaplain; Bro. Samuel Tomkins, Grand Treasurer; Bro. Aeneas M'Intyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar; Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; and Bro. Ernest Wendt, Grand Secretary for German Correspondence. Should the Prince of Wales be unable to attend, the Earl of Carnarvon will preside at the ceremonial, which promises to be one of unusual interest and importance, as there is no precedent for three princes of the blood in Grand Lodge at the same time.

[We take this from our paper in Scotland, the Scottish Freemason, but we have not, however, as yet heard any confirmation of the statement.]

SUGGESTED INCREASE OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The report of the House Committee, presented at the last General Committee, which appears in another column, is we understand to be printed and circulated, so that practically no action can, we apprehend, be taken in the matter at present, or at the Quarterly Court. At the meeting on Saturday Bro. Snow made one or two statements, which require to be received with the greatest qualification, for they are, in fact, altogether erratic as to fact and reality, and very unjust to the school. Were it not that we strongly feel that they might lead to many misconceptions, we should have left them to tell their own tale, as they bear with them their own answer. But experience shows that the most improbable statements are believed, and the most reckless assertions credited, even though the ratification and correction of them be close at hand. Bro. Snow stated that if these alterations were persevered in—on the estimate—the boys would have cost £200 a head. It is quite clear that Bro. Snow has no statistical authority for such a statement, and the way he arrives at it appears to be equally simple, ingenious and amusing. He takes the present number of the boys, and divides the capital expended on the School by them and the 100 to be admitted, at least we presume that such is the basis of his wonderful calculation. But he forgets that such a "divisor" can by no means represent all who are benefitted by the outlay, neither can such a "quotient" answer to those who will hereafter reap the advantages of our labours and sacrifices. We must add to the actual number of pupils, all who have been in the buildings since they were raised, and who are yet to inhabit them; in fact, an "unknown quantity." Nothing could be more fallacious, more unfair, or "ad captandum," than to say, buildings and land have cost so much, we have so many boys to educate, therefore the cost per boy is so many hundreds per head. There is positively no eleemosynary society of late years which could stand such a test, especially in London, where building sites are very dear. With all respect to our worthy Bro. Snow, we may therefore dismiss his florid remarks, as they do not affect the question at issue one way or the other. We shall, we fancy, be expressing the sentiments of all our brethren when we say that the best course of proceeding would be to call a Special General Court of the Institution, when the specific report can be considered, and the architect's statement received. We quite endorse all that Bro. Jesse Turner said on the last occasion, the more so as we believe that the one wish of the Craft is to advance the interests and efficiency of the School.

A MASONIC LOVE OF LAW COURTS.

There seems to be increasing amongst us a tendency, on any pretence, or often on no pretence, to rush into the arena of a law court, quite contrary to the spirit, at any rate of our older regulations. We commented some time back, (for which we were duly taken to task), on some unwise proceedings, in our humble opinion, on the part of a distinguished lodge, because some initiation fees, which ought never to have been allowed to get into arrear, had to be sued for in a County Court; and we described in the last Freemason some proceedings at Plymouth, we believe, which certainly seem to suggest to us the need of a little more Masonic caution, consideration, and charity, in all similar matters and on all similar occasions. Some remarks appeared in our last about the solicitor who counselled one of the litigants, but without knowing all the facts of the case, we cannot, as it seems to us, quite fairly blame a member of the legal profession, (Freemason though he be), who has to deal, as many have, with a self-willed and pig-headed client. We are using general terms and not adverting to this particular case. But having said this, we cannot but express our sincere regret, that Freemasons should resort to the law courts at all to settle petty differences and Masonic complaints, when they could so easily invoke the principles of Masonic arbitration, and arrange any temporary disputes and suppositious grievances on the broad principles of Masonic forbearance, kindness, brotherly love, and good will. As regards the alleged ritual, it would be clearly worthless, per se, and ought never to have been made a bone of contention between two brethren. At the same time, in this free country the law courts are open to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects, and we must not even allow our love of Masonry and its regulations to supersede the higher claims of the law of our native land. We say this by way of caution, lest, like our Ultramontane friends, in their zeal for what they consider the superior authority of the spiritual power over the temporal, we should even make so great a blunder, as to assume for one moment, that the law of the land and the authority of the crown were not in all temporary matters undoubtedly supreme, alike in respect of all Masonic customs and all Masonic regulations.

DID YOU EVER?

We take an extract from our grave and influential and highly artistic contemporary, the Graphic, which we think is likely to create no little sensation in all circles and all classes of our readers, whether old or young, aristocratic or plebeian, male or female, grave or gay. Indeed, it is not too much to say that if this statement is to be depended on, and is not to be relegated to the mythical region of transatlantic sea serpents and talkative mermaids, "mit nodings on," a revolution is on the eve of accomplishment in all departments of creation, of artistic excellence, and of human philosophy, which never was contemplated, whether by the erudition of Tyndall, the researches of Lyell, the assumptions of Professor Huxley, or the discoveries of anatomical Owen. Let our readers one and all carefully peruse the following cutting, which we trust they will "think over" (though all don't like thinking just now), carefully and seriously. It is one of the most striking and interesting, and indeed marvellous, we have ever been privileged to make to our numerous and highly respectable patrons:—"The Blue Light Bath Mania across the Atlantic appears to be on the increase, and General Pleasanton, of Philadelphia, having succeeded in raising gigantic pumpkins under cerulean frames, found that little pigs similarly treated developed into monster porkers, that a young calf rapidly became a splendid bull, while a small baby speedily became the admiration of its friends on blue glass being fitted to the nursery windows. Moreover by the same agency a bald-headed dame recovered her flowing tresses." Another correspondent adds that:—"The azure rays are even said to cure consumption, chronic diarrhoea, dyspepsia, delirium tremens, liver complaint, domestic differences and pernicious habits, or a talkative wife, an erratic husband, and even a too demonstrative mother-in-law." We feel sure that when our numerous kind friends in all parts of the known world peruse this striking extract from that very agreeable illustrated paper, the Graphic, they will be struck, as we were struck, we may add, "all of a heap" with the intense and overwhelming importance of the announcement, clearly and considerably made. In fact we hardly ever remember, in our long experience, any such an announcement on sound and safe authority, which held out so much hope to those who are oppressed with an overwhelming sense, both of the cares of existence, the disappointments of life, the troubles of the family and the flesh. To be told to believe, to feel assured, to realize, that by the intervention of blue glass, simple blue glass, we shall behold all our fairest hopes and dearest aspirations fulfilled, the germ become the perfect creature, and a marvellous growth overpass the slow process of sedater nature, is, indeed, a state of things more befitting the researches of the Hermetics, and the experiments of the searchers after the Philosopher's Stone, than anything within the experience of us and ours, poor, dull, sober, plodding mortals! Just think of the possibilities enumerated, almost too cheering to credit, and almost too extraordinary to accept. That the little porker might become a full grown pig, though striking, is not absolutely incredible in itself, as the growth of pigs is, as all who tend them know, very sudden, and often very exceptional; or that the young calf should all at once develop into a fine bull, is no doubt a very great and much to be desiderated change, as all our bucolic readers will at once admit, the propriety of which we are not prepared to deny. But still we do not feel more than wonder at such statements, though remarkable. But to realize that the small baby becomes a big one in a little space, and a bald-headed lady recovers her flowing tresses and capillary attractions at the same time, is a matter for most serious consideration, and when we understand, moreover, that under the influence of these blue rays, (not merely a cerulean sky), we can find a cure for consumption, chronic diarrhoea, dyspepsia, jaundice, liver complaint, and the like, domestic differences, pernicious habits, a talkative wife, an erratic husband, and an interfering mother-in-law, we can only hope that such things are really so, and we begin to believe that the "good time coming," which has been so long approaching, is now close at hand. Well, we have passed through many trials and disappointments ourselves, we have out-lived heartaches very many, and crosses not a few, we have had to encounter the mortal lot of all our race, Freemasons though we be, but we feel with Heinrich Heine in his well-known words, "Herz mein herz sei nicht bekommen," so well translated in "Flowers from Fatherland on English Soil."

"Heart, my heart, be not thou troubled.

Bear thy lot, though sad it be,

For what winter takes from thee,

Spring shall give thee back redoubled."

Yes, we repeat, if there be truth in words, if the announcement of the blue rays, (not blue devils), be a fact, there is still hope for us all alike, whether lonely wanderers, or with a noisy and increasing family, whether grave or timid married men, or free and easy bachelors, whether readers of the Freemason, or howling fanatics who rail at Masons and Masonry.

QUITE UNNECESSARY.

Prince Louis Napoleon and the ex-Empress Eugénie have, through Cardinal Bonaparte, sent assurances to the Pope that the Prince, during his recent visit to Rome, was not made a Freemason, as has been affirmed.

THE COMMEMORATIVE LIFEBOAT.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I was greatly pleased to find a letter from "Lucretius" in the columns of your excellent journal a few days ago, asking that a lifeboat should be placed at Scilly, one of the most destructive coasts in Great Britain, and where on an average it appears that between forty and fifty lives, and one hundred thousand pounds worth of property are annually lost. I cannot believe that the columns of any journal can be consecrated to a nobler duty than the advocacy of the whole of "Lucretius's" scheme, which I suppose includes Mr. Festing's (Control Office) ingenious telegraph-buoy. I hope the Royal National Lifeboat Institution will not forget the terrible list of wrecks which the Board of Trade have supplied to "Lucretius."

I enclose my card, and am, yours faithfully and fraternally,

TEBAH.

STAMPED RECEIPTS FOR MEMBERS' SUBSCRIPTIONS TO LODGES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

This question was mooted in the Freemason a few weeks since, but although some discussion ensued, no definite conclusion (so far as I am aware) was arrived at. It was, I believe, asserted that the opinion of the stamp office authorities had been asked in some unofficial manner as to whether or not the receipt for lodge subscriptions should or should bear a penny stamp to render it valid, and we were told (as might be expected) that such receipts must be stamped. I for one must candidly confess that I am not at all convinced that this offhand opinion is correct, and I feel perfectly satisfied the subject has not been duly considered in all its bearings. Of course everybody knows that a receipt for money in payment for value received should bear a penny stamp, and that the receiver of the money must pay for the stamp; but everybody does not know that there are cases in which such stamps are not required. I shall cite some of these exemptions, and shall then endeavour to show that lodge subscriptions are on all fours with such cases, and therefore that lodge receipts need not be stamped. Building societies' receipts for the monthly subscriptions are exempt from stamp duty, and the reason for such exemption evidently is, that the receiver of the money derives no benefit therefrom, and that he simply acts as a convenient depositary for the money paid in by the depositor, who at some time or other will receive it back again in some shape or other. To expect the receiver of the money to pay out of his own pocket any sum, however small, because he performs the friendly act of becoming the temporary depositary of the investors' or depositors' loose cash is about as reasonable a thing as when the Irish labourer having borrowed a bricklayer's hod of a friend, and having accidentally broken it, sent it back to his friend to get it mended because he wanted to borrow it again. Now I look upon annual subscriptions to lodges in much the same light as I do monthly payments of depositors and investors in building societies. The Treasurer or Secretary to the lodge does not receive the subscriptions for his own behoof or advantage. He has no interest in any amount paid in, nor has any one else than the member himself, if he chooses to avail himself of it. If he does not care to make use of the money for his own personal wants (that being the purpose for which it was deposited), it is disposed of in some other way to which he has previously given his consent. To render the matter clearer I will assume that the members of a lodge have mutually agreed to meet for labour and instruction, say four times a year, and that they find it necessary after labour to have some refreshment. The cost of this is found to be, say, 15s. per head; instead, however, of paying this amount every time they meet the brethren arrange to pay for the four meetings in a lump sum of, say, £3 3s., the extra 3s. being supposed to suffice for postage and printing. Now it cannot be denied that the brother who deposits with the Treasurer or Secretary of the lodge the aforesaid sum of £3 3s. does it in anticipation of the expenses he may incur at the quarterly meetings. It is therefore his money which is available for such purposes, and if he does not use it he quietly resigns it and allows it to be diverted to other uses. I argue, therefore, that inasmuch as the Treasurer is merely the temporary depositary of the brother's money, which is to be applied to certain special objects for such brother's personal benefit, the Treasurer cannot be called upon to pay for a stamped receipt.

If I were not afraid of occupying too much of your valuable space I could enter at much greater length into this important subject, which requires to be thoroughly and exhaustively discussed and settled one way or the other without loss of time, as if the Stamp Office authorities are right in the offhand opinion they have given, then all the lodges in the United Kingdom are daily running the risk of very heavy penalties, which can be recovered by a very summary process. It should be widely known that whenever a receiver of money above £2 gives a receipt without a penny stamp thereon he incurs a penalty of £10, one half of which goes to the informer.

If you will kindly give me space, on a future occasion I will endeavour to point out what course should be adopted to bring this matter to a settlement.

I am, yours fraternally, W.M. No. 766.

FREEMASONRY IN VANCOUVER'S ISLAND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A movement is going on here which is of great importance in placing Masonry on a far better footing, namely, the amalgamation of the four lodges in Victoria into two.

To my mind, as an English Mason, they have a plan of paying the Secretaries of lodges here which is to me most objectionable, as all monies, after paying the ordinary expenses of a lodge, should be devoted to Masonic purposes. I never knew a lodge at home where such a plan existed. As a member of Lodge Sincerity, No. 189, Stonehouse, Devon, I do not know of its existence, and I shall be obliged if you can inform me whether it is the custom in any English lodges to pay their Secretaries.

Your opinion on this point may assist me in my endeavour to turn the flow of funds into what I conceive to be their proper channel.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
MATTHEW COATES,
Staff Surgeon, Royal Navy,
W.M. Victoria Lodge, No. 1, B.C.

MASONIC QUERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir, and Brother,—

In your issue of the 31st ult., you report the consecration of a new lodge at Camberwell, and state that the W.M., who was then installed, appointed to office and invested a joining brother as Treasurer. In other words, the W.M. nominated and appointed to a somewhat important position a brother who at the time could have had no connection whatever with the lodge. Before any joining brother can become a member of a regular lodge he must be proposed and seconded at a regular meeting, and balloted for at a subsequent meeting, but these formalities seem to have been dispensed with on the occasion to which I refer. Again, it is surely customary in all lodges to elect the Treasurer by the votes of the brethren present, but in this case it is scarcely possible that such a farce can have been gone through, when the Treasurer designate, or elect, was not a member of the lodge.

I make these remarks not from any wish to be hypercritical, but simply with a view to eliciting from yourself or from some of your numerous readers an authoritative expression of opinion regarding the legality of the proceedings to which I have called attention. My own impression is that these proceedings were irregular, and that the Treasurer must be invested anew, after he has been elected a member of the lodge, and after he has been appointed to his office by the votes of his brethren.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
M.M. 1216.

FREEMASONS' CLUB.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

May I ask if you or any of your readers are cognisant of the existence of a London Freemason's Club or Institute? Being a countryman, and staying in town for a term, I should much like to avail myself of its advantages. It is some time since that I heard of a London club from my friends, and I have referred to your columns for a few weeks past hoping thereby to ascertain its whereabouts, but in vain.

It unfortunately the club has ceased to exist do you not agree that a united effort on the part of London and country brethren might be made with a view either of re-establishing the old or starting a new club?

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,—
Yours faithfully and fraternally,
P.P.G.O.

[The Offices of the London Masonic Club are at 101, Queen Victoria-street.—Ed. F.M.]

THE REV. J. C. MARTYN, M.A., P.G.C., &c., AND BRO. COX'S SON.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I must warmly respond to my esteemed Bro. the Rev. J. C. Martyn's appeal, by saying that I will do my best to aid in the election of the son of the lamented and respected Bro. Cox, and but for this appeal coming so late in the day, I should have been able to do something worth while. As the case was made known to me some time since by my friend, the W. Bro. Richard Rodda (Past Prov. G. Reg. of Devon), I understood, however, that the lad's election had been given up as a thing impossible. Surely now it will be assured under such favourable circumstances and distinguished patronage.

Fraternally yours,
WM. JAMES HUGHAN, P.G.D.

BRO. KENNING'S MASONIC CYCLOPEDIA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I quite fall in with the views of Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, M.A., P.G.C., and Bro. D. Murray Lyon, M.A., Grand Secretary of Scotland, as to the necessity of delaying the publication of the "Cyclopedia" so as to ensure almost absolute perfection, and to avoid all irrelevant matter, as well as to obtain particulars of the latest discoveries in Masonic Archaeology, some of which are only now being confirmed.

Of the latter, I might mention the records of the Prov. G. Lodge of Munster, about which full and reliable information will shortly be given by Bro. J. H. Neilson, P.M. 620, Dublin (Rep. of the Grand Orient of Egypt, &c.), and other subjects have yet to be completely examined in the light of the latest investigations.

The last few years have witnessed most important changes and discoveries, with respect to Masonic History especially, and some points of consequence, affecting the origin of Freemasonry in France, and other parts, are only now in progress of elucidation.

Bro. Woodford's idea is to present to the subscribers, in a compact and handy form, a condensed account of the history of Freemasonry generally, in the form of a "Cyclopedia" for ease of reference, and facility obtained by the alphabetical arrangement, and paragraph style.

Whilst the work will in no case aim at supplanting the "Encyclopedia of Freemasonry" of the learned Dr. Mackay's, or the "Royal Cyclopedia" of the erudite, mystic Bro. Mackenzie, it will fill up a department entirely its own, and be indispensable to all who desire an accurate Masonic vade mecum.

I am pleased to be able to speak in the most favourable terms of the parts submitted to me, and as I have seen the proofs to the letter I, subscribers will not have to wait many months ere the work will be published.

Yours fraternally,
WM. JAMES HUGHAN, P.G.D.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me to call your attention to another evil relative to this Institution.

The voting papers for April, 1877, really make men of common sense think there must be something radically defective in the management of the Girls' School.

Read the following extract from the List of Candidates for April, 1877:—

Candidate No. 34, Daly, Gertrude Annie, Father (dead) a Mason for (actually) four-and-a-half years!!! Never subscribed to the Charities. Three children only in family. Two now in this Institution. The third child is the present candidate.

Was there ever a grosser misapplication of a society's funds attempted than by allowing such a case to be adopted? (I remember one case about two years since, where there were 4 children out of 5 participants in the benefits of the Boys' and Girls' School.)

What are we to say of the bye-laws of an institution permitting the possibility of three members of the family of such a Mason, even at any time, much more the same time, becoming recipients of its funds and advantages?

What is to be said of the managers who allow such bye-laws for one moment to continue in force?

What will the orphans of old and deserving and charitable Masons say when they find they are deprived of their rights through the defects of such improper regulations?

What will Masons generally say?

Why, that it is discreditable to our institutions to permit such a state of things when so many candidates (ten times more deserving by reason of their parent's longer association with the Craft) every half year are thrown over and despoiled of their birthright.

Yours fraternally,
HENRY C. TOMES,
P.S.G.W., &c., &c., Wilts.

P.S.—I am writing against the principle and not the candidate, with whom and her friends I am entirely unacquainted.

CONSECRATION OF THE PHOENIX CHAPTER, No. 173.

The consecration of this new chapter took place last Saturday afternoon at Freemasons' Hall. The Consecrating Officer was Comp. James Terry, Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies Herts, who occupied the chair of M.E.Z. He was assisted by Comps. G. Ward Verry, Provincial Grand Principal Sojourner Herts, as H.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.Z. 771, as J.; H. G. Buss, Prov. Grand Treasurer Middlesex, as D.C.; and F. G. Baker, P.Z. 753, as J. The complete list of the companions present included the above names and those of Comps. J. D. Massey, G. Wilson, G. R. Green, C. J. J. Salmon, F. R. Vine, James Blyth, G. H. Humphreys, Wiles, James Burford, D. Betts, H. 507; Chas. B. Payne, P.Z. 177; G. T. Carter, H. Massey (Freemason), John C. Mathew, H. 174; C. A. Woods, 145; W. Steedman, 174; W. Banson, 174; W. T. Parker, P.Z. 507; W. Hilton, Z. 507; Fred. Frampton, Z. 749; Charles K. Killick, 749; H. Cornick, 753; F. B. Davage, 185; W. Watson, P.Z.; H. Middleton, M.E.Z. 2; I. Distin; Frederick H. Cozens, 1216; and T. C. Walls, 185.

After the chapter had been opened and the companions admitted, Comp. Terry shortly addressed them on the nature and object of the meeting, and the Rev. R. J. Simpson delivered the oration, in which he said that he was not much accustomed to the practice of Royal Arch Masonry, and he therefore felt himself in somewhat of a new position when called upon to deliver the oration at the consecration of a new Royal Arch chapter. Still he would say a few words upon the subject of the signs and symbols made use of in the chapter, but more particularly he would allude to the things signified by those signs and symbols—in other words Masonic consistency. At the consecration of a lodge recently he had dwelt especially on the valuable effects of an exhibition of moral courage, and he had shown on that occasion that it was quite possible to speak one's mind without doing so offensively. If this practice was followed up it must produce in all those with whom we had to do a respect for our opinions and a confidence in our utterances, which would never be produced if we expressed ourselves one way and acted another, or hesitated to give expression to our opinions, and yet took any particular course of action. The same might be said of all our actions in life after we became Freemasons—for if we acted without regard to our profession as Masons we were producing an injurious effect on the whole Order. In Royal Arch Masonry as in Craft Masonry there was a moral conveyed in all its symbols, and there was consequently a necessity imposed on all Royal Arch Masons to observe the moral precepts of the Arch, to act up to their profession, and to shew to the outer world that it was not a mere form which they went through when they joined the Order, but that they took upon themselves certain obligations which they intended to influence their daily life. Thus, to take one of the teachings symbolised by the arch-stone which compressed and bound the whole structure—the duty of submitting to every lawfully constituted authority—the non-observance of this rule by a Royal Arch Mason must necessarily prove that the principles of the degree had been in vain taught when he was considered worthy to share its secrets. He had frequently had occasion to exhort Freemasons to carry the principles of the lodge with them when they were without its walls, and he did so in the firm conviction that there was a regenerating power in Freemasonry which must humanise the world on which it acted, and bring about such an improvement in our social state as would spread peace and happiness throughout the community. What he advised in the lodge he advised in the chapter; and as when Masons took the Royal Arch Degree they advanced a step higher in Freemasonry, so should they advance a step higher in the principles they professed, and carry out, if it were possible, even more strictly the practice of virtue and morality.

The chapter was then formally consecrated and dedicated, the ceremony being aided by the performance of sacred music by Comps. Theodore Distin, G. T. Carter, and F. H. Cozens. After the ceremony Comp. John Daniel Massey was installed in the chairs of J., H., and M.E.Z., respectively; Comp. Geo. Wilson was installed in the chair of H., and Comp. George Robert Green in the chair of J. The following companions were inducted as follows:

C. J. J. Salmon, S.E.; J. R. Vine, S.N.; James Blyth, P.S.; G. H. Humphreys, 1st A.; Wiles, 2nd A.; James Burford, Treas.; and C. T. Speight, Janitor.

The S.E. afterwards read a letter from Comp. John Hervey, in which he expressed his great regret and disappointment at not being able to attend, a circumstance which was caused by his being called upon to consecrate a lodge, through the unexpected illness of the brother who was to have performed the ceremony.

The S.E. afterwards read a long list of candidates for joining and exaltation at the next meeting.

On the motion of the M.E.Z., seconded by the H., a vote of thanks to Comps. Terry, Verry, Simpson, and W. Watson was unanimously passed, and the honorary membership of the chapter was conferred upon them.

Comp. Terry briefly acknowledged the compliment, and in the course of his remarks said it was not often that a companion occupied the First Principal's chair in a chapter while he was W.M. of his lodge. He knew that Comp. Massey's working was good, and he trusted that the companions who had just been elected honorary members would have some opportunity of witnessing that working.

Chapter was then closed, and the companions adjourned to Freemasons' Tavern, where a recherché banquet was provided by Bro. Dawkins, the manager. The usual loyal and Royal Arch toasts were afterwards proposed and honoured.

The Rev. R. J. Simpson, in responding to the toast of "The Grand Officers," said he was very glad to hear Comp. Wilson say, in a little "aside," "Let us be sharp," for it was a very excellent precedent to follow, to make short speeches. He thanked the companions very much on behalf of the Grand Officers of the Supreme Grand Chapter, as a very humble member of that body. He said what he really felt when he said that to him to enter a Royal Arch chapter was in fact "darkness visible," for he was so supremely ignorant of the working of Royal Arch Masonry that he ought to have been almost ashamed to have shown himself there, and had it not been for the great kindness and hospitality of some of the companions he should scarcely have ventured upon the bold enterprise that he had that evening. He thanked them exceedingly for the kindness which they had shown him; and he also thanked Comp. Terry for the coaching he bestowed upon him before going into the chapter. He merely wished to say, before he sat down, that under the auspices of the M.E.Z. and the two other principal officers he had little doubt that this chapter would flourish. He had certainly been most gratified to see the working of the chapter that evening, and also to have discovered many familiar faces around the table, which made him feel not entirely a stranger. In fact, the word "stranger" was not a word to be used in Masonry at all, for in Masonry one always discovered familiar faces, and was glad to do so. He ventured to think that in Royal Arch Masonry we had what may be called a higher life than they had even in Craft Masonry; in fact, we professed more; and he hoped, according to the very humble advice which he had given in the chapter, they would not only profess more but do more. The more he saw of Masonry the more thoroughly he felt that it might become a great means in England as well as in the world of helping to raise the standard of men's moral worth, both as citizens and as men; and as such he not only cultivated it, but he was happy to tell the outer world he esteemed it as a most important auxiliary, not only in promoting the moral, but the religious advancement of mankind. He believed it was only the abuse of Masonry that would ever bring it into contempt, and the abuse of any gift was a very poor argument against its use. He therefore felt in Royal Arch Masonry, as in Craft Masonry, that there was an important auxiliary to improve man's condition—he felt it daily—and at the same time to advancing the peace and happiness of those around us—not only to cultivating as we ought to do our gratitude to the Most High, but also that brotherly love which we should have one towards another.

Comp. James Terry proposed "The Health of the M.E.Z." He was confident the companions had a most efficient officer in Comp. Massey, although he was very young in Royal Arch Masonry, having been a R.A.M. six months. No doubt there were many companions around the table who had aspired to this position, though they had not achieved it quite so rapidly. It was very well known what an excellent Master Comp. Massey was in a Craft lodge, and no doubt he would be equally as good a First Principal in a Royal Arch chapter. There were a large number of exaltees for the next meeting of the chapter, there being no less than 22, so that the M.E.Z.'s working would be put to the test. It was no easy task, but Comp. Massey would be able to go through it, especially with such efficient officers as the H. and J.

The M.E.Z., in responding, said he rose with a great amount of diffidence to thank Comp. Terry for what he had said, which had almost overwhelmed him. As far as in his power lay he would do his duty. Some of the companions knew that in Craft Masonry when he was elected to the chair, though the brethren pushed him on so rapidly, he did his work to the best of his ability. He left it to them to say whether the work had been satisfactorily done. In Royal Arch Masonry he would do the same. They all knew that when once he entered upon a course he would never go back. As far as God gave him strength to do his work he would do it.

The M.E.Z. next gave "The Health of the H. and J.," and said he was quite sure they would do credit to their appointment.

Comp. Wilson, H., in his reply, narrated the circumstances connected with the formation of the chapter, and explained to the companions how great were the exertions of the M.E.Z. in promoting it. The Phoenix Lodge had been in existence many, many years, almost a century, but they had never been able to meet a companion who was a member of the lodge in a chapter connected with the lodge. For a long time a chapter had been in contemplation, and by consultation among themselves, and by the determination of Comp. Massey, they had formed the Phoenix Chapter. The M.E.Z. had really done all the work in connection with the getting up of this chapter himself. The H. and J. would now render him every assistance in keeping up its dignity. During their year of office they would support the chapter as zealously as they had always supported the lodge. He would not leave a stone unturned to make the chapter prosperous, and to have the business conducted in a proper manner.

Comp. Green, J., also responded. He thought he would have great difficulty in copying the M.E.Z., but he would endeavour to approach it.

Comp. Terry responded to the toast of "The Consecrating Officer." He hoped that the Phoenix Chapter would flourish, and be an ornament to Royal Arch Masonry, and that the M.E.Z. might be spared to see many succeeding M.E.Z.'s taking his position. He had no doubt Comp. Massey would take more and more interest in the chapter, especially as it progressed. He felt confident that no one would be admitted to the chapter but those who were true and worthy men.

Comp. H. G. Buss replied for "The Visitors," and said that all the companions felt grateful to the promoters of the Phoenix Chapter for the great treat they had had in seeing the consecration ceremony so ably performed by Comp. Terry, and one of the ablest Masons in the Royal Arch. It was a source of great pleasure to see the Phoenix Chapter arise. He did not know what the ashes might have been on which the bird was sitting, as depicted at the head of the summons, but the companions might depend on it that the life created that evening would be of great service to the cause of Masonry. The energy and perseverance of the M.E.Z. had been spoken of, but perhaps no one had seen it more than he, who had come in contact with Comp. Massey, officially and otherwise, and had heard him express his wish that everything should be done in proper form and order, and that the chapter should be conducted in proper and truly Masonic form. That it had been so accomplished was due to the energy Comp. Massey had put forth, in which he had been ably seconded by the other Principals. The other companions were equally gratified, and they were all delighted with what they had seen and heard that day.

Comps. Salmon, Vine, Burford, and Blyth also replied to the toasts proposed in honour of the S.E., S.N., P.S., and Treasurer, respectively; and Comp. Speight having given the Janitor's toast, the companions separated.

Comps. Distin, Carter, and Cozens entertained the companions with a beautiful selection of music in the intervals between the toasts.

Bro. Col. Creaton, Bros. J. A. Farnfield, and Griffiths Smith were elected the committee to draw up the report to be presented to the annual meeting of the Institution on the 18th of May.

Bro. Terry read a letter from Mrs. Lane, the widow of Bro. W. Lane, late the Collector of the Institution, acknowledging with thanks the receipt of the £100 cheque voted to her. This, she said, she would use to the best advantage of those for whom it had been intended, and she also tendered her best thanks for the condolence of the brethren with her in her bereavement.

Bro. Terry reported that he had engaged Mr. Recknell, who had been educated in the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to the post of clerk, vacated by Bro. George Knill on his appointment as collector, at a salary of £80 per annum.

Bro. Joshua Nunn, who had known Mr. Recknell for some time, spoke in high terms of commendation of the character of Mr. Recknell.

Bro. Terry read a letter from Dr. Strong, honorary Surgeon to the Institution, inviting the brethren to the Asylum at Croydon on Wednesday evening next, when a concert would be given for the entertainment of the inmates, by the Croydon Amateur Musical Society. Bro. Terry said that Dr. Strong was president of the society, and as it was the last meeting of the society for the season he thought that this entertainment should be given to the inmates of his association. Dr. Strong had gone to considerable expense in fitting up a platform, &c., and he would be very much pleased if the brethren would go down to Croydon and take part in the pleasures of the evening.

The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as Samplers, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom must be addressed to the Secretary.

The seventy-ninth anniversary festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will be held on Wednesday, June 27th.

Lady Georgiana Hamilton, accompanied by Lady Victoria Edgcombe, left London on Wednesday for Biarritz, to visit the Duke and Duchess of Abercorn.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF UNITED STRENGTH.—(No. 228).—The last regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, on Tuesday, the 10th inst. The following brethren were present: Bros. James Hill, W.M.; Snare, S.W.; Halford, J.W.; Piercy, S.D.; Todd, J.D.; Flaws, I.G.; Davies, P.M., Asst. Sec.; Hart, P.M., Org.; J. Terry, P.M., D.C. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. Bros. Quartly and Sarrol. Bro. J. Terry, P.M., then brought forward the case of a brother in distress, and proposed a grant from the Benevolent Fund of the lodge. It was seconded by Bro. Piercy, S.W., and carried unanimously. Bro. Davies, P.M., Assistant Secretary, announced with regret that the father of the lodge, Bro. Joseph Crump, P.M., and Bro. Winsland, P.M., Treasurer, were absent from this, the last meeting, on account of severe illness; and Bro. Terry, P.M., proposed, seconded by the W.M., and unanimously carried, that a vote of sympathy be recorded in the minutes, and the Assistant Secretary be requested to communicate the same to the brethren in question. The lodge having been formally closed until the second Tuesday in October next, the brethren adjourned to banquet, to which ample justice was done. On the removal of the cloth the toasts were given, "The Queen and the Craft," followed by the National Anthem, "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales" was drunk with enthusiasm, the W.M. remarking that he was glad to see that H.R.H. had recovered from his late indisposition, and trusted with the help of T.G.A.O.T.U., the change of climate will restore H.R.H. again to good health. The usual Masonic toasts followed, that of "The Visitor" being responded to by Bro. Dr. Whitmore, who took the opportunity to state that it was over thirty years since he had the pleasure of visiting the Lodge of United Strength, but even in that space of time it had not lost its reputation for good working, as he had witnessed that evening the Third Degree worked by the W.M. in the best possible manner. Several capital songs enlivened the proceedings of the evening. Among the visitors present we noticed Bros. Dr. Whitmore, J. D. Loverdo, C. J. Hilliard, S. S. Bacon, and others.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Lodge (No. 13).—Under the presidency of our esteemed Bro. F. G. Pownall, W.M., this good old lodge, the mother and most respected of all the lodges in the district, is steadily increasing, not only in years but in strength and position, and we feel sure that no one could have seen the splendid working of the ceremonies on Wednesday, the 11th inst., without feeling both pleasure and pride at the opportunity of being present where such good Masonic work was so well and ably done. The business before the lodge consisted of the balloting for and approval of Messrs. Debraclair, Jones, and Deans, which being effected, those gentlemen were duly initiated into Masonry, and Bro. Girdlestone received the Sublime Degree from the hands of the W.M. The following officers were present beside the W.M.: Bros. G. Davies, P.M.; G. W. Reed, S.W.; J. P. Moore, J.W.; J. Henderson, P.M. and Treas.; H. Syer, Sec.; T. Hutton, S.D.; W. Brown, J.D.; H. Harding, Org.; B. Norman, Tyler. Bro. Masters, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Reilly, acted as I.G. The visitors included Bros. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, and P.G. J.W. for Kent; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; T. Butt, W.M. 700; W. T. Vincent, W.M. 913; A. Jessup, Treas. 913; J. Chapman, J.D. 913; J. Sevenake, 1255; J. W. Miller, 700; J. Frankling, 913; C. J. Bowden, 299; W. Hallerman, 1536; W. Taylor, 1536; S. Standing, 1536; C. W. Harris, 871; W. A. Watkins, 1536; W. Cobb, 700; G. W. King, 77; and C. Jolly, 913. The whole of the work being finished, and charity, the mainspring of all Masonry, not forgotten, the brethren re-assembled for refreshment. The eloquent W.M. put the usual toasts in good and effective style, and the brethren as loyally responded, and a rare flow of harmony conducted to the comfort of this truly happy gathering.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall on Thursday, April 5th. All the officers were present, namely, Bros. F. Wilkinson, W.M.;

Brown, I.P.M.; Falkner, S.W.; C. Wilkinson, J.W.; Ashley, P.M. and Treas.; Braham, Sec.; Wilton, P.M. and Dir. of Cers.; Carey, P.M. and Assist. Dir. of Cers.; Gummer, S.D.; Hunt, J.D.; Radway, I.G.; Robinson, Stwd.; Bigwood, Tyler; as P.M.'s of No. 41, Bros. Cooper, Clark, Rubie, and Mitchell; also Dr. Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire, and P.M. 43 and 958; and many members. The visitors were Bros. Gore, W.M., and Dickenson, J.W. 379; Col. Ford, P.M.; Edwards, W.M.; C. Collins, Sec.; W. Collins, Rolfe, Marillier, Hughes, all of No. 53; Tucker, 70; Bedford, P.M. 304; Watts, P.M. 626; Forckler, 35; Pegler, P.M. 304, 54, 578, 1026; Reynolds, Fuller, and Sumson. After the lodge had been opened by the W.M., the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for five candidates, which proving unanimously favourable, they will be initiated at the next meeting. The subject of the exclusion of Jews from Masonry in Germany was considered, and the W.M. was commissioned to sign the petition in their favour on behalf of the members of No. 41. Messrs. Harris, Peach, Davis, and Baldwin, previously balloted for, were presented for initiation, and the ceremony was very creditably performed for the first time by the W.M., Bro. Cooper, as usual, giving the charge, and Bro. Falkner the explanation of the working tools. A printed copy of the Treasurer's annual report was presented to every member, which, notwithstanding some heavy expenses during the past year, showed a satisfactory balance of nearly £60. A proposition to reduce the subscription by one half to members, not being officers, who reside more than fifty miles from Bath, having been recommended by the permanent committee, it was carried unanimously. In the course of the evening, considering that there were four initiations, a ballot for five candidates, and proposition of two others, Bro. Ashley, P.M., took advantage of an interval to impress on the members, especially the younger ones, the importance of strict inquiry and perfect satisfaction as to the eligibility of candidates as regards character, and strongly to urge that in no case should a name be brought openly before the lodge until it had been privately mentioned to the W.M. and Wardens, and had received their sanction. A vote of thanks for their attendance was passed to the visiting brethren by acclamation, and responded to by Bros. Gore, Edwards, Bedford, and Pegler. Bro. Mercer proposed a joining member, and Bro. Brown a candidate for initiation. The lodge was closed at a quarter to ten.

TRURO.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 131).—The regular meeting of this ancient lodge was held on Tuesday, the 10th inst., and was rendered an especial one from the fact that the members decided to add to the list of their honorary members the name of Bro. C. Eugene Meyer, of Philadelphia, U.S.A. Bro. Meyer is well-known to the members of every legal Masonic degree in America, from the First to the Thirty-third, and much respected by the leading brethren, especially of the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter (R.A.) of Pennsylvania. As Chairman of the Library Committee of the former, and Past Grand High Priest of the latter, his services on behalf of the Craft especially have been most continuous and valuable for years, and certainly are "beyond all praise." The members of the Lodge of Fortitude had, however, before their minds not only a certain handsome gift he had made to them, in appreciation of the literary labours in connection with Freemasonry by one of their Past Masters (Bro. William James Hughtan), but remembered with evident gratitude the kind assistance he had rendered to an unfortunate member of their lodge, and they intend, by the special honour thus conferred, to mark their warm approval of his Masonic career generally, and as they have witnessed it particularly. The only other brother so honoured is the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgumbe, Prov. G.M. of Cornwall. The lodge possesses a centenary warrant, and numbers on its roll some of the best "workers" in the country. We trust that Bro. Meyer will long live to enjoy the deserved honour thus bestowed upon him by an English lodge.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—This lodge held its regular meeting in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, on the evening of the 11th inst. There was a good attendance both of members and visiting brethren, Bro. Richard Taylor, the W.M., presiding. The lodge having been opened with the usual formalities pertaining to the Craft, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. William Melrose, engineer, which proving unanimous, he was duly admitted into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry by the W.M., the E.A. charge being given by Bro. Geo. Kelland, P.M. A candidate was then proposed for admission at next meeting, and the usual proclamation made, which elicited hearty good wishes from the visitors, and the lodge was subsequently closed in love, peace, and harmony.

BRADFORD.—Shakespeare Lodge (No. 1018).—On Wednesday evening, the 11th inst., the installation of Bro. R. G. Latimer as the W.M. of the above lodge took place in the Masonic Rooms, Salem-street, Bradford, Yorkshire, in the presence of a large number of members, and also of W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and visitors from other lodges in the town and neighbourhood. Bro. Wm. Morgan, P.M., went through the preliminaries, and the degree was bestowed by Bro. Monkman, P.M. On the re-assembling of the Master Masons, Bro. W. Morgan presented the W.M. elect with the implements of our profession, which are emblematical of our conduct in life. A well-merited compliment was paid to the W.M. elect, who is highly respected in the town, and he received the hearty good wishes of all present. The other officers were appointed as follows: Bros. R. F. Harrison, I.P.M.; Wm. Longley, S.W.; G. H. Swithenbank, J.W.; I. M. Thorpe, Treas.; F. Ronnfeldt, P.M., Sec.; Henry Harrison, S.D.; Ed. Farrand, J.D.; Wm. Hy. Haley, I.G.; Samuel Bulmer, Tyler; Ed. Misdale, Org.; H. Tordoff, John Jolly, and F. S. Garner, Stewards; and Thornton Wood, S. of W. and M.C. After the close of the lodge a grand banquet was held, and on the removal of the cloth the W.M. elect gave the following toasts, which were drunk with full Masonic honours: "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family," "The Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of England, and the Officers of Grand Lodge," The following toasts were likewise heartily received and duly honoured: "Bro. Lieut.-Col. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., J.P.D.L., Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master of West Yorkshire," "The Worshipful Bros. Thos. W. Tew, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of West Yorkshire, and the rest of the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge," "The Retiring Master, Bro. R. F. Harrison," "The Worshipful Master," "The Worshipful Masters of the Visiting Lodges," "The Worshipful Past Masters and Brethren of Visiting Lodges," "The Worshipful Past Masters of the Shakespeare Lodge," and "The Officers of the Lodge." From the speeches it was gathered that the lodge is in a satisfactory financial position; that the members evince much earnestness in the pursuit of knowledge, and that complete harmony prevails amongst the whole of them. During the evening several songs were well rendered, and some classical music was performed on the grand pianoforte by Bros. Misdale and Atkinson. Throughout the proceedings were most successful, instructive, and enjoyable.

WESTERHAM.—Amherst Lodge (No. 1223).—This lodge held its second meeting of the season on Saturday, the 7th inst., at their lodge house, the King's Arms Hotel. The lodge was opened in due form by Bro. Newsom, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Alfred Sydney Owen was then advanced to the sublime degree of a M.M. Bro. Steele, of the SS. Peter and Paul Lodge, 1410, Newport Pagnell, was elected as a joining member, and Mr. Jno. Carr, jun., was initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. This business being completed, Bro. Mortlock, P.M. Industry, 186, proceeded to instal the W.M. elect, Bro. Edw. J. Dodd. The ceremony was performed in that able and impressive manner for which he is so thoroughly appreciated. The following officers were then invested by the W.M.:—Bros. A. W. Duret, S.W.; W. C. Banks, J.W.; R. Durtnell, Treas.; J. H. Jewell, Sec.; C. J. Dodd, S.D.; Jno. Webb, J.D.; Smeeman Smith, I.G.; T. Baker, D.C.; Owen, Std.; and Fullager, Tyler. Bro. Jewell brought under the notice of the lodge the petition emanating from the Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017, respecting the obnoxious law enforced in the German lodges in respect to the exclusion of the Jews from the privileges of Freemasonry, on his proposition, seconded by Bro. Webb, the feeling and of the lodge was signified by an unanimous wish that the same should be signed by the W.M. on behalf of the lodge, and forwarded to Bro. Abrahams for presentation to Grand Lodge. The lodge was then closed in due form, and marshalled by the D.C. to the banquet-room, where a splendid repast was served. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, the W.M., in a neat address, presented the retiring Master, Bro. R. Durtnell, with a very elegant and handsome jewel, bearing the Amherst Arms exquisitely enamelled in colours, and bearing the following inscription: "Presented by the members of the Amherst Lodge to Bro. Richard Durtnell, P.M., as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of the efficient manner in which he discharged the duties of W.M. during the years 1875 and 1876." The call for the Tyler brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—This summer lodge commenced its third season on the 3rd inst., under the presidency of Bro. J. W. Garrod, W.M., assisted by Bros. Vincent, S.W.; Ledcombe, J.W.; Ebbs, J.D.; Llewellyn Winter, Organist; Rogers, Treas.; Veal, Hon. Sec.; Bros. Best, Peach, Linton; and visitors: Bros. Tickle, P.M. 1196; Hawksley, 1196; Hunt, F.C. 1425; and Garrod, 889. The lodge was opened in the First Degree at 4.45, and disposed of the only business on the summons, viz., to confirm the previous lodge minutes and read the bye-laws according to annual custom. At the last meeting in October the brethren discussed and agreed that the day of meeting for various good reasons should be altered from the first Tuesday to the first Wednesday in the respective months, which was fully confirmed at this meeting, and instructions given to apply for permission to the M.W.G.M., and if possible to be procured by the next meeting in May. A petition was also presented by Bros. Tickle and Hawksley, asking the recommendation of the brethren in support of a new summer lodge, to be held at the same hotel, by various members of the Urban and other London lodges, proposed to be called the "Sub-Urban," which met with the hearty support and good wishes of all present. The lodge was closed in the usual form at 5.40, one new member being proposed for next meeting. The usual banquet followed, to the satisfaction of all. The musical contributions of the brethren, and the hearty reception of the usual Masonic toasts ably (and appropriately given by the W.M.) were, as usual at this lodge, very enjoyable, many remaining after the Tyler's toast had disposed of all ceremony, and each contributing to the harmony of the occasion.

PUTNEY.—Royal Commemoration Lodge (No. 1585).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Wednesday, 4th inst., under the gavel of P.M. Bro. J. Wright. There were also present Bros. Robinson, Morpew, Holland, Boehr, Collings, Watkins, P.M.'s Smith and Stacey, and a large number of visitors and brethren, including P.M.'s Terry, Swallow, Scott, Wise, Wright, Burrell, and others. The retiring W.M., having raised Bro. Stokes and passed Bro. Hunt, proceeded to instal Bro. Robinson, the W.M. elect. On the re-assembling of the brethren the newly-installed W.M. was proclaimed in the usual manner, and having invested the following brethren as his officers, viz., Bros. J. Wright, I.P.M.; Morpew, S.W.; Jackson, J.W.; H. Smith, P.M., Sec.; Watkins, Treas.; Holland, S.D.; Boehr, J.D.; Collings, I.G.; T. H. Smith, D.C.; and Harrison, W.S., proceeded to initiate Messrs. Kohler and Tanner into the ancient Order. Before closing the lodge three candidates were announced, and the lodge was adjourned to October. The usual loyal toasts were given after the cloth had been cleared, and were heartily received, as well as the following:—"The Visitors," "The Initiates," "The W.M.," "The I.P.M.," "The Consecrating Officer, Bro. Terry," and "The Officers of the Lodge." During the evening the I.P.M. was presented with a very handsome Past Master's jewel, and Bro. Stead having given the Tyler's toast, the brethren separated, having spent a very pleasant evening.

A handsome stained-glass window, designed and executed by Bro. Wm. Ramsey was inserted in the Guildhall on Tuesday last. It is a gift from Mr. Alderman Cotton, M.P., the late Lord Mayor, to the Corporation of the City of London, and consists of four divisions, the upper two of which depict the presentation of an address to the Prince of Wales and the lower two illustrating the presentation of the loving cup to the Princess of Wales.

Chaplain England, to dedicate the new premises to the purposes of the Craft, according to ancient rules and ceremony. The ceremony being concluded, and the hall having been dedicated to "Universal Benevolence and Charity," the brethren will march back to the Victoria Hall, and the Provincial Grand Lodge will then be closed. It being St. George's Day, the members of St. George's Lodge will afterwards proceed to the new hall and install the W.M. elect as W.M. for the ensuing year, and at 5 o'clock a banquet will be partaken of. The tickets will also be available for any ordinary train on the following day.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica.—These maladies are always more or less connected with disorder of the digestive organs, hence the facility with which they yield to Holloway's remedies. Temporary alleviation immediately follows the proper application of this soothing Ointment, while the Pills, taken internally, reduce the digestive functions to order and avert all inflammatory tendencies. Nervous invalids will derive ease and consolation from the influence of these medicaments, which are free from mercury and all noxious ingredients. Holloway's celebrated Ointment and Pills present, at a trifling outlay, the means of preserving the health or uprooting diseases which have assailed the body through accident, luxury, a dolence, or other causes.—ADVT.

As there was no other business of importance, the Provincial Grand Chapter was closed in proper form by Comp. Lord Skelmersdale, P.G. Supt.

In the evening nearly all the companions present sat down to banquet in the large dining hall, under the presidency of Lord Skelmersdale. Bro. W. S. Vines, P.M., P.G.S., of the Canton Hotel, was the purveyor, and his catering, as usual, gave much satisfaction. The P.G. Superintendent gave "Her Majesty the Queen," and in submitting the toast of "The Prince of Wales, the First Grand Principal, and the rest of the Royal Family," his lordship enlarged on the many merits of the Prince as a hard-working Mason, having the best interests of the Craft very near his heart, and actuating him in all his Masonic deeds.

Comp. Brooke, P.G. Secretary, gave "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro First Grand Principal, Lord Skelmersdale, Second Grand Principal and Provincial Grand Superintendent, and Lord de Tabley, Third Grand Principal." In referring to Lord Skelmersdale, Comp. Brooke spoke of the warm interest he took in Masonry generally, more especially in the province over which he ruled; and said that by his genial manner, warm Masonic interest, and strict justice in all his dealings, their Prov. G. Master and Prov. G. Supt. had endeared himself to every brother and companion in West Lancashire as well as throughout England.

Lord Skelmersdale, in response, thanked the companions for the cordiality with which the toast had been given and responded to, and assured them that he always felt a delight in coming into the province to attend to his Masonic duties. He also spoke of the Earl of Carnarvon as a most accomplished Mason, to whom no work, either in lodge or chapter, was ever strange.

"The Three Provincial Grand Principals and the Officers of the Provincial Grand Chapter," given by Lord Skelmersdale, was cordially received and fittingly responded to.

Comp. H. S. Alpass, P.G.S.E., in proposing "The Principals of the Various Chapters in the Province," spoke of the desirability of having uniformity of working in all the chapters, and referred to various other points which ought to be remembered.

Comp. Ball, P.G. Janitor, gave the last toast, "To all Poor and Distressed Masons, &c."

Excellent music was provided by a small glee companionship, under the direction and with the piano accompaniments of Comp. J. Skeaf, P.G.O.

The proceedings terminated about nine o'clock, his lordship staying until the close.

The programme of music was admirably rendered by Comps. C. Haswell, T. Armstrong, P.G. Treas.; J. Jones, P.G.D.C.; and Bro. T. J. Hughes, 216. Comp. H. Gill gave a performance on his enchanting "Fairy Bells," which greatly delighted every one present, and so delighted Lord Skelmersdale that he asked permission to examine the ingenious instrument, which he did most minutely.

CONSECRATION OF THE PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

A Masonic ceremony of more than ordinary interest to Freemasons took place at Newport, on Thursday, the 4th inst., being the constitution of a Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons for the Province of Monmouthshire. The district had not previously been formed into a province, but steps were taken to have it so constituted; and the Grand Lodge of England and Wales having been memorialised, a constitution was sanctioned, and Bro. Lorenzo Augustus Homfray, whose name was submitted from the district, was accepted as the first Right Worshipful Grand Master for the province. The installation of Bro. Homfray took place on the 4th inst., together with the ceremony of consecrating the Grand Provincial Lodge. There was a large attendance of brethren of the Mark degree. The ceremony was performed in the Masonic Hall by the Most Worshipful the Rev. G. Raymond Portal, M.A., Past G. Mark Master Mason of England, and Past Grand Master of Hants and the Isle of Wight.

At two o'clock the brethren began to assemble. The Keystone Lodge was opened by a special dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons, and Bro. J. C. Manning was advanced to the Mark Degree also by special dispensation. The Most Worshipful the Rev. Bro. Portal then opened the Provincial Grand Lodge in due form, and was apprised of the fact that the Provincial Grand Master designate was without, and was desirous of being installed. The patent of approval and appointment was then read by Bro. Binckes, Grand Secretary for England, after which Bro. Homfray was introduced in proper form and duly installed, with all the solemnities. The Right Worshipful Grand Master then announced the appointment, as Deputy Provincial Grand Master, of Bro. Colonel Charles Lync, Past Mark Master 109, who was invested. The following Grand Officers were also appointed and invested: Bros. Captain S. George Homfray, P.G.S.W.; George Arthur Brown, P.G.J.W.; Henry Hellyer, P.M.O.; E. V. C. Haldane, P.S.O.; R. J. Chambers, P.J.O.; Rev. Edward Jones, P.G. Chaplain; Walter West, P.G. Registrar; William Watkins, P.G. Secretary; Jonathan Piggford, P.G.A. Sec.; James Horner, P.G. Treas.; W. H. Wickey Homfray, P.G.S.D.; Chas. P. Evans, P.G.J.D.; Alfred Taylor, P.G. M. of W.; Captain A. T. Perkins, P.G. Dir. of Cer.; Nichol Bradley, P.G.A.D.C.; John Lewis, P.G. Swd. B.; Henry Howell, P.G. Standard Bearer; H. J. Groves, P.G. Org.; A. McMahon, P.G.I.G.; Hy. Fletcher, P.G. Tyler; W. H. Wheeler, Samuel Davies, and E. Swedenback, P.G. Stewards.

Votes of thanks were then accorded to Bro. Portal for the great ability shown by him in the performance of the installation ceremony, and other resolutions having been passed thanking several brethren of distinction for being present, the lodge was closed. The following brethren were present during the ceremony:—Bros. G. R. Portal, P.G.M., Prov. G.M.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; Walter West, 109, P.G.R.; Geo. Arthur Brown, P.M. 185, P.G.J.W.; Nichol Bradley, J.W. 185, P.G.A.D.C.; John Lewis, S.B., P.G.S.B.; J. Horner, P.G. Treas.; Alfred Taylor, P.G. Insp. of Works; C. P. Evans, P.G.J.D.; Henry Bonell, P.G.S.; W. H. Wheeler, P.G.S.; Jonathan Piggford, 109; William Williams, W.M. Ashlar, 185; E. Jones, S.W. 1098, P.P.G.C., S.W.E.; Samuel Bryant, P.G.M.M.O., D.P.G.M. Bristol; F. Binckes, G. Sec.; L. A. Homfray, P.M. 109; S. G. Homfray, P.M.; Henry Hellyer, P.M.; George F. Tuckey, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.W., P.G.S.; W. H. W. Homfray, P.M. 683; John Phillips, D. L. James, A. McMahon, P.G.J.D.; James Stallard, Samuel Davies, Shadwell H. Clerke, P.M., J.W. Studholme; C. R. Davy, P.M.; A. T. Perkins, S.W. 109; E. T. Inskip, P.G.J.D. England; Wm. Watkins, W.M. 109; R. J. Chambers, C. P. Evans, Thomas Gage, H. Richards, H. J. Groves, Alf. Taylor, H. Howell, S. Bryant, E. Swedenbank, W. Williams, W.M. Ashlar Lodge; Thos. Harry, F. G. Lake, R. Bond, Nelson D. Marks, W.M. Langley Lodge; T. G. Glass, Edward Jones, J. T. Firbank, J. C. Manning, and other brethren.

The installation banquet took place at the King's Head Hotel at five o'clock. The Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master presided. Among the guests, who were numerous, were Sir George Elliot, Bart., M.P., R.W. Prov. G. M. of the Eastern Division of South Wales, and Bro. Parkinson, P.D.G.M. Middlesex. Nearly the whole of the brethren who took part in the installation were present at the banquet, which was served up in a way that gave entire satisfaction. Dinner being over,

The Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master proposed "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England,

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and Officers of Grand Lodge of England." He said he wished to couple with the toast the name of one who was installed at Aberdare on Wednesday as the chief of an adjoining province. He alluded to Sir George Elliot. (Cheers.) They were all delighted to hear that Sir George had so very successful a gathering, which they might accept as a pretty fair guide that the right man had been selected, and he was quite sure the province would prosper very much under his Mastership. (Hear, hear.) He congratulated Sir George on his having taken the office, and he congratulated the province on having so popular and so able a Mason to rule over it. He hoped the two adjoining provinces would co-operate with each other in furthering the best interests of Masonry, which they all had so much at heart. (Cheers.)

Bro. Sir George Elliot responded, and while seeking to impress Masons with the true value of Masonry, he hoped the provinces would go hand-in-hand harmoniously together, in furtherance of principles which were calculated to work so great an amount of good socially, morally, and religiously.

Bro. Major Clerke next proposed the toast of "The Most Worshipful the Grand Mark Master, the Earl of Limerick, and Officers of the Grand Lodge of England." The speaker expressed sympathy with the Earl of Limerick in reference to a recent affliction, and was quite sure he had the sympathy of the entire Order. Major Clerke enumerated six M.W. Grand Masters who had retired from office, one of whom was present among them that night. He proposed the toast, coupling with it the name of Bro. Parkinson.

Bro. J. C. Parkinson, in responding, said the Mark Degree would have good reason to congratulate itself in future upon the very happy selection that had been made that day, in placing Bro. Homfray there as the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master of Mark Masonry in Monmouthshire. (Cheers.) With regard to the Earl of Limerick, there could not possibly be a more estimable gentleman or a better Mason.

Bro. Portal next proposed "The Health of the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Mark Master, Bro. L. A. Homfray," in doing so he paid a tribute to the ability of Bro. Homfray, in his Masonic capacity, and felt sure from his great popularity that the proceedings of that day would be the starting point of a new era in Mark Masonry in Monmouthshire. He advised them, however, that numbers did not always mean success, and had no doubt, bearing that in mind, that, while doing their best to further the interests of Masonry, they would not forget to weigh members before they counted them. He felt that the matter in this respect, in Monmouthshire, was in very able hands, and he augured exceptional success from their proceedings that day.

The R.W. Prov. G. Master, in responding, said he thanked them very sincerely for the hearty manner in which his name had been received by them, and for the kind words which had been spoken in his behalf. He also thanked them for the proud position in which they had that day placed him, and said he felt that the toast which they had just drunk, and which had been so ably proposed by Bro. Portal, was not alone the expression of a wish with regard to his health, but was health and success to the province of Mark Master Masons which had that day been constituted. He had his own doubt whether he was really the right man in the right place. At the same time he would do everything that lay in his power to promote the furtherance of Mark Masonry in the province over which they had placed him. He had always maintained that no province of the same size could boast of a greater number of more enthusiastic Masons than Monmouthshire, and he hoped that when Bro. Portal came into the district next he would find double the number of Mark lodges that he had now found at this, his first visit. He would now propose another toast for their acceptance, that of "The Very Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Mark Master, Bro. Colonel Charles Lyne, and Officers of Provincial G.M.M.M. Lodge." (Cheers.) He could not but regard it as a great compliment that Colonel Lyne should have accepted the office of Deputy under him. He regarded it as an honour to the Provincial Grand Lodge that two of his principal officers—the Deputy Grand Master and the Senior Warden—should be the Grand Master and Deputy Grand Master of Masonry in the province. He felt that under such auspices the lodge must prosper. (Hear, hear.) He had found some difficulty in fixing upon officers, not that good Masons were too few, but that they were too many, and he scarcely knew how to decide between them. He had, however, adopted the system of seniority, and he hoped the brethren would give him credit for strict impartiality. (Hear, hear.) He might also add that in future selections he should consult Masters of lodges as to the capacities and seniority of brethren, thereby, he hoped, getting the very best men for the vacant places. (Hear, hear.) He proposed the toast, coupling with it the name of Bro. Homfray Grand Senior Warden.

Bro. Homfray, in responding, paid a very high tribute to the Masonic ability of Colonel Lyne, than whom, he said, he never sat under a better Master. With regard to himself, he felt it to be an honour to be selected by his brother to take office in the new Grand Lodge, and regarded it as a kindly and thoughtful act in being selected to fulfil the duties, which would, at all times, have his best attention, with a view to the success of the lodge and the furtherance of the principles of the Order.

The Right Worshipful Master next proposed "The Consecrating and Installing Master, the Most Worshipful the Rev. G. R. Portal, P.G.M.M.M. of England," and commented on the very able way in which the ceremonies of the day had been gone through.

Bro. Portal responded, and hoped the new Provincial Grand Lodge would be attended with abundant success.

The Senior G. Warden next proposed "The Visitors," coupling with the toast the names of Bro. Davey and Bro. Major Clerke, both of whom responded.

Bro. Davey proposed "The Lodges of the Province," to which Bro. Davies responded.

The toast of the "Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Parkinson, was responded to in a speech of characteristic eloquence and vigour by Bro. Binckes, which, with the Tyler's toast, brought the proceedings to a close.

It should be stated, in justice to the newly-installed Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Mark Master, that the whole of the regalia and jewels of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge were a free gift, presented by him to the lodge, and that, a part of the lodge business, a cordial vote of thanks was accorded to him for his valuable present.

In the evening a Grand Masonic Ball took place at the Kings Head Hotel.

CONSECRATION OF A MARK LODGE AT BURNLEY.

As was briefly stated in last week's Freemason, the consecration of the Scarlet Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 184, took place with great eclat at the Mechanics' Institute, Burnley, on Friday, the 6th inst. There was a large gathering of Mark Masons, to whom the interesting ceremonies of the afternoon appeared to give the greatest pleasure. It may be stated that the Scarlet Mark Lodge has been holding its meetings under a dispensation since towards the close of 1875, but the formal consecration has not taken place until now, as the brethren were anxious that the head of Mark Masonry in Lancashire (Lord Skelmersdale), should perform the ceremony. They therefore waited until his lordship found it convenient to attend and redeem his promise, and, taking the opportunity afforded by the Easter Parliamentary recess, he was present to consecrate on the occasion named. Besides R.W. Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, P.G.M.M.M., there were in attendance Bros. Le Gendre Nicholas Starkie, P.G.W. and D.P.G.M.; Robert Mc. D. Smith, P.G.J.W.; Augustus A. Bagshaw, P.G.A. Chap.; Jno. Chadwick, P.G. Sec.; Jno. Bell, P.P.G.S.B.; Thos. Hindle, P.P.G.S.O.; Robert Butterworth, G.S.; Thos. Hindle, P.P.G.J.O.; Robert Wade, 159; Joseph Wood, 65, P.P.G. Sd. B. (Freemason); Richard Nelson, S.O. 14; Edward Heywood, W.M.M. 159; Geo. Whiteley, 56, Sec.; Jno. Watson, P.S.B.; Christopher Furness, 159; W. Barraclough, S.W.; J. W. Kenyon, P.P.G.J.O. 123; Bury; Ralph Fletcher, 123; Thos. West, 56; Jno. Watson, P.P.S.B.; Thos. Oakden, P.G.M.O.; Jno. Alcock, P.G.J.D.; Thos. Horsfall, P.G. Org.; Geo. A. O. Niel, P.G.O.; W. H. Prince, P.G.O.; Wm. Roberts, P.P.G.S.D.; Ed. Hartley, P.P.G.J.O. West Yorkshire; Ed. Diggle, J.W. 56, S.D. 189; Jno. Greenwood, S.W. 14; Thos. Knowles, M.O. 14; Wm. Pilling, P.M. 56; Jas. Charnock, 14; J. Taylor, W.M.; Tom Bradshaw, P.G.A.D.C.; R. W. Waterson, P.G.P.

His lordship consecrated the lodge with the usual formalities and ceremonies, assisted by prominent members of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and at the close of this portion of the proceedings the following brethren were invested officers for the ensuing year:

Bros. John Rawcliffe, W.M.; H. Wadsworth, S.W.; Tom Bradshaw, J.W.; S. Alexander, M.O.; R. W. Waterson, S.O.; Jno. Bolland, J.O.; Wm. Smith, Treas.; B. Whitaker, Sec.; George C. Ogden, Reg.; E. Diggle, S.D.; W. Morsden, J.D.; Jas. Dent, I.G.

The brethren subsequently banqueted under the presidency of the P.G.M.M.M.

SAD ACCIDENT TO A BROTHER IN LIVERPOOL.

A large circle of Masonic brethren in and around Liverpool will learn with deep regret that death has suddenly taken away one who was universally esteemed and admired. On Friday, the 6th inst., Bro. Marmaduke George Bateman, a Steward and Auditor of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, who was only 39 years of age, was inspecting a number of houses which he had erected in Bedford-street South, Liverpool. He and Mr. F. Bage, painter and plumber, ascended one of the buildings to inspect the work being done by his men. A plank used by one of the workmen engaged in "pointing" the outside projected, and upon Bro. Bateman and Mr. Bage, who were heavy men, stepping upon the wood it gave way, precipitating both gentlemen to the ground, a distance of twelve feet. The injury to Mr. Bage was not so severe, but two of Bro. Bateman's ribs were broken, and after suffering intense agony he died at his mother's residence, 5, Berkeley-street, on the following Monday. The plank was made of new wood, but it unfortunately gave way at a knot which had not been observed. An inquest was held on the body on Thursday, the 12th inst., when the jury returned a verdict of accidental death. The sudden death of the deceased, who was a master builder, was feelingly alluded to at the annual installation meeting of the Temple Lodge, and it was resolved that a letter of condolence should be sent to Mrs. Bateman under the distressing circumstances.

The remains of the deceased were interred in St. James's Cemetery, on Friday, the 13th, when the following officers and brethren of the Temple Lodge were present: Bros. R. C. Yelland, W.M.; R. R. Martin, P.M.; W. Healing, I.P.M.; T. G. Winstanley, J.W.; Joseph Wood, Treas. (Freemason); J. Tyson, S.; A. Horspool, S.; Dr. Speer, Deacon, &c. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Eben. Cargill, incumbent of St. Philip's Church, Hardman-street.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The quarterly meeting of the subscribers to this institution was held on Saturday last at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Lieut. Col. John Creaton, Vice Patron, was voted to the chair. As usual at these quarterly Courts on which the election is taken there was a very large assemblage of the brethren; and on this occasion there were present among others, Bros. J. Wordsworth, P. Kirke, Geo. Jeffery, Pierce Egan, Henry Smith, S. Rawson, W. H. Tomlinson, Thomas Hill, Raynham W. Stewart, Thos. Massa, T. Prideaux Saunders, Hy. Potter, R. B. Webster, Wm. Stephens, Charles Lacey, J. J. Berry, H. Massey (Freemason), C. F. Matier, A. H. Tattershall, G. Bolton, Hyde Pullen, Griffiths Smith, J. Tyerman, H. Browne, H. A. Dubois, E. Letchworth, F. Pendered, W. H. Spaul, J. G. Stevens, Geo. Kenning, F. I. Pownall, Fredk. Adlard, J. Bodenham, J. Smith, Leopold F. Ruf, Col. H. S. Burney, J. S. Hine, J. Terry, J. A. Birch, Thos. W. White, John Symonds, E. H. Finney, A. F. A. Woodford, H. C. Burt, T. Cubitt, Jesse Turner, H. Hacker, F. J. Sabine, H. G. Warren, W. H. Radley, F. W. H. Ramsey, M.D., W. F. C. Moutrie, Peter De L. Long, H. Cowland, F. B. Davage, and R. Wentworth Little (Secretary).

After the minutes had been read by Bro. Little, Bro. S. Rawson, P.D.G.M. China; proposed the re-election of Bro. Samuel Tomkins, G.T., as Treasurer of the Institution.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D., seconded the motion, which was then put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

The following brethren were elected the General Committee for the year:—Bros. H. Browne, jun., Cargill, Corbin, Dodd, Gossett, Law, H. Massey (Freemason), Moore, Peacock, W. Spencer, Jesse Turner, and J. W. Berrie.

The undermentioned brethren were elected the Scrutineers of votes for the election:—Bros. A. H. Tattershall, R. B. Webster, S. Rawson, Jardine, J. J. Berry, R. W. Stewart, Cullen, Matiere, Ramsay, Constable and Tyerman.

Bro. H. G. Warren, P.G.S., then rose to propose the following motion, of which he had given notice:—

"That, having regard to the increased income of the Institution and the altered position of the Secretary and Collector, it is expedient that Rules 74 and 75 shall be so amended as to provide that the Secretary shall give security for £1000, the Secretary's Chief Clerk £500, and any other Clerks £250 each. Such security to be provided through an approved Guarantee Society, and the premiums paid by this Institution, so as not to be a burthen on the officials."

In bringing the motion before the notice of the meeting Bro. Warren said he was induced to do so for the reason mentioned in the motion, the altered position in which the institution stood at the present time compared with what it was when the law was made fixing the securities of the Secretary and Collector. At the time when the securities were fixed at £300 and £200, the whole of the income of the institution did not exceed £3000 a year. He thought he was within the mark when he said that the income of the institution was now £14,000 or £15,000. Therefore when the brethren found, according to the rules, that the Secretary was required to find security for £300, and the Collector for £200, together only £500, they would see that the proportion that the security bore towards the income was small when compared with the proportion it bore to the income at the last time it was fixed; for whereas it then was at the rate of one-sixth of the income it was now about one-forty-seventh. The brethren would probably see therefore that it was proper that the amount of the securities should be increased. How it was to be obtained was a matter of indifference to him. By his resolution he proposed that it should be a guarantee society, for the reason that this plan was generally adopted by the government and all commercial offices of any consideration. He had proposed also that the premium should be paid by the institution, because after the salary of the Secretary had been fixed he did not wish that it should be taxed by the deduction of a premium for security. Under the circumstances that they had now only one person filling the two offices of Secretary and Collector, and that he was only giving the security which the Secretary gave when Secretary only, and when that Secretary's salary was only a third or a half of what it was now, he (Bro. Warren) had thought it right to bring this motion before the court.

The Chairman asked whether any brother seconded Bro. Warren's motion. After waiting some little time, as no one spoke, he added that there being no seconder the motion fell to the ground.

Bro. Warren said that if the brethren were content with so small a security as £300, he had nothing to do but submit to their opinion.

Bro. John Symonds, P.G.D., said Bro. Warren was wrong in saying that the security was only £300. The Secretary being the Collector as well as Secretary gave security for both offices—the £300 and the £200.

Bro. Warren begged to be allowed to say that he mentioned in his opening address that the security required by the law was £500, but at present, in consequence of the alteration made by doing away with a separate Collector they had now security for £300 only.

Bro. John Symonds said that this was a matter for the consideration of the committee.

The next business on the paper was the consideration of Bro. Dr. Ramsay's motion.

"That the proposition of Bro. Warren, as to the Guarantees, be referred to a Select Committee composed of Bros. Col. Creaton and Col. Burdett, Trustees; W. Hyde Pullen, Wm. Roebuck, D. M. Dewar, Raynham W. Stewart, John Mason, and Dr. Ramsay, with power to add to their Number."

Dr. Ramsay said he thought after the sense of the meeting with reference to Bro. Warren's motion had been so unmistakably shewn it would be unnecessary for him to bring forward his proposition. He therefore would withdraw it.

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, P.G.D., then proposed the following alteration in the laws of the institution of which he had given notice:—"That the Quarterly Courts in January and July shall be held in future at four o'clock instead of 12 o'clock." He said he made this proposition for the convenience of many brethren who were business men, for whom it was very important that they should be able to have as much time in the morning and early part of the day as possible. At these Quarterly Courts in January and July there was very little business to do, and brethren who wished to attend were put to inconvenience for very little purpose. But at the Quarterly Courts of April and October, when the election took place they did not mind the inconvenience of coming at 12 o'clock because there was a great deal to be done, and a great result to be obtained. To come away from the City at half-past eleven o'clock in order to be at Freemasons' Hall at twelve was a serious thing to a professional man. It was a great point with business and professional men to be in their offices in the fore part of the day; and when it was remembered that in connection with these institutions the brethren gave their services gratuitously he thought their convenience should be consulted as far as possible. His motion only affected those two days in the year when there was very little business done, leaving the other two days when there was a great deal to be done untouched.

Bro. H. A. Dubois seconded the motion.

Bro. H. G. Warren said he should oppose the motion on the ground that 12 o'clock was a very satisfactory hour for meeting. He was disengaged at 12 o'clock in the day; but at 4 o'clock it would be quite impossible for him to attend, though that perhaps was of no consequence at all. Still there were a great many brethren who could spare an hour in the middle of the day as well as he, or from twelve to two o'clock. At that portion of the day he thought business men were not so much engaged as in the later hours, when they wanted to get their letters off.

Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., said he spoke quite disinterestedly on the subject because it really did not matter to him what hour was fixed. It was not with every brother as it was with Bro. Warren, who was an independent gentleman. To gentlemen engaged in business it was very important to have to leave their business in business hours. When brethren came to Freemasons' Hall at 4 o'clock they generally finished their day and did not go back to business. A great many went to their lodges at that hour, and they did not go back to business then. All the brethren were not independent and able to attend whenever they might be called upon. He did not think that 4 o'clock was an unreasonable hour. He did not see what could be the objection to the proposed alteration. If there were no others than those mentioned by Bro. Warren he did not see why the alteration should not be made. For his part he should vote for the motion.

Bro. John Symonds said this question should be looked upon as one of convenience to both sides. Bro. Smith seemed to assume that as a matter of course business men could come at 4 o'clock; but really to business men that was a most important part of the day, as they were then preparing their letters for the post. For some of them (among whom he himself was one) 12 o'clock was more convenient than 4. But it was in fact a question of the balance of convenience or inconvenience, and no doubt the brethren would give their votes on the motion according as it affected each individually. If the majority should decide that the hour should be fixed at 4 o'clock he had nothing more to say on the matter; he should be happy to conform as far as he could to the wishes of the majority. He would mention another point which had not been mentioned hitherto, Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion would not effect an alteration in the law of the Institution; it would merely make an alteration in the hour of meeting. The necessary alteration in the law must be made by one of these Quarterly Courts to which notice of motion must be given. The brethren had never been in the habit of leaving to any individual the alteration of the working of their laws, but it would be perfectly competent to Bro. Raynham Stewart on his notice of motion to specify a word which would carry out the object. If that was put instead of the present notice it would take the place of the law. It could only be made then at the next meeting for the collateral alteration of law. He had no doubt Bro. Raynham Stewart, with his facility of words, would very quickly be able to frame his resolution to meet the requirements of the case, and then he could submit it to the meeting.

Bro. Thos. W. White, P.G.S., observed that there was another objection to altering the hour. As Bro. Joseph Smith had said, when brethren went to their lodges they went generally at 3, 4, or 5 o'clock, and it would inconvenience a good many brethren in consequence, especially as there were a good many lodges now meeting on Saturdays, and they all met at an early hour.

Bro. J. Bodenham, Prov. G. Treasurer Staffordshire, said that the country brethren were always very glad to attend these meetings, and as they were held on Saturdays they liked to get home for Sunday, which they would generally be precluded from doing if the hour was altered from 12 to 4.

The Chairman said that as regarded the alteration in the hour he himself was quite indifferent, as he was able to attend whether the hour was twelve o'clock or four; but what he greatly objected to was the eternal changes in the laws of the Institution. It was not very long ago that the day for these quarterly meetings was changed from Thursday to Saturday. Now it was proposed to alter the time of meeting. As far as he was concerned he did not care whether it was four or twelve, but he did object to the alteration of the laws continually happening.

Col. Somerville Burney asked whether it was not more desirable that the meeting should take place before the election than after.

Bro. Little: The question did not arise with respect to the quarterly meetings in January and July, as there were no elections on those days.

Bro. Raynham Stewart in reply said that with reference to the observations of Bro. Bodenham as to the brethren from the country wishing to get home for the Sunday, he would remind him that the reason the quarterly meetings of the Girls' School were altered from Thursday to Saturday was that the brethren from the country might stay till the Monday for the Quarterly Courts of the Boys' School. He however would leave it in the brethren's hands, he himself making no particular point of it. He would leave it to the brethren to vote, and no doubt they would do so, as Bro. Symonds had said, according as it suited each individual.

The Chairman then read the resolution, which Bro. Raynham W. Stewart had altered as follows:—"That Law, No. 29 be amended by altering the hour of meeting in January and July to 4 o'clock instead of, as now, at 12.

The motion was put to the meeting and lost by a small majority.

The brethren afterwards proceeded with the election of 13 girls out of an approved list of 54 candidates. The list of successful and unsuccessful candidates will be found at page 157.

On the motion of Bro. W. Hale a vote of thanks was passed to the Scrutineers, which Bro. W. H. Tattershall, chairman, acknowledged.

A vote of thanks was also passed to Col. Creaton for presiding.

Col. Creaton in acknowledging the compliment said it always gave him much pleasure to come and assist in any way he could their charities.

The proceedings then terminated.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The Quarterly Court of the subscribers and governors of this Institution was held on Monday, in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall, Bro. John Symonds, Vice-Patron, Presiding. Amongst a large number of brethren present were: Bros. John Symonds, Vice-Patron and Trustee, in the chair; Col. Creaton, H. F. Martin, A. Durrant, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, P.G.C.; S. Rosenthal, Vice-Patron; John W. Dennison, H. Hacker, William Biggs, Geo. Bolton, V.P.; Jno. G. Stevens, Hy. Bartlett, John Colstable, Charles Lacey, Jas. A. Birch, H. Massey (Freemason), R. B. Webster, S. Rawson, V.P.; Henry C. Burt, Raynham W. Stewart, V.P.; F. W. Ramsay, Leopold Ruf, Hy. G. Warren, Geo. M. E. Snow, V.P.; Jesse Turner, Joseph Boddington, Hyde Pullen, Geo. Smith, Jas. Warner, H. A. Dubois, Lieut.-Col. Somerville Burney, Chas. Lee, Jno. Geo. Moore, W. H. Spaul, Fred. Adlard, V.P.; W. H. B. Tomlinson, Capt. J. Wordsworth, Henry Smith, V.P.; F. B. Davage, and F. Binckes, Secretary.

After the minutes of last Quarterly Court, and of the various Committees held since that meeting, had been read by Bro. Binckes, Bro. Raynham W. Stewart moved that Bro. George Plucknett be elected Treasurer of the Institution.

Bro. Col. Creaton seconded the motion, which was then put, and carried unanimously.

On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, seconded by Bro. Leopold Ruf, the following members of the General Committee were unanimously re-elected:—Brackstone Baker, W. B. Blackmur, Charles T. Dorey, Samuel Gale, Henry William Lindus, H. Law, Noah Martin, Edmund C. Massey, Henry Massey, Percival Sanford, Jesse Turner, and E. J. Tyrrell.

Bro. Binckes said that he might mention here that Bro. Plucknett had called upon him with a letter from the stepfather of one of the boys now in the Institution, a boy who came from the Province of Cheshire. The mother of the boy had married the gentleman who had written the letter, and who said he was well able to support the boy, and considered he was doing an injustice to some other boy if he continued him longer in the school. His desire was therefore to remove him at once. Bro. Binckes added that Bro. Plucknett, who had gone down to the School to see the lad, would take care that the stepfather's wishes were complied with, and he would arrange to take him away on Friday next. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

Bro. Raynham W. Stewart thereupon moved, and Bro. Biggs seconded, "That an additional vacancy be declared for the present election." Carried nem. dis.

The scrutineers of votes were then appointed.

The next business was the consideration of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart's motion, of which he had given notice, of altering the hour of meeting of the Quarterly Courts of January and July to four o'clock instead of twelve, but Bro. Stewart said that he thought after what took place at the quarterly meeting of the Girls' School on this subject on Saturday last he should not like to make an alteration in the rules of the Boys' School which was not carried in the Girls'; and therefore he should defer any proposition he might wish to make on this subject till a future occasion.

Bro. Henry G. Warren's motion for increasing the security to be given by the Secretary and clerks was the next business on the paper, but Bro. Warren said that after the decision at the girls' meeting on Saturday last he should not proceed with his proposition on the present occasion, as he intended to bring it forward in another form at next meeting. He was about to retire, but before he did so he wished to be allowed to say that he had heard it whispered that he had brought the matter forward in somewhat of an inimical spirit to the Secretaries of the Institutions. Now he begged to say that he had not the slightest feeling in the matter. So little was his feeling on the subject, that he had not interfered in the proceedings of the Institution for nearly twelve years, and he should not have taken the step he had recently adopted but for the alteration in the laws of the Institutions which had been recently made. They had altered one portion of the rules, and he thought he was fully justified in the course which he had proposed to pursue considering that the committee of one of the Institutions had fixed the security to be given by the Collector at £500, and that that security was taken from the Guarantee Society.

The Chairman said it had occurred to him, though he did not know whether it had occurred to Bro. Warren, that it would be desirable that the General Committee should have the power of varying the amount of the security from time to time by giving notice. If it was fixed by the laws it could not be altered without giving notice of motion for one of the Courts, where the brethren would have the opportunity of discussing and considering it fairly and fully. But the General Committee had the appointment of the officers, and it appeared to him that if the law was altered at all it should be left to the General Committee to fix the amount of the security.

Bro. H. G. Warren said that was exactly the object he had in view in saying in his notice of motion that it should be fixed at such sum as might be determined by the committee.

Bro. Jesse Turner said that he was about to remark that at present they had no power to grapple with this question, and that if it was done at all it must be by an alteration in the law. He quite agreed with what had been said by the Chairman.

Bro. Binckes said that with reference to what Bro. Warren had said, as to hearing it whispered that he had a feeling inimical to the Secretaries of the Institution, he (Bro. Binckes) had never mentioned such a thing in any shape or way.

Bro. Warren said he was quite sure of that, and he never intended to intimate that Bro. Binckes had said such a thing. He had heard it, however, in other quarters.

Bro. Dr. Ramsay then referred to the proposal to enlarge the school, and moved "That it be an instruction to the General Committee from the Quarterly Court to consider the propriety of convening a Special General Court of the Institution, at which their report on the enlargement of the Institution directed by the last Quarterly Court, together with the Architect's report and plans and detailed statement of expenditure may be fully and fairly considered." It appeared to him to be a matter of considerable moment that it should not be carried out in a hurried manner, but carefully and properly digested. Entertaining that view he proposed his motion.

Bro. Binckes said there was no motion before the court.

Bro. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford observed that Bro. Binckes had on a former occasion stated that it was within the power of the court to deal with the question and move "an instruction." Here was a speech of his reported in the Freemason, in which he said that if the report was received an instruction would be moved to the Court and to the General Committee that they should advertise for plans. The report had been read for information, as presented to the General Committee, through whom it was to be sent to the Quarterly Court, and, therefore, now equally an instruction to General Committee could be moved.

The Chairman said the report was referred to but not read. (No, no.)

Bro. Binckes informed the court that the resolution come to by the General Committee was to postpone the discussion of the report to the next meeting of the General Committee; therefore it did not come to this Quarterly Court at all.

The Chairman said that although the report to the House Committee was not read, a reference was made to it as being before the General Committee, and he thought Dr. Ramsay was in order in moving what he had moved. The report was ready. This Court, at its last meeting, referred it to the House Committee to consider and report on the subject of the enlargement of the School. The House Committee, therefore, if they had been quite ready, should have reported to-day. They reported, however, to the General Committee, and the General Committee thought they should take time for further consideration. That being so it did not come before the Court to-day, but he thought it was quite competent, nevertheless, for Dr. Ramsay to move an instruction to the General Committee to consider the propriety of convening a Special Court to consider the report.

The Rev. A. F. A. Woodford seconded Dr. Ramsay's motion, because he thought they would all agree that the matter was of very great moment to the Institution. They all, as he believed, in that room—he did not think there was a brother present who did not desire to increase and support the efficiency of the Boys' School. But it must appear to them, after the discussion that had taken place, that the whole matter required the most careful, thoughtful and dispassionate consideration. They had before them a statement which had gone throughout the length and breadth of the Craft, that certain plans had been before the House Committee; and that a certain estimate of expenditure had been made. Without going further into that matter to-day, they were surely justified in pressing upon the General Committee the desirability of considering carefully those details before bringing them to the Quarterly Court, and a Special Court was certainly the best place to discuss them, where every one might be fairly heard, and the whole matter put in shipshape, with detailed items of expenditure, instead of a bald general statement, which to his mind told them nothing whatever. When they had it all before them, they might say whether they were in a position to increase the school, whether it was advisable to increase the School at all, and how best they should do it if it was advisable or necessary to do it. On these grounds he begged to second the proposal of Dr. Ramsay.

Dr. Ramsay then proceeded to put his motion in writing. While doing so,

Bro. S. Rawson said he should like in the meantime to bring a matter forward for the opinion of the Court, though he was not going to propose a resolution. It was discussed by the Scrutineers of the votes in the Girls' School on Saturday what should be the course adopted in the Secretaries' offices with regard to voting papers which were sent to them to be presented. He (Bro. Rawson) maintained that if sent to the Secretaries' offices they were there as if at other Secretaries' offices, or at a Post Office, and that those voting papers should be sent in to the Chairman of the meeting as any other paper. He found that the Secretaries considered it their duty (he did not blame them for their zeal), if those voting papers were not in order, to take the trouble of sending them back to the brother who sent them, for correction. His point was that in that they were not doing justice to those who did not take the course of sending their proxies to the Secretaries' offices. He thought that all the proxies should be treated alike; they should not be corrected by any official. He did not know whether the brethren were aware that at every election several votes were lost through the irregularities which occurred in filling up the proxies. On Saturday there were as many as 55 papers rejected. Therefore those 55 did not have fair justice done to them if another 55, taking advantage of the kindness of the Secretaries, were sent to the Secretaries' offices for correction. He therefore wished for an expression of the opinion of the Court whether the Secretaries of the Institutions were justified in amending the proxy paper. As he pointed out to the Secretaries on Saturday evening, if such a course was allowed as the proper course they would have everybody desirous for his own safety sending his voting paper to the Secretary. He had no motion to make, but if the brethren present would give their opinion upon the subject he was quite confident the Secretaries would be guided in the future by that expression of opinion.

Bro. Binckes said he should like to state the case out of which this question arose. At the Scrutineers' meeting on Saturday a conversation turned upon the various irregularities that occurred in connection with the filling up of the voting papers, and he adduced the case of a brother at Tunbridge Wells, a Past Grand Officer of Kent, and liberal subscriber to the Institutions, who had sent to him (Bro. Binckes) a proxy to be handed in. Looking at this paper, which came to him with a letter asking him to poll the paper, he saw that the paper was improperly filled up. He said to himself that here was a brother, the donor of fifty guineas, virtually disfranchised through an error, and he thought it his duty absolutely to give the brother a chance of correcting it. He put it in this way: They knew there were constantly complaints at the elections made on the Scrutineers' return being given that a less number had been polled in certain cases than the number sent in. A correction was voted, and an explanation was given that a paper had been vitiated by being improperly filled up. What would have been the case with Bro. Sopwith if he (Bro. Binckes) had not given him the opportunity of correcting his mistake? He would have been disfranchised because he (Bro. Binckes) had not had the courtesy to tell him of the error he had committed, there being time for it. The consequence was he got a letter from Bro. Sopwith, enclosing the proxy corrected, and thanking him for what he had done. He (Bro. Binckes) thought that anyone in his position, probably having a paper sent to him to be polled, and in such a state that it could not be passed by the Scrutineers, would do no more than was his duty in sending it back for correction.

Col. Somerville-Burney said it was very seldom he disagreed with Bro. Rawson, but he was sorry to say he must do so on this occasion, for he did think that, knowing as he did the great difficulty there was in getting brethren to fill up their voting papers properly, and the extraordinary—he would call it nothing but stupidity of people well informed on other points—where anybody saw a paper improperly filled up, it was only fraternal and only right to return it and give the voter the opportunity of correcting it.

Bro. Binckes said there was a wonderful difference between him or any other Secretary correcting a paper himself, and sending it back to the donor to correct it.

Bro. S. Rawson said it would come to this, he would never deliver a voting paper in to the Chairman himself, all of his and his friends should be sent to the Secretary.

Bro. Henry Smith did not agree with Bro. Rawson in the slightest degree. He was quite satisfied with the course which had been followed by the Secretary, and he hoped it would prevail at all the institutions, as where an error could be corrected it should be. He should not send his votes to the Secretary, but, if necessary, he should hand them in himself.

Bro. Jesse Turner rose on a point of order. It appeared to him that the Chairman was receiving a motion on a matter which was sub judice. The report being before the committee, he could not, for the life of him, conceive why the motion was made. The committee might bring up a report to the court which was so perfect and complete that it might be suitable for acceptance and meet the wish of every one. This motion instead of doing good might do harm, by tying the hands of the committee.

The Chairman said (after reading the motion), that he did not see why it could not be put, as it did not deal with the report. The Committee presented a report in obedience to the last Quarterly Court. The motion was that an instruction should be given to the General Committee to consider it, so that it might not be handed over to be considered by the usual Quarterly Court. The motion was merely an instruction to the Committee as to the mode in which they should present the report.

Bro. A. Durrant said the matter was really in the hands of the General Committee, and was out of the hands of the House Committee. What took place at the last meeting of the General Committee was the consideration of the report deferred. The matter was now out of the hands of the House Committee.

The Chairman said that he must be allowed to call the attention of the brethren to the fact that in this instance the last Quarterly Court constituted the House Committee as the tribunal to make the report to itself (the Quarterly Court). It was as an act of great courtesy, and a very proper thing to do to bring that report before the General Committee. They were not bound to do so, because it was a reference from the Quarterly Court to the House Committee; therefore they were bound ultimately, whatever they might do in the interim, to make the report to a General Court.

Several brethren said the report was to be made through the General Committee.

Bro. Binckes read the minutes of the Quarterly Court bearing on the point, and it appeared that the terms of the original motion were that the report was to be made by the House Committee, "through the General Committee, to the Quarterly Court." The General Committee had deferred its consideration of the report, so that it was not now before this Court at all.

The motion of Dr. Ramsay, seconded by the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, was then put, and carried without a dissentient voice.

Bro. Binckes said he had been authorised by Bro. J. B. Monckton, the President of the Board of General Purposes, to bring to the notice of the Court that on Saturday, the 5th of May, there would be an amateur performance at the Opera Comique under the immediate patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, on behalf of two of the institutions of the Order. Applications for tickets might be at once made at the Opera Comique. Bro. Monckton had guaranteed 100 guineas to this Institution, and 100 guineas to the Girls' School, as the proceeds of this performance.

Bro. Biggs wished to draw a matter to the attention of the brethren, all of whom he knew took a great interest not only in the Institution, but in the boys educated within its walls. Bro. Binckes had read from the minutes that an outfit of five guineas had been granted to George Dodswell. That boy was now out in the cold for want of a situation. If any brother had a berth he could offer him and would communicate with him (Bro. Biggs) he should be glad to receive such communication.

The brethren then proceeded with the election of 13 boys out of an approved list of 59 candidates. A list of the successful and unsuccessful candidates will be found on page 157.

A fourteenth boy having polled the same number of votes as the thirteenth, by resolution of the Court both were declared to be elected.

The proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the Scrutineers and the Chairman of the day.

Bro. the Right Hon. the Marquis of Hartington, R.W.P.G.M. Derbyshire, has kindly promised to take the chair at the Anniversary dinner of the Newspaper Press Fund, which will be held at Willis's Rooms on the 5th prox.

It is with sincere regret we announce the death of Bro. Montagu Scott, of Gray's Inn Square, which sad circumstance occurred on Saturday last. We hope to give a short obituary in our next.

Masonic and General Tidings.

Her Majesty the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice, and attended by the lords and ladies of the Court, is expected to leave Osborne and return to Windsor Castle about the close of this or in the course of next week. Arrangements, it is understood, had been made for the reception of the Queen at Windsor on Thursday or Friday last, but it is now believed that Her Majesty will not proceed to the Castle so soon as was at first anticipated.

At Windsor, on Saturday, the 20th birthday of her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice, youngest daughter of the Queen, was celebrated with considerable rejoicings. Early in the morning, add at intervals during the day, the bells of the Chapel Royal, of St. George and St. John's Churches pealed merrily, and salutes of 21 guns were fired from the artillery in the Long Walk, Windsor-park, also from Fort Belvedere and the Royal Adelaide frigate, Virginia Water.

The consecration of the Ancient Briton Lodge, No. 1675, took place at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on Monday last, the 16th inst., the ceremony being performed by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary West Lancashire. A report of the proceedings will be given in our next issue.

The Duke of Connaught Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 190, will be consecrated on Friday, the 27th inst., at the Havlock Hotel, Albion-st., Dalston; by the V.W. Bro. Frederick Binckes, G.S. Bro. J. B. Shackleton, P.G.D.C. Middlesex and Surrey, being the W.M. designate.

The many admirers of Mr. Joseph Hatton will be pleased to know that he is writing a new novel "The Queen of Bohemia," which will commence in the May number of the Charing Cross Magazine.

METROPOLITAN LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 1056.—The Fifteen Sections will be worked by the members of this lodge of instruction at the Portugal Hotel, 155, Fleet-street, E.C., on Friday, the 25th May, 1877, commencing at six o'clock in the evening, Bro. C. A. Woods, W.S. 145, in the chair.

A warrant has, within the last few days, been granted for a new lodge, to be called the Henry Muggeridge, No. 1679, to meet at the Prince George, Park-road, Dalston. The officers designate are Bros. Henry Muggeridge, W.M., P.M. Panmure Lodge, No. 715; Francis Fellows, S.W. Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 192; and E. F. Storr, J.W., W.M. Neptune Lodge, No. 22. The days of meeting have been fixed for the fourth Saturday in every alternate month commencing in May.

FREEMASONRY IN GERMANY. — A Reuter's telegram from Berlin, dated April 12th, says:—"The assertion that Herr von Dachröden, the Master of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Prussia (Grosse Landesloge), who is at Rome, had become a convert to Roman Catholicism, is declared by his deputy in office, Herr Gaartz, on the authority of a telegram received by him from Herr von Dachröden, to be an infamous falsehood."

"NATIONAL HOSPITAL FOR DISEASES OF THE HEART AND PARALYSIS, SOHO-SQUARE, W."—To meet the heavy expenses consequent on repairs necessary to the building on termination of present lease, and to afford more space for in and out patients, a bazaar (under distinguished patronage) will be held on the 15th, 16th, and 17th of next month at the hospital, where contributions of fancy goods, etc., etc., will be thankfully received by the committee. A band will be in attendance daily. On the first day a grand vocal and instrumental concert will be given.

We have received the prospectus of the Masonic Building and Investment Society (Limited), which is to be established for the purpose of affording to "Freemasons, their wives and families," all the advantages of a Land Building and Investment Society; and this class of security has so far improved within the last few years, as to claim the support of the Masonic world. A special feature, amongst others, of this Society will consist of a fund called the "Masonic Relief Fund," by which, at the discretion of the directors, certain sums will be devoted annually to "assist the wives and children of deceased brother Masons who may be in distress." Masons, their wives and families only admitted as members of the Society, whereby the institution will become absolutely "Masonic." A general meeting will be held at an early date, and all brothers desirous of joining and assisting in the progress of the institution, will oblige by sending their names and addresses as early as possible, so that they may be invited to attend the meeting to discuss the prospects of the Society. Masons desirous of promoting the interests of this Society, will oblige by communicating with Bro. A. G. Newton, Managing Director at the office, 4, Thavies Inn, Holborn, W.C.

THE SCOTTISH FREEMASON. — If there is anything our brethren in the land of cakes need more than another, it is the benefit of a free press intelligently devoted to the interests of the Craft and determined to break the shell of exclusiveness in which they have heretofore lived. We are glad, therefore, to see that a fortnightly Masonic journal has been started in Glasgow, and that it opens with fair promise of usefulness. We have placed it on our list, and shall be glad to know of its complete success.—New York Dispatch.

James Henry Batley being returned a successful candidate at the boys' election on the 16th inst., the mother and friends beg to return their grateful thanks to all who gave their votes to him, the more especially to Bros. Raynham W. Stewart, and Leopold Ref, for their kind and indefatigable exertions at the election, and to Bros. George Kenning and C. Burmeister, for their interest.

THE MOVEMENTS OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales arrived in Paris on Thursday week, attended by Lord Suffield and Mr. Knollys, and alighted at the Hôtel Bristol, intending to remain a few days. The Prince made the most rapid journey on record between London and Paris. The time occupied was seven hours and three-quarters, including stoppages at Folkestone and Amiens, but exclusive of an hour and a half at Boulogne for supper and rest. The Prince exchanged visits in Paris with Marshal MacMahon, received Prince Orloff, and had a long interview with M. Krantz, the French Commissary-General of the coming Universal Exhibition. His Royal Highness has since gone on to Cannes. He left Paris at 7.15 on the evening of the 15th for Nice. His Royal Highness is in good health.

LAST QUARTERLY COURT OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

At the meeting on Monday a very wise "instruction" was carried unanimously to the General Committee, namely, to consider the propriety of convening a Special General Court for the purpose of fully and carefully dealing with the report of the House Committee, when ready (be it what eventually it may), with reference to increased accommodation at the Boys' School, as well as the Architect's report, and a statement of the proposed expenditure in detail. Such, we apprehend, is the proper way of proceeding, and one most likely to please all parties. At the Special Court the various conflicting views and opinions can be patiently heard. Those who wish to increase the school at once can receive all attention, when they open out the stern necessities of the case. Those who wish to leave "well alone," or the school in "statu quo," will also be respectfully listened to, while those who may wish for the present to run in, so to say, between the two schemes, on the old adage, "medio tutissimus ibis," will also have an opportunity of clearly expressing their opinion. By this judicious determination of the Quarterly Court, anything like hurry or incompleteness will be avoided, and we shall be able to approach the subject with that calmness of consideration and clearness of vision which the interests of the Institution and the feelings of the Craft generally alike demand at our hands. The matter, as Bro. Dr. Ramsay well said, is a most important one for the best interests of the school, and the sooner, after due notice, that the whole matter is brought "ship shape" before the subscribers in a Special Court, the better, we venture to think, it will be for all concerned.

THE CITY GUILDS.

Friendly as we are to all measures tending to social improvement and educational extension, we cannot sympathise, as Freemasons, in that attack on the "Guilds" which has been for some time carried on and culminated in a recent discussion in the House of Commons, for we venture to conceive that this attempt to interfere with the management and expenditure of the Guilds of the City of London is alike archæologically, and legally, and equitably, untenable. Archæologically it is quite clear, without any possible controversy, that the Guilds of London, as elsewhere, are voluntary associations, supported by the contributions of the members, not in any way endowed by the Crown or the municipality—simply a sodality of citizens, for the purposes of trade, mutual assistance, craft handiwork, religious usages. If they were incorporated by royal charters, as Guilds in all times have been, even from Anglo-Saxon times, it was simply because otherwise they could not hold landed property, be sued or sue, or have a common seal. No doubt in the time of Richard II., the Parliament ordered a return of all the Guilds to be made, and many hundreds of these returns then made still may be found in the archives of the Record Office. The Guilds generally were, as it is known, suppressed in the reigns of Henry VIII., 37 Henry VIII., and also by 1 Edward VI., c. 14, the London Companies escaping as trading Guilds. When, then, it is said that the London Guilds own lands without the payment of any duties to the Government, it must be remembered that in the reign of James I., all, we believe, of the City Guilds, as appears from the records in the State Paper Office, paid a composition to the Crown for all lands which could in any way be supposed to have been left for what were termed "superstitious uses." The simple fact as against the City Companies appears to be that they exist, and are rich, or as Mr. Pease ingeniously and ingeniously puts it, their property is three-fold "known, semi-known, and unknown," therefore, according to the oriental logic of the day they must be "squeezed." As the Solicitor General well contends for all sums left for charitable purposes they are responsible to law; for the money left by private members of the Guild they are not bound to give account unless so ordered by an express Act of the Legislature. The Times places the matter very truly and logically before us, when it says: "These institutions appeal directly to some of the strongest influences and traditions of English life. They combine some of the characteristics of Clubs, Benefit Societies, Trade Societies, Charitable Associations, and municipal organizations. All these characters were claimed for them or imputed to them in the course of the debate, and with some degree of propriety. They do not fall with exactness under any one of such descriptions, and they differ widely among each other. But in the lapse of long centuries they have assumed one function after another, and they rest on a corresponding range of the most varied interests. Their property is held by some of the oldest tenures in the country, and long traditions at once determine and sanction the manner in which it is employed." Most clear too, is the argument which follows: "The property of the Companies is really of two kinds. There is one class of it which has been bequeathed or bestowed for charitable purposes. This constitutes, strictly speaking, their trust property, and it is to be borne in mind that in respect to its administration the Companies are already under the control and supervision of the law. Their fulfilment of such trusts can be tested at any time, and they can be compelled to give an account of it. But another large portion of their funds was given, beyond question, for purposes entirely confined to the interests or even to the pleasures of the members. A sum, for instance, of £20,000 was left to one Company in order that the members might "make themselves comfortable." Of course it is open to any one to be of opinion that they might have been left for a more useful purpose: but, supposing it had been left to one individual for the same object, neither Parliament nor the law could interfere, and it is hard to see how the case is altered by the fact of the money being left to a number of individuals." We shall all agree with the following neat little bit of argument, ad hominem: "What could be more natural or more reasonable than that it should become a kind of ambition for a man to leave to his Company the means of maintaining such friendly intercourse and of exhibiting the hospitality associated with it? Money left for this purpose can no more be claimed as public property than the funds of the great Clubs in Pall-mall. Of course, if a positively injurious use were made of it, the Legislature would have the same right to interfere for the protection of the public as it has in respect to all other kinds of property. But the injury done must be a definite and unmistakable matter of fact, and not a mere opinion that all the good is not done with the money that might be done." As for the argument that the Companies spend too much on eating and drinking, and too little on public improvements, as one of their duties is "hospitality," there can be no question that they are quite right in carrying out the Scriptural precept, and some of their incriminators may well remember the admonition of "not grudging" a legitimate and munificent hospitality. We quite agree with another remark:

—“At any rate, the Companies have a right to resent the presumption that they make such a selfish and unjust use of their property as the motion supposed. Rogues and swindlers are no more numerous among the members of these Companies than elsewhere; and there will never be lacking plenty of honest men to see that the funds of their Company, whether intended for charitable or social purposes, are duly applied.” We believe that the City Companies, like most Englishmen, fully recognise the duties and responsibilities of an important “cestuique trust,” and that we shall always find them most ready to co-operate in all matters that tend to advance the interests of education, to uphold the credit of the City, to preserve the great principle of local self-government, and to develop the proper regulation of these interesting and important Guilds.

RIDICULOUS EXCUSES.

The course of journalistic literature, like that of love, is not always a pathway of roses, does not, in fact, always “run smooth.” Few, perhaps, except those behind the scenes, know how many are the struggles of proprietors, publishers, and editors, and how wonderful in their abasement are that littleness of the human intellect, and that unworthiness of human nature, in thought and action, with which they are too often and too closely, for the matter of that, brought into contact. The most idle, the most petty, the most unfair excuses are often made by those who ought to know better, and act better, because they do not feel inclined to recognize the fair claims of that true support, and that kindly countenance which the press, whether Masonic or un-Masonic, has a right to ask at their hands. There are many, for instance, who profess the greatest interest in literary pursuits and studies. Hear them talk, “ore rotundo” (what a wonderful thing is the “gift of the gab,”) you would suppose that no more zealous, intelligent, self-sacrificing patrons of literature can be found than those who speak so nobly and so well. But, wait a bit. Ask them for personal aid—that is a subscription for value received, (90 per cent, in fact, ad valorem, if you like), and what is the reply too often, but the cold shoulder, complete silence? Many a prosperous little literary venture goes down, (some will say not improperly because if it does not succeed it is not wanted), because Higgins, and Stiggins, and Jiggins, great in praise of literature, per se, do not like to pay, whether for results or non-results. We have been led into these remarks by complaints which come before us frequently, and principally in the American Masonic periodicals. In that great brotherhood of over 600,000 members, the position of the Masonic press, for instance, especially appears to us to be unprecedented and inexplicable. Indeed, we shall be greatly obliged to any American correspondent who will try to let in a little light on so dark a subject. In America Masonic literature, even that of a high order, seems to be alike most precarious in its position, and most uncertain in its conditions. It is supported largely to-day, it is given up without a struggle to-morrow; and we read constantly the calm yet almost despairing avowal from publishers that they cannot naturally afford to lose their time and give their paper gratis, and we listen to excuses for non-support also, which appear to us alike most conflicting and most un-Masonic. There is no doubt an amusing side to the entire question, What is the density of the “Excusing Mind,” and the absurdity of the excuses given. Indeed, the latter are so puerile and so ridiculous as to become even amusing from their utter want of appreciation, either of the value of Masonic literature per se, or of the important question at issue. We quote the following choice little extract from an American contemporary, partly a newspaper and partly a magazine. “A country editor received the following: ‘Dear Sir,—I have looked carefully and patiently over your paper for months for the death of some individual I was acquainted with, but as yet not a single soul I care anything about has dropped off; you will please to have my name erased.’” This may be a good joke, but it contains a useful moral. For this is about the staple of the value of excuses for non-support or discontinuance, which Masonic and non-Masonic publishers and editors often receive, and serves to afford us a laughable and amusing commentary on the “high falutin” of talkative “dilettanti,” and the utter unreality too often of mere profession. The Freemason has happily but few complaints to make, and finds itself warmly supported by a larger and more zealous clientele than at any period of its existence. But it is well for us all to bear in mind what is often going on around us, close to our own doors, of which we may be utterly ignorant, and to express for others that sympathy, though we need it not ourselves, which in the great struggle of life is due from all like ourselves, who are sensible of the claims and wants, the difficulties and drawbacks, the condition and progress of journalistic literature. There is as we before observed, no doubt another side to the whole question, which we may be tempted to advert to in an early issue.

WAR OR PEACE.

As we write these lines these two great alternatives appear to be trembling in the balance. The clouds of contention are hovering over, and the dogs of war seem ready to be loosed, on patient and agitated Europe, and when we next greet our readers it is not beyond the bounds of possibility even that the fell influences of war will have overthrown the smiling hopes and happier influences of peace. As Freemasons we cannot but deplore that war, with its devastating horrors and destructive cruelties, shall be allowed to usurp the more beneficent and blessed regime of kindly and fraternal peace. War is objectionable “per se,” on account of the hateful feelings it invokes, and the cruel bloodshed it sanctions, the deeds of rapine, horror, brutality, which are its inevitable accompaniment. No doubt a defensive war is a justifiable necessity, just as a patriotic and honourable war may be a painful but an unavoidable duty, but as a general rule, and it is of that we are now speaking, all war is, “qua-war,” to be avoided, except as a “dernier ressort.” In our humble opinion no war can be justified, “foro conscientie,” which is not carried on either as a defensive or a patriotic war. If Russia and Turkey commence hostilities, as now appears to be most likely, it is difficult to see or say where it will end, or who may and will be eventually drawn in to it, what complications may ensue, or what disorders may fall on suffering Europe. As Freemasons our only wish can be that somehow peace may be preserved, and that by honourable concessions and a mutual understanding, Europe may yet be spared the sights and the horrors, and the cruel consequences of war.—So mote it be.

RECEIPT STAMP DUTY ON LODGE DUES.

To the Editor of the “Freemason.”

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With some degree of diffidence, and after considerable hesitation, I have arrived at the conclusion that the construction of the Stamp Act, 1870, by the Secretary of the Inland Revenue department, cited by Bro. Snowden, P.M., in your impression of the 10th ult., is correct, and that, therefore, written receipts for lodge dues, exceeding forty shillings in amount, require the penny stamp, impressed or adhesive.

Let us examine the language of the latest, and therefore now the governing, statute: 33 and 34 Vict., cap. 97; sec. 120, defining the statutory meaning of the word “receipt,” says:

“The term ‘receipt’ means and includes

(a) “Any note, memorandum or writing whatsoever whereby any money amounting to two pounds or upwards, or any bill of exchange or promissory note for money amounting to two pounds or upwards, is acknowledged or expressed to have been received, or deposited, or paid; or (b) "Whereby any debt or demand of the amount of two pounds or upwards is acknowledged to have been settled, satisfied, or discharged, or which signifies or imports any such acknowledgment, and whether the same is or is not signed with the name of any person."

If the reader has kindly attended to the division I have above attempted to render obvious, he will see that the legislature apparently intended to provide for two descriptions of payment, or deposit, of money, (a) voluntary disbursements, (b) satisfaction of legal obligations, and to attach, with certain limits, payment of a revenue duty to both.

Now, I suppose, it will be conceded—at all events, I must assume—that with the second class (b) we have nothing at present to do. Lest, however, it should be thought that I seek, by a mere cursory reference, to evade the examination of the question, whether a debt due for dues payable to a Masonic lodge constitutes a legal obligation, I may as well warn the reader that at a later period of this letter, I propose, as an inevitable corollary to my general argument, to bestow a little consideration upon this very delicate subject. At present I have to ascertain whether, assuming payment of lodge dues to be wholly voluntary, a duty to the revenue attaches when the amount paid is above forty shillings.

Now, to clear the ground as we go on, I presume that every brother, certainly every legal brother, will agree with me that the duty is not chargeable upon the payment per se, i.e., upon the act or fact of disbursement. It is clearly only payable upon the written voucher, and, if I read the first part of the above section correctly, payable upon that documentary evidence of the amount having been paid, without reference to the object for which the payment is made. Concede that the payment of dues to a lodge is wholly for the purposes of charity—a large concession by the way—prima facie there is no intrinsic necessity for taking written receipts at all for money disbursed for the purposes of charitable relief; there is obviously no obligation to give a documentary voucher for the payment unless the donor requires one, but, the recipient electing as an evidence of his good faith to give, rather than to refrain from giving, a written receipt, or, the donor requiring for his own purposes the delivery of such a document, or, putting the case in other words, making his donation conditional on a written voucher being furnished to him, the transaction would appear by the delivery of the instrument to be brought within the provisions of the statute, and the duty therefore to attach.

The Act of Parliament, however, imposing the duty definitively, provides certain exemptions from liability. Starting from my point of view, that the charge is upon the document evidencing, and not upon the manual act evidenced, a claim to exemption must be expressly brought within the category thus specially detailed, or within the general exemptions from liability to stamp duty. The former will be found in Tillsley's Treatise on the Stamp Laws (3rd edition, 1871), page 523; the latter in the same work, page 531.

And before I allude further to these exemptions—reminding my readers that the legal practitioner is trained to make every word of a statute speak, i.e., to give to each expression a meaning—to attribute to the employment of every phrase a well considered and earnest intention, either to enact directly, or by illustration, or analogy, to remove doubts as to the general object of the legislation essayed—I would call attention to the use of the word "deposited" in the section I have quoted above. It is obvious from that word that a voluntary bailment of money—a depositum to the bailor's own use—will come within the liability to duty unless that liability be displaced by an express proviso or the general law of exemption; and this is proved by the statute, in its schedule, in the very first exemption (No. 1) under the heading "Receipt," exempting from liability to the duty moneys deposited with a banker; q. e. d., all other voluntary deposits and à fortiori voluntary payments exceeding the statutory amount are liable. I readily admit a certain amount of plausibility in the letter in your last impression of W.M., No. 766, but of course no amount of plausible argument will prevail against the express words of a statute. His inference from the exemption of building societies fails, because, as I shall proceed to show, those institutions enjoy a specific statutory exemption, while his argument as to the non-liability of a receipt for a deposit seems to have been specifically answered by anticipation, by the employment of the word "deposited" in the first paragraph of the section cited above.

Par parenthèse, I may observe that there is a widely spread delusion that inasmuch as a cheque bears a penny stamp the receipt for a payment of more than 40s. made by cheque is exempt from receipt stamp duty, the penny having been already paid. There was formerly some colour for this impression, for before 1870 an exemption statutorily relieved "Receipts or discharges written upon promissory notes, bills of exchange, drafts, or orders for the payment of money duly stamped according to the laws in force at the date thereof, or upon bills of exchange drawn out of, but payable in, Great Britain or Ireland respectively." But by the act of 1870, cited above, the exemption, by what I venture to think must be regarded as an explanatory or declaratory rather than a restricting or amending enactment, is defined to extend only to a "receipt written upon a bill of exchange or promissory note duly stamped." The exposition thus hazarded may not be without its use to those lodges where considerable payments are usually made by cheques or drafts payable to order or bearer.

* Of course the italic initials, and the other italics, are my own, and for the punctuation the Parliamentary printer is responsible, acts not being punctuated in their engrossment on the Parliamentary roll any more than the printed pleadings delivered in legal actions, or other legal instruments.

To return to the exemptions. No other class interests us, or can be even remotely suggested as being analogous to Freemasons, than provident or friendly societies; but I need not occupy your space by a laboured endeavour to prove that Freemasons do not come within a category so strictly defined by statute as these voluntary associations. Some doubt is expressed in the editorial postscript to the letter of Bro. Richard Brown in your impression of the 31st ult. as to the exemption of friendly, provident, and building societies, and you courteously request information on the point. The Friendly Societies' Act (England), 18 and 19 Vict., cap. 63, sec. 37, (and see also secs. 2 and 5); the Industrial and Provident Societies' Act, 30 and 31 Vict., cap. 117, sec. 3, and the various acts relating to building societies, too numerous to be cited here, specifically provide these exemptions.

I conclude, then, that even were the dues entirely devoted to purposes of relief a written acknowledgment of their payment to an amount exceeding 40s. would, in each case, be liable, quid depositum, to the penny duty.

But are all the moneys so received devoted to the relief of distress? Of course, if my construction be correct, this is an immaterial question; but when Bro. Snowden quotes a view of the law which I, as I have said, believe to be erroneous, as held by a P.M., and goes on to say, "I am at a loss to understand upon what grounds such an opinion could be for one moment entertained by a P.M.," I am constrained to give some reasons why I do not share his expressed astonishment.

Now, a P.M. had two very plausible, very popular, and, as I have tried to prove, two very inaccurate views to rely upon in justification of his contention:—

Firstly. That documents purporting to be receipts for money given in charity were not liable to stamp duty.

Secondly. That documents purporting to be receipts for money not legally recoverable were not so liable.

I have, I think, almost conclusively dealt with the first view, but I must for a moment, in connection with this, bark back to my query—Are all the moneys received as dues devoted to the relief of distress? Roughly—mentally—analyse, say, an annual subscription of five guineas paid to a lodge, the brethren of which like to enjoy themselves, deduct from the sum the proportion payable for the brother as his share of the working and the convivial disbursements of the lodge, would not the charity-devoted residuum in the vast majority of cases be a sum over which no controversy could arise, inasmuch as it would be considerably beneath the statutorily chargeable forty shillings? And here let me protest that I intend no sneer at the propensities to social enjoyment credited or debited to the members of the Craft. God forbid! The proportion of the revenue of an ordinary lodge devoted to charity must necessarily, in the vast majority of instances, be considerably less than the amount directly allotted to ordinary lodge expenses—the very nature of the organisation to render the body, as a philanthropic association, a machine equal to the performance of its duties, necessitates this result; but every one of my brethren will, I presume, readily endorse my view, that the direct amount contributed in each year out of the regular revenue of a lodge to our noble Charities bears but a small proportion to the stream of benevolence its influence evokes from the individual bounty of its members.

Well, then, if I am right, in the vast majority of instances, an immensely preponderating per centage of payments of lodge dues could not claim exemption from stamp duty on the ground of being devoted to objects of charity, even if that formed a legal ground of exemption, which, in my opinion, it does not; but try this by an extreme illustration. The very converse is the case with Grand Lodge. There the proportion of receipts applied to office and general expenses is conspicuously small, the amount devoted to relief overwhelmingly large; yet the authorities at Grand Lodge, with, what of course I consider to be, a sound view of their legal obligations, invariably affix a receipt stamp when they acknowledge payment of a sum above forty shillings.

I have, I am afraid, very nearly exhausted the whole of the space I can in decency ask you to allow me, and I have still greater fear than I have of your individual indulgence of having exhausted the patience of my wearied readers. However, I must just touch upon the above "secondly," the assumed non-liability to stamp duty of receipts for the payment of money not legally recoverable.

In a case cited in Tillsley's work, referred to above, at pages 119 and 435, and the same reference given in the note at each page, the learned author states a judicial decision, that a receipt stamp was not required on a document which did not purport to be an acknowledgment of the payment of "an antecedent debt." It is, however, never safe to adopt the conclusion from any case of an author, however learned, without referring to the report itself, and as in this instance I have spent many hours in vainly trying to find "Carey v. Eccleston" from the unknown and inexplicable reference "1 C. & D.," I am compelled to pass by this authority, which, if it says all the author maintains it affirms, and if—a very large "if"—it has been decided since the statute of 1870, might render necessary a reconsideration of much that I have written above. Familiar as I am, however, with most of our reports, as they must necessarily be in use with me every day, and industriously as I have searched; those learned reporters "C. & D." yet remain to me alphabetical characters "et præterea nihil," and the judicial wisdom of "Carey v. Eccleston" is, notwithstanding the digests, hidden from my prying eyes. If I come across it hereafter I will inflict upon your readers, if necessary, my view of how much, if at all, it qualifies the position I have attempted to take up.

As at present but partially enlightened, however, we must, I fear, face the vetatio questio: Is the initiation fee, the subscription to a lodge, a debt legally recoverable? This point was argued out before the learned judge of the Westminster County Court, than whom a sounder lawyer does not adorn the minor judicial bench, on the 10th of October last, and the report, reprinted from the Sunday Times, appeared in your impression of the 28th of that month. The able judge (Bayly, Q.C.) decided that a member of a Masonic lodge did not by being initiated and joining (à fortiori by joining only) contract any legal obligation for fees and dues, and I confess I think that he was right. My learned friend, Mr. Stone, ably endeavoured to make use of the Judicature Act, 1875, Order XVI., rule 9, and the analogous provisions of the Consolidated County Court Orders, Order V., rule 8, but these would only technically have helped him, by enabling him to substitute a personal entity for an abstract party, whereas I think that upon the merits he had no case, that is to say, no contract with any party could be proved, and that the real cause of the defeat of the plaintiff was, therefore, the exact converse of that stated in the letter of the Master of the Hervey Lodge, appearing in your columns of the 11th November last. I have looked into my learned friend's authority, "Pollock on Contracts," and, so far as I have had time to examine that author's views, taking it fairly and with the context, it appears to me to be rather against Mr. Stone's contention. And here let me, I think justifiably, complain of the slovenly reporting of the original reporter (you, of course, are blameless, as, as you are aware, you merely transcribed from a contemporary). The case cited as "Ruget v. Bishop," with such a preposterous reference as "Law Reports 733," should be "Raggett v. Bishop," and the correct reference is 2 Car and Payne 343, while the reference to Pollock, printed 795, I find should be 595. In the admirable work of the latter author, however, the whole subject of the liability of members of voluntary associations is exhaustively treated at pages 195 to 210.

The matter is of importance, because it might be thought, though, for the reasons above urged, I do not well see how it can be, that receipt stamp duty only attaches to payments made in discharge of a legal liability, in which case it becomes, of course, an indispensable preliminary to enquire whether payments of Masonic dues are legally compulsory or not.

In conclusion, I readily own that my interpretation of the law may be unsound. When a much greater lawyer than ever I can hope to be was gravely informed that he had committed an error of construction, he composedly replied, "And I trust I may be spared to commit many more errors." I can only say that I shall be truly thankful to any brother who, differing from my view, will kindly through your columns set me, and those who think with me, right if we are wrong; and as this is not a case where a professional man should, under the veil of a nom de plume, however transparent, affect to conceal his identity, or seem to shrink from the consequences of his deliberately formed opinions, I do not write anonymously, but beg to subscribe myself,

Dear Sir and Brother, yours faithfully and fraternally,

THE INSTALLATION AT ABERDARE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you permit me to call your attention to an omission in your report last week of the above important event.

All the officers chosen by Sir George Elliot were mentioned, with the exception of Bro. John Jones, 833, who was re-elected Treasurer of Prov. Grand Lodge.

I am, yours fraternally, J. F. H.

ORGANIZATION OF CRAFT MASONRY IN ENGLAND.

The Craftsman quotes the following passage from that very interesting work, "Fort's Early History and Antiquities of Freemasonry":—

According to Findel, Freemasons were first organized as a Craft in England in the year 1202, at the building of Winchester Cathedral; but according to Fort, the English Craft was organized nearly a century earlier, in A.D. 1136, at the building of Melrose Abbey, by John Moreau. Forty years later William of Seas reconstructed Canterbury Cathedral in A.D. 1176. From the inscribed tablets on Melrose Abbey, it appears that John Moreau, or Motow, was the Master, perhaps the Grand Master, of all the Masonic work or lodges, at St. Andrew's, around the Cathedral of Glasgow, and at the churches of Paisley, Niddisdale and Galway.

But it is to be observed, first, that the "Winchester Guild" was only incorporated by Bishop Lucy, to aid in the work of Winchester Cathedral, and that the operative Masonic Guilds themselves were of earlier origin undoubtedly. Secondly, it would, I think, be more correct to say that Bishop Lucy's organization, mentioned by Milner, but of which the original charter has not been printed, though it may still exist in the muniment room of Winchester Cathedral, is first alluded to in "The Annales Wintonienses," published by Henry Wharton in the first volume of "Anglia Sacra," 1691.

The "Annales Wintonienses" are said to have been written by a monk of Winchester about 1454. He gives then, in 1454, the account of the formation in 1202 of a Winchester building fraternity or guild, a "confratrum pro reparatione ecclesie Winton." which was only to continue "duraturum usque ad quinque annos completos"—five years.

We still want evidence of an early operative guild charter; and which yet may turn up dating from Anglo-Saxon times.
A MASONIC STUDENT.

Can any brother recommend me a competent person (a brother if possible), to make a search for me among the chapter archives in Winchester Cathedral, and among the MSS. and books in Winchester College library.

A communication addressed to the Editor of the Freemason, 198, Fleet-street, London, will be at once attended to by

Review.

"THE ILLUSTRATED GUIDE FOR AMATEUR GARDENERS."
DANIELS BROTHERS, NORWICH.

We have looked over, and we may say, studied this very interesting catalogue, of an enterprising firm, with very great pleasure. It is alike suggestive and satisfactory, in the highest degree, clearly arranged, and full of most interesting information to the amateur and the professional gardener. We have been informed on reliable authority, that a recent order given to the firm has been most thoroughly executed, and the quality of the shipment made has been of the highest excellence. Under these circumstances, without going into details, which is impossible in our crowded columns, we can fairly recommend the circular of Messrs. Daniels to the notice of all who possess gardens, knowing that they will have their orders admirably executed, and have full value for their money, expended in respect of that very tempting outlay for trees and flowers, annuals and plants, shrubs and evergreens, pyramids and standards, flower garden and kitchen garden accessories, which so commends itself to those who know anything of the pleasure and happiness of a garden.

CONSECRATION OF THE PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE, No. 1689.

The above lodge was consecrated at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road, on Saturday, the 7th inst., by the V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D., Grand Secretary, the officer appointed by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the W.M. was installed by the V.W. Bro. R. C. Else, D.P.G.M. of Somerset.

The brethren assembled in the ante-room and walked in procession to the lodge room under the direction of R.W. Bro. Else, and the Presiding Officer took the chair, and appointed the Wardens pro tem.

The lodge having been opened in the Three Degrees, the Presiding Officer addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting, and called upon the Acting Secretary, Bro. Thos. Preston, to read the petition and warrant.

The brethren signified their approval in Masonic form of the officers named therein, and an oration on the nature and principles of the institution was given by the Chaplain, the Rev. J. H. Gandy, P.P.G.C.

The anthem "Beloved how good and joyful" was then sung by some of the brethren, and the lodge duly dedicated and consecrated in the usual manner.

The Presiding Officer then constituted the lodge, and the lodge was resumed in the Second Degree. Then came the installation of the W.M., and the following officers were appointed:

Bros. W. H. Thomas, S.W.; Thos. Edmondston, J.W.; Thomas Preston, Sec.; A. C. Bradley, S.D.; A. Woodcock, J.D.; T. Wilkins, I.G.; Edward Moody, P.M., Dir. of Cer.; H. G. Jarman, W.S.; and A. R. Crouch, Collecting Steward.

The ballot was taken for Treasurer, and Bro Dakers, P.M. and P.D.G.T. South Australia, unanimously elected. It was proposed and carried enthusiastically, that the R.W. Bro. His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, K.G., &c., &c., Prov. G.M. of Oxfordshire, having been graciously pleased to intimate his willingness to become an honorary member, be elected accordingly. The Consecrating and Installing Officers and the Chaplain were also elected honorary members, and the brethren adjourned to banquet.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Extract from "INDIAN ECONOMIST."

"We direct the attention of the medical men to a fact observed some years since by ourselves, and corroborated by our subsequent experience, that Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is in many cases of Low Fever immensely superior to Quinine in curative power. We cannot persuade ourselves that the true value of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne is yet properly appraised in India."

"It may be given with absolute safety even to a child three days old. Were medical men but to make a fair and exhaustive trial of it we are persuaded that it would work a revolution in the treatment of two-thirds of the diseases to which children are subject. Its curative power is simply amazing."

"Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila to the effect that Cholera had been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE."—See Lancet, Dec. 1, 1864.

From W. VESALIUS PETTIGREW, M.D., Hon. F.R.C.S., England,

Formerly Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology at St. George's School of Medicine.

"I have no hesitation in stating, after a fair trial of Chlorodyne, that I have never met with any medicine so efficacious as an Anti-Spasmotic and Sedative. I have tried it in Consumption, Asthma, Diarrhoea, and other diseases, and am most perfectly satisfied with the results."

From Dr. THOMAS SANDIFORD, Passage West, Cork.

"I will thank you to send me a further supply of Chlorodyne. It was the most efficacious remedy I ever used, affording relief to violent attacks of Spasms within a minute after being taken. One patient in particular, who has suffered for years with periodical attacks of Spasms of a most painful nature, and unable to obtain relief from other remedies, such as opium, &c., finds nothing so prompt and efficacious as Chlorodyne."

From JNO. E. GOULSTONE, M.D., late Principal Surgeon to the Steamship Great Eastern.

"I can confidently state that Chlorodyne is an admirable Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic, having used it in Neuralgia, Hysteria, Asthma, and Consumption, with remarkably favourable results. It relieved a fit of Asthma in four minutes, where the patient had suffered eleven years in a most distressing manner, no previous remedy having had so immediate and beneficial an effect."

From Dr. B. J. BOULTON and Co., Horncastle.

"We have made pretty extensive use of Chlorodyne in our practice lately, and look upon it as an excellent Sedative and Anti-Spasmotic. It seems to allay pain and irritation in whatever organ, and from whatever cause. It induces a feeling of comfort and quietude not obtainable by any other remedy, and it seems to possess this great advantage over all other sedatives, that it leaves no unpleasant after effects."

J. C. BAKER, Esq., M.D., Bideford.

"It is, without doubt, the most valuable and certain Anodyne we have."

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See "Times," 13th July, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each Bottle.

GRAND FESTIVAL.

The Grand Festival of Ancient and Accepted Masons of England was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Tavern. Before the Festival, Grand Lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, for the appointment and investiture of the Grand Officers for the ensuing year. Grand Lodge was very numerously attended, there being about 600 of the brethren present. The Most Worshipful the Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, was not present, he having recently gone to the East for the benefit of his health. His place, however, was occupied by the Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, who was supported on his right by the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and on his left by Dr. Hamilton, the District Grand Master of Jamaica. The Grand Officers of the year were in their places, viz., the Right Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, S.G.W.; the Hon. William Warren Vernon, J.G.W.; Rev. Robert Spencer Wigram, and Rev. Charles William Arnold, Grand Chaplains; Samuel Tomkins, Grand Treasurer; Eneas J. McIntyre, G.C., Grand Registrar; John B. Monckton, F.S.A., President of the Board of General Purposes; John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Ernest Emil Wendt, Grand Secretary for German Correspondence; Lieut.-Col. Thos. Birchall, and Thos. W. Boord, M.P., Senior Grand Deacons; Edward J. Barron, and J. March Cate, Junior Grand Deacons; F. P. Cockerell, Grand Superintendent of Works; Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter, P.G.W., Grand Director of Ceremonies; William Rhys Williams, M.D., Asst. Grand Director of Ceremonies; W. Francis Nettleship, Grand Sword Bearer; Wilhelm Kuhe, Grand Organist; E. P. Albert, Grand Pursuivant; S. G. Foxall, Asst. Grand Pursuivant; and C. B. Payne, Tyler. Among the other brethren present were the Earl of Shrewsbury, Lord Tenterden, Lord De Tabley, Captain Platt, James Gashier, the Rev. C. J. Martyn, the Rev. Sir J. W. Hayes, Thomas Fenn, S. Rawson, J. M. Clabon, Raynham W. Stewart, Major Shadwell Clerke, Capt. N. G. Phillips, Colonel Somerville-Burney, Ex-Sheriff Hutton, Cameron Churchill, P.M., P. Prov. G. Reg. Oxon. (Northern Bar Lodge); and H. Massey (Freemasonry).

Grand Lodge having been formally opened, Grand Secretary read the minutes of last Grand Lodge as far as related to the election of the M.W.G.M.

These having been put and confirmed,

Lord Carnarvon said: It is now my duty to proceed, in the name and place of His Royal Highness the Grand Master, to the appointment of the Grand Officers for the ensuing year. I have in the first instance to announce that H.R.H. has been graciously pleased to appoint me Pro Grand Master for the ensuing year. (Loud applause.) I have next to announce that H.R.H. has been pleased graciously to appoint my noble friend Lord Skelmersdale as Deputy Grand Master. (Renewed applause.) There is only one other point which I may take the opportunity of mentioning to Grand Lodge, and that is the regret which His Royal Highness the Grand Master feels at being unable to be present here to-day. He is unavoidably, as you are all aware, detained abroad at this moment. Brethren, there is yet one other point to which I wish to direct your attention. Grand Lodge is honoured to-day by the acceptance of the offices of Senior and Junior Grand Wardenship by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and His Royal Highness Prince Leopold. (Cheers.) I regret greatly, and Grand Lodge will regret equally, that neither of these two illustrious Princes can be here to receive the badges and symbols of the office which they have undertaken. The Duke of Connaught is in Ireland, and H.R.H. Prince Leopold, I am afraid, is at this moment suffering so much from indisposition that he is unable to attend; and therefore it will be necessary that they should receive the insignia of their office from the hands of some other brethren.

The customary salutes were then given to the Pro Grand Master, after which Lord Skelmersdale was re-invested and saluted as Deputy Grand Master. The Earl of Donoughmore and the Hon. W. Warren Vernon were then invested as proxies for the Duke of Connaught, S.G.W., and Prince Leopold as J.G.W.

The other brethren appointed and invested were Bros. the Rev. Charles W. Arnold and W. Lake Onslow, G. Chaplains; Samuel Tomkins, re-elected G. Treas.; E. J. McIntyre, G.C., re-appointed G. Reg.; John Hervey, re-appointed G. Sec.; E. E. Wendt, re-appointed G. Sec. for German Correspondence; Capt. N. G. Phillips and Peter De L. Long, Senior G. Deacons; H. C. Tombs and E. J. Morris, Junior G. Deacons; F. P. Cockerell, G. Supt. of Wks.; Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter) re-appointed G. Dir. of Cers.; F. Robinson, Assist. Dir. of Cers.; Geo. Toller, G. Swd. B.; C. E. Willing, G. Org.; H. G. Buss, Assist. G. Sec.; S. G. Foxall and W. T. Howe, G. Purs.; and C. P. Payne, re-appointed G. Tyler.

On investing Bro. Tomkins the Earl of Carnarvon said he had to congratulate him on the appointment, but he had to congratulate still more Grand Lodge on the re-election of so worthy a brother. To Bro. McIntyre he said it was his grateful duty to declare that the services he had rendered to Grand Lodge were many and great. To Grand Secretary he said (the cheers being exceedingly hearty), that it was a satisfaction to feel that on his re-appointment the expression of Grand Lodge was more eloquent than any words he (Lord Carnarvon) could bestow, and he congratulated him heartily. To Capt. Phillips he said it was a very great pleasure to him that an old schoolfellow of his should have obtained this appointment. When Bro. H. G. Buss was invested amid loud cheering, Lord Carnarvon said to him, it was his duty now to confer on him the collar of Assistant Grand Secretary. He entered upon a new office. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master, had been pleased to create, or rather he should say, to revive an office, which he doubted not Bro. Buss would discharge well, as he was sure he had hitherto discharged his other duties faithfully. The business of Grand Lodge had shown that tendency to grow which was not inseparable from the increase of an institution so great as Freemasonry; and it had been found justly necessary to re-inforce the staff of Grand Secretary's office. He doubted not that the Grand Lodge would find in Bro. Buss a good and worthy Assistant Secretary, and he congratulated him most heartily on the appointment. Lord Carnarvon, after the other appointments had been made, said he had to announce that the Grand Master had appointed Bro. Albert to take the rank and wear the clothing of a P.G. Purs.

Grand Secretary then read the following list of Grand Stewards for the year: Bros. Charles Edwd. Smith, 58; A. A. Bristow, 14; C. O. Barker, 29; R. Gooding, 1; E. P. Deacon, 2; H. A. Bennett, 4; Major H. Scriven, 5; E. J. F. Fawcett, 6; J. P. Probert, 8; T. A. Macey, 21; C. Martin, 23; A. H. Henry, 26; G. H. Savage, 46; Capt. J. Wordsworth, 60; W. Surr, 91; A. Bell, 99; Thos. Donnithorn, 97; and F. H. Goldney, 259.

Before closing Grand Lodge Lord Carnarvon said: Brethren, nothing now remains but for me to close this Grand Lodge, the business being transacted; and I take this opportunity to express to you a matter of very sincere personal regret to myself, that at the last moment when and after I had fully hoped, and made up my mind to be present at the banquet, I am called away by official business, against which it is perfectly vain to struggle. I shall therefore, unfortunately and sorely against my will and my expectation, be obliged to absent myself immediately after the Grand Lodge is closed. I have only the satisfaction to know that my noble friend and brother, Lord Skelmersdale, will take my place, and discharge my duties as efficiently as I could have done myself.

Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a sumptuous banquet provided by the Grand Stewards, and supplied by Bro. E. Dawkins, the manager of Freemasons' Tavern. All the arrangements were perfect, and reflected the greatest credit on the Board of Grand Stewards, who were Bros. F. S. Knyvett, 58, President; Dr. Edmund Nash, 14, Treasurer; Arthur J. R. Trendell, 29, Hon. Secretary; Thos. T. Smith, 1; Dr. W. Hope, 2; B. C. Veley, 4; J. C. Havers, 5; Winthrop Mackworth Praed, 6; J. L. Geiger, 8; Robert Berridge, 21; John Boyd, 23; Thos. C. Tatham, 26; William Kingsbury, 46; John C. Chancellor, 60; Henry John Reynolds, 91; George Marshall, 99; William George Cusins, 197; and Gabriel Prior Goldney, 257.

After the banquet the customary toasts were proposed.

Lord Skelmersdale, in giving the toast of "the Queen," said that her Majesty was Patroness of the Order, and she always acted up to the greatest of its precepts, charity. There was never a charitable case which came under her Majesty's notice to which she did not give a ready response; as witness the great mining accident in South Wales the other day, when she telegraphed to know how those poor men were going on; and ministered to their aid. If she did not belong to the Order as a member, she was one of them in heart.

Lord Skelmersdale then gave "The Health of H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, and the other Members of the Royal Family," and that of "H.R.H. the M.W.G.M." He said he took the liberty of coupling these two toasts, not on account of time, but because this was the first occasion on which they had the opportunity of including two other members of the Royal Family otherwise than the Prince of Wales in Grand Lodge. The brethren had been told by the Pro Grand Master the reason the Grand Master was not present; and the brethren all regretted his absence; but when they knew that he had gone abroad for the benefit of his health, and that being abroad was doing him good, they would not regret his absence. The Princess of Wales was also abroad, but he hoped we should soon see her bright, genial face again amongst us. Her Royal Highness had endeared herself to us, he believed, more than anyone thought it possible for any one woman to do. Not to dwell any longer on this subject, he would only add that it was a great day for Freemasonry when they saw three Princes of the blood Royal occupying the three first chairs in Grand Lodge. They were not present, but that was not their fault. The Duke of Connaught was now occupied with his duties in Ireland, and it was utterly impossible that he should have come today among the brethren, and he believed he would be in London only for ten days this season. Prince Leopold likewise was not present, for the reason that he was not in that state to take any liberty with his health. The brethren all wished his health was in better order. Although these two Princes were not present they both had their hearts in Masonry, and both wished themselves with the brethren.

Lord Skelmersdale, in proposing "The Health of the R.W. the Pro Grand Master," said the brethren had seen in Grand Lodge how sorry his lordship was to leave them, and for his (Lord Skelmersdale's) own part he knew Lord Carnarvon had the fullest intention to be present. It was only within a very short time before the opening of Grand Lodge that he found it would be impossible to remain. There was no better Mason in England, no man who more thoroughly had Freemasonry at heart and who wished to do good to it and encourage it in every possible way.

Lord De Tabley, proposed "the Health of the R.W. the Deputy Grand Master."

Lord Skelmersdale in reply said it gave him great pleasure to be present, but at the same time great pain, for he had made up his mind to sit still, enjoy a good dinner, hear some good speeches and some good singing, and have nothing to say. But he was placed in the position of chairman suddenly, and he had nothing to do but to ask the brethren's forgiveness for his short-comings. He had little to say about himself, but what he would say was that he congratulated the brethren presiding and the Craft generally on the way in which the Order was progressing and increasing. He knew it in more ways than one. He knew it in his own province of West Lancashire where it had become almost unwieldy. He knew it in Grand Secretary's office, because he had to sign his name a great many times, and Bro. Hervey's postage bill must be very large. The brethren knew they were prosperous, and they showed that they felt it by the munificent gift they made the other day to the Life-boat Institution that would be a lasting record of the gratitude of the Freemasons of this country for the safe return of the Prince of Wales from a foreign country. He was happy to-day that the Committee appointed to confer with the Secretary of that Institution as to the site of the lifeboats would very soon make their report, and he would say without hesitation that the places selected were those which he thought every one would agree were the best suited for the placing of lifeboats. Coming unprepared for the position of Chairman it was difficult for him to make a Masonic speech, but he might say that the brethren would not differ from him when he said that he thought that with increase of brethren throughout the country they ought also to see a progressive increase in their charities. The brethren would say he was reading them an oft-told tale, and he believed he had spoken on the same subject before; but it was one he had at heart, and he would never stand up in that hall, or any other Masonic place in the world, without saying a word about charity. He had said before that Her Majesty took great interest in everything that was charitable, and he might say of Freemasons that without charity Freemasonry was nothing. They were a grand and magnificent body, increasing day by day; therefore let them see that their charities increased also day by day. His lordship after again thanking the brethren for the toast they had drank, gave "The Health of the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland," and coupled with it the name of Bro. Laurie, Grand Master of Nova Scotia.

Bro. Laurie, in reply, said he was an old English Mason himself, but had gone abroad in the course of his duties, and at the request of a large number of Masons in one of our colonies, where a new Grand Lodge was lately established, had accepted the position of Grand Master. The matter of forming Grand Lodges had come before the brethren, and finally they came to the conclusion that it was best to encourage it. The R.W.D.G.M. had spoken about the increase of Masonry at home. He (Bro. Laurie) could tell them a great deal about the increase of Masonry on the other side of the Atlantic. It had been his duty and his pleasure to visit Grand Lodges in America. He had seen 8000 in one state of the Union, and 25,000 present at the dedication of a Masonic temple. That was in one state, the State of New York, and the other states had something like a proportionate number. Masonry was strong and very progressive on that side of the Atlantic. Referring also to the fact of recognising Colonial Grand Lodges, it was, he believed, following the policy which was politically followed by our government in giving self-government to the colonies. Instead of their being opposed to the mother country they felt that they had the hearts of Englishmen, and they were a group of children growing round their parent, and willing to take a share when need be in the burdens of the Empire. And so it was Masonically, and in the Grand Lodge over which he had the honour to preside, the lodges held fast to the register of the Grand Lodge of England; they had their number from their own Grand Lodge, but they preferred more—he was staking his own authority when he said so—the number they held on the register of England. He could only say he should do his best to keep them to that duty. With that view, with their desire to build up Masonry, to perpetuate in English colonies the holding fast their allegiance to England, our Queen and our old country, as Masons as well as citizens, they would always strive.

Bro. W. W. Beech, M.P., proposed the toast of "The G. Wardens and other Grand Officers, Past and Present." It marked an auspicious era in the annals of Freemasonry when the Royal Princes were appointed as Grand Wardens of Grand Lodge. He hoped it would be an incentive to additional interest on their part in Masonry. He would say "May Freemasonry flourish under their auspices." They had been told the great English Princes were promoters of the order; but never he thought in the more palmy days of Freemasonry were two Princes made in one day recipients of office in Grand Lodge. He trusted that those appointments would have one effect at least on the outer world, and particularly that section of it who were traducers of the Order, might be convinced that there could be nothing very essentially mischievous in a society of which the Heir Apparent was placed at the head, and in which two of his brothers were glad and proud to take high office. Let the brethren then drink their health with all enthusiasm. As they were unfortunately not present, he would couple with the toast the name of the Earl of Donoughmore, P.G.W. His lordship was connected with the Sister Isle, but still he had the interest of Freemasonry so much at heart that he presided at present over a lodge in this metropolis with conspicuous ability.

The Earl of Donoughmore, P.G.W., in responding, said there was one reason why he should not make a long speech, he felt very much like the old year which was going out to make room for the new. However, it was a proud position for a man to be the predecessor of such exalted persons who were now in the S.W. and J.W. chairs. It was a different thing to speak for the Past Grand Officers because he was a very young Past Grand Officer now, and very likely they would not like to confide to him the expression of their feelings. Still, speaking for the Past Grand Officers in general, the reception given to this toast was exceedingly flattering to them.

Lord Skelmersdale proposed "The Provincial Grand Masters," whom he looked upon as generals exercising their powers under a commander-in-chief. Without the able co-operation of the Provincial Grand Masters, the Grand Master would be almost powerless. They were the officers who brought the whole system of Freemasonry into true working and kept things together. He would have coupled that toast with the name of the Senior Provincial Grand Master had he been present, but he had been obliged to retire through indisposition. Looking round the table he saw the Junior Provincial Grand Master who had just been nominated by the Prince of Wales. This was Bro. Montague Guest, who he knew to be a good and a true Mason, and one who had made the most rapid progress in Freemasonry he ever remembered, and he would couple his name with the toast.

Bro. Montague Guest, Prov. Grand Master designate of Dorsetshire, in the course of his reply said he believed the duty of a Provincial Grand Master was to promote peace and harmony in his province, as well as the cause of charity. He was convinced that the Provincial Grand Masters present had carried out this duty, and for himself he would say it would be his first object, as Prov. Grand Master, to do the same.

The Rev. C. J. Martin, P.G.C. and D.P.G.M. for Suffolk, proposed "The Masonic Charities." The Benevolent Institution at its last festival realised over £12,000, and he wished the same success for the Girls' School and the Boys' School, the former of which would have its festival that day fortnight, and the latter in June. He asked the brethren to give to the large number of applicants who were knocking at the doors, that relief which by God's mercy they were able to extend to them.

Bro. Binckes replied. Many of the brethren had been charged with attempting to press their appeals on behalf of the charities too strongly. He thought they were more than justified in doing so after the wonderfully kind observation of their presiding chief, that in every assembly he took part in and presided over, he never would permit the great cause of Masonic charity to be forgotten or overlooked. From what was said at the memorable installation at the Albert Hall two years ago, they were all justified by every means, so far as they could exercise the powers they had, to press upon the attention of the brethren the necessity of supporting more and more largely, as Freemasonry increased, those institutions whose object especially was to provide for those of the Order who needed that support which they would not obtain through any other means. To-night was not a charity festival; the brethren had simply to acknowledge the kindness and courtesy which, amidst his many duties, the president of the day had shewn in proposing this toast.

The toast of "The Stewards" was proposed by Lord Skelmersdale, who remarked that the brethren were all indebted to those brethren for the exertions they had made in providing such a successful entertainment.

Bro. Felix Knyvett, President of the Board of Stewards, responded, and said that the occasion had been so successful that it must ever be a bright spot on the Stewards' minds and in the annals of Freemasonry. They would be able to look back for years to come with pride and pleasure to this their year of office. His lordship had been pleased to couple his (Bro. Knyvett's) name with the toast, but he did not know what the Stewards would have done but for the services so worthily rendered by their Secretary, Bro. Trendell.

The brethren then joined the ladies in the Temple, where a concert was given under the direction of Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe, P.G. Org., by Miss Jose Sherrington, Miss Annie Sinclair, and Miss Helen D'Alton, and Bros. Geo. Perren, Baxter, Carter, Thornton, and Distin. Bros. Wilhelm Kuhe and Wilhelm Ganz conducted.

At the banquet Bro. Harker was Toast Master.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

JOPPA LODGE (No. 188).—This lodge held its regular meeting at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, on the 12th inst., in place of Monday, the 2nd inst., it being Bank Holiday. The lodge was opened in due form, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The Secretary, Bro. P.M. Albert, P.G.P., was unavoidably absent, consequent on the death of his mother. Bro. Henry Hymans, S.D., acted as Secretary pro tem., and it is noteworthy that he carried out the duties with such ease and precision (for the first time), which might put many an old Secretary to the blush. Bros. Osborne, Lenzberg, and Althorp were raised to the Third Degree, and Mr. J. Thos. Burrows was balloted for and initiated into the Order, the respective ceremonies being rendered in the most impressive and intelligible manner by the W.M., Bro. Lewis Lazarus, which could not be surpassed. There was a notice of motion in the summons by P.M. Diepenheim, that banquets be reduced for the next two or three years from four to three, so as to make a lodge fund for the future. A somewhat peculiar note was read by the W.M. from Bro. Diepenheim, asking that the motion might be deferred, as he was unable to attend. Bro. P.M. Alexander said it was his firm belief that the motion could not be entertained by the lodge, as in the absence of any bye-law to the contrary, it was clearly the prerogative of the W.M. to decide what banquets, &c., the members should have, and it was not competent in any member to dictate to the W.M. in respect to refreshments he should order for the lodge, and the motion, therefore, was entrenching on the privilege of the W.M. Bro. J. S. Lyons made some remarks respecting certain members being largely indebted to the lodge, and were such members to pay their dues regularly the lodge would always be in ample funds. Bro. S. Davis said he thought Bro. Diepenheim very much out of place in attempting to interfere with the banquets, as he paid nothing towards them, being only a country member. After a little more discussion on the subject Bro. P.M. Alexander moved, and Bro. P.M. Levi seconded, "That the motion could not be entertained by the lodge for the reasons already stated," which was put to the lodge and carried unanimously. It was proposed and carried that a letter of condolence be sent to Bro. P.M. Albert, P.G.P. The lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren then retired to light refreshment, and passed an enjoyable evening.

RANELAGH LODGE (No. 834).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 10th inst., and the members met in strong force on the occasion. The lodge was opened and minutes confirmed, after which the ballot was taken for the admission of Sir C. W. Dilke, M.P. for Chelsea, which proved unanimous. The lodge being opened in the Second Degree Bro. Josey was passed. The next business on the summons was the installation of the W.M., which was admirably carried out by Bro. Knowles, whose working was perfect, and the W.M., Bro. Fish, proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. Baker, S.W.; Watson, J.W.; Thompson, P.M.; Treas.; Worthington, P.M.; Sec.; Middleton, S.D.; Shaw, J.D.; Warner, I.G.; Bryett, D.C.; Ellingford, S.S.; Webb, J.S. The initiation of Sir C. W. Dilke was then proceeded with, and the candidate seemed greatly impressed with the ceremony. The W.M. presented the I.P.M. in the name of the lodge with a massive 18-carat gold Past Master's jewel, in recognition of services rendered to the lodge. The I.P.M. proposed that ten guineas each should be voted to two of the institutions; this was seconded and duly carried. The brethren then sat down to a recherche banquet, provided by Bro. P.M. Millis, and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

WANDSWORTH LODGE (No. 1044).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel on the 18th inst. Amongst the members present were the following officers:—Bros. P. Cooke, W.M.; J. G. Carter, P.M.; G. Howick, P.M.; F. H. Newens, P.M.; J. Kewney, P.M.; E. H. Boddy, P.M.; H. R. Jones, S.W.; W. A. Morgan, J.W.; J. Frost, Sec.; W. Huntley, I.G.; A. N. Newens, S.D.; J. B. Walker, J.D.; J. J. Holland, W.S.; and Bro. S. Stead, Tyler. There were also the following visitors:—Bros. Dr. Hugh Mackintosh, 4; G. W. Usill, 186; E. Swanborough, 1319; F. Mead, 1420; and W. F. Pether, 177. Bro. A. A. Denham was raised to the Second Degree by Bro. E. H. Boddy, P.M.—Bros. H. R. Jones, S.W.; J. G. Carter, J.W.; A. N. Newens, S.D.; J. B. Walker, J.D. Mr. Robert Walker was impressively initiated by Bro. Boddy, P.M., Bro. W. A. Morgan being in his post as J.W., and Bro. H. R. Jones, S.W. The lodge then proceeded to elect a W.M., Treasurer and Tyler for the ensuing year. Bro. H. R. Jones was unanimously elected W.M., and Bros. H. Wilson and S. Stead re-elected as Treasurer and Tyler. Bro. P. Cooke, W.M., said he should resign the chair with both regret and pleasure—regret, because he knew he had not had sufficient leisure to attend to his Masonic duties as he should have liked; and pleasure, because he knew that a very worthy successor would be found in Bro. Jones. Bro. Jones ably and feelingly replied. Upon the motion of Bro. Boddy, a jewel to the value of five guineas was unanimously accorded to Bro. Cooke, the retiring W.M. A banquet followed. "The Queen and Craft" and other Masonic toasts having been given and drank, "The Health of the Initiate" followed. Bro. R. Walker replied in a humorous speech. The lodge was shortly after closed in peace and harmony. The lodge was in mourning for Bro. Robert McRae, and it was decided that a letter of condolence be sent to his widow. A banquet followed, served in first-class style by Bro. Dougherty. The usual Masonic toasts having been ably given by the W.M., "The health of the Initiate" was drank with enthusiasm. Bro. R. Walker replied in a humorous speech. "The Officers" was followed by "The Visitors." Bro. Dr. Mackintosh, in replying for the visitors, referred to the proverbial hospitality of the Wandsworth Lodge, and notably pointed to the banquet that evening as a specimen of the cordial feeling shown to visitors.

MIZPAH LODGE (No. 1671).—This lodge held its first regular meeting on the 14th day of April, at the Albion, Aldersgate-street. Present: Bros. Nelson Reed, W.M.; David R. Still, S.W.; Walter W. Medcalf, J.W.; H. G. Buss, Sec.; James J. Avery, Treas.; W. Vilven, S.D.; F. Morgan, 1572, acting J.D.; J. Johnstone, D.C.; C. Schmidt, I.G.; and H. Shaw, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. The lodge was opened and the minutes of the consecration meeting read and confirmed; and it having been proposed by the S.W., and seconded by the J.W., that the W.M. should act as first Steward at the Girls' festival, the sum of £10 10s. was voted from the benevolent fund to be placed on his list. There were several propositions for initiation, and the lodge closed in perfect harmony at 5.25. The brethren then adjourned to the banquet, which was served in the best style, for which the Albion is so noted. After the banquet the usual toasts were duly honoured. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. H. G. Buss. The toast of "The Visitors" was replied to by Bros. Howe, Rogers, and Morton. The charity box was passed round, and £5 was the result. The Tyler's toast concluded a very pleasant evening.

ST. JOHN OF WAPPING LODGE (No. 1306).—The installation meeting of this influential lodge was held at the Gun Hotel, Wapping, on the 11th inst. There were present Bros. J. W. Dawson, W.M.; W. Poore, S.W.; Rae, J.W.; Hamilton, I.G.; Longstaff, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. Lacey, P.M., P.P.S.D. Herts.; Mickley, P.M. 554, P.P.S.D. Herts.; Berry, P.M.; Healey, Moss, Smith, and Benj. Wright (Freemason). The lodge was opened with solemn prayer, and Bros. Harbert, Sedgwick, and Howard, the candidates for raising, having answered the usual question were duly entrusted. Bros. Mograth and Wooding were passed to the Second Degree, and Bro. Frogley initiated into our ancient and honourable fraternity. The W.M. then proceeded to instal his successor, Bro. W. Poore, who having answered the usual questions was duly elevated to the chair of K.S. The brethren were then admitted, and the new W.M. gave a good specimen of his Masonic abilities by closing down the lodge, which was performed in a very creditable manner. Nothing more being proposed for the good of Freemasonry in general, and the lodge in particular, the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was served in Bro. Mortlock's best style, and reflects the greatest credit on his abilities as a caterer. The usual toasts and a little harmony brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

The whole of the degrees were worked by the W.M. in his well-known manner. Bro. Petts, of Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 342, and Bro. Whittaker, of Eden Lodge, No. 73 (I.C.), were unanimously elected as joining members. The W.M. having announced his intention to serve as Steward at the approaching festival in aid of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the brethren unanimously voted £10 10s. towards that excellent institution, to be added to the W.M.'s list of subscriptions. After some other business the lodge was adjourned until October next.

BATH.—Lodge of Honour (No. 379).—The last meeting of the season was held at the Masonic Hall, on Monday, the 9th inst. The lodge was opened at 8 p.m. by Bro. H. Gore, W.M., supported by Bros. The minutes having been read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and afterwards in the third, when Bro. Bell was raised to a M.M. by Dr. Hopkins, who also gave him the traditional history, the charge, and an additional lecture upon the tracing board of the degree. The working tools were efficiently explained by Bro. Falkner. The W.M. again took his chair, and resumed the lodge in the Second and then in the First Degree. A vote of thanks to the visitors, and especially to the one who had occupied the chair, was proposed by the W.M., and carried by acclamation. This was acknowledged very neatly by the W.M. of 41, and the P.M.'s of 304, who congratulated the lodge on the style in which the ceremony had been conducted, and particularly on the lecture, to which they had listened with great interest, since it contained matter which was new to them. The W.M. explained the unavoidable absence of three candidates, one for each degree, and closed the lodge at ten o'clock.

CHIPPENHAM.—Lansdown Lodge of Unity (No. 626).—A regular meeting was held on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at the Town Hall. The chair was taken at 5.30 by Bro. Fowler, W.M., supported by Bros. Dr. Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire, and P.M. 43 and 958, who, on receipt of a telegraphic message, had come from Bath at a moment's notice for the purpose. Dr. Hopkins took the chair when the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Brinkworth was duly raised by the acting W.M., who also gave him the traditional history, the explanation of the working tools, and the charge. The chair was again taken by Bro. Fowler, W.M., who brought down the lodge to the First Degree, and expressed the thanks of the lodge to the visiting brother, who had so promptly complied with the request to do the work. A slight alteration in the bye-laws, of which due notice had been given, was agreed upon, and no other business offering, the lodge was closed at seven o'clock.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed, and the minutes of the last permanent committee meeting having been read, were adopted. Bro. O. Tomlinson withdrew the name of Bro. Middleton as a re-joining member. The Secretary read a letter from W. Bro. T. Leish excusing attendance. The Secretary stated that he had just received a letter regarding the widow of a deceased brother. It was referred to the permanent committee. The Right W. Bro. the Hon. J. Gibbs, District Grand Master of English Freemasonry, with his officers, being announced, were admitted, and the D.G.M. was saluted with the honour due to his high rank. The lodge having been raised to the Second Degree, the W.M. proceeded to install the Master elect, which ceremony was very ably performed, at the conclusion of which Bro. O. Tomlinson was duly proclaimed W.M. of Lodge Concord, No. 757, E.C., and he then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: W. Bro. G. R. Henderson, I.P.M.; Bros. H. Watson, S.W.; R. There were about fifty members present, and the visitors' column contained the names of Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; T. J. Hughes, 216; J. Busfield, 216; J. Queen, 1505; R. H. Two candidates were initiated and six passed to the degree of Fellow Craft by the W.M. in a remarkably effective way, and in the course of a splendid delivery of the lecture in the Second Degree he (Bro. Wilson, W.M.) referred in eloquent terms to the various specimens of the various orders of architecture to be found in Liverpool. Seven guineas were voted for the assistance of widows and orphans in distress. It was also resolved that new clothing should be provided for the officers of the lodge. Bro. Lunt, P.M., Treas., called the attention of the brethren to the death of Bro. Jacob Lloyd, formerly Treasurer of the Everton Lodge; and on his suggestion it was resolved that a letter of condolence should be sent to the widow of the deceased under her painful trial. The brethren subsequently supped under the presidency of the W.M.

LIVERPOOL.—Prince of Wales Lodge (No. 1035).—The usual monthly meeting of this influential lodge was held on Thursday evening, the 12th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Kirkdale, Liverpool, and was attended by an unusually large number of members and visitors. The lodge was opened by Bro. Alfred Willis, W.M., and amongst those present were Bros. J. W. Turley, P.M., P.P.G.J.D.; J. F. Newell, P.M.; G. Sculthorpe, P.M.; J. B. Bunting, P.M.; T. At the conclusion of the usual business, which included an initiation, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, a capital supper being served by Bro. Casey, and was done ample justice to by those present. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given, that of the Provincial Grand Officers being responded to by Bro. J. W. Turley, P.M., P.P.G.J.D., after which the most interesting affair of the evening took place, viz., the presentation to Bro. J. F. Newell, I.P.M., and Bro. Bunting, P.M., and late Treasurer, of tokens of respect from the lodge. Before speaking of this it may be interesting to note the previous history of the Prince of Wales's Lodge. Some twelve years ago it was formed as an offshoot of the "Downshire" Lodge, 594, and has gradually become one of the strongest lodges in West Lancashire. Some three years ago the lodge fell into temporary misfortune, and Bro. J. F. Newell, P.M., was elected to the chair under rather depressing auspices. His conduct gave such general satisfaction that he was re-elected, thus filling the chair for two years in succession; while Bro. Bunting, P.M., who had already filled the office of Treasurer for some years, proved a worthy coadjutor. The result has been a complete restoration to its former position; and it was in recognition of the important services rendered by these two brethren that the gifts were presented. Bro. Newell, who so efficiently filled the chair of W.M. for two years, was presented with a very handsome dining-room time-piece, of unique construction; and Bro. Bunting, P.M., whose eight years' valuable services as Treasurer of the lodge well merited the recognition, was presented with a handsome gold watch (specially manufactured by Bro. W. Johnson, Lodge 241). The W.M., in making the double presentations, spoke very highly of the zeal and ability of the late Worshipful Master and Treasurer, and wished them both long life and prosperity. Bro. Newell, in replying gave a short resumé of the history of the lodge, and congratulated the brethren on the present position and working, speaking also of the pleasure it afforded him to do anything for the Prince of Wales's Lodge. Bro. Bunting also returned thanks, and referred to the happy associations connected with his Treasurership, and also to the fact that no deserving case of distress was ever sent away from the Prince of Wales's Lodge. "The Health of the Worshipful Master" was proposed by Bro. Newell, P.M., and duly honoured. "The Past Masters" was responded to by Bro. Fozzard, P.M., "The Officers" by Bro. McWean, S.W., and by Bros. T. Foulkes and J. P. Bryan, "The Musical Brethren." The evening was enlivened by several songs, &c., given by Bros. T. Foulkes, Rees, Pladdy, Forrester, and Smith, the accompaniments being most efficiently played by Bro. J. P. Bryan. After the lodge had been closed in solemn form and harmony the brethren separated after a most enjoyable evening.

LIVERPOOL.—Temple Lodge (No. 1094).—The annual installation meeting of the members of the Temple Lodge, No. 1094, was held on Wednesday the 11th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, where there was a capital and most enjoyable gathering of the fraternity. The lodge was opened at 5 o'clock prompt by Bro. W. Healing, W.M., and the officers who supported him were Bros. R. C. Yelland, P.M., W.M. elect; Dr. J. Kellett Smith, P.M., P.P.G. Reg.; Richard R. Martin, P.M.; Wm. Crane, P.M.; A. Jarvis S.W.; Thos. G. Winstanley, J.W.; J. Wood, Treas. (Freemason); T. Marsh, P.M., Secretary P.P.G.A.D., Cers.; Thos. S. Williams, S.D.; T. Birch, J.D.; H. B. Dean, David Cutchley, Dr. Joseph Speer. The list of visitors included the names of Bros. John Asberry, 1620; James Bailey, 667; J. R. Bottomley, 1356; John Hill, 1609; Chas. Leighton, 1350; Jno. W. Turley, P.M. 1473, P.P.G.J. Deacon; Jno. Cave, 220; Peter MacMuldrow, P.M., 1299, P.G. Purst; J. Busfield, 216; A. Barnard, 249; M. Ellison, 249; Archd. Gilfillan, and others. After the transaction of some ordinary business, Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, P.P.G. Reg. proceeded to install Bro. Richard C. Yelland, P.M., for the second time, in the chair of W.M., a ceremony which he performed with marked ability, the charges to the officers being admirably given. The new W.M. afterwards invested his officers as follows:—Bros. W. Healing, I.P.M.; T. S. Williams, S.W.; T. G. Winstanley, J.W.; Joseph Wood, Treasurer, re-elected for the twelfth time; Thomas Marsh, P.M., P.P.G.A.D.C., Secretary, re-appointed for the twelfth time; Rev. Dr. Lowe, LL.D., Chaplain; J. In the course of the evening a handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented by the lodge to Bro. W. Healing, I.P.M., in appreciation of the excellent services he has rendered to the lodge during his year of office. The brethren subsequently sat down to a sumptuous banquet, supplied by Bro. Ball, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given in excellent style by the W.M., Bro. Yelland. Excellent music was furnished by Bros. J. Hill, J. Busfield, A. Child, Gilfillan, T. S. Williams, and others.

HAMPTON COURT.—Era Lodge (No. 1423).—This lodge held its regular meeting on the 14th of April, 1877, at the King's Hotel. Bros. Frederick Walters, P.P.G.J.D. Midx., P.M., Sec., acted as W.M.; J. T. Sabine, P.P.G.S.B. Midx., P.M. S.W.; E. W. Devereux, J.W.; H. A. Dubois, P.G.S.D. Midx., P.M., Treas.; B. Wright, Asst. Sec.; S. Wolff, S.D.; A. F. Loos, J.D.; J. Johnson, I.G.; J. Faulkner, W. Steward; J. H. Pearson, C. Steward; J. Gilbert, P.G. Tyler Midx., Tyler. Past Masters Bros. T. H. Miller, P.P.G. Org. Midx.; J. B. Langley. The visitors were Bros. S. Frankenberg, 73; F. W. Hartley, P.M. 25; George Dore, 376. Bro. F. Walters, in the unavoidable absence of the W.M. opened the lodge, and presided throughout the meeting. The minutes were unanimously confirmed. Ballot for joining was unanimous in favour of Bro. Thomas Fenn, 1288, and Bros. Emiel Woelcke and W. Swindlehurst were passed. An important notice of motion was given by Bro. T. J. Sabine to alter bye-laws. Bro. H. A. Dubois presided at the Festive Board.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of Truth (1458).—Time with his mighty pinions brings round the period for work as well as rest; to carry out both these requirements (for after work comes rest) the Lodge of Truth assembled on Saturday, April 7th, at its private rooms in Newton Heath. The W.M., Bro. Batchelder, proved and opened his lodge at 3 p.m. prompt; after which the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. T. H. Hall, of Boscawen Lodge, 699, as a joining member, resulting in his unanimous election. Bros. Hyams and Smith were passed to the F.C. Degree and Bro. J. H. Pearson was raised to the Third Degree. Since the last meeting a prominent member of the lodge, Bro. Tyers, P.M. and Treas., has suffered a severe loss by the death of his son, who had just arrived at the age to qualify him to embark in commercial pursuits; but the G.A.O.T.U. had in His wisdom decreed it otherwise, by calling him from the corruptible to that that fadeth not away; removed from the battle of life, by faith we doubt not he dwells in the sphere of love and light. May the bereft therefore be cheered by those words of assurance, "Not lost but gone before." It was proposed by Bro. Batchelder, W.M., seconded by Bro. Nicholson, supported by Bro. Needham and resolved, "that a vote of condolence with Bro. Tyers, in his deep grief, be forwarded to him." Instructions in accordance were given to the Secretary. A proposition was then made that Bro. Batchelder, W.M. do represent Lodge 1458 on the General Committee of the East Lancashire Systematic Educational and Benevolent Institution, which was carried unanimously. A circular letter was read from Montefiore Lodge, 1017, asking the support of the brethren to a petition, which they were anxious to present to Grand Lodge of England, relative to Freemasonry in Germany; such petition the brethren heartily concurred with; it was therefore signed by the W.M. on their behalf. Lodges 1011, 1077, 1161, and 1219 were ably represented, who tendered their respective congratulations. Business of a formal character brought labour to a close. Refreshment was then proceeded with, afterwards toasts loyal and Masonic were discussed, seasoned with good will and merriment. The Tyler's toast in due course came, reminding us of our brethren in adversity, and wishing them prosperity should they desire or deserve it, soon after this the brethren separated at a very appropriate hour, 9.30 p.m.

TWICKENHAM.—Francis Burdett Lodge (No. 1503).—A good gathering of the members of this prosperous provincial lodge was held at the Albany Hotel, Twickenham Station, on Wednesday, the 11th inst. Amongst the principal officers present were Bros. Saunders, W.M.; Knaggs, S.W.; Court, J.W.; Tomlinson, P.P.G.S.D. of Norfolk, Treas.; Wigginton, P.G. Supt. of Wks. Middlesex, I.P.M. and Sec.; Taylor, S.D.; Vaughan, J.D.; Rev. D'Orsey, Chap. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. passed Bro. Richnell to the Second Degree. There being no other business of importance before the lodge, it was formally closed, and the brethren adjourned to a collation. The usual preliminary toasts were given briefly from the chair, and warmly responded to. The I.P.M., Bro. W. Wigginton, replied upon behalf of the Provincial Grand Officers. "The Health of the W.M." was proposed in very kind terms by the I.P.M., and having been duly honoured Bro. Saunders tersely responded. In consequence of the lateness of the hour the remaining toasts, namely, "The Past Masters," "The Treasurer and Secretary," "The Principal Officers," and "The Junior Officers," were but formally given. Bros. Wigginton, I.P.M. and Secretary; Tomlinson, Treasurer; Knaggs, S.W.; Vaughan, J.D.; and Ashley, I.G., having briefly acknowledged the above toasts, the Tyler was called upon to discharge his duty, and the brethren separated until the second Wednesday in July next.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Friday the 13th inst., at Bro. Plaisted's fine Hall on Angelsea Hill, and a large and brilliant gathering of the members and brethren of the district assembled to assist in welcoming Bro. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, P.G.J.W. for Kent, and Bro. H. Pryce, 913; who for distinguished services to the lodge, both in and since its foundation, were unanimously elected as honorary members of it. Bro. W. A. Weston, W.M., presided, assisted by the following officers:—F. G. Pownall, P.M.; G. Spinks, S.W.; H. G. Picken, J.W.; W. Murphy, Treas.; Thos. Cooper, Sec.; H. Shaw, S.D.; J. McCaffery, J.D.; D. Deeves, D.C., but who, in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Ritchie, I.G., filled that office. Bros. Wedding and Wright W. Stds.; H. Harding, Org.; and J. Lackland, Tyler. Among the visitors were Bros. T. Day, 1076; S. Goddard, P.M. 700; C. Coupland, P.M. 13; H. Pryce, 913; W. Keen, 1604; W. Harper, 1604; T. Brooks, 215; A. Cleal, 13; E. Tappenden, 781 and 700; W. Robinson, 1076; T. Hosgood, 13; C. Morris, 1331; W. Ward, 700; W. Hill, 700 and 1043; W. Neighbour, 771; T. Forrester, 1293; and C. Jolly, 913. The lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the last meeting were confirmed, that particular one having reference to the admission of Bros. Coupland and Pryce, as above mentioned, being received with much pleasure by all present. Bros. Thos. Stevens, C. Battery, 24th Brigade R.A., of No. 776, was accepted as a joining member, and received into the brotherhood. Battery Sergt. Major Jas. Cooke, F. Battery, 24th Brigade R.A., was, after approval, initiated into Masonry. Bro. G. Mason was then passed to the Second Degree, and then, upon the motion of Bro. Pownall, I.P.M., two important alterations were made in the rules of the lodge, one giving admission to pensioned non-commissioned officers, who had during service held the rank of sergeant, or staff sergeants in the army and who had retired with a permanent allowance. Bro. Pownall, in his usual clear and lucid manner explained that it was originally intended so to frame the rules, but on account of some omission they excluded all but those at present holding those ranks in the army. We need hardly say that such a salutary alteration passed unanimously, as it will admit to a home in Masonry many a veteran brother who, after serving his Queen and country all over the world, may feel inclined to pass the rest of his days in Woolwich or the surrounding district. After several propositions for joining members and initiates, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren assembled for refreshment, the pleasure of which is at this lodge much enhanced by the excellent harmony of our military brethren, and the courteous service of Bros. Welding and Wright, the Wine Stewards, who seemed devoted to their office in attending to the wants of the brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were eloquently put by the W.M., and responded to as British soldiers should respond to their beloved "Queen and Craft," and Right Royal and Brotherly Prince, our noble "Grand Master." The Provincial toasts were coupled with the name of Bro. Coupland, whose reply was received with genuine enthusiasm, as it deserved, and the toast of the W.M., given by Bro. Pownall, rarely stirred the hearts of all present, and well and worthily deserved was the reception of Bro. Weston's name, who in his usual feeling and terse manner replied, taking no praise to himself, but rather attributing, not only the very existence of the lodge, but its subsequent prosperity, to the efforts of his colleagues, especially Bro. Pownall; a sentiment which met with loud cries of "No, no," but which nevertheless showed how much the merits of our Bro. I.P.M. affected the worthy W.M. He however trusted that the lodge was now founded upon the sure foundation of "Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth." After "The Health of the Initiates" had been proposed, and modestly responded to, "The Visitors" were honoured, and at the request of the W.M. Bros. Day, Goddard, C. Jolly, Cleal, Keen, and Forbes responded on behalf of their respective lodges. In giving "The Past Masters," the W.M. said they were like councillors of whom it was well to take advice in all matters, and proud might any lodge be of such Past Masters as they had. When his day came to be among them, might he be as well worthy their respect and esteem as those whose health he now had the honour of proposing. Bro. Pownall said, in reply, that he was fully aware of the kind feeling that actuated them in the hearty reception of the toast. It was a proud position to be in, more particularly in a lodge like the present one, where truth, honour, and loyalty prevailed, not only as good Masons, but as faithful servants of Her Gracious Majesty, and he hoped to see every officer present some day achieve that position. He felt proud to be the medium of introducing to the lodge, by the alteration he had that evening, by their kind assistance, made in their rules, those who had deserved well of their country in its service, and one brother, who they had received notice of to-night as a joining member was a veteran whose breast was decorated with medals, won in hard service, and who he felt sure would be a credit and an honour to the lodge. He felt proud to see Bro. Coupland sitting by his side as his colleague; he was especially proud of him, he was not only an honour to them, but his large experience in Masonry, and great influence in the province, would give them a greater éclat than ever among the lodge of the district, and at the same time aid them onward in the course they had carved out for themselves in their path to the highest goal of Freemasonry, and its noble purposes. For himself, he trusted he might long be spared to be with them, and by his conduct long to live in their affectionate regard, and remembrance. "The Health of the Officers" followed, and Bro. Spinks neatly and effectively responded, and then the Tyler's toast concluded the business of the evening.

MORECAMBE.—Morecambe Lodge (No. 1561).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 6th inst., in the Masonic Hall, Edward-street. There was a good attendance. Bro. Dr. Moore, P.M., P.G.S.B. of E., occupied the chair of K.S., in the unavoidable absence of the W.M. (Bro. Capt. Garnett); the I.P.M.'s chair being filled by Bro. Longman, P.M. 1031. The lodge was opened in the First Degree with solemn prayer, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. Bro. Schofield having given proof of his proficiency as an Entered Apprentice was entrusted and retired, and the lodge having been raised to the Second Degree, he was re-admitted, when the degree of F.C. was conferred upon him by the acting W.M., the working tools being presented by Bro. Duff, S.W. The lodge then resumed in the First Degree, when Mr. William Washington, for whom an unanimous ballot had been previously recorded, was initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry, the working of the degree being gone through by Bro. Longman, and the working tools presented by Bro. T. Longmire, J.W. The lodge was subsequently closed with the formalities of the Craft.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656).—An emergency meeting of this new but prosperous lodge was held at the White Hart on Monday, the 9th inst., when there were present Bros. W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, &c., W.M.; B. Sharp, P.M. 84, &c., S.W.; Bond, P.M.; Dobie, J.W.; Nuthall, Treas.; Ockenden, Sec.; Aston, S.D.; J. Hurst, J.D., W.M. 1512; and T. C. Walls, I.G. Amongst the numerous visitors were Bros. S. Hill, P.M. Canonbury; Hobbs, P.M. Hervey; Stearnmichz, P.M. 435; Kracutler, J.W. 1303; Stearns, 141; Green, 435; Bowra, 889; Beaton, 889; Hiscock, 1512; and Kent, A.W.S. 1512. Messrs. Taylor, Jackson, Pinto, and Forge having been duly initiated, Bros. Marvin, Scott, Richer, and Featherstone were passed to the Fellow Craft Degree. Bro. Miller, 1445, was unanimously elected a joining member, and Bro. J. Hammond, P.M. Jordan, W.M. elect 1512, having been unanimously elected an honorary member, the lodge was closed. Upon the termination of the collation which followed the only preliminary toasts given were "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," and "The R.W.P.G.M., Colonel Burdett." "The Health of the W.M." was proposed by Bro. Hill, P.M. Canonbury, who, in the course of his remarks, congratulated the lodge upon possessing a Past Provincial Grand Officer as their first Master. He said that no lodge need wish for a better W.M., as he (Bro. William Hammond) was thoroughly "au fait" in all Masonic duties; and in conclusion he felt confident that they would receive the toast with all the delight that he had in proposing it. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," the W.M. briefly replied. "The Health of the Initiates" came next, in which the W.M. gave the newly-admitted brethren some very excellent advice and information upon the responsibilities and principles of the Masonic brotherhood. This pledge having been duly and warmly received, the four initiates briefly acknowledged the honour that had that evening been conferred upon them, and hoped that the confidence and Masonic trust thus reposed in them would never be misplaced or regretted. "The Visitors" followed, and, as each visiting brother responded to the compliment, want of space necessarily prevents us giving their replies in detail; but suffice it to say that they all expressed themselves highly delighted with the "working" and hospitality of the Wolsey Lodge. "The Health of the Officers" came next, and was acknowledged by Bro. Sharp, S.W., for himself and colleagues.

Royal Arch.

JERUSALEM CHAPTER (No. 185).—The installation and last meeting of the season of this old chapter was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, on Tuesday, the 10th inst. The minutes of the previous convocation having been read and confirmed, the acting M.E.Z. exalted Bro. Ellborn, Zetland Lodge, to the Sublime Degree of the Royal Arch in a very careful manner. The installation ceremony was then carried out in its entirety by Comp. Muggeridge, who, although suffering from indisposition, performed the ceremony with his accustomed ability. The Principals installed were Bros. Elsam, Wagner, and Robinson, and the officers invested were Comps. Davage, S.E.; Harfield, Treas.; Mander, S.N.; Walls, P.S.; Moss (by deputy), 1st Asst.; Stewart, and Asst. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Bro. Muggeridge for his kindness in attending to carry out the installation ceremony. The resignation of three companions having been received with regret, the convocation was closed until the second Tuesday in the month of October next, and the companions adjourned to an elegant banquet, which reflected great credit upon Comp. Dawkins, the caterer. The cloth not being removed until nearly eleven o'clock the preliminary toasts were necessarily given very briefly. Comp. Muggeridge, P.G.S.B., replied for the Grand Chapter. "The Health of the M.E." was proposed by Comp. Loewenstark in very eulogistic terms, and having been duly acknowledged by Comp. Elsam, the toast of "The Exaltée" followed, and was neatly responded to by Comp. Ellborn. "The Visitors" drew from Comp. Blyth a very able reply. The remaining toasts, viz., "The Past Principals," "The Second and Third Principals," "The Treasurer and Secretary," and "The Officers" were proposed in quick succession, and having been duly acknowledged, the companions separated.

Lawrence presented himself for exaltation, and was duly exalted, together with Bro. Dr. Morgan, who had been accepted at a previous chapter. Owing to the illness of Ex. Comp. Goodall the annual banquet did not take place, being postponed till the convocation in May. The ceremony of installation was performed with marked ability, and thanks were voted to Ex. Comp. Homfray for his kindness in attending from Monmouthshire to perform it.

CONSECRATION OF THE SAMSON LODGE, No. 1668.

The Samson Lodge was consecrated on Wednesday, 18th inst., at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Henry Muggeridge, P.M., P.Z., &c., was the officer appointed by the M.W.G.M. to perform the ceremony of consecration on the present occasion, which he did in his well known faultless manner. At the appointed hour the Consecrating Officer took his position in the chair, and having appointed his assistant officers, proceeded to deliver an oration, which was listened to by the assembled brethren with profound attention.

The lodge was then consecrated in the customary form, and at the conclusion of this part of the proceedings Bro. Muggeridge vacated the chair in favour of Bro. A. D. Loewenstark, P.M., who proceeded to install in the chair of K. S., his son, Bro. M. D. Loewenstark, and the latter invested the following brethren as the first officers of the newly consecrated lodge:—viz., J. D. Barnett, P.M., S.W.; W. H. Rudderforth, J.W.; A. Loewenstark, I.P.M., and Treas.; Charles Osche, S.D.; Baron D. Barnett, J.D., and Sec.; Lever, J.G.; and Oberdoerfer, Tyler.

Before the closing of the lodge Bro. Muggeridge was voted an honorary membership, and the brethren who assisted him received the compliment of a vote of thanks.

A banquet followed, at which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to.

A novel feature on the present occasion was the presence of several ladies.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

Most good men, except the Pope and the Editor of Truth, are Freemasons. The Prince of Wales is Grand Master of England, and 'tis said his two brothers are this year to be Grand Wardens. The Craft is prosperous; the Craft is powerful: it is an honour to belong to the Craft; and the world will have it that to be a good Mason you must be a good man. We need not tell our readers, so many of whom belong either to the military or naval service, that, go where they will in either hemisphere, every Mason will find a brother, one not only in name but in fact, one ready to aid him in all his laudable undertakings, and willing to bear his burdens and console him in the hour of his affliction. Now, some Masons are born with silver spoons in their mouths, marked, of course, with armorial bearings and other Masonic signs of material prosperity; but, confound it! there be wooden-ladle babies also in the Craft, and many a poor brother has to work in the quarries, while the chief architects flourish in purple and fine linen in the innermost recesses of the Temple. Among the fortunate there are few whose hearts do not warm to the unfortunate, and even among the easy-going there are few who do not recognise with pride the worth and claims of those who have proved their zeal for the brotherhood by long and faithful membership, recognised by high esteem and promotion in Masonic rank. A good old friend who had seen everything, been everything, and done everything in Masonry, once remarked, "Well, I can go no further, unless the old Earl makes me Past Deputy Provincial Grand Land of Music," and evidently sighed for more Masonic lands to conquer. "Become a Vice-President of the Boys' School," said we, and straightway he drew a cheque for fifty guineas, and entered on a new era of Masonic interest and usefulness. But we know also a brother who cannot draw a cheque for fifty pounds, and yet has been a very worthy Mason, and after paying seventy-two years' dues to the benevolent funds of his lodges, now has to seek the benevolence of his brethren to aid in his election to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution in May. Bro. Richard Barnes has subscribed to one lodge for forty-one years, has been honorary secretary to it for thirty-five years, and is now the father of that lodge. He has subscribed to another lodge for thirty-one years, and is the father of that lodge also. He has been thirty years honorary secretary of another Masonic body, and is the father of that body. Prosperous and respected as a schoolmaster for many years, he is now, at sixty-three years of age, from failing eyesight and other troubles, deprived of his means of livelihood, and with a wife and three children, to support, is seeking an honourable retreat in the excellent institution we have named. His case is a very hard and a very deserving one; and the Editor of the Broad Arrow, knowing the worth and misfortunes of this worthy Mason, asks that those of his readers who have votes for the Masonic Charities unpromised, will kindly forward them to him to be used for Bro. Richard Barnes.—Broad Arrow.

THE SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL THEATRE AT STRATFORD.

The first stone of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre was laid at Stratford-on-Avon on Tuesday, 24th inst., by Lord Leigh, in due Masonic form. The theatre is situated on the margin of the Avon, within a few yards of the church where the remains of the great poet lie. The day was observed as a holiday. There was a very large gathering of ladies and gentlemen, many of whom went down from London, and for these special arrangements were made by the Great Western and London and North-Western Railway Companies. The Freemasons of the provinces of Warwickshire and Staffordshire took great interest in the event, and all the Masonic lodges of the province, as well as the Provincial Grand Lodge, of which Lord Leigh is the Grand Master, were represented. The ceremony was to have commenced at two o'clock, but it was considerably after that hour when the brethren emerged from the Provincial Grand Lodge, and in full Masonic clothing, headed by the 1st division of the Administrative Staffordshire Rifles and their band, marched to the spot where the ceremony was to be performed. On arriving at the scene Bro. Lord Leigh took up his position behind the stone, and was surrounded by the Provincial Grand Officers, Lieut. Colonel Machen, Canon Collis, the Earl of Yarmouth, Bros. Theodore Martin, Tom Taylor, Professor Leo, Henry Graves, W. Sawyer, Creswick, the Mayor of Stratford, Bros. Nason, Charles Lac-y, the Rev. F. M. Beaumont, the Rev. T. N. Rigby, Bros. John Vaughan, Edmund Worrell, J. T. Collins, Provincial Grand Treas.; George Beech, Provincial Grand Sec.; and Charles E. Flower, the Chairman of the Shakespeare Memorial Association.

The Provincial Grand Chaplain, in his address, urged that refining the drama would do much, if popularised, to supersede music hall and modern objectionable amusements.

Bro. Creswick also delivered an address, in which he pointed out that provincial theatres, which formerly existed in nearly every town, afforded the preliminary training for the metropolitan stage, and that the Memorial Theatre might in this respect supply a want long felt.

A luncheon followed in New Place Gardens, when the Mayor of Stratford expressed regret that Prince Leopold could not be present, but said the time was not far distant when one Royal name at least would be associated with the project.

Sir Eardley Wilmot, M.P., proposed "The Immortal Memory of Shakespeare," and urged the propriety of his memory being venerated and honoured specially in Warwickshire, though his words were the heritage of the world.

Bro. Tom Taylor, in proposing "Success to the Memorial," considered the project had received its full baptism of disapproval from insignificant people, and that its detractors did not mean all they had said. Believing in the potency of the drama as a means of social culture, he advocated theatres in towns having even smaller populations than Stratford-on-Avon.

Bro. Theodore Martin proposed "Success to the Drama," and advocated theatres subsidised by the State for the training of actors.

UPPER NORWOOD LODGE BENEVOLENT FUND.

The concert given on Monday evening last, at the Crystal Palace, in aid of the Benevolent Fund of the Upper Norwood Lodge, No. 1586, was a most brilliant success, the spacious area of the Opera Theatre being well filled by a most appreciative audience, and the performance throughout being of the highest class. A novel and interesting feature was the division of the programme into two parts, classical and ballad; and all tastes were met in the music selected. The first half, classical, comprised two movements from a round quintet by A. Reicher, a composer too little known in England; and Beethoven's beautiful quintet for piano and wind instruments. The former was most excellently rendered by Bro. Dubrucq, oboe, and Charles Wells, flute; Clinton, clarinet; Wendland, horn; and Wotton, bassoon; and the latter not heard publicly in or near London for the last ten years, was splendidly played by the same artistes, excepting the flute, re-inforced by Bro. Henry Gadsby at the piano, the loud applause at the end of each movement shewing that the audience was fully alive to the fact that they were listening to the best music, executed in the best style, by perhaps the best quintet of performers who ever co-operated. Other members in the first part were Bro. Henry Gadsby's new setting of Thawatha's serenade in Longfellow's poem, perhaps the finest love song composed since "Adelaide," and most exquisitely sung by Bro. Barton McGuckin; Mendelssohn's "Garland," Spohr's "Rose, softly blooming," and Gounod's "Oh! that we two were Maying," tastefully rendered respectively by Bro. Stedman, Miss Frances Brooke, and Madame Worrell-Duval; and Mendelssohn's "Hunting Song," given with great spirit by the South London Choral Association. The second part introduced Bro. Geo. Perrin, who excited the greatest enthusiasm by his singing of "Mary of Argyle" and "Come into the Garden, Maud;" and Bro. George Fox, who was in splendid voice, sang "Tom Tough" in grand style. Other numbers were contributed by Bro. Barton McGuckin, whose beautiful voice and perfectly artistic style fairly entranced the listeners to Blumenthal's "Message" and "Savourneen Deelish;" Bro. Stedman, who gained great applause by his singing "Tom Bowling;" Miss Frances Brooke who sang brilliantly Bishop's "Tell me, my heart;" Mme. Worrell-Duval whose rendering of the quaint old song "The Oak and the Ash," was most effective, and Mr. Alfred Wells, whose perfect finish and ethereal tone on the flute astonished the audience, in a varied piece of Richardson's. The remaining pieces were Sir Robert Stewart's glee, "The Bells of St Michael's Tower," which, admirably sung by the South London Choral Association, evoked the first encore of the evening, responded by Macfarren's "Sands of Dee," and Bishop's "Chough and the Crow," which, as sung by Misses Brooke and Leopold, Bro. George Fox, and the South London Choral Association, brought the concert to a brilliant termination. We must not conclude without adding that Bros. Gadsby and James Coward were most efficient and hard-working accompanists; that Bro. August Manns, of the Crystal Palace, lent not only his powerful name, and his energetic and practical aid in superintending the musical arrangements; and that the pecuniary results must be most gratifying to Bro. W. Hopekirk, W.M. of the Upper Norwood Lodge, who took the initiative in the affair, and who, seconded by Bro. Grist, as musical director, worked most earnestly in season and out of season to bring the undertaking to a successful issue.

At a recent meeting of the United Brothers Lodge the W.M., Bro. Mark E. Frost, P.G. Treas. for Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, referred to a somewhat remarkable coincidence, viz., the fact that the W.M.'s of the whole of the Portsmouth lodges this year are subscribing members of the United Brothers' Lodge. ## THE COMING REPORT OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The report of the House Committee of the Boys' School, with reference to increased accommodation for its numerous applicants, when finally settled, will be anxiously looked for by the subscribers to the school. We have no doubt that full justice will be done to all the important considerations involved in the general question, and that all recommendations which pass through the General Committee to the Quarterly Court will be alike marked by the great principles of caution and progress, the one object being the permanent welfare of the School. We have always supported the executive of the School, in their anxious efforts to uphold its efficiency and extend its usefulness, and we always shall, under all circumstances, as we entirely disapprove of any course of action which seeks or serves to ignore the meritorious discharge of their duties by a most painstaking and zealous body of men and Masons. But as we write to-day, as always, in the interests of the School, not of any clique or party, we think it right, as "Amici Curie," respectfully to suggest a view of the matter which we think may possibly have been overlooked in the wider range of alteration and augmentation proposed and planned. It might seem that the matter being before the House and General Committees, we were both premature and presumptuous in thus expressing any opinion on the subject, and that it is alike unfair and impolitic in any one to seek to give advice to a body, like the General Committee, perfectly competent to manage its own affairs and develop its own opinions. But ours is simply a most friendly suggestion, and need only be taken "quantum valet." If we assume, as we think we fairly may, that some increase is needed in the Boys' School, two questions appear to come before us, first, the opportuneness, secondly, the extent of such increase. It will be borne in mind that the present situation of affairs has arisen from the proposal, which we confess we always looked upon as somewhat crude and undigested, to build a preparatory school for 100 boys, separate from the Boys' School. It was agreed at a previous Quarterly Court, "unâ voce," that the House Committee should be requested to consider the whole matter, and report to the Quarterly Court. The House Committee has reported to the General Committee, and the report has been printed, but that report has yet to pass through the General Committee before it reaches the Quarterly Court. Whatever the eventual report will be, when it is submitted to a Special Court, we cannot, of course, in any way predicate, as it may be materially altered from the one printed for the information of the Committee. But the idea of the report already mentioned seems to be to suggest the building of additional accommodation in the existing School at Wood Green so as to take in 120 or 70 additional boys, just as it is considered advisable to expend a larger or smaller sum, or rather to point out the possibility of such proceeding. But as we said before, without offence to anyone, two great questions come in when we consider the question "in extenso," viz., the opportuneness and the extent. Is it absolutely necessary to increase the Boys' School to anything like the number of boys mentioned, whether 70 or 120? Is it not rather a larger addition of inmates than the actual pressure on the School demands? For we must not, as it seems to us, lose sight of two or three points in the discussion, which deserve very serious consideration at our hands. Is it advisable to enlarge too much the eleemosynary facilities of our Order? Are we not thereby pandering to a growing evil amongst us,—the tendency to make Freemasonry a vast benefit society? And supposing that we can answer these queries favourably, must not a third question force itself upon us? Can we keep up the present high-pressure rate of support to the great charities of our Craft? While, then, we are ready to admit the need of an increase in the Boys' School, we are not quite prepared to concede that we have seen, so far, the proper remedy suggested for the growing demands for admission into the Boys' School. In our humble opinion, there is no absolute necessity for so very large an extension of the Boys' School just at present, a very inopportune season, by the way, for a metropolitan or a provincial appeal. We venture, on the contrary, to think that if the School were now increased to 200, the original number contemplated at its erection, and for which it was designed, by some additional dormitory accommodation being provided, the immediate necessity for increase would be satisfied, and matters might safely remain in "statu quo" for two or three years longer. The Boys' School has just come out of debt, it has begun to fund, and with two or three prosperous years it would be in a condition to begin building without borrowing, as by that time, if all goes well, it will probably have £15,000 or £20,000 in funded property. But now, to begin building operations involving £25,000, and probably more, of expenditure, must either land the institution again in debt, or compel a fresh special appeal to the metropolis and the provinces. It will probably be said that the dormitory accommodation cannot be increased at Wood Green, even for eleven boys, and as we were also told that it was necessary to build elsewhere, because there was no possibility, on sanitary grounds, of increasing the building at Wood-green, which proves, as we considered it), to be an utter fallacy, we do not at all lay any stress upon such a statement. We feel sure that a skilful architect could devise additional dormitory accommodation for 11 boys, and then the school can be left, to do its important work, for two or three years. By that time we shall be able better to judge the actual requirements of the school than we are now. We are among those who believe in the future of the Boys' School. We feel sure that the eventual increase to 300 will not long suffice to meet the wants of our growing Craft, and that in all probability a preparatory establishment of 100 if not 200 boys may be necessary eventually as a training school for the larger institution. But it is better to leave to the future the things and wants of the future, and utilize the present as best may be done for the improvement of our goodly school, and the welfare of our Masonic Orphan Boys. For all these reasons, and others, which we will not dilate on now, we take the liberty humbly of suggesting, that if we now increase the school to 200 boys, we shall have as much on our hands for the next two years as we can carefully attend to, and comfortably support.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' SCHOOL VOTING.

As always happens with disappointed candidates, we have complaints to deal with, with respect to those who either have not succeeded, or have been practically rejected altogether, and therefore we think it right to call attention to the matter to-day, as there is no one subject, perhaps, on which more fallacies exist, even in this age of fallacies, of illogical ones, of clap-trap appeals, "ad hominem" and "ad sentiment." We are going to lay down, in the outset, the following two laws of voting action, having had much experience in the matter:—1. That where a candidate fails, it is through the inherent weakness of the case, a want of proper "backing up" by its supporters. 2. That no really good case need be unsuccessful. For, curiously enough, the very cases often which are cited as a proof, if proof be needed, that there is a screw loose somewhere, either as regards the profession or practice of those who support particular candidates. The boy Cox, about whom our esteemed Bro. J. C. Martyn wrote to us a short time ago, (whose communications we always welcome), is a case in point. With all deference to our excellent P.G.C., had Cox's supporters only done their duty, the boy most certainly would have got in. But he has not polled up to the present time the actual repetitive votes of his professed supporters, or of his province. Had his province only duly supported him he must have been carried in long ago. Why, then, are other persons to be blamed because they do not do what the good brethren of Devonshire and his own supporters have left undone? It is idle to accuse the system of weakness or the Craft of unreason, as some do apparently in such a case as this, when, had a proper understanding been arrived at between his friends and the province, he must have been returned. The truth is, we are just now acting under a mistaken notion altogether of what the responsibility of the voting paper means, and in our haste to remedy imaginary evils, more or less, we shall probably perpetrate a lasting injustice on all future applicants for eleemosynary aid and inflict lasting injury on our charitable foundations. It is idle, and more than idle, to suppose that any two or three minds, or any committee of men or Masons, can arrive at an agreement of what is absolutely "the most distressing case." All we can expect to reach, it appears to us, is an agreement, "ceteris paribus," as to "a sufficiently distressing case" to claim our sympathies and invoke our help. It would be quite impossible to lay down any direct conditions of what constitutes the most distressing case, so as to constitute a paramount claim upon our votes. We all of us probably take a somewhat different view of the necessities of the particular applicants. Some may think a total orphan ought to have a preference over a semi-orphan. Others may consider length of Masonic affiliation a great ingredient as to the pressing nature of the application, others contend that the children of those who have subscribed to the Charities themselves should have a prior claim. Some may hold that there ought to be a condition of many years' subscription, while others may look at the number of the family, or the presence of any other member of it in the School already. And then there comes in this further and most important question,—What is the actual position of the relatives of the orphan? It is to be greatly feared that many candidates are put forward, whom their friends ought to provide for, on this selfish ground, that as the deceased brother subscribed to Masonry, and these institutions exist, therefore he has as much right as any one else to participate in their benefits, though they could afford to educate the child themselves. Now, this, though purely human selfishness, is, we fear, not unknown in Freemasonry, and constitutes, as all are aware who have given attention to the subject, one of the most difficult problems which we have to solve, in common with our charities in general, and charity voting in particular. Hence the difficulties of coming to an abstract agreement as to the most distressing case are inseparable, and we can only arrive at a case, it appears to us, fairly worthy of our support. Any idea that such a realisation of an abstract absolute claim, could be arrived at by a close committee better than by open voting is, we venture to hold, an utter fallacy. In our honest opinion such a system can only lead, from the nature of the case, and in the infirmity of human nature, to the most intensified jobbery. We feel sure, as we have often said before, that as regards our provincial brethren at any rate, there is but one course open to them, if they wish to succeed in the elections, namely, to form Charity Committees of their own, and to select their provincial candidates for whom the aggregate of the votes of the province can be polled. We are aware that such views as these will not commend themselves to the reformers or pessimists of the hour, but they are the result of honest conviction and long experience, and, we have reason to believe, in entire accordance with the opinions of those who have had most experience in the matter. Sure we are, at any rate, that they are dictated by a most sincere desire to uphold the best interests of our great charitable educational Institutions.

THE WELSH MINERS AT PONTYPRIDD.

It is not without emotion that all Englishmen and all Freemasons will rise from the perusal of the accounts which have been flashed by the sympathetic wire for the last few days from one end of England to the other. All will rejoice to think that the lives of the five imprisoned ones have been spared, thanks, under Providence, to the heroism of their rescuers, though they will deeply regret that any lives have been lost through one of those mournful accidents to which the best regulated collieries are subject. As the Times most truly says:—"A scene as tragic and heroic as any that can be presented by the war now about to commence has during the last week been enacted in the depths of a Welsh Colliery. It was on Wednesday evening in last week, nine days ago, that the original catastrophe occurred. On that evening, in the Tynewydd Mine, near Pontypridd, the men were on the point of leaving their work when a roar of rushing water was heard. The men at once fled, and many of them succeeded in gaining the shaft of the mine and escaping to the surface. But fourteen men and boys were found to be missing, and volunteers at once came forward to descend the shaft. A mine of this kind is a labyrinth. From the perpendicular shaft tunnels are cut horizontally, or at gentle inclines, and from these again smaller galleries, or headings, penetrate the coal right and left. The water had broken into the mine from the abandoned workings of an adjacent mine, and, of course, it flowed rapidly into all the 'stalls,' 'headings,' and 'roadways,' until it found its level. The volunteer party at once ascertained that all the workings within a few hundred yards of the bottom of the shaft were filled with water up to the roof, and it was natural to conclude that the missing fourteen men had all been drowned. But a knocking was soon heard, as if from some men who were imprisoned behind a wall of coal; and the volunteers at once set to work to cut through this wall. In this instance the thickness to be cut through was about forty yards, and as the missing men had been without food for five days, it was most improbable they could work at their own side of the wall. All that could be done was for relays of men to be working night and day, in narrow galleries three feet high, gradually diminishing the distance between themselves and their comrades. They had to do this, moreover, at the cost of imminent and obvious peril to their own lives. The water having once broken into the mine, it was impossible to be sure it could be kept under by pumping; and even if they reached the prisoners, it was too possible that another explosion of air might be fatal to the rescuing party, while the water within, relieved from pressure, would drown those for whom all these efforts were being made. It was a kind of forlorn hope, and the bravery which sustained it deserves as much honour as any deed of arms." The names of the men who first volunteered, and whom the Times calls, not improperly, "a band of heroes," may well be recorded here, their names are:—John Hughes, Isaac Pride, Daniel Owens, William Rollins, Thomas Ash, William Parsons, and Charles Parsons, all living at Porth. While remembering the workmen who braved everything the officers in command should not be forgotten, and the name of Mr. Wales, Her Majesty's Inspector of Mines, Mr. James Thomas, a veteran in coal-mining, whose age would have been sufficient excuse for keeping away, Mr. Edward Thomas, Llwyncllyn, Mr. De Thomas, Brithwemydd, Mr. David Davis, Cilylai, Mr. William Davis, Coedco. While the roar of the tempest was at its highest pitch, and the blue flame of gas flashed in the Davy lamps, they stood with heroic courage with the noble band who were forcing their way towards the men beyond. On Friday at 2.30 p.m., the five sufferers who had been imprisoned this long space of time were brought safely up the surface, and are now under medical care—it is hoped they will eventually recover. All classes have been interested in this extraordinary case, from Her Gracious Majesty, always full of deep consideration even for the humblest of her subjects, to every class and condition of English women, men, and children. We are glad to be permitted in these pages to recount the gallant devotion of Welsh miners, and to express in the Freemason our sincere sympathy, especially with that most industrious class of our fellow countrymen, the coal miners, whose good qualities we, from long personal acquaintance with them, much better than most people, perhaps, fully recognise and appreciate. We are not at all surprised at that courage and self denial, and what the Times terms heroic devotion to duty, which have been evinced by these humble colliers in Wales.

IN MEMORIAM.

Many of our readers will deeply regret to note the death of Bro. Montague Scott. He was well known in metropolitan Masonry, alike in his genial qualities and his ritualistic lore, while his ready utterance and his elocutionary powers, no less than his obliging disposition, gained him a large circle of admiring friends, and by very many of our brethren his loss will be truly felt and long deplored.

WAR OR PEACE.

"Jacta est alea;" the Russian army has crossed the Pruth, and Russia and Turkey are now at war. When we next greet our readers we may have something more to say on the subject.

MASONIC WORK BY W. BRO. EMRA HOLMES.

So many brethren are enquiring as to the advent of Bro. Holmes' Masonic Work, and I really cannot afford the time to answer the numerous enquiries, would the author or the publishers (Bros. G. M. Tweddell and Sons), kindly state in the columns of the Freemason the probable time of its appearance.

Under the peculiar circumstances of its publication, I have taken a lively interest in its sale, and one friend of mine, to whom I introduced the matter (W. Bro. S. B. Ellis, W.M. 1239, Sheffield), has actually obtained over 100 subscribers for the work. "Deeds speak louder than words," and it is pleasant to find brethren, as Bro. Ellis, always ready to aid a good cause.

EXCLUSION OF THE HEBREWS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As I have got the words of that famous S. 165, A. 1, of the Book of Constitutions of the "Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes" of Germany, which excludes all non-Christians from Freemasonry, I am very glad to translate it into English, without altering its literal sense, and to send it to you for publishing. It reads as follows:—

S. 165. "In the confederacy of the Grand National Mother Lodge only such a one can be proposed for initiation into Freemasonry who (1) professes the Christian faith, without distinction of creed."

Of the two other Grand Lodges in Berlin the "Royal York of Friendship" has repealed a similar S., but not all her daughter lodges admit non-Christians as yet; while the third Grand Lodge, the "Grand Countries Lodge of Germany," is as intolerant as the "Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes," nay, more intolerant than the latter, as it never wanted to repeal its constitution as the Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes several times attempted to repeal that famous S. 165, A. 1; so in April, 1873, in May, 1874, in 1875, and in 1896, the result of the last meeting I reported to you last year.

Yours fraternally,

STRAUSS,
Harmony, 600.

[Is our good brother quite right in his facts? Is not the Grand Countries Lodge the only Grand Lodge in Germany which still excludes Hebrews for want only of a two-thirds majority?—Ed.]

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Having just returned from Paris, from superintending the Installation Engraving, permit me, through your columns, to report progress to my subscribers and the Craft generally. All the portraits, 900 in number, are now engraved, and the engraver is busily employed in putting in the effects, viz., light and shade, &c. As the Prince is not expected to be in London until the end of the first week in May, and as every day spent upon the plate will add to its value as a work of art, the engraver most particularly requested me to give him to the 8th of May to produce the first proof, which I am to place before H.R.H. This proof, although very far advanced, will not be completely finished; it will take about three weeks more to produce a final one. I may also state that in the proof that will be submitted for the Prince's approval there will still be some eight or ten vacancies for portraits, two of which are admirably adapted for two friends, and are almost the best in the entire work. These spaces will be temporarily filled up in chalk on the proof, so as not to offend the eye; but I have no doubt when the proof is seen there will be several applications for them. By the first week in June the plate will be in the hands of the eminent printers, Messrs. McQueen, of Tottenham Court-road; and subscribers will receive their copies as quickly as they are issued from the press.

Trusting this information will prove satisfactory,

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,
EDWD. J. HARTY.

P.S.—As additional expense will be incurred in engraving portraits in the present vacant spaces, intending occupiers should at once communicate with me by letter.

A DISGRACEFUL OCCURRENCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

May I trouble you to insert the following, referring to a disgraceful occurrence at the last election for the Boy's School, in your valued paper.

At the October election for this institution I exchanged with Bro. H. Hacker 73 Boys' votes, for an equal number of Boys' votes for the April election of this year, for which I received his I O U. Bro. Hacker sent me on the 12th inst. 64 votes, and informed me that he would leave the remaining nine votes with Bro. Binckes, our esteemed Sec. of the Boy's School. On the 14th inst., I received from Bro. Binckes these nine votes and handed him in return Bro. Hacker's I O U.

To my great disgust I was informed on the 16th that this discharged I O U. of Bro. Hacker was again in circulation, and had on the afternoon of the 14th been exchanged by some unknown person against some 55 Girl's votes. It is evident that some scamp must have stolen this I O U. from Bro. Binckes's desk in his office, and then made a criminal use of it, thereby cheating a poor widow (Mrs. Ceeley) out of a large number of votes, which, however, I have promised her to make good at the next election.

I am anxious to have this mystery cleared up, and I am willing to give ten guineas to each of our Schools, if this person, who as I was told styled himself a "Brother," could be found out.

The 55 Girl's votes exchanged by Mrs. Ceeley were collected by brethren supporting the case of John Robert Gordon Ceeley; perhaps this could supply a clue to the discovery of the deceiver.

I remain, yours fraternally,

RICHD. BRANDT.

METROPOLITAN CHARITY VOTING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It appears to me that a great deal of strength is thrown away by the metropolitan brethren at the voting for the various institutions.

Would it be possible to have a Charity Committee of all the metropolitan lodges, in which each lodge should be annually represented, say of 25 members, with a Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary, and Treasurer, so that the metropolitan votes might be given to selected candidates?

This is a startling innovation, but is it not needed, and might it not work well?

Yours fraternally,

JOSEPHUS.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The mother of the candidate No. 34 (about whose candidature you were good enough to publish my protest last week) wrote to me a day or two since, and asked me why I did not call attention to case No. 8 in the late election list, and stated that her husband was a Mason for seven years, and she had four children.

On the latter subject, of course, I only had the details furnished by such list, and any question of inaccuracy must be adjusted by Mrs. Daly and the school authorities.

As to the other point, I wrote to her the following letter, which I beg you to publish, as more fully showing the absurdity of the bye-laws regulating the nomination of girls to this Institution.

Yours fraternally,

HENRY C. TOMBS,
P.G.S.W., &c., Wilts.

[COPY.]

Mrs. Daly, 4, Burfield Terrace, Hammersmith.

Wootton Bassett, 16th April, 1877.

Madam,—I beg to acknowledge your favour in reference to my letter concerning the abuses of three children from the same family being the recipients of the benefits of the Girls' School.

I did not notice case No. 8 or I certainly should have alluded to it, though I don't see how the mother of No. 8 can have "two children in the Institution," and the third a candidate, when she is stated in the voting paper to have only two children dependent on her, except those in the School are not reckoned.

You will, I doubt not, give me credit for not desiring to give pain to you, or anyone else who has had the misfortune to lose one so near and dear to them as a husband.

The postscript to my letter explained clearly my object was to write against the "principle" not the "individual."

Will you look at the case as the mother of say No. 2 does:—Three children; father 24 years a Mason; no children elected; this the fifth election, with only the barest possibility of an election being obtained.

Or the case of No. 52:—Twelve children; father 43 years a Mason.

Believe me, madam, it is a gross and sad injustice that bye-laws should sanction such a candidature as your third child. You have two already in the School.

Is it to be permitted that the mother of No. 52 is to have all her twelve children educated in Masonic Schools?

If not, where is the limitation to commence?

If you were the mother of No. 2 would you like such a thing to be possible, to your great detriment?

Your good sense and kind motherly feeling for others will speak to your own conscience that such a state of things simply means unjustifiable laxity on the part of the managers, and a gross disregard of the interests of the general body of candidates.

I don't blame you for getting all your children educated in the Girls' School, if such a thing is possible to be sanctioned or winked at, or shall I say disregarded or overlooked, by those in authority.

With every respect, believe me, madam, your obedient servant,

HENRY C. TOMBS,
P.G.S.W. Wilts.

[We publish these letters at Bro. Tombs's request, but we think it rather a pity that he did not send us Mrs. Daly's letter, as we always think it well to have all the correspondence before us. As regards particular cases of election we call his attention to a leader on the subject to-day.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am desired by Mrs. Johnson to ask you to express her sincere thanks to the brethren, through your valuable paper, for the support received on the 14th inst. in gaining a place for her little child, M. A. Johnson, No. 5 on the list, in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,

E. CHAMBERLAIN,
P.M. 1232, and P.G.S. of W.
Lincolnshire.

Eastgate House, Bourn, Lincolnshire.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—At the change of seasons many persons feel oppressed without knowing why they are so—they are aware something within them is wrong, though they cannot detect the defective organ. A few doses of these powerfully purifying and eminently cooling Pills will restore regularity to every part of the system—will cast out all impurities lurking in the frame, and will thoroughly expel the last traces of disorder, however hidden the disease may be—however obscure its cause. With Holloway's medicine relief is insured without risk; erroneous action is rectified without disturbing natural regularity; health is re-instated, and with it return the cheerful feelings which unmistakably to the recent invalid that all within is right again.—ADVT.

CONSECRATION OF THE ADELPHI LODGE, No. 1670.

On Saturday last the Adelphi Lodge, No. 1670, was consecrated at the house occupied by the Crichton Club, 4, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, and a brother who has made his mark in Masonry by the excellence of his working while occupying the chair of W.M. in the Thames Valley Lodge, No. 1460, was installed the first Worshipful Master of the latest addition to the list of London lodges. It was with great pleasure the numerous brethren who assembled on this occasion saw the merits of this brother recognised by the Most Worshipful Grand Master granting the warrant for the Adelphi Lodge, with Bro. Llewellyn Jones as the W. M. designate, and they also hailed with additional satisfaction the circumstance of the warrant bearing the sign manual of the M.W.G.M. himself. That the lodge will highly appreciate its warrant there is no doubt, as the members are all most worthy Masons, and are anxiously solicitous for the well being of the Order.

The following is a complete list of the brethren present at the consecration: Bros. John M. Gibson, J. Llewellyn Jones, E. W. Chetwynd, Douglas Cox, G. Mc. A. Low, W. A. Tinney, W. W. Stevens, Ralph Thomas, R. W. Dunn, Harry Western, G. F. Thomson, B. Gallon, Wilford Morgan, 34; Alfred Caink, 1256; H. Massey (Freemason), J. N. Chamberlin, P.M. 131; James J. Joseph, J.W. 1420; J. T. Pilditch, J.D. 1420; R. T. Pigott, D.C.L., S. W. 11; Nelson Reed W.M. 1671; G. C. Searle, Organist 1572; James Weaver, P.P.G.O. Middlesex; John Green, P.M. 27; John Hervey, G.S.; Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; Charles B. Payne, G.T.; W. T. Howe, Grand Pursuivant; H. J. Gibbs, 657; Rev. Parkins, P.M. 84; Charles Cooke, P.M. 1319; Harry F. Cox, L.G. 1319; H. G. Buss, Asst. Grand Sec.; J. J. Avery, Prov. G. Treas., Devon; and Roger Cutler, J.W. 231.

The lodge was consecrated by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, who was assisted by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, Past Grand Chaplain, as Chaplain, and Bro. H. G. Buss, Prov. J.G.W. Middlesex, as Director of Ceremonies. The S.W. chair was occupied by Bro. W. T. Howe, Grand Purs., and the J.W. chair by Bro. Jas. Weaver, P.P.G. Org. Middlesex. Bro. John Green, P.M. 27, acted as I.G. On the procession entering the lodge Bro. Geo. C. Searle, Organist 1572, played his Installation March, and during the ceremony musically accompanied the various portions, in which he was assisted by the following musical brethren:—Wilford Morgan, Robert Gallon, W. H. Stevens, Nelson Reed, and Alfred Caink.

The lodge having been opened in the different degrees, Bro. Hervey said: Brethren, it always gives me pleasure when I have an opportunity of performing the ceremony which I am called upon to do to-day, especially when I am so well supported, which I am, by my rev. brother on my right, because I know that when he is present I can always look for consistent support, and that if I fail in any material point I shall be supported by him and put right. Brethren, we have again met for the purpose of consecrating a lodge, and I trust that this lodge, when consecrated, will so carry out its duties and so set an example to the world, that it may not be a reproach hereafter to the Grand Master that he has delegated the power of initiating, passing, and raising Masons to men who do not know how to perform and carry out those duties. We are now, brethren, progressing very rapidly—I hope not too rapidly; but unless the brethren who are entrusted with the duties of Freemasonry carry out those duties as they ought to do, it would be far better that we go much more slowly, and that our pace was not so rapid; and I may say one other thing, that Freemasonry is a society which contains very excellent precepts, and if those precepts are not properly carried out I do think that those who endeavour to undertake the duties of office in lodges are traitors to that which they undertake, and that they are derelict from the duties which they ought to perform. We are told very frequently of the various duties which devolve upon us as Masons, and when we undertake to perform those duties in every ceremony which we go through, different excellences are pointed out to us, different things which we ought to study and to perform as our duties to Freemasonry; and unless we do carry those out, and unless we let the principle of Freemasonry permeate through everything that we carry out in our general duties, we are not acting as we ought to do, and we are not doing that which we have undertaken to perform. Brethren, I have frequently on these occasions impressed upon those with whom I have come into contact the necessity of being cautious as to whom they introduce into the Craft. I will not say more upon the point to-night, because I feel that it does not always do to harp upon the same theme; and although it is a point which I very strongly insist upon as one that we ought to carry out, yet still I do not want to weary you by again reiterating that which I have so frequently before said; but I do trust that this lodge will so carry out its duties as to merit that distinction which the Grand Master had delegated to it; and I hope that when in future years we look back to the 21st of April, 1877, we shall look back to it with pleasurable feelings, as having introduced into our society a body of men who will carry out the duties of Masonry, not only well but excellently; and I would impress upon the brethren of this new lodge, and especially on the officers of it, the necessity of a due performance of their duties, the necessity of being punctual in attendance when the W.M. calls upon them to attend the lodge at a certain time, because if one or two brethren are absent it is a sort of dislocation of the whole machine; the W.M. may be in his place and so may the Wardens, but if the Deacons are not present as well, then the first difficulty arises, that there is nobody to take their duties, and that the Master cannot proceed with the work in the manner which he ought to do. So again with the Wardens—if they are not in their places the Master is again placed in a difficult position, and it is not only the Wardens and the Deacons, but with the other officers of the lodge. In each office there is a certain duty to perform; it is not a very lengthy one, and surely through the year the members have an opportunity of attending lodges of instruction, and may get up that little and perform it well. I do not know any more painful display than when a Deacon is piloting a candidate round the lodge room, to see that he does not know what he is about, that he takes him to the right when he ought to go to the left, and "vice versa." Certainly, if there be officers upon whom the W.M. ought to depend it is upon the Deacons. I am sure, sir, the officers whom you will have to appoint to-day will be such as will support you in the arduous duties you will have to perform; and I do trust that the recommendation I have now made to them to be punctual in their attendance to get up those duties which devolve upon them in each office, so that when the lodge is opened it may work as a whole, and that the machinery of the lodge will not be disturbed by the inefficiency or the absence of the officers. Brethren, I will not say anything more, because presently the rev. brother on my right will address you in a much more eloquent strain than I can venture or hope to do; but if any little truth which I can lay before you is of the slightest use, if it induces one of the junior officers to come when he might say, "No, I have got something to do; I have got another letter to write," then I think I have done some good. Again, I think that if brethren undertake office in a lodge they should not have "another letter to write;" they should so arrange their business that they can perform their duties as Masons. Not that I for one moment would recommend brethren to neglect their own business for the sake of Masonry—no man ought to do that; if he does so he is not performing the duty of a Mason, because he is devoting that time which ought to be devoted to the support of himself and his family for that which has frequently been called a luxury, for a luxury it is, and therefore a man ought not to neglect the ordinary duties of life for Freemasonry; but I think he should so arrange his work, both Masonic and private, as to make them combine, and not neglect either for the purpose of performing the duties of the other. (Cheers.)

The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, and the oration was delivered by

Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., who said: W.M., Wardens, and brethren,—In Holy Writ we observe that places have been often intended by Almighty God to bring to the knowledge and remembrance of His people certain remarkable events. It is not without significance that to-day we are met in an old region of London, named Adelphi. It is a happy coincidence that this term, especially meaning brothers and brotherhood, should form the situation of a new lodge in this 19th century. It carries us back to former days in our own land, and, as I have already observed, it carries us back still further, to ancient days in another. I thought, therefore, as I came into town to-day, that this word might be a keynote to a few thoughts for yourselves and myself on an occasion like this. Brotherly love is a very common term amongst us Masons; I would to God that that word should always rule our hearts and acts in Masonry as well as in the world. And perhaps if I say, and say without fear of contradiction, that such brotherly love, to be true, to be steadfast, and to be permanent, must be based upon the love of God, I am only uttering a very great commonplace—a mere truism. We find recorded in one of the Prophets a question put by one who was enquiring what he could do to please the Lord; and he proposed to give a "thousands of measures of oil," nay to give his "first-born for his transgression, the fruit of his body for the sin of his soul;" but he was told by the prophet that he need do no such thing, that he need not make such sacrifices as these; but he was only to do three simple things—grand words to be written on every Masonic lodge as well as upon the tablets of our hearts—he was told, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Brethren, I cannot but feel upon an occasion like this that the recollection of these three sentences from the Sacred Volume may form very apt subjects of meditation. I will very briefly allude to each. "To do justly." Alas! how many of the "wars and rumours of wars" in this our world, how many of the private feuds which disturb society, how many of the family broils which eat away domestic happiness, may be attributable to the want of that simple virtue, justice. "To do justly." There can be no brotherly love without it. To do justice even in the common matters of trade, in our daily business and avocation, whatever that may be, is no trifling part of the prosperity of the State or the happiness of ourselves. I observe, and have heard from the mouths of many of those who have dealt with each other, how exceedingly difficult it is to be just and yet to live. I cannot but feel that if there be a God above us whose essential attribute is justice, the man who does "justly" in his ordinary matters of business must in the long run be the prosperous and the happy man—the prosperous as well as the happy man—for it "has the promise of the life that now is as well as that which is to come." And in society constantly, not a day of our lives passes but we have an opportunity of showing that nice discernment between what is just and what is unjust which may lead to the happiness of others as well as of ourselves. Well has the old dramatic poet said, "Be just and fear not," and well, also, has the old Latin author said, "Fiat justitia ruat cælum." But we are told, also, that we must "love mercy." Need I say, brethren, how constantly we have an opportunity of showing this virtue? We have an opportunity in our own families continually of showing kindness and tenderness; and we have not a few allusions in Holy Writ to the necessity there is for those who are placed at the head of households showing a tender and kind care for those who are placed by God under their charge. And what holds good of the head of the family holds good of the head of the firm, of the head of the establishment in trade, of the head of every body of men over whom we may be placed. To show kindness and mercy, to endeavour always to do the pitiful, the kind, the courteous act, instead of the self-sufficient, the proud, the unkind, the contumelious—surely this forms a very main part in brotherly love, and amongst us Masons in particular. What would Masonry be without it? It would, to use a very common expression, be "Hamlet without the principal character." We have our noble Charities; God grant we may never cease to support them. And every Mason is bound, according to his ability, to let that be part of his Masonry; and not only to support those Charities, but, I venture to say also especially to London Masons, to see those Charities, to be able in some measure to realise that which we have the blessing and the happiness to have and to uphold. And so I have always tried to impress upon the brethren that it is highly desirable that they should take a happy holiday, and do themselves the luxury of going to see those Charities, and see the children and the old people in happiness and comfort. And, brethren, inasmuch as these two virtues must stand upon some basis, inasmuch as the building must have a foundation, I contend that we shall not "do justly," and not "love mercy," at least permanently and as a habit (for every person may be just by fits and starts, and merciful by fits and starts), unless it is founded upon the love of God, and unless we "walk humbly with" that God. And why is it that the prophet tells us to "walk humbly with thy God?" Doubtless there were many men in ancient days, as in these, that held a high head, and by trusting to their strong arm, or by trusting to their great reason, walked proudly beneath the great canopy in which the great Father and Governor of the world sits supreme. Brethren, it is an awful thing when men use that power and reason, that health and strength which God gives, to walk proudly before their God. I am satisfied that such a feeling as this, if it have place in any of our hearts, can never lead to true mercy to others or justice to our brethren, and I believe if the God we serve and worship were one of those terrible gods which some of the heathen worship, and which are supposed to inflict vengeance continually upon their creatures, we should not attempt to walk proudly, but to walk humbly and softly enough. Let us then when we have strength devote it to His service. If we have reason let us never cloud it with anything like intemperance; but use that reason in His great high service, as well as in that of our brethren and ourselves. Thus, according to that beautiful charge, too seldom given to us now, because we have so much to do, we should do our duty to God, our neighbour, and ourselves; thus will our brotherly love be founded upon a sure and lasting basis, and then, whatever may be the shades of difference which may separate us in the outer world, we can always contribute the beautiful colours of the rainbow to act on one another, and whatever the storms be that come across our families, our houses, our neighbourhoods, or our lodges, we shall see the rainbow with the smile of God coming to cheer us with that "hope which fadeeth not away," and the Adelphi Lodge amongst the rest shall form part of the excellent band that is marching along the course of time to the course of improvement, and is helping to raise according to its ability human kind to the great image which it has lost, and to the blessed and happy lodge to which we all hope to come.

The rev. brother sat down amidst hearty cheering. The lodge was then duly consecrated, and Bro. John Llewellyn Jones was installed W.M. The following brethren were invested with their collars of office: Bros. Robert Gallon, S.W.; Harry Western, J.W.; R. W. Dunn, Treas.; William Shakespeare Webster, Sec.; Grange Mc. A. Low, S.D.; W. H. Stevens, J.D.; Douglas Cox, I.G.; and E. W. Chetwynd, D.C.

After the work of the lodge was completed Bros. John Hervey, the Rev. R. J. Simpson, and H. G. Buss were elected honorary members of the lodge, and votes of thanks to them and Bros. W. T. Howe, James Weaver, and Green, who had taken the chairs of S. and J.W. and the office of I.G., for performing and assisting in the work of consecration.

Bro. Hervey acknowledged the compliment on behalf of himself and Bros. Simpson and Buss, and hoped they might visit the lodge again, say, in twelve or thirteen years' time (laughter); and each of the other brethren responded individually for himself.

Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Caledonian Hotel, hard by, where a choice banquet was awaiting their arrival.

After the banquet the usual toasts were proposed in regular order.

The Rev. R. J. Simpson, in responding to the toast which included "The Grand Officers," said: I thank you very heartily on behalf of the Grand Officers, Present and Past, for the compliment that you have paid them in drinking this toast with such kindness and enthusiasm. I know that my excellent friend on my left (Bro. Hervey) will have to return thanks for another toast, and therefore I am not surprised, perhaps, that I should have been selected, as being senior by accident to himself, to return thanks for this toast. It is no use my speaking of Lord Carnarvon or Lord Skelmersdale, because to "paint the lily" is an exceedingly delicate operation, and one that is likely to cast more responsibility on the artist than the object. I shall not attempt, therefore, to say more than this, that I think we are very happy in possessing such men as rulers in our Order. We have to thank you very sincerely for the kind welcome you have given us this day, and the hospitality which you have shown us in the Adelphi Lodge, and also for the compliment which you have paid us in electing us as honorary members of this lodge. I hope, with my friend, that we shall visit it again; but as he is a young man, and talks of fourteen years, I will venture to talk of fourteen months, and hope that in fourteen months I may have the pleasure of seeing you again. Brethren, I think we may fairly say that to-night, looking at the working of this lodge, and looking at the men who have been selected to be its rulers, the present lodge appears to very much fall in with the Darwinian theory—I mean of natural selection. (Laughter.) The officers appear to be, as far as we have the benefit of judging, as naturally the officers of a lodge as could well have been selected. But I venture to say that there is another point in this matter which is not to be lost sight of. There is an evolution of species—of Masonic species, of course. I take it, notwithstanding the way we are denounced in some high quarters, we are a species of monkey; and the link which seems to me to be established between the last Master and the first Master—by the Prince of Wales, the major, and the Prince of Wales the minor—is remarkable, if I may judge of the likeness there seems to be along the 1670 generations, or links, or whatever else they may be called, a certain remarkable continuity. (Great laughter, occasioned by the reference to the strong facial resemblance between the W.M. and the Prince of Wales.) Brethren, I thank you very much to-night for having listened, as you have very kindly done, to the address of the Chaplain on this occasion; and I was very much tempted, while speaking of that even-handed justice and that nice discrimination which should characterise us all, to say there is one instance which I think is known to all Masons, and that is of one who, whether a Mason be the Prince of Wales, Lord Skelmersdale, Lord Carnarvon, or the humblest Masons amongst us, is always ready with the same kindness and affability, the same obliging, and good and cheerful temper, to minister to our wants, to answer our most unreasonable questions, and to be ready on all occasions to give us his kind aid—I mean our Grand Secretary. (Hear, hear.) But I resisted the temptation because I do not like praising him too much; he gets too much conceited. (Laughter.) Brethren, I have ventured also to depart from the ordinary landmarks of the Order in addressing you, as I have had the privilege of addressing other lodges on the occasion of consecration, and instead of addressing you an oration upon the principles of the Order, I have only ventured to throw off a few desultory remarks upon some point which I have happened to get into my mind. At the same time I trust that there may be a consistency even in that. A late bishop of this diocese had two archdeacons who delivered charges upon these two different subjects: the composition of a sermon was the subject which one archdeacon chose, and extramural interments was the subject of the other; and some persons remarked to the bishop how varied were the subjects which his archdeacons chose. The bishop said "Not at all, I think they are remarkably alike," and upon the questioner expressing his astonishment the bishop said, "Well, after all, they are very near; one is on composition, and the other on decomposition." (Laughter.) Well, I am very much afraid that many of the addresses we give have a certain sameness in them; at the same time we are assured of this, we are amongst brethren and amongst friends, who will make all allowances for our shortcomings, and will give us in charity the best sympathy for our deeds, and will try to get and extract the most benefit from them. (Cheers.)

The W.M., in proposing the toast of "The Consecrating Officers," observed upon Bro. Simpson's remark, that it was very difficult to say anything new in response to Masonic speeches, that it was much more difficult to suggest anything new in proposing Masonic toasts. A man might by accident say something new, and if he did it should be taken advantage of. A proposer was not in that happy position, and he asked the brethren to make up for his deficiency in proposing this toast by the heartiness of their response to it. He, however, felt it his duty to say one or two words. He was sure all the members of the lodge wished it might become a credit to Masonry, that it should not only be known as the first of the name, but also a thoroughly brotherly lodge in every respect. They owed a deep debt of gratitude to the Consecrating Officers for the excellent manner in which they had done their work. The W.M. then named all the brethren who acted as officers at the consecration, and said they had set an example that evening which it would be very judicious to follow, and if they would come to the lodge as often as they pleased he hoped they would not be ashamed of the working; that they might say, "Well, you may be young people, but you are learning to trot very nicely, and you have nice straight legs." (Laughter.)

Bro. Hervey, in reply, said: There is a saying, "Know yourself." I thought I did know myself, and I thought I was a very modest man until I was assured by my next door neighbour (the Rev. R. J. Simpson) that it was quite the contrary. ("Hear, hear," from the W.M.) Well, I, of course, if Bro. Simpson, the Grand Chaplain, affirms that I am not a modest man, and the Master of the lodge ejaculates "Hear, hear," must of necessity give way and plead guilty to being anything but a modest man. Well, sir, if I be not a modest man, at any rate I have enough assurance, whether modest or otherwise, to thank you and to thank the brethren most sincerely for the toast which has just been so cordially proposed and received; and I can only say this, sir, that if I had to do the whole ceremony of consecration myself I do not think I could have done it so well as I have done it if I had not been so efficiently supported by those brethren who are now standing up with me. I am afraid when we take credit for ourselves we frequently ignore those who assist us over the stile, and we forget that those who have been in connection with us in any difficult undertaking have given us aid which we could very ill have spared in bringing the affair to a successful issue. Now, sir, if the ceremony of consecration this night has gone off well, I am sure I may say, in the name of my brethren, who are all standing up on my right, that we rejoice that such has been the case; we are glad indeed that our combined efforts have produced a salutary effect, and we are glad indeed that we have been enabled justly and properly to launch the Adelpi Lodge into existence. (Cheers.) Having said so much, and having thanked you sincerely for the cordial manner in which this toast has been proposed and received, I would ask the brethren to charge their glasses and drink a toast that I propose with great pleasure for their acceptance. I do not think you will gainsay what I am about to say, that the W.M. has gone through the opening of his career in a very creditable manner. He has, fortunately for himself, had a little preliminary study in a small country lodge on the banks of the Thames. He has so far made use of his opportunity, that he has shown you to-night what he can do, for what he did was well done. He closed the lodge in an admirable manner; he showed that he was not at a loss in the performance of any of his duties, and I am quite satisfied that he will make use of his opportunity at the first meeting of the lodge, and show you what he can do in the initiation. But I mentioned that in the early part of the evening, and I mentioned it again just now that one brother cannot do the whole work of the lodge, and I am glad to see on the present occasion that the Master is supported by officers of the province, who have shown by the combination they have made this evening that they will carry out the duties that have been assigned to them, and that the W.M. when he presides for the first time in this lodge will not be deserted by his officers, but that they will be prepared to support him in every office which he has conferred upon them, and that they will produce an effect on the candidates when they are introduced to the lodge which cannot be surpassed. And I would urge upon you again, and I am sure you will excuse me for doing it, that the introduction of a candidate decides his Masonic life. It depends entirely upon the effect which is made upon him on his initiation whether he becomes a good Mason, whether he will adhere to the Craft, or whether he will leave it in disgust and say, "I was made a Mason certainly, but I left Masonry because its ceremonies appeared to be trivial, and its officers were incompetent." Well, brethren, we have no need to apprehend anything of that sort in this lodge. We may look forward to the work being well done; to the officers supporting their Master, and the Master not requiring from his officers more support than they ought to give him. Our excellent friend the Chaplain has already alluded to the meaning of the word Adelpi, and it does not need any further explanation from me, but I may say that I am sure the brethren will feel they are bound together not only by the name of the lodge, but by those Masonic feelings which every Mason ought to maintain, which every member of a lodge ought to maintain towards all the other members. I think it is mainly from the want of tact on the part of some Masters that differences in lodges are not smoothed over; many differences might be arranged by the possession of a little tact, and I am sure that there will be no want of tact on the part of the Master of this lodge.

The W.M. having replied, The Treasurer gave "The Health of the Visitors," to which Bro. Buss replied. "The Treasurer's Health" was also proposed, as was also that of the Secretary; and the other officers having replied to their toast, Bro. Longstaff gave the Tyler's toast, which concluded the list, and the brethren separated.

Bros. G. C. Searle, Wilford Morgan, Gallon, Stevens, Nelson Reed, and Caink contributed to the enjoyment of the evening by singing a pleasing variety of songs.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

White, Griffiths Smith, T. F. Pocock, Joshua Nunn, A. H. Tattershall, Rev. J. N. Vaughan, Major Finney, J. G. Marsh, Dr. Woodman, Dr. Ramsay, Hyde Pullen, Rev. Dr. Morris, Captain J. A grant of £15 was made to one girl (Clara Bindon) leaving the Institution and going to learn a business at Clifton.

The following brethren were nominated for the House Committee for 1877-8: Bros. Boyd, Browne, Dubois, Head, Nunn, Long, Peters, Rucker, Griffiths Smith, Tattershall, Rev. J. M. Vaughan, Thos. W. White, Faulkner, Hyde Pullen, Raynham W. Stewart, Captain Wordsworth, and A. H. Diaper.

The following brethren were nominated for the Audit Committee for 1877-8: Bros. Chancellor, Dicketts, Kingston, Levander, Levy, Marsh, Roebuck, Webster, Mather, Bailey, Mason, and Paas.

Dr. Ramsay gave notice of the following motion:—"That in the opinion of this Committee the accommodation provided for the officials of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls at Freemasons' Hall is totally inadequate for the increased and increasing labours which they have to perform, and that it is referred to the Board of General Purposes to ascertain what better accommodation can be provided."

The Committee then adjourned.

Obituary.

BRO. MONTAGU SCOTT.

Bro. Montagu Scott, who died at his residence at Fulham, on Saturday, the 14th inst., was the son of Dr. James Scott, M.D., of Woodhall, in Lincolnshire, and he was admitted into the law in 1845, and for over thirty years served it with unremitting attention, and a kindly generosity to his clients. Early in life he followed his father's footsteps in Masonry, and became initiated in the Lodge of St. James's, No. 765. There he went through every grade, and was retained in the chair for two consecutive years. He became a companion of the Caveac Chapter, of the Domestic Chapter, and was one of the founders of the Carnarvon Lodge. In 1873, at the annual meeting of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution (the Prince of Wales in the chair) in recognition of his energy in raising funds for the aged Freemasons and widows of Freemasons, he was presented with a handsome testimonial; he also received a gratifying acknowledgment of his labours, from the Lodge of St. James's. His illness commenced on the 2nd of the month, and he only lingered on until the 14th, but if it be true, that to live in the hearts of those we love is not to die, then Bro. Montague Scott has not yet passed from among us, for many years must pass away before the interest he took, not only in his own lodges but in Masonry generally, can be forgotten. He was interred on Saturday last in the Brompton Cemetery, and in accordance with his own wishes the funeral was strictly simple, and notwithstanding the inclement weather, there was a large attendance of brother Freemasons and members of his late Rifle Corps, the 40th Middlesex.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

MONTEFIORE LODGE (No. 1017).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, April 25th. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Bordereau was passed to the Second Degree. Lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, when Bros. Benjamin and Erstein were raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Masons. The Hon. Secretary of the Montefiore Committee reported that 230 petitions referring to the exclusion of non-Christians from German lodges had been returned duly signed, together with many letters sympathising with the object the committee had in view. He further reported that the letter from the Joppa Committee had been duly considered, and a reply sent on 28th March, stating that the Montefiore Committee was willing to meet the Joppa and any other committee; but no reply had been received to that communication. It was unanimously resolved that letters of condolence should be sent to Bro. Albert, P.M., P.G.P., Secretary to the lodge, and to Bro. W. Clifford Eskeil, P.M., on their recent bereavement.

URBAN LODGE (No. 1196).—The last regular meeting of this lodge was held on the 24th ult. at St. John's Gate, Clerkenwell. The previous evening Shakespeare's memory was duly honoured according to ancient custom by the members of the Urban Club, from which the lodge spring. Under the presidency of the well-known dramatist, Dr. Westland Marston, assisted by Dr. Doran as "vice," a company assembled at the old Gate, numbering upwards of one hundred gentlemen, nearly all of whom are more or less known in the literary world. The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P., had announced that he would be present on the occasion, but in the course of the day Bro. Loverdo received a note from the right honourable gentleman "regretting his inability to release himself from Parliamentary engagements." Dr. Schliemann, of Mycenæ, Professor Fawcett, M.P., and the following sat down to dinner:—Sir E. Lechmere, M.P., Sir John Bennett, Dr. Carpenter, C. Horsley, F. W. Koch, Dr. W. J. Hunter, Chas. Harcourt, Dr. G. G. Zeff, R. H. Pearson, P. J. Duffy, Dr. Barringer, Jonathan Pearson, W. G. Kent, Donald King, R. Farquharson, J. Dionysius Lovetto, George G. Fairchild, Wilhelm Ganz, Reuben Green, B. J. Jeffery, S. S. Bacca, S. Lehmyer, J. Redding, Ware, and others. In the above list we have Grand Officers, Past Masters, and other brethren well-known in the Craft, and we must congratulate the Urban Lodge on its success. At the last meeting Bro. Simpson, W.M., presided, assisted by his officers, Bros. Edwin Legge, S.W.; Webb, J.W.; Heath, S.D.; Loverdo, J.D.; Eckstein, I.G.; Lehmyer, Org.; Carpenter, P.M., Treas.; Marston, P.M., D.C.; and Radford, W.S. The lodge was opened and minutes confirmed. Bros. Caspar, Clark, and Tacon were passed to the Second Degree. Bro. Fairchild proposed, and Bro. Heath seconded, that the initiation fee be raised to ten guineas, and the joining fee to five, which was unanimously carried. Notice was given that at the next meeting the annual subscription should be raised. After some formal business the lodge was closed and adjourned to the fourth Tuesday in October next. At the banquet the usual Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bros. Lehmyer and Bianchi, the accomplished pianists, enlivened the proceedings with several executions on the piano, chiefly their own compositions. Bro. Marsh (Henry Marston) gave a recitation in a very effective manner. Bros. Carpenter, Bacca, Heath, and Jones some capital singing.

GREAT NORTHERN LODGE (No. 1287).—At a regular meeting of this lodge, held on Thursday, the 10th ult., there were present Bros. Jupe, W.M.; Christie, S.W.; West, J.W.; Robinson and Arkell, Deacons; Jackson, I.G.; Timberlake, D.C. The business before the lodge was to initiate Messrs. Sommet, Pallett, Edgar, Dobby, and Bradford, but, unfortunately, the four latter only appeared. The W.M. having given these brethren their qualifications, rose in the customary manner, when the name of a candidate was announced for the next assembling, and the lodge was closed in due form. Besides the brethren mentioned above, there were Bros. Lancaster, I.P.M.; Forbes, P.M.'s Statens (Sec.), Reed, and Webb (Treas.); T. Adams, and J. Terry, Hon. Sec.; also a large number of visitors and brethren. This being the last night of the season there was a banquet, and on the clearing of the cloth the usual Masonic toasts were given and duly responded to. During the evening P.M.'s Reed, Webb, Forbes, and Bros. Harper, Soden, Kempton, Owen, and Arkell enlivened the company with songs and recitations.

ALFORD.—Hamilton Lodge (No. 1600).—The festival of St. John and the installation of the W.M. was celebrated on Monday, the 30th March. This is the first anniversary (consecrated) 30th March, 1876) of this lodge, the "Hamilton," named after the lord of the manor, and who, as a good landlord, is much respected and very popular. This day will doubtless be long remembered by those brethren who were privileged to be present, not only on account of the presence of the D.P. G.M., W. Bro. W. H. Smyth, a member of this lodge, but for the splendid working of the installing Officer, Bro. C. Smyth, P.P.G.P., the retiring W.M., who well and worthily installed his successor, Bro. R. Garfit, into the chair of K.S. After the confirmation of the minutes, which showed that the S.W., Bro. Garfit, had received the unanimous votes of the brethren, Bro. W. O. Taylor, an E.A., answered the questions put from the chair in a very satisfactory manner, which reflected credit upon the brother who had undertaken this portion of the work. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Taylor was passed in a manner, we were about to add faultless, but, really, this is perhaps too strong a term; however, in justice to the W.M. and the officers, it may be said that the ceremony was performed as near the "Emulation working" as could be desired. To particularise, the charge and tracing board by the S.W., and the working tools, specially prepared by the W.M.; were to use the term advisedly, splendidly given, and a treat rarely enjoyed; we may say, even in this large province of Lincolnshire. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and a Board of Installed Masters opened. Bro. C. Smyth in this difficult work, as in the subsequent addresses, and in a manner that is rarely attained or ever excelled but by the few, installed Bro. Robert Garfit, S.W., into the chair of K.S. The officers invested were as follows: Bros. F. Higgins, S.W. and Treas.; T. C. Johnson, J.W. and Sec.; B. A. Galland, Chap.; C. Brooks, S.D.; E. A. Young, J.D.; T. A. Handsley, I.O.; and Bros. J. E. Mason and G. Boston, Stewards. There was no proposition as to Tyler, and this appointment stood over. The retiring W.M. was appointed I.P.M. This formal business being over, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the White Horse Hotel, where Mr. Hibbitt had provided a banquet exceedingly pleasing to the brethren, and most creditable to himself. Time and tide waiting for no man, neither will the railways in this part of Lincolnshire admit of but the nicest arrangements, consequently the D.P.G.M. had to leave at a very early hour, not, however, until the W.M. had secured from him a response (taken out of order to admit of it) to the toast of "The P.G.M., the D.P.G.M. and the Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincolnshire." The D.P. G.M. paid a high tribute to the working of the lodge, and he was convinced from personal observation that the Hamilton Lodge, although the last on the roll of the province, yet must be taken to be among the foremost in the work of a proper and well-conducted lodge. In proposing the toast of "The I.P.M., Bro. C. Smyth, the founder of the Hamilton Lodge," Bro. the Rev. B. A. Galland, Chap. Apollo, Oxford, and P.M., in felicitous terms, expressed his admiration of the working of the lodge, and, suiting the action to the word, in the name of the lodge, affixed a valuable P.M. jewel to the breast of the I.P.M., who briefly, in a voice broken by emotion, thanked the brethren. The sum of £5, afterwards supplemented by a whip round of £1 5s. 6d., and a sovereign, specially contributed by the worthy Chaplain—total, £7 5s. 6d.—was there and then handed over to Bro. J. Fowler, ex-Mayor of Louth, P.P.G.W., the Charity Steward, to be devoted to the "Oliver Memorial Fund." Bro. the Rev. G. Lowe, in proposing the toast of "The W.M.," felt that he indeed was a privileged member of the Craft in being present at this first anniversary of the Hamilton Lodge, for although the I.P.M. was so pat and nice, yet the newly-installed W.M. had taught himself, and he believed, even older Masons than he, how to invest the officers of a lodge, and to conduct the business of the chair. The W.M. deprecated his own work, but felt that the officers of the Hamilton Lodge for the ensuing year would fully maintain the reputation for the good and perfect working it had so justly earned in the past, although it was the first year of its existence. Other Masonic and complimentary toasts followed, and an exceedingly instructive day was very harmoniously closed.

Mark Masonry.

ST. MARK'S LODGE (No. 1).—A meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Rooms, Little Britain, on Tuesday, the 1st inst. Present: Bros. Chas. Horsley, W.M.; E. H. Thielley, S.W.; H. A. Gilbert, Tyler.

MACDONALD LODGE (No. 104).—This lodge met at the Masons' Hall, Masons' Avenue, Coleman-st., E.C., on Friday, the 20th ult., and was attended by a large muster of brethren, amongst whom were Bros. T. W. White, W.M.; Alfred Williams, P.G.S.; S.W.; G. W. Verry, as J.W.; E. Moody, M.O.; F. Cozens, S.O., and R.M.; W. P. Collins, J.O.; the V.W. Bro. T. Meggy, P.G.M.O., P.M., and Treas.; the V.W. Bro. James Stevens, P.G.J.O., P.M., as Sec.; Bros. N. J. F. Bassett, S.D.; George Yaxley, J.D.; W. C. Hale, Org.; J. K. Pitt, I.G.; Grant, Tyler; also Bros. W. Worrell, P.M., P.G. Org.; C. R. Crommelin, W. Johnston, F. G. Raggett, J. R. Williams, T. de Silva, and others. Bro. R. W. Brown, of the newly-constituted Croydon Mark Lodge;

198, was the only visitor on this occasion. The lodge having been opened, Bro. T. W. Simons was duly balloted for, approved of, and advanced to the honourable degree of M.M.M., the V.W. Bro. Meggy conducting the ceremony with his usual skill and ability. The lodge then proceeded to the election of W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year, and Bro. Alfred Williams was unanimously elected to the office of W.M., and Bro. Meggy was re-elected as Treasurer. Both appointments gave great satisfaction, and the announcement of each respective election was received with applause. Bro. Grant was re-elected Tyler. Bros. J. R. Williams and R. Johnston were elected on the Audit Committee. Candidates were proposed for the ensuing meeting, which will also be that of installation. The Past Master's jewel of the lodge was voted to Bro. T. W. White in recognition of his services during the past year. Bro. James Stevens gave notice of motion, "That the sum of ten guineas be voted by the lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, the same to be placed on the list and in the name of Bro. Meggy, who will represent the Mark Degree at the ensuing festival of that Institution." The lodge was closed in harmony, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, the newly advanced brother, Bro. T. W. Simons, was cordially welcomed, and responded to the good wishes expressed towards him in a neat and forcible speech, and, to the great delight of the brethren gave an admirable specimen of his professional vocal powers. To the toast of "The Visitor, Bro. R. W. Brown," was appended "Success and Prosperity to the Croydon Mark Lodge, No. 198, the first god-child of the Macdonald," in reply to which, after Bro. Brown had suitably acknowledged his personal appreciation of the welcome accorded to him, Bro. Geo. Yaxley, the W.M., and Bro. J. K. Pitt, the J.W. respectively of the Croydon Lodge, expressed their sense of the benefits derived by that lodge from association with the Macdonald, the assistance rendered to it by Bros. Meggy and Stevens at its consecration, and their conviction that the new lodge would be a worthy branch of the parent stem. The remaining toasts were honoured, special reference being made, in response to that of "The Officers," to the past exertions of the Treasurer, Bro. Meggy, and the hope that the same be remembered and recognised by liberal additions to his Steward's list at the next Boys' Festival. Another most agreeable evening, enlivened by song and social converse, was added to the many pleasant gatherings associated with the Macdonald.

After the formal opening of Grand Chapter, Comp. Hervey, S.E., read the regulations for the government of the Supreme Grand Chapter during the time of public business.

The minutes of the last Quarterly Convocation were then read and confirmed.

After this the installation of the Grand Officers for the year was proceeded with, and the following companions were announced and invested as Grand Officers:—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.E.Z.; the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Z.; Lord Skelmersdale, H.; Lord De Tabley, J.; John Hervey, S.E.; Capt. The committee having likewise reported that they had received the following petitions, Comp. Col. Creaton moved and Comp. Joseph Smith seconded that the prayers of the same be granted, and the Grand Chapter consequently adopted the recommendation unanimously.

1st. From Comps. Henry Penfold as Z., George Fleming as H., and George White as J., and six others for a chapter to be attached to the Pentangle Lodge, to be called the Pentangle Chapter, and to meet at the Sun Hotel, Chatham, in the County of Kent.

Lord De Tabley then said that the next business on the paper was an appeal against the judgment of the Grand Superintendent of Middlesex, suspending the Royal Union Chapter, No. 382, Uxbridge, and the three Principals thereof, for non-payment of dues to the Provincial Grand Chapter, and for contumacy.

Comp. Matthew Cooke said he did not know what the exact course of procedure in Grand Chapter was, whether to read the report in extenso or not.

Comp. A. J. McIntyre said the appeal should be supported by one or more of the appellants, who should briefly state the substance of the appeal and the grounds on which the appeal was founded. It was not absolutely necessary that the appeal should be read, though if it was the wish of Grand Chapter there was no reason why it should not be read.

After a short discussion it was ruled that Comp. Matthew Cooke should state his case.

Comp. Cooke then said that his case rested on informality on several points. The first point that he took was that his chapter, being founded some forty years before the Province of Middlesex was reported to be founded, they had done everything that was right and proper. Up to the time the chapter was summoned to appear they did not know officially that there was a Province of Middlesex. They worked as under Grand Chapter, from which they had never received admonition or reproof. That was his first point. His next point was that the whole matter was informal. They had not had statutable notice, nor a peremptory notice before they were suspended. When they were summoned they were summoned to appear out of the Masonic jurisdiction of the Grand Superintendent of Middlesex; to wit, not more than 300 yards from Freemasons' Hall. He contended that having been established before the province was constituted the Royal Union Chapter owed allegiance only to Grand Chapter.

Grand Registrar said that on the ground that there was no peremptory summons before the suspension, the objection was fatal to the suspension. On the ground that by the first summons the companions were required to appear in a place not within the province that also was fatal; and he should advise Grand Chapter to take off the suspension. On the grounds that the companions of the Royal Union Chapter owed allegiance only to the Grand Z. and Grand Chapter, he must disabuse Comp. Cooke's mind of that error. The Grand Z. appointed Provincial Grand Superintendents, as he had power to do, and all chapters within that province which had been in existence before that province was formed, owed allegiance to the Prov. Grand Superintendent, as the representative of the Grand Z. The Prov. Grand Superintendent stood in the same position to the chapters and companions of his province as the M.E. Grand Z. stood to the whole body of Arch Masons.

Col. Burdett, Grand Superintendent for Middlesex, explained that a peremptory summons was not issued because he wanted to act in a friendly and kind manner. When summoned to appear in London the companions had their convenience consulted, and it was thought they living in London, it would be more suitable for them to appear in London than to go some distance out of London. As to the companions of the Royal Union Chapter not having official notice of there being a Province of Middlesex, some of the companions of that chapter were Provincial Grand office-bearers. He was very glad to find the suspension taken off, and hoped that hereafter the Royal Union and the Prov. Grand Chapter would get on well together.

After a few words from Comps. S. Leith Tomkins, the G. Registrar, Matthew Cooke, Hyde Clarke, and G. R. Shervill, the suspension was removed.

Bro. Lord de Tabley announced that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had appointed Comps. Col. Creaton, Benj. Head, and Robert Gray on the Committee of General Purposes. The Comps. then elected Comps. John Boyd, 145; Joseph Smith, 19; J. Ebenezer Saunders, 2; H. C. Levander, 76; F. Adlard, 214; and James Lewis Thomas, 13, as members of the same Committee.

Grand Chapter was then closed and adjourned.

CONSECRATION OF THE MORNINGTON LODGE, No. 1672.

On Monday afternoon the Mornington Lodge, No. 1672, was consecrated by Bro. John Hervey, at the Eagle Hotel, Snaresbrook. Bro. Hervey was assisted in the ceremony by Bro. H. G. Herts, as J.W.; and Bro. Lucking, as I.G. The performance of the ceremony was musically accompanied, under the direction of Bro. Dr. James F. Haskins, by Bros. G. T. Carter, T. W. Simons, and R. Farquharson.

The list of brethren present included the following names:—Bros. Charles Lacey, P.P.G.W. Herts; W. T. Scott, W.M. 9; H. W. Gompertz, J.W. 1364; W. G. Clarke, P.M. 101; A. Lucking, P.M. 160; S. A. Holden, P.G.C. Middlesex; Thos. W. Simons, 1185; E. Coste, P.M. 9; J. J. Furlong, 1602; Thos. S. Mortlock, P.M. 186; J. W. Litson, 1306; N. G. Thomas, 1612; G. T. Carter, P.M. 382; P. A. Bianchi, P.M. 1608; John Turner, 49; S. G. Robinson, 1615; R. Humphrey, 1364; Thos. E. Taylor, W.M. 101; W. H. Wallington, P.M. 860; Jas. L. Hunter, 1598; Thos. Barford, P.M. 55; J. G. Baxter, jun., 206; G. E. Laverach, 917; R. Farquharson, I.G. 99; Watson Carr, S.W. 72; and J. E. Cockett, 1364.

After the lodge had been duly opened, and the petition for the warrants and the warrant itself had been read,

Bro. Hervey said he did not know how it was, but he could assure the brethren that in every fresh lodge he consecrated he seemed to be more nervous and more anxious about how the ceremony would be carried out, and it was only a day or two ago that he could reconcile to himself how that feeling overcame him. But still it was, he thought, a very natural feeling, and one which the brethren would agree with him was not much out of the way, or a feeling that was wrong to entertain. The feeling was that the solemnity of the proceedings might thoroughly impress the brethren who took part in them. This was a feeling which should be held by all the brethren who were participants in the ceremony, for it was necessary that the proceedings should be conducted so as to produce a good end. A great responsibility rested on those who consecrated a lodge. Upon them in a great measure it depended whether the lodge would be impressed with what was done. In a similar way when the W.M. initiated a candidate, upon the impression which he gave was the feeling which the candidate had towards Masonry afterwards. On the consecrating officers and those who were good enough to assist it also depended what the lodge would be considered. The brethren of the lodge, and the visitors who were their guests, naturally were more or less impressed as the ceremony was ill or well performed, and, therefore, on the Consecrating Officer was there a great responsibility. Then, the brethren who were the recipients of the warrant must also feel that upon them devolved a vast responsibility for what they were about to undertake. They were undertaking that a new society, a branch of the main trunk, should in the future be under their control and management; and it would depend upon them whether that society should be a credit or otherwise to the Craft. Upon them, moreover, hung the responsibility of judging of the characters of those who were to be admitted into the ranks of Freemasonry—a responsibility which was delegated to them by the Grand Lodge of England, and to the Grand Lodge of England they were answerable for what they undertook to perform. Therefore, in both instances, there was a heavy weight on the Consecrating Officer, and not only on him but on the brethren of the new lodge. He had often and often dilated on the necessity of care in the introduction of candidates, and he was not about again to trouble the brethren with any observations of that nature. He would not either advert to another rather favourite subject of his, the necessity of not resorting to the black ball when it was not urgently required by the character of the individual who sought introduction to the lodge. He would rather touch on more pleasing themes, and one was the conviction he felt that the brethren who were about to be entrusted with the rule of this lodge would so perform their obligations as to merit the esteem of the brethren and the gratitude of the Craft generally. He hoped they would do their duties in such a way as that candidates might be impressed with feelings of respect for the society they became members of, that they might become good Masons, and not secede from the Craft as from a body which they did not care to belong to, and into which they ought not to have been introduced. If the duties were properly discharged there would be no question that the child would be led into the path which he ought to pursue, and thus a good initiation would make good Masons in a general way. He trusted that if he had felt at all nervous the brethren would feel that it was not for want of will to do his work properly, but from a certain feeling which he could not control.

The ceremony was thereupon proceeded with, and Bro. Hervey, at the proper time, called upon Bro. the Rev. P.M. Holden to deliver an oration.

The Rev. P. M. Holden then said: Worshipful Sir, Grand Officers, and brethren all—The occasion upon which we are met to-day is, I think, interesting, not only to us as Masons personally and individually, but to the whole Craft at large, inasmuch as it denotes the continued prosperity of our venerable order, which, like the famous Indian tree, the banana tree, perpetually renews itself in scions as vigorous and flourishing as the parent stem. It is to myself personally a source of peculiar gratification and pleasure to have been invited to come among you to-day, and to assist our popular and deservedly beloved brother, the Grand Secretary of England, at so important a ceremony as the consecration of this new lodge, the Mornington Lodge, more especially as I have no doubt that the founders of the lodge are brethren admirably skilled and well qualified to fulfil the various duties of the high office to which they have been appointed by the Grand Master. Having, doubtless, in some other lodge, "won golden opinions" for their zeal in the cause of Freemasonry, they are now naturally and very laudably anxious to devote some portion of their abilities, their time, and influence to the still further advancement and development of so noble, so interesting, so ancient, and so very valuable a science. What has been remarked by a very distinguished and learned writer of literary men may, I think, be equally well applied to the brethren of our distinguished Craft. They are a perpetual priesthood, standing forth, from generation to generation, the dispensers and living types of God's everlasting wisdom. And I rejoice to know and to think that there are so many distinguished, learned, talented men to be found in the ranks of our fraternity. To their enfranchised minds Freemasonry must unveil a whole universe of thought; to them it is and it must be a source of keen delight to trace and to interpret those grand and solemn truths which were but dimly foreshadowed in the mystic rites of the ancient world. Looking through the mists of ages they behold in the white-robed Athenians a kindred race, and are familiar with the symbolic teachings of the great philosophers of old. Amidst the darkness and obscurity of occult ceremonies they can have faint gleams of the true light in which we now rejoice. In every land they find tokens and traces innumerable, graven by the hands of skilful Masons upon the walls of ruined fanes and temples, and they establish the affinity of our Order with the Society of Dionysian artificers, with the disciples of Pythagoras, with the College of Architects of Rome, and with the various operative associations of the middle ages. They demonstrate clearly that the grand ethics of Freemasonry were taught and known by the very wisest sages of Greece, whose names to this very hour are revered and honoured by the whole civilised world; they prove that our Order, though often persecuted and often divided, has never yet failed or even faltered in its sublime career, though the greatest and the mightiest empires and kingdoms of the earth have been called upon to submit to the destroying hand of conquest or to the effacing fingers of time and decay. And I would ask you, what nobler exercise of the mental faculties can possibly be found than a calm and earnest search after mystic knowledge, thus gleaming and gathering in our onward path the rich stores of wisdom which it reveals to our view? But it is certainly not to the intellectual pleasure to be derived from the study of Freemasonry alone that I would direct your attention. Our Order possesses other and far more valuable claims upon your sympathy and support. It is founded upon principles that are at once an honour and an ornament to human nature. It bids us hasten to the rescue of the young and the helpless from the snares and the pitfalls of poverty, and of ignorance, and even of vice. It calls upon every one of us to ameliorate the sad condition of those who, from some circumstances or other, in the decline of their lives require our consolation and assistance; and I am proud and happy to say that English Freemasons have ever been distinguished, not merely for their zeal in promoting the welfare of the Order, but for their large-hearted benevolence and diffusive charity. The very best answer that can possibly be given to the sneers and the cavils and the disparaging remarks of the unenlightened world is to point to those grand—those noble institutions which have been raised for the nurture of the young and for the shelter of the old. Some hundred years have nearly passed away now since the Masonic Girls' School was founded, and who would presume to estimate the vast amount of good that it has achieved? The Boys' School, I believe, was established some ten years later; whilst the crowning of our charitable undertakings was effected by the erection of a suitable retreat for those who, having borne the burden and the heat of the day, and standing as it were on the very threshold of the Grand Lodge above, desired to pass the remainder of their lives in ease, comfort, and tranquillity. My brethren, it is our duty, believe me, to prove to the world that Freemasonry is something more than an empty name, something infinitely better and higher than a mere excuse for social gatherings, be those social gatherings ever so pleasant. It is our solemn duty to prove to the world that its principles are high and lofty—that its designs are grand and praiseworthy; and the clearest and most logical way to convince the sceptic or the scorner is by a steady, consistent, unwavering practice of the benevolent precepts of the Order. Freemasonry will then present not only to the mind of the philosopher an organised system of peculiar knowledge, enfolded in beautiful ceremonies known only to the initiated, but to mankind in general, to the whole world at large, it will appear as a beneficent and a most beautiful institution, teaching, inculcating, and enforcing the purest morality, and visibly bearing fruits of charity and goodwill. May this lodge which we are met to consecrate and to inaugurate this day, prove a conspicuous example of all those virtues which adorn the Masonic character. May it convey to distant generations those august lessons which have been handed down to us from our Masonic forefathers. May it ever be the shrine of intellect and the temple of thought, the home of peace, and the abode of joy, established by a few faithful, earnest, and devoted Masons, and supported by the mighty pillars of intelligence and truth. May it ever remain as an imperishable memorial of its founders, growing year by year in prosperity and happiness, and shining brighter and brighter in the glorious firmament of Masonic fame. Worshipful Sir and brethren, I have now arrived at what, at any rate to me personally, is not by any means the least pleasant part of my duty, and that is to thank you, Sir, and all the brethren for the very kind and patient attention which you have bestowed upon these few, I admit, imperfect remarks, and which I cannot perhaps better conclude than by wishing with all my heart and soul that the grand principles upon which our noble institution is founded, viz, brotherly love, relief, and truth, may ever be present with us in our hearts, and shine forth conspicuously in our conduct through life, so that when we leave this earthly scene our names may be enrolled as members of that glorious brotherhood, who loving their fellow men are loved of God; even as in that well-known little poem we are taught how

About Ben Hamed—may his tribe increase,— Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold—
Exceeding peace had made Ben Hamed bold—
And to the presence in his room he said,
"What writest thou?" the vision raised its head
And with a look, made of all sweet accord, Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said About: "Nay not so,"
Replied the angel. About spoke more low,
But cheerless still, he said, "I pray thee then Write me as one who loved his fellow men."
The angel wrote and vanished. On next night
It came again with a grand wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blest,
And, lo, Ben Hamed's name led all the rest.

The remainder of the ceremony of consecration was then performed, and after the lodge had been dedicated and the brethren constituted, Bro. William Robert Marsh was installed as W.M. by Bro. Hervey. The brethren invested with the collars of office were Bros. J. Edward Cockett, S.W.; G. Blackman, J.W.; J. W. Cook, Treasurer; D. King, Secretary; S. G. Redfern, S.D.; R. B. Salisbury, J.D.; J. W. Pollard, I.G.; Lensen, Steward; S. Coates, D.C.; and Goddard, Tyler. Votes of thanks were then passed, and ordered to be recorded on the lodge minutes, to Bro. Hervey and the other Consecrating Officers, and they were also elected honorary members of the lodge. Lodge was afterwards closed, and the brethren were entertained at a beautiful banquet. The customary toasts followed.

Bro. John Hervey replied to the toast of "The Earl of Carnarvon," &c. After expressing the great pleasure he had in having his name coupled with the names of two such noblemen as the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, he said it gave him additional pleasure to have the opportunity of returning thanks for two other brethren who were standing up with him, one of whom had passed through grand office with credit to himself, and the other a good friend of his own, who for the first time was coupled with "Grand Officers," (Bro. Buss), and who he was sure would do his duty in the future as he had done in the past. The W.M. would permit him to say one word for himself, because it had given him great pleasure to come down to Snaresbrook to consecrate the Mornington Lodge. He trusted that the future would justify the hopes which they all entertained of it. Before sitting down he wished to propose "The Health of the W.M., success to the lodge, and a long career of prosperity to each and all of its members." He hoped the lodge had come into the world in a satisfactory manner; it had shown no symptoms at present of anything like what the married men at the table might have some knowledge of—rickets—or any other complaints which were the misfortune of young children. He trusted there would be no signs of any disorder in the Mornington Lodge, and he was quite sure that under the able presidency of its present Master it could not do otherwise than progress. He was confident that the brethren who were associated with the W.M. in the founding of the lodge, would do their utmost to support its respectability, to insure its good working, and to shew to the Craft that on the 30th April, 1877, they had added one more lodge and one more good member to the long chain of lodges which were now working under the rule of the Grand Lodge of England.

The W.M., in replying, said he would use every endeavour to carry out those principles which Bro. Hervey had mentioned, not only in the lodge, but just now, over the banquet table. It was his earnest desire to carry out the principles as closely as he possibly could. He had intended to make a speech, but time forbade it; therefore, he hoped the brethren would pardon his brevity in merely thanking them for their kind and hearty reception of the toast. As Master of the Mornington Lodge, he in the name of the brethren expressed its hearty thanks to Bro. Hervey and his assistants for consecrating it. There seemed to him to be none like Bro. John Hervey—a household word in connection with Freemasonry, he did not know what they would do without it; it was known through the length and breadth of the land, and when anything was wanted, Bro. John Hervey appeared to be the man who would do it. Then they had their Bro. Buss, Bro. Terry, Bro. Albert, and others who were well known to them, all of whom did the best they possibly could for the furtherance of the ends of Freemasonry; and, notwithstanding so much had been said against Freemasonry, it was a great testimony to its worth that three Princes of the Blood now were officers in Grand Lodge and that many of the highest and noblest in the land were connected with it. Bro. Scott, W.M. 9, returned thanks for "The Master and Wardens of the Recommending Lodge," and Bro. Rawley and other brethren for "The Visitors."

Bro. J. E. Cockett, S.W., replied for "The Founders," a toast which he thought the toast of the evening, because he considered if it had not been for the founders they would not then have had the pleasure of the presence of the Consecrating Officers. It was quite customary in Masonic matters that brethren should be able to give a good reason for their actions, and he also ought to give a reason why this Mornington Lodge arose. There were several residents in the neighbourhood who were Masons, and they had talked over the benefit of having a lodge of their own. The happy thought occurred to Bro. Pollard. From that happy thought the present happy day had sprung. They had had difficulties to contend with, one of which was the convincing the wives that Masonry was free (laughter); but happily they got over them, as in the performance of their Masonic duties they had previously done. (Laughter.) The next and gravest difficulty arose with the same sex in Grand Lodge. (Great laughter.) He did not mean to say they were old women there (laughter), but permit him to say Grand Lodge was the "mother" of Freemasonry. (Applause.) They were always proud to be under Grand Lodge of England. Their good mother and their good sister, Bro. Marsh (laughter), got up the petition so well, that Grand Lodge granted its prayer when she knew her children so much desired it. He might congratulate the brethren that the consecration took place on the last day of April instead of the first. (Laughter.) But with regard to the difficulty of the ladies, he must allude to that again, and on this point some of the brethren might be reminded of the lines,—

"For me, I neither knew nor care
Whether a person ought to wear
A black dress or a white dress.
I have a trouble of my own,—
A wife who preaches in her gown
And lectures in her night dress."

(Renewed laughter.) It appeared to him that on an occasion like the founding of their lodge they, as founders, had to remember that they were not only units, but their lodge, as a co-operate body, was a unit in that grand circle of Freemasonry, the centre of which was everywhere and the circumference of which was nowhere. It appeared to him that this was a fitting occasion for all young Masons to remember that with the consecration of a lodge should commence, if it had not already begun, a consecration of their Masonic lives, and that they should so comport themselves as Masons that they should make Masonry loved not only by their own families, but in the families of their friends, among their homes, by their wives and children. The lodge had been consecrated to the noble purposes of the Craft, and he hoped the brethren would consecrate their lives to Masonry, to all that was true and good in it, and therefore to all that is grandest and best in the brightest examples of the noblest deeds of mankind.

Bro. James Terry responded for "The Masonic Charities," by which time there was only space enough left to catch the last train for London, and the brethren separated after spending a most cheerful and pleasant evening.

There was a beautiful selection of music performed during the evening by Bros. Dr. Jas. Haskins, T. W. Simons, G. T. Carter, and R. Farquharson.

A meeting of the subscribers to the Masonic Institutions will be held at the Royal Hotel, Mile End-rd., on Monday, the 14th inst., at 8.30 p.m., to take into consideration the advisability of devising means by which some unity of action may be brought about, to concentrate the votes of the brethren, so that a more equitable return may be the result, and the candidates for admission to the different institutions receive that aid and support, which the urgency of the case may require.

CONSECRATION OF THE ANCIENT BRITON LODGE, No. 1675.

Masonry is in many respects a progressive science, especially in the Province of West Lancashire, as the rapidly extending list of lodges there clearly indicates. The enthusiasm of the brethren in the Liverpool section of the division was again manifested last week, when the Ancient Briton Lodge, No. 1675, was consecrated at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, with the greatest éclat. It is a well known fact that Welshmen are hearty and consistent supporters of Freemasonry, and nowhere more than in Liverpool, which is popularly named the metropolis of Wales. The formation of the new lodge has been specially carried out with the view of accommodating the representatives of the principality; and while no creed, sect, or nationality will, of course, prove a barrier to admission, the "Ancient Britons" will be largely composed of the Welsh element. Steps were taken some time since to secure a charter from the United Grand Lodge for the constitution of this lodge, and after a considerable amount of negotiations the petition was granted, the result of which will doubtless prove a substantial and honourable addition to the roll of West Lancashire lodges. The interest in the ceremony was manifested by the attendance of a large number of brethren, comprising an excellent representation of Prov. G. Officers, W.M.'s, P.M.'s, and officers of various lodges in the neighbourhood.

The consecration ceremony took place on Monday afternoon, the 16th inst., and was performed by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Secretary for West Lancashire, who had been appointed by Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Dep. G.M., P.G.M. West Lancashire, to do the interesting and important work.

Bro. Alpass accordingly took the position of Consecrating Officer soon after two o'clock, and appointed Bro. J. Pemberton, P.G. Supt. of Works, as his S.W.; and Bro. B. B. Marson, P.G.S., as his J.W. The whole of the consecrating work was most efficiently performed by the presiding officers, who were assisted by Bros. the Rev. H. G. Vernon, P.P.G. Chap. of Lancashire and Cheshire, Hon. Chaplain of Lodge 1505, acting as P.G. Chaplain; G. D. Pochin, P.G. Reg., acting as P.G. Sec.; J. McKune, P.M. 216, acting P.G.D.C.; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., acting P.G. Assistant D.C.; R. Martin, P.M. 1094; H. Williams, P.M. 249; and J. Hayes, P.M. 249. The fine musical consecration service composed by Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G. Organist (who presided at the harmonium) was rendered with fine effect by Bros. J. Busfield, 216; T. J. Hughes, 216; C. Haswell, 203; and D. Jones, 155.

The following eloquent oration was delivered during the ceremony by Bro. the Rev. G. H. Vernon, acting P.G. Chaplain:—

Worshipful Sir, Grand Officers, and Brethren,—At the dedication of this, the Ancient Briton Lodge, it has devolved upon me, in the discharge of the duties of the office which I have this day been requested to hold, in the absence of the P.G.C., to address to you a few observations suitable to this interesting occasion. There is always, no doubt, a feeling of solemnity attached to the meetings of the brethren, even when the business that calls them together is of the most ordinary nature, for no degree exempts us from that serious obligation which is the glory of our Craft at all times and under all circumstances at the opening of a lodge solemnly to invoke the presence and continuance of the Great Architect of the World. But to-day we are called together for a purpose so august and sacred that all levity and carelessness must be utterly impossible while in pursuance of dedicating this lodge to His services who, as the Great Master Builder, has originated the principles upon which our Masonic Order professes to be founded. And first, as to principles, which are the foundations of any Order, our principles are—that our members should be mutually beneficial to each other, and instrumental for the good of society, which, in the Scriptural phrase, is "to be of one mind," having compassion one for another, and to love as brethren. Wherever there is a brother, like ourselves, the offspring of one common stock, partaker of the same nature, and sharer of the same hope, so in numberless instances it has proved itself to be; it has gained for the wandering traveller kindness in an inhospitable and savage clime; it has quelled the violence of the pirate by sea; it has in all the various and distinct nations which diversify the map of the world discovered everywhere an object for the display of that beneficence which each brother owes to his fellow. Looking back to the pages of ancient history, we trace, even in the records of the Sacred Volume, the origin of our Order. The pedigree of our Society is both ancient and honourable, for virtue is virtue, whether it be ancient or modern, whether it dazzle from the throne or glimmer from the hut, and having stood the lapse of ages, and the storm of opposition, proves itself erected upon a good and sound foundation. The principles of our Masonic Order are derived from Him who is the Maker and Builder of the Temple of the World. To the Great Master of all, in whose presence alone we seek to be approved, and to whom, as on all occasions, so now much more especially, we dedicate this lodge. Let me entreat you, then, brethren, diligently to search the Volume of the Sacred Law for the secrets of our art; and while you seek to pry into the covenant, the signs and tokens which subsisted and were communicated between the Kings of Judah and of Tyre, O may the spirit of the widow's son be in you, filling you with a knowledge of the points on which they all turned, even wisdom to design, strength to execute, and the beauties of holiness to adorn. Remember that the same pages contain an inestimable pearl of great price, and that they only are the wise and good who make that pearl their own. Gain this and you thus lay hold on the right pillar, both of solid fame and spiritual wealth, whereby you shall be established; and then you may safely rest upon the left, a still higher column in our scientific line, for in that you will find strength. Whether our lodge meet on the high mountains of worldly grandeur, and is beheld from afar, or in the lowest vales of obscurity, and noticed but by few; whether you hew on the tops of Lebanon, or are in distinguished offices near the sanctum sanctorum, or with the sons of Levi serve at the altar, be zealous in the discharge of all the duties demanded of you, nor faint though it fall to your lot to labour in the plains of Jordan. May we be found workmen that need not be ashamed, and in reliance on the integrity of our Great Master Builder, and on the title we derive from Him. May we humbly but confidently hope that a blessing will descend from the Most High upon our labours, and upon our meetings, and that from associating together as brethren in unity here, we may meet again as brethren in bliss hereafter.—So mote it be.

Besides those who took part in the imposing ceremonial there were present Bros. J. I. Knight, P.M. 241; Dr. J. K. Smith, P.P.G. Reg. (W.M. designate); R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D. (S.W. designate); Joseph Bell, W.M. 1609, P.M. 1356; D. S. Davies, W.M. 216; J. C. Robinson, J.W. 249; W. B. Ackerley, P.M. 680; Joseph Wood, Treas. 1094 (Freemason); G. Turner, P.G. Treas.; W. P. Goodman, 594; J. Keet, 1609; E. C. Jones, 249; Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, Thos. Evans, and others.

At the conclusion of the consecration ceremony, Bro. Dr. J. Kellert Smith, P.P.G. Registrar, was installed the first W.M. of Ancient Briton Lodge by Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., assisted by Bro. W. B. Ackerley, P.M. 680.

The following were subsequently invested officers of the new lodge:—Bros. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., S.W.; J. R. Bottomley, J.W.; the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, Treas.; T. Evans, Sec.; J. W. Johnson, S.D.; H. Wynne Parry, J.D.; and Bro. M. Williamson was unanimously elected Tyler.

The fact that thirty-four brethren were proposed as joining members and fourteen gentlemen for initiation showed the vitality which is likely to characterise the existence of the Ancient Briton Lodge.

The majority of the P.G. Officers, nearly the whole of the brethren who will belong to the lodge, and a large number of visitors subsequently dined in the large banqueting hall, under the presidency of Bro. Dr. Smith, W.M. Bro. W. Vines, P.M. 220, gave the greatest satisfaction in connection with his catering.

During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and cordially responded to.

The W.M. gave "The Queen," "The M.W.G.M., His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales," &c., and subsequently gave "The Consecrating and Installing Officers," to which Bro. Alpass responded, and wished the greatest success to the new lodge.

"The W.M.," given by Bro. Alpass, was acknowledged by Bro. Dr. Smith in an excellent speech, in the course of which he said that nothing would be wanting on his part to make the new lodge a complete success.

"The Officers" was responded to by the S.W., J.W., Treas., and Sec.; "Our Musical Brethren" by Bro. Skeaf, Bro. T. J. Hughes (who spoke in Welsh), and Bro. D. Jones.

"The Visitors," given by the W.M., was acknowledged by Bro. D. S. Davies, W.M. 216.

The proceedings closed at an early hour, and previous to this a special vote of thanks was passed to the brethren of the Lodge of Israel, No. 1502, for having kindly agreed to hold their meeting that evening in the Old Lodge Room to accommodate the "Ancient Britons."

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

FESTIVAL OF THE STABILITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.

The sixtieth anniversary of the Stability Lodge of Instruction, more generally known as Bro. Henry Muggeridge's Lodge of Instruction, was celebrated according to annual custom on the last Friday in April, and was honoured as usual by a very large attendance of the brethren, not only of the workers under Bro. Muggeridge's mode, but by those who follow the Emulation formula. The festival was a great success, both as regards the attendance at the banquet and in the lodge, where some brethren, eminent as working brethren, had agreed to assist him in working some sections. Bro. H. Muggeridge presided, and after the lodge had been opened the following work was performed:—

First Degree.	1st Section.	Bro. E. H. Hewett, S.W. 235.
	2nd "	" J. W. Clever, J.W. 171.
	3rd "	" E. F. Storr, W.M. 22.
	7th "	" A. H. Diaper, P.M. 5., P.G.S.

Second Degree. Bro. H. Muggeridge lectured on the Six Grand Periods, and the Moral Advantages of Geometry.

Third Degree. Bro. J. B. Scriven, P.G. Stwd., lectured on the Lodge Board of this Degree.

When this work was concluded a letter was read from Grand Secretary regretting his inability to attend. On the recommendation of the Treasurer Bro. Scriven proposed, and Bro. Benj. Head seconded, the following grants: £10 10s. to the Girls' School, £5 5s. to the Boys' School, and £5 to the Benevolent Institution. A vote of thanks to Bro. Muggeridge, proposed by Col. Burdett and seconded by Bro. S. Rawson, was unanimously adopted, as was also a vote of thanks to the working brethren, proposed by Col. Burdett, and seconded by Bro. Snell, P.G.D.

Bro. J. B. Scriven having replied, thirteen new members' names were proposed for election, and the lodge was then closed. The brethren adjourned afterwards to an excellent banquet, at which Bro. Col. Burdett presided.

After banquet grace was sung by Bros. T. W. Simons, Fred. H. Rogers, and Chaplin Henry.

In giving the first toast Col. Burdett drew the attention of the brethren to the fact that within a few days her Majesty would have reigned forty years. In proposing "The Health of the M.W.G.M.," Col. Burdett reminded the meeting that we had now three Royal Princes Grand Officers, and he had no doubt that the G.M. would be as efficiently supported by his Royal Senior and Junior Wardens as by the other officers of Grand Lodge.

Col. Burdett then proposed the third toast, and spoke in the usual highly complimentary terms of the Pro Grand Master, and his devotion to the Craft. Notwithstanding the great pressure of his public duties he nevertheless found time to attend to Masonry and to take his place in Grand Lodge, and preside over the Craft. Of Lord Skelmersdale he spoke in equally laudatory terms. He was a great favourite with the Order, and was heartily received whenever he made his appearance among them. Whenever he was called upon to perform his duties he did so to the satisfaction not only of himself but of the whole body of the Craft.

Bro. S. Rawson, P.D.G.M. China, responded. When representing such a grand phalanx of Grand Officers as were appointed on the previous Wednesday evening he thought one must be wanting in all proper pride who did not feel honoured by being their representative. Colonel Burdett had so forcibly expressed the qualities of the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master that nothing he could say would enhance their merits, and he felt sure that the brethren quite agreed with Col. Burdett's feelings. Speaking for the more humble junior officers, and thanking the gallant colonel for proposing their health, he was sure that those recently appointed had been well and carefully selected by those whose privilege it was to give the appointment. He was positive they would do their duty, and he claimed the same indulgence for them as had been accorded to those who had preceded them.

Col. Burdett next proposed the toast of the evening, "Success to the Stability Lodge of Instruction and Bro. Henry Muggeridge." The toast was one which all the brethren were thoroughly interested in, and on which he was sure they would all feel as he did. It had been most deservedly brought before them that evening by the exertions and energy that had been shown by a brother of the Order having done so much for the lodge. The position of the lodge now-a-days was one of the highest in Freemasonry. It would never have risen to its present position if it had not been for the exertions and interest taken in it by Bro. Muggeridge. (Cheers.) He had worked it up to the position it now held; and no doubt when he took it in hand it was very small indeed. That evening Bro. Muggeridge, by working the lectures and sections, had more than exceeded himself in his knowledge of the art. He (Col. Burdett) felt confident that every brother who had known Bro. Muggeridge for any length of time must love him, because he had always devoted himself, his time, and energies to the interest of Freemasonry, and always made himself agreeable, happy, and comfortable with every brother with whom he had become associated. He was known by many; and by some better than by him (Colonel Burdett), although he had known Bro. Muggeridge a long time. He hoped Bro. Muggeridge would be with them for many years to come. Should this happen to be the case, whenever this anniversary came round he should have the same pleasure in attending to greet Bro. Muggeridge. (Great applause.)

The toast having been drunk with enthusiasm, Bro. H. Muggeridge rose to reply, amidst renewed cheering. He said he felt highly gratified, and no doubt some of the brethren expected him to make a speech—a long one; but he could assure them that he was in the unfortunate position of Mr. Canning's Knife Grinder—"Story! God bless you, I have none to tell, sir." He had returned thanks for this toast so often that he had exhausted everything he had to say on the subject; and having done so on so many previous occasions, there was no necessity for inflicting the same speech on the brethren year after year. He had nothing fresh to tell them, but he would say this, he had attended close upon 40 years—38 years—and they could not expect him to say anything fresh. This lodge of instruction had always been in a prosperous condition. It was founded 60 years ago, he was going to say before he was born, but before his advent into Freemasonry. It was founded in the year 1817 by many celebrated Masons, Bro. Peter Thompson and others, and he (Bro. Muggeridge) joined it the day after he was initiated in 1839. Very shortly after that he had the opportunity of making the acquaintance of the Past District Grand Master of China, Bro. Rawson—it was something like 38 years ago he made his friendship. The lodge of instruction had gone on progressing and flourishing, and perhaps it had latterly flourished more than it did some years ago, because there had been such an increase in Masonry, both in the number of lodges, the number of members, and in the support given to the charitable institutions of the Order. These were supported to a much greater extent than they used to be; and the lodges of instruction were also much more greatly supported than they once were. He hoped to be with the brethren for some years to come; but, as he said just now, he had no story to tell, and so he simply confined himself to thanking the brethren for the toast they had drunk, and for the heartiness and warmth with which his name had been received.

Bro. Rawson, D.P.G.M. China, proposed "The Health of the Chairman." Bro. Colonel Burdett was the Grand Master for Middlesex, and all the brethren knew how the province had flourished under his rule. Some little of that increase might be attributable to the natural and general increase in Freemasonry. Still, without the kind care that Col. Burdett had given to the province of Middlesex, he did not think the brethren would have seen the province in the grand position it now occupied.

Col. Burdett replied. Like Bro. Muggeridge he had responded to this toast so often that he had nothing more to say. He believed he had responded, perhaps not one hundred and fifty times, but an enormous number of times, and he would not attempt to reiterate anything he had before said. He was quite sure that if the brethren did not think he had done his duty they would not have received him in the way they had received him. As a Grand Officer he had been called upon at various times to perform several duties, some of which were arduous. Not only as Grand Master of Middlesex but as representative of the Grand Lodge of Ireland he had endeavoured to perform the duties cast upon him, and to exert himself for the benefit of Freemasonry and the good of all around him. Every man who took up any position must, if he desired to discharge its duties as he ought, apply himself to discharging them to the utmost of his ability; and he was satisfied that every Grand Officer who had been appointed within the last twelve or fifteen years had done his duty to the utmost of his power. Some might have done it better than others, but all had done it to the best of their ability. For himself, he knew very well there had been several shortcomings on his part, but the brethren would forgive them. Col. Burdett then gave the toast of "The Working Brethren," and complimented them very highly on the way in which they had performed their work that evening. All the brethren had seen how they had done it, and it was unnecessary for him to speak about it. He begged the brethren to consider what hard work and application there must have been on the part of those brethren to produce the efficiency which they had displayed.

Bro. E. F. Storr, W.M. 22, replied. The working brethren were a band who met together for one purpose, to do Masonic work well. If they had failed that evening it had not been for want of wishing to do the work well, but from a feeling of not being able to comply as well as they hoped to have done with the requirements. Some of them had had more to do than ever to get up the ritual for that meeting. If what they had done had met with the approval of the brethren they were well repaid for any labour they had undergone. They believed there was something more in Masonry than the "Fourth Degree," and to prove this they worked hard at lodge work.

Bro. J. B. Scriven proposed "The Sister Lodge of Instruction." He was sure that any attempt to assimilate the workings of Masonry and reduce them to a dead level would be, for many reasons which he could not explain, as it always had been, a failure; and as a working Mason he should be very sorry to see it done. As long as there were different modes, one at the Emulation and another at the Stability, there would be an Emulation among the working Masons, and a Stability in their principles. He sincerely hoped, as he had said at the Harmony at Richmond, the Apollo at Oxford, the Emulation at Freemasons' Hall, and at the Stability Lodge of Instruction, that the workings would remain as they were, slightly different in words but the same in sense, and so avoid the learning according to a parrot system. He was very sorry that Bro. Hervey was not present.

Bro. Hubbuck replied to the toast. He knew that the two lodges worked in harmony. The Emulation wished success to the Stability, and the Stability to the Emulation. It was only from an avoidable cause that Bro. Hervey was not with them. As to the remarks of Bro. Scriven he might say that the difference in the mode was only one of verbiage, which was not at all material.

Bro. George Brooke No. 63, the only member of the Emulation Lodge present, said he was much pleased at the working of the Stability Lodge. He was struck with the contrast there was between him and Bro. Muggenridge, the latter of whom was initiated in 1839, while the former had only been a member of the Emulation two years. Bro. Col. Burdett proposed "The Masonic Charities." Bro. Benjamin Head responded. He felt most warmly for the Charities, and if the brethren would only put their horses to the plough they would keep pace with the requirements of the order. The Boys' School had over 180 boys in it, and the Girls' School had over 150 girls. The latter were going to have 50 more. He hoped the brethren would do their best among their friends for the purpose of obtaining assistance in the cause which they all had at heart. The Committees were doing their best to meet the wants of the time, and he asked the brethren to do all in their power to assist them. There was a Bro. Snow in this city who wanted the House Committee of the Boys' School to give orders for building which would come to about £10,000 and to take the risk of getting subscriptions sufficient to keep them up. They did not intend to do it. When the subscriptions came in they would be very glad to build larger buildings. The brethren then separated. Bros. T. W. Simons, Fred H. Cozens, and Chaplin Henry were the musical brethren, who performed some charming selections during the evening.

Only three minutes' walk from the Gower-street Station, of the Metropolitan Railway, and within easy access by the general railway system of the kingdom, is situated the extensive establishment of Messrs. Oetzmann and Co., complete House Furnishers, Hampstead-road. Some time ago we called attention, in our columns, to a work published by this enterprising firm, entitled "A Guide to House Furnishing," a most valuable work, ably compiled, and affording every information necessary for this important undertaking. Extensive as was the establishment at that time considerable additions have since been made, and, through the courtesy of one of the firm, an opportunity has recently been afforded us of visiting this varied emporium, a rough sketch of which we give to our numerous readers. The several departments are so arranged that one is enabled at a glance to grasp the various appointments, and whether it be Furniture, Carpets, Bedding, Drapery, Ironmongery, China, etc.,—for as we before observed the firm are complete House Furnishers—the several requirements and wants at all prices are before you. A most important feature is the Art Gallery, where are collected Bronzes, Oil Paintings, Water Colour Drawings, Olographs, and Fine Art Engravings, so that the mansion or the cottage may receive the addition that refinement lends to taste. Originality in design and manufacture is a great feature of this house, and, secured by letters of registration, renders piracy impossible. A New Edition of "The Guide to House Furnishing" has been recently published, and for an exhaustive treatise we commend the attention of our readers to this work, whilst a visit to the Show-Rooms (apart from commercial investment) will well repay the time expended. Any of our readers residing at a distance, desirous of leaving the selection of goods to the firm, may rely upon a faithful attention to their wishes and interest. In addition to many others, Messrs. Oetzmann & Co. offer special advantages to customers in delivery of goods by their own large Pantechon vans, and the fixing in position by competent persons. We would recommend to our readers a treatise entitled "Hints on House Furnishing and Decoration," by Mr. John R. A. Oetzmann, which contains much useful information, and forms part of their "Guide to House Furnishing," which they forward gratuitously on application.

DISCOVERY OF COAL IN LINCOLNSHIRE.—A Sheffield correspondent writes:—"In sinking a deep well on the premises of Mrs. Barranda, Brewer, Billingborough, the borers have just encountered a seam of bright soft coal. This unexpected discovery solves the question of there being coal in Lincolnshire, in endeavouring to prove this borings have been fruitlessly made at Searle, near Lincoln, for two years past, and which have reached a depth of 2030ft. This accidental proof is therefore of vast importance.

A sale of wines, spirits, and liqueurs possessing very unusual features took place on Saturday at Edinburgh. The object of the sale was the disposal of the rare and curious contents of the cellar of the late Hon. Lady Menzies. Some of the prices realised were as unique as the wines, spirits and liqueurs themselves. Amidst a number of exceptionally high figures, the following may be mentioned:—Some fine old port, 1834 vintage, and known as the "Violet Port," was bought at £10 £8 10s., and £8 per dozen. The same purchasers obtained another brand of 1834 port at £7 a dozen. "Donna Salvadora," sherry, bottled in 1848, realised £5 10s. a dozen. This was not the highest figure paid for sherry. Nine bottles dated 1710 fetched £7 10s.; and what was left of two dozen and eight bottles of dark sherry of the same date realised £9. Several samples of sherry of the vintage of 1810 were sold for £5 a dozen, whilst a bin dated 1807 mounted up to £9 15s. a dozen. Nine bottles of an old sherry dated 1780 brought £5 10s. Some old Madeira from the vineyards of the Hon. Mrs. Norton also met with eager demand, and was sold at prices varying from £9 to five guineas a dozen. Brandy known to be more than eighty years old realised 95s. a dozen, and a few bottles of whisky which had matured for more than a century, were knocked down at £12 10s. a dozen. Rum was quite as much sought after, £7 10s. having been given for a dozen. One bottle of whisky labelled 1745, another from Benbecula, and a bottle of rum were sold for £5 a bottle.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgia Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attack no tissue of the human body is exempt, no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills much assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders; whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body. The cure is neither temporary nor superficial, but permanent and complete, and the disease rarely recurs, so perfect has been the purification performed by these searching preparations.—ADVT.

THE MOVEMENTS OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

The Prince of Wales reached Marseilles on Wednesday morning, the 2nd inst., in the Sultan, and was saluted by a French man-of-war, as also by the guns of the port, on landing. He was expected to reach Paris on the 3rd inst. The Prince was waited upon by the authorities, and landed at 3 p.m. to take the train for Paris. He is said to have received great benefit from his tour.

BROS. CAUBET AND GRIMAUX.

We have received the Monde Maçonnique for April, and note that Bros. Caubet and Grimaux have thought it well to "return to the charge." We therefore take their remarks seriatim, and leave of them at the same time, auguring but little good for the future of French Freemasonry if the spirit evinced by these two well-known brethren be in any sense that of French Freemasons generally. First, as regards Bro. Grimaux. His position, as exemplified in his last "Communiqué" to the Monde Maçonnique, is made, in our opinion much worse by the jesuitical sophistry which characterizes it from first to last. Bro. Grimaux originally stated that a "Grande Loge des Philadelphes et de la Concorde reunis," met in London, and that Bro. Valleton had issued a circular "dans l'intérêt des Maçons anglais." We pointed out that no such Grand Lodge existed or could exist in London, and that any body of men calling themselves a Grand Lodge was an irregular and clandestine body. We added that Bro. Valleton had no authority to profess to act "dans l'intérêt" of our English brethren, as English Freemasons are represented by our Grand Master, the Prince of Wales, chairman of a national committee in respect of the French Exposition of 1878. We were told in reply by Bro. Grimaux that the Loge des Philadelphes was only irregular "bien malgré elle," that is, because it had no warrant from our English Grand Lodge, and then practically not irregular at all, and that it was not clandestine because it had openly avowed its existence. We then ventured to assert that some Jesuit must have directed the pen of Bro. Grimaux, because no more sophistical unmasonic position had ever been assumed by any one in Freemasonry. We also told Bro. Grimaux that his facts were incorrect, that the Loge "Les Philadelphes," a body about which our Grand Lodge warned the English brethren some time ago, and which has been repudiated by the Grand Orient of France itself, has never applied for a warrant, on the contrary, it has continued a spurious and illegal body, glorying in its own shame. It is true that "La Concorde" had applied and was very properly refused, and to a body composed of these two spurious so-called lodges, the Monde Maçonnique gives the name of a regular Grand Lodge. What is Bro. Grimaux's reply? Risum teneatis Fratres! He coolly says to-day that he told us, "comment c'était une loge irreguliere et clandestine," that it was only irregular through its misfortune, not its fault, and not at all clandestine! Can the force of jesuitical subterfuge or verbal chicanery any further go? We think not, and therefore we beg respectfully to take our leave of Bro. Grimaux and the Grande Loge des Philadelphes, as utterly unworthy any further notice by legal and loyal Freemasons. Bro. Caubet affects to be both sarcastic and facetious, and utterly fails in each category. It is quite clear that Bro. Caubet has not realized the word toleration, because we must beg to say to him that profession is one thing, practice is another. In our humble opinion it is most intolerant on the part of the "libres penseurs," to endeavour to erase a familiar, if religious formula, from French Freemasonry, which suicidal act will be a stumbling block to thousands upon thousands of serious and devout Masons. Intolerance is not only shown in the form and letter, which Bro. Caubet apparently forgets, but in the spirit and the motive. The French Grand Orient has a complete right, we admit (if it be so ill advised), to erase the "belief in God" as a fundamental condition of acceptance from its constitution; but then it must not be surprised if we Anglo-Saxon Freemasons, who look upon this truth as the first great landmark of Freemasonry, if we Anglo-Saxon Freemasons, we repeat, decline to have any thing to do Masonically with our French brethren, who have so deviated from what we honestly consider to be an eternal obligation of cosmopolitan Freemasonry. Bro. Caubet hardly sees either how the Masonic character of the Grand Orient may be affected by this untoward revolution. It is simply because we wish well to French Freemasonry that we have spoken as warmly as we have on the subject. It is because we feel the matter strongly and conscientiously that we have offered our humble advice honestly and fraternally to our French brethren. That it is misconstrued we cannot help; that we are told we have neither "raison" nor anything else is no fault of ours. We have spoken freely, fairly, truly, honestly, in fear of God and in love for man. We have treated the question entirely "au sérieux," as Anglo-Saxon Freemasons can alone treat it, and let us hope will ever alone treat it, and we can only deeply regret that our views and those of Bro. Caubet are as far as the "poles asunder." But Bro. Caubet will permit us to observe, in conclusion, that the tone in which he has "abordé" this most grave question is neither very reasonable, nor very Masonic, nor very courteous to us. There is a menacing manner and an almost bullying temper about it, which are very offensive to high-spirited English Freemasons. Somehow or other there seems to come with it a reminiscence of violent words and unseemly deeds, which proclaimed, so to say, not long ago, in "la Grande Ville," an age of "déraison" and of "barbarisme." We are not accustomed to such language in English Freemasonry as the remarks which have recently fallen from Bro. Grimaux about cheap Bibles, or our much beloved and truly valued Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey, or even our humble selves. But we leave the subject here to-day. When Bro. Caubet, and those who think with him, have emerged from their passing excitement and agitation, when all these "fanfaronnades" are over; when we can talk seriously and sanely, and above all, as true Freemasons should discuss such matters, we shall be most happy to look at the matter from its philosophical side, and peacefully compare our opposing systems in France and England. But at present Bro. Caubet and others are clearly not in a fit condition to discuss the subject, having lost both their good sense and their good temper, and we can only recommend some of our worthy but fiery brethren a little calm retreat in a "maison de santé." Then perhaps they will appreciate our honest and English expression of religious reverence and of good will, better than they seem to do "pour le moment."

THE CITY GUILDS.

The controversy which has been raised recently with reference to this most important question continues; and as most diametrically, opposite views have been expressed to ours last week, we think it well to return to the subject to-day. Mr. Roland P. Phillips has intervened in the Times and, "inter alia," has said: "The Solicitor General's argument that the Guilds are analogous in all respects to the West-end Clubs and other voluntary associations shows a brave disregard of history and is sufficiently refuted by the simple fact that the Companies, whatever they were originally, became in time not voluntary associations at all. By their charters they were empowered to compel every artificer or craftsman belonging to any particular trade to take up his freedom in the Company. For this he was taxable, and if he declined, he was not permitted to carry on his calling within the jurisdiction of the Guild—sometimes extending to a district of ten or even 20 miles outside the City area. The fees and dues thus levied were one source of their wealth; for in those simple days, as every man paid for his dinner, these fees became the nucleus and foundation of all their greatness. Let us, therefore, hear no more nonsense about any analogy between the Guilds and modern Clubs and associations." Now we beg to say that such an argument, however tenable 300 years ago, is no longer so now. 300 years ago, if you like, the trading guilds being formed originally for the purposes of mutual aid and regulation of trade, no doubt were empowered by royal charters to receive members, and give the freedom to the apprentices, and much of restriction attended the exercise of the various Crafts in these Guilds. But even this privilege was not originally granted, only confirmed, as the royal charter only sanctioned what had long existed by custom, common law, and immemorial usage. The Guilds in their original formation and idea were purely indigenous, independent, self-supporting associations, sanctioned no doubt by early law, and regulated from time to time by Acts of Parliament. But they have never received royal or state, or municipal grants, except the privilege of taxing themselves, for the support of the Guild. Latterly, as we know, the restrictive privileges of the Guilds have been abolished, and the London Companies, except for their charitable trusts, the liberty and freedom of the City of London, are purely voluntary associations. No doubt an "ex post facto" law could be passed to compel them to exhibit their private accounts, but, in our opinion, it would be an interference with the rights of property, and set a most dangerous precedent. It appears to us that many of those who attack the City companies do not realize the difference between charitable endowments and general bequests. All the Guilds had, and still have, the right, to assess their members, for their own purposes, and to affix certain fees for taking up the freedom. A large portion of their property is that which is left them by individual members, for the "de bene esse" of the Guild itself, and that is a matter purely within their own direction and decision how it is spent. Mr. Phillips's complaint, that the Guilds, in some cases of charity, only pay now what was paid of old, forgets that by his law if it be correct, (and he gives chapter and verse, apparently, for his statement that such is the case), hundreds of educational charities must be gravely affected. We know of countless cases where, despite the increased value of property, the lay or other holder only gives the amount of the original rent charge or customary payment. If the statement of Mr. Phillips as regards the Waxchandlers' Company and William Kendall's will be correct, then there are hundreds of persons in this country who have been living "on the spoils of the poor." For the guilds are not singular in this view of matters. If, where a rent-charge is to be paid for ever out of property to the poor, as in William Kendall's case, of £8 per annum, and that land then bringing in £9 4s., now returns £300, and the whole £300 belong to the poor, then we need hardly add that the Charity Commissioners have a goodly harvest of corrective administration before them all over England. In all probability, in William Kendall's case the property was given absolutely to the poor on an assumed value, saving the rights of the legatee, otherwise as countless other cases to the contrary are notorious in respect of hospitals, grammar schools, parsons' payments, and the like, it is impossible to realize the effect of a literal application of what Mr. R. Phillips calls the undoubted law on the subject. In Donkyn's case (Merchant Taylors' Company), cited also by Mr. Phillips, his bequest would seem to imply that he left Bell Alley for the purposes of charity, and not merely a rent charge. Of course a good deal turns upon the exact words of the wills themselves, and other considerations which we need not enter into to-day. We may observe that the Companies have paid imposts to the Crown more than once. We think that the indictment drawn up by Mr. Phillips against the Companies in the Times of April 17th unfair and unjust, and the more we look into the matter the more we deprecate this Oriental method of dealing with our ancient City Companies, simply, apparently, because they are well to do in the world.

He is also a member and P.M. of British Union Lodge, No. 114. He was exalted in British Chapter, No. 8, on the 6th May, 1870, and is now its M.E.Z. Bro. De Lande Long has been a member of the Board of General Purposes for the last five years, and has occupied the Vice President's chair for three years past, which important office he still holds. He is a Life Governor of the three Masonic Charities, having served as Steward to each, and is a member of the House Committee of the Girls' School.

JUNIOR GRAND DEACONS.

The appointment, by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales of Bro. EDWARD J. MORRIS, of Swansea, and late D.P. Grand Master of the Eastern Division of South Wales, to the office of Junior Grand Deacon for the ensuing year, is regarded in the Sister Provinces of South Wales as a very graceful compliment, and as a recognition of Masonic services to the Provinces of no ordinary kind. As a Mason Bro. Morris's career has been a brilliant one. Initiated in the Indefatigable Lodge, No. 237, Swansea, in May, 1856, he in succession held the office of Secretary, Junior Warden, Senior Warden, and in 1860, four years after his initiation, was elected W.M., an office which he again filled in 1864. In 1859 he was appointed Prov. G. Deacon. During his second Mastership of the Indefatigable Lodge, in 1864, he initiated, in Wales, the system of working the Sections, and held Lodges of Instruction for that purpose—on one occasion he, assisted by his officers, worked the Fifteen Sections. In addition to his labours in the Indefatigable, he was the founder of the Talbot Lodge, No. 1323, Swansea, of which he was the first W.M. He is an honorary member of the Cambrian, Afane, Caradoc, and Merlin Lodges in the Eastern Division, and of the St. Peter's in the Western. He is the oldest Mark Master Mason in South Wales, and the founder and first W.M. of the Talbot Lodge of Mark Masons, Swansea. In Royal Arch Masonry, too, he has been equally successful. He was exalted in the Virtue and Hope Chapter, 237, Swansea, in October, 1857, served in all the chairs, and filled the first chair three times; he has also been M.E.Z. of the St. David's and Talbot Chapters, of the latter of which he was the founder. It was by his advice and assistance that the Merlin Chapter, No. 476, Carmarthen, was resuscitated, and in which he has also filled the chair of M.E.Z. He is an honorary member of the St. David's Merlin, and St. Elin Chapters, which last he consecrated. He is a P.E.P. of the Palestine Encampment of Knights Templar, Swansea, and held the office of Sub-Prior of South Wales. He is also a member of the Rose Croix and 30th Degrees.

Bro. HENRY C. TOMBS was initiated in 1863 in the Royal Sussex Lodge of Emulation, No. 355; is now P.M. of that lodge, and P.Z. of the chapter attached thereto. In 1868 he was appointed, and has since held, the office of Prov. G. Sec. for Wiltshire, under the R.W. Prov. G. Master, Lord Methuen. On the formation of the Provincial Grand Chapter for Wiltshire Bro. Tombs was appointed, and has since held, the office of P.G.S.E. under E. Comp. Lord Henry T. Thynne, P.G.N., and Prov. G. Superintendent Wiltshire, and was one of the two Wiltshire Stewards on the occasion of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at Albert Hall. A few years since Bro. Tombs organized an efficient charity organization for his province, which has worked most effectually and beneficially, and is now in active co-operation with several surrounding provinces. Owing to professional engagements, he has been recently obliged to resign the Charity Secretaryship, but, fortunately for the province, has been succeeded in that office by Bro. Wm. Nott, of Devizes, P.M., P.Z., P.P. G.R. Wiltshire. In 1876 he undertook Stewardships for the Girls' School and Benevolent Institution, and the aggregate of his lists amounted to £318.

GRAND SWORD BEARER.

Bro. GEO. TOLLER, jun., was initiated into Masonry in the John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 523, Leicester, in 1866, and after successively filling the Wardens' chairs, became W.M. in 1869; was Prov. G. Secretary of Leicestershire from 1869 to 1872, when he was, at his own request, relieved from office; afterwards appointed Prov. Senior G. Warden, and is again at the present time Prov. G. Secretary; exalted to the Royal Arch in 1867, and after holding the office of Principal Sojourner, passed the three Principals' chairs of J., H., and Z., is at the present time Prov. G.S.E.; in the high degrees he was advanced to the Mark in the Fowke Lodge, No. 19, Leicester, and after holding various minor offices, became W.M. in 1875, and is now Prov. Senior G. Warden; is a Knight Templar; also a member of the 30°, and of the Royal Order of Scotland, a Past Soy. and member of the Grand Council of the Red Cross Order, a Life Governor of the Boys' School, and an occasional subscriber to the Girls'.

ASSISTANT GRAND SECRETARY.

Bro. H. G. Buss was W.M. of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, in 1850, Secretary from 1851 to 1874, and is now Treasurer of that Lodge; was M.E.Z. of Domestic Chapter, No. 177, in 1856, S.E. for several years, and now Treasurer of that chapter. Bro. Buss occupied the post of Secretary of the Canonbury Lodge, No. 657 (of which he was a founder in 1856) for the last 12 years. He was a founder and the first Secretary of the Rose of Denmark Lodge, No. 975, in 1863, and a founder, and now Treasurer, of the Chapter 975; also a founder of the Royal Albert Lodge, No. 780, in 1859, and Secretary of that lodge for 14 years. He took an active part in the formation of the province of Middlesex (Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M.), and was appointed Prov. Grand Treasurer from 1870, and was appointed P.J. G.W. in 1876, and is Treasurer of the Prov. G. Chapter of Middlesex. He was also a founder, and is now Secretary of the Burdett Lodge, No. 1293, and a founder and Treasurer of the Burdett Chapter, No. 1293; a founder and Secretary of the Mizpah Lodge, No. 1671, consecrated in March last. Bro. Buss is an hon. member of many lodges and chapters. He was appointed clerk in the Grand Secretary's office by the late Bro. W. W. White, Grand Secretary in 1855; and has served Stewardships of the three charities, and is a Life Governor of each.

GRAND PURSUIVANT.

Bro. W. T. Howe was initiated in the Esphrates Lodge, No. 212, Feb., 1872, and was the founder and first W.M., and is the present Treasurer of the Prince Leopold Lodge, No. 1445; he joined the Thames Valley Lodge, No. 1460, in 1874, and is now the W.M. of that lodge, and received provincial honours from Col. Burdett in 1875; he was exalted in the Doric Chapter, No. 933, June, 1873; joined the Chapter of Stability, No. 217, and is the present M.E.Z. of the latter chapter. Bro. Howe is a Life Governor of each of the Masonic Charities, having served four Stewardships; and is Steward for the forthcoming festival in May, and has for the fourth year been elected one of the twelve Past Masters on the Board of Benevolence. Bro. Howe is well known for his rendering of the ritual and the sections, installation ceremony, &c., both in lodge and lodges of instruction. He is also one of the Grand Senate of the Order of the Red Cross of Constantine, and S.D. of No. 1, Mark Lodge.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

The war has commenced, and Russia has apparently gained some slight successes in Asia Minor, and the Russian troops have taken Bayazid. We can rejoice that the English Government has manfully laboured always in the cause of peace and the best interests of all concerned.

IN MEMORIAM.

Most of our brethren who read American Masonic literature will be deeply sorry to hear of the death of that well-known Masonic "litterateur," Bro. Frank George Gouley. His, as the Keystone says, was a truly "tragic" end, for he fell a victim to that sad conflagration, at the Southern Hotel St. Louis, on the 10th April last. His wife was saved, but he perished, though how is still somewhat of a mystery. In Bro. Gouley American and Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry has lost a most clear and able writer, and a most zealous and highminded brethren, and we sincerely condole with his afflicted family and his many mourning friends in the United States. He will be a missed man in Freemasonry in his native land and the Craft generally.

THE COMMEMORATIVE LIFEBOATS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Kindly allow me to confirm the statements of "Jebah," respecting the serious loss of life and property on the coasts of Scilly. Beyond all question if the statistics furnished by various competent authorities are to be relied on, Scilly waters, according to their area, are the scene of more shipping calamities than any other in Great Britain. No one acquainted with the position of the group of islands there, and the various phenomena of which they are the centre, can at all be surprised at this; yet, although the destruction of one vessel with the drowning of her crew scarcely fades from our memory before another like tragedy is announced, year after year rolls on without any adequate measure being adopted to lessen the casualties or their attendant horrors. From a special and close study of the whole question I am prepared to admit that there are peculiar difficulties in connection with it, but if the proper authorities will but address themselves to it in earnestness I am very well assured that the result would be eminently satisfactory to the nation at large, and I see something very lamentable in the decay of national philanthropy, national prudence, and national genius which this continued apathy, neglect, and timidity very clearly indicate.

I have felt myself, from the data placed in my hands by those most competent to estimate their value, justified in advocating, as preventative and remedial appliances for the protection of the maritime interests of the various nations which send their ships to and from these latitudes, five different kinds of appliances, namely:

- 1st. A steam fog-horn of first-class power to be placed on St. Agnes Island.
- 2nd. A complete system of telegraphy, to embrace the whole of the five inhabited islands, and to communicate with Penzance.
- 3rd. Lifeboats to be placed on each side of the Main or Broad Sound, say at Inesco and St. Agnes.
- 4th. Rocket apparatus for St. Martin's Island.
- 5th. Telegraph-buoys, upon the principle designed by A. M. Festing, Esq., and submitted by myself, with that gentleman's permission, to the Board of Trade.

Most of the features of my plan have been before the world in the columns of the Times, Standard, and many of the leading daily and weekly journals of this kingdom, ever since September last. They have been brought specially by private letters from myself before many of our leading men, most, if not all, of whom say they agree with me in the main. These views, then, of mine, have been criticised, and generally accepted as sound, practicable, and economic. But nothing has really been done. It is true the Board of Trade have consented to send their Inspector General of Life Saving Apparatus to Scilly to examine and fully report on his branch of the question. The Royal National Lifeboat Institution, Lloyd's agent says, have, since my complaints were made current, sent Lieut. Jones to the islands, and I suppose from what Mr. Banfield writes in the Plymouth Mercury, consented to my proposal, so far as to where lifeboats should be placed are concerned; but no lifeboat has, upon the Lieutenant's shewing, been voted by the Institution, and this is why I have taken the liberty of addressing Lord Carnarvon and yourself respecting the two "Commemorative Boats," given so generously by the Freemasons. The Trinity House write me to say that they have the question of fog signals for Scilly under consideration, but that is not a very encouraging reply, and if it is the best they can give so much the more is it to be regretted.

Let me say, in conclusion, that I do not care as to the form of the appliances, be they what I recommend or not. What I plead for is, that something be done of a practical nature, by which shipwrecks may, if possible, be averted on these uniquely dangerous coasts, and if that be not possible, then to save the lives of those who may have the misfortune to be in the vessels when they come to grief. Freemasonry is essentially philanthropic, and I know that in your columns the cause of the widow and orphan cannot be pleaded in vain, no matter how unskilful the advocate may be.

Yours faithfully,

LUCRETIVS.

FREEMASONRY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a subscriber to the Freemason, I take the liberty to request a space in your columns for the following important matter. My reason for so doing is, that among your numerous and talented correspondents not one is aware of the many causes which tend to create a disunion among the brotherhood in South Africa.

At present we have many lodges in South Africa established under various constitutions, English, Scotch, and Dutch. But, notwithstanding the good and fraternal feeling which appears to exist among the brethren working under these different constitutions, there are barriers which prevent social intercourse, and naturally create a feeling antagonistic to the spirit of Freemasonry.

For instance, a brother working under the Grand Lodge of England, and possessing the Rose Croix degree, is not allowed to enter a Dutch Rose Croix chapter when working the "Elu," which is only the Fourth in the Reformed French Rite.

Again, an English Royal Arch is not admitted to a Scotch Royal Arch chapter unless he is in possession of the Mark degree.

Now, as I consider these serious and important matters, I trust they may not escape the notice of the Grand Officers, and that they will not forget the alliance entered into (at a meeting held on the 25th April, 1770), when Charles Baron de Boetzelaer, on behalf of the Grand Lodge of Holland, promised that "if the Grand Lodge of England would agree in future not to constitute any new lodge within his jurisdiction, the Grand Lodge of Holland would observe the same restriction with respect to all parts of the world where lodges were already established under the patronage of England." Why this was not enforced when the colony became a British possession I am at a loss to understand.

The only remedy I now see is to allow the brethren in South Africa to unite themselves into one grand body, as a Grand United Lodge; then they would work harmoniously together, ever remembering that although each of us are independent of each other, we, like links of the same chain, are bound together.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

P.M. and M.W.S. DUTCH CONSTITUTION.

[We do not agree with our good correspondent. We do not think that our English system ought to be made to dovetail in with any other. We recommend our brethren to adhere to our Grand Lodge.—Ed.]

THE ORGAN AT GRAND LODGE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Is there any reason why the organ should only be used at the entrance and exit of the Grand Master?

If Bro. Willing be true to his name he would not object to attend half an hour earlier, when more scope might be afforded for both performer and instrument than is possible in the two minutes during which it is now used.

Trusting he may take the hint, and remember that he can do much to relieve the unavoidable weariness of waiting for the commencement of proceedings,

I am, fraternally yours,

P.M.

TRUE MASONIC CHARITY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The following incident of truly Masonic charity displayed by the brethren of Mount Hope Lodge, Fall River, Mass., U.S. America, has recently come under the notice of the brethren of Hope Lodge, 54, Rochdale, and we think it is one which should be generally made known through the Craft, and we know of no other means better than through the columns of your respected and widely circulated paper; and the brethren requested me to furnish you with the facts, which I now do in the form of a letter. The following are the facts of the case:—

"Some five or six years ago Bro. Luke Schofield, of No. 54, left England for America, where, after several severe struggles for success, he ultimately had to succumb to failing health, and died at Fall River on the 2nd of February, 1877, leaving a widow and four children perfectly destitute. Dr. Tourtellot, a Mason, discovered the deceased was a Freemason, and immediately acquainted his father-in-law, John B. Whitaker, M.D., and who was the Master of Mount Hope Lodge, of the facts of Bro. Schofield's death and the destitute position of his family. The brethren of that lodge, at their own expense, buried Bro. Schofield in due and ancient form, took care of the widow and family, and in due course sent them to England, the passage being paid by Mount Hope Lodge."

I consider that this is one of the noblest acts of charity that ever was performed by any lodge, and at our lodge meeting on the 11th ult. I proposed a resolution, a copy of which, and the letter by which the same was forwarded to the brethren of Mount Hope Lodge, I enclose herewith, and shall be obliged if you can find room to insert the same in your next or the following issue.

Yours fraternally,

T. BAKER ASHWORTH,

P.M. 54, 363, and 367.

"To the W.M. of Mount Hope Lodge, Fall River, Mass., U.S. America.

"Dear Sir and Brother,—

"I am instructed by the W.M., Wardens, and Brethren of the Lodge of Hope, 54, Rochdale, England, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 10th of February, A.L. 5877, informing us of the death of our late Bro. Luke Schofield. The brethren were sorry to hear of his death, and especially as it occurred so far from home and in a strange land; but their hearts rejoice to know that in the midst of strangers he found brethren who, in a truly Masonic spirit, did all they could to relieve the distress of himself and family. As an expression of the brethren's feeling respecting the noble and truly Masonic conduct displayed by the brethren of Mount Hope Lodge towards our late and lamented brother and his bereaved family, the enclosed resolution was unanimously passed at our monthly lodge, held on the 11th day of April, A.L. 5877."

"I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

"T. BAKER ASHWORTH,

"P.M. 54, 363, and 367,

"Sec. pro tem."

[RESOLUTION.]

"That this Lodge of Hope, No. 54, Rochdale, England, has heard with regret and sorrow of the decease of Bro. Luke Schofield, at Fall River, Mass., United States of America, but their grief is assuaged by the knowledge that, though far from home and in a strange land, he was not without friends, for, actuated by a pure Masonic spirit, the brethren of Mount Hope Lodge of A.F.A. Masons, of Fall River, hearing that one of the Craft lay upon a bed of sickness himself, and that his family were in a state of destitution, immediately went to offer assistance, when they found our late Bro. Schofield dead, whose remains they buried according to the rites of our Order, and whose widow and children would have been destitute had they not been succoured and sent home to England. These facts prove that Masonry is practised by the brethren of Mount Hope Lodge in its simplest and purest form, and they have set an example which might be advantageously followed by all the Craft, and the W.M., Wardens, and brethren of this lodge therefore fraternally greet their American brethren, and hope that health, peace, and plenty may be enjoyed by every member of the Mount Hope Lodge."

HONOUR BESTOWED WORTHILY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Few appointments have ever been made in the Grand Lodge of England which will give more general satisfaction to a very numerous body of brethren than that of the Worshipful Bro. E. J. Morris, the late Deputy Prov. G.M. for the Eastern Division of South Wales, as Grand Deacon of England. There is scarcely an eminent position in Masonry that has not been well and efficiently filled by this talented brother, who has made for himself a well established reputation as one of the best workers in the kingdom.

Although most indefatigable in the performance of his own duties in his own province—for he is anything but a mere show Mason—he has ever been most ready to afford instruction and assistance to the brethren of this, the Western, division of South Wales, to whom his selection to fill the office of Grand Deacon will give as complete and thorough satisfaction as if it had been bestowed on one of themselves.

For myself I shall be much obliged if you will permit me thus publicly to acknowledge in Bro. Morris a kind friend, and a most painstaking and efficient instructor.

I am, Sir, yours fraternally,

GEO. T. SMITH, P.M. 1072,
P. Prov. G. Sec., P. Prov. S.G. Warden
Western Division South Wales.

Aberystwith, 25th April, 1877.

THE EXETER MASONIC HALL.

The Freemasons of Exeter held their meetings for many years at the Tuckers' Hall, on Fore-street-hill. Before that date (from 1732) they held their meetings at private houses, and in the assembly rooms attached to the more famous hostilities of bygone days—such as the George Inn, in North-street, the Half Moon, and others. The Tuckers' Hall having become dilapidated, the master and wardens of that ancient incorporation found it necessary, for the safety of the structure to repair it and rebuild the frontage. During the time of these alterations, the brethren had to arrange for the meetings of the Craft at the Royal Public Rooms, but on eligible premises being found, a general meeting of the fraternity in Exeter and neighbourhood was held, and after discussing the advantages of a new building, as compared with adapting premises, and hearing the report of Bro. J. Jerman, the architect, it was resolved to purchase the premises at 29' Gandy-street. These have been altered and fitted up in a convenient way for the use of the several lodges. The premises in themselves are interesting as having been the residence of well-known local families, such as the Fortescues, Grangers, Brakes, Snows, and others. There are architectural features in the building indicating work of the late Tudor, Elizabethan, and Jacobean periods. The old front of the house, set back (after the manner of those days in an enclosed courtyard) from the Gandy-street frontage, was pretentious, and had the usual massive moulded oak construction, with heavy mullioned windows, and projecting upper storeys on handsomely-carved brackets and beams, with quaint dormer gables, and the spaces between the moulded and framed woodwork pargetted on lathwork. The premises, as bought, were recently in private occupation, and presented a number of useful-sized rooms, which, with alteration and ingeniously throwing several smaller rooms together to form larger ones, have been well adapted for the future meetings of the fraternity. The accommodation obtained is as follows:—Spacious entrance halls and covered ways for access from the street where the brethren may be marshalled for processions, several convenient and well-lighted rooms for the use of the three Exeter Craft lodges, to be used for robing, reading, library, and committee rooms. The lodge room, approached by a wide and bold staircase, is on the first floor, and has been fitted up and decorated to suit the purposes of Masonic meetings. The room is of ample size for all local meetings of the Craft, has been carefully arranged as regards ventilation and gaslights, and will be furnished in a comfortable and permanent manner. The walls are stencilled, and the ceiling is adorned with golden stars radiating round a blazing star enclosing the sacred symbol. On the floor of the room will be placed a handsome Brussels carpet, the ground-work of Royal Garter blue, specially designed, and ordered of Messrs. Goff and Gully, the pattern being worked up in Royal Arch and Craft emblems. Round the room are placed benches on a raised floor, and there will be sufficient accommodation for 70 Masons at a lodge. Over the fire-place, in one of the upper rooms, is a portrait of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of the Order, which has been presented to the Craft, and the large portrait, in oil, of Dr. Carwithen, will be hung on the grand staircase. A chamber has been formed for the reception of the organ brought from the Tuckers' Hall. This instrument is from the well-known old firm of Walker, of London, but has now been considerably enlarged by Mr. Hawker, of Exeter. Besides the above rooms there are others which are now being used for lodge meetings, and which will be still used for extra meetings, and those connected with the higher degrees of Freemasonry, and the orders of chivalry. There is also a residence for the caretaker, besides all necessary offices, and a spacious garden behind. On the whole the Freemasons may congratulate themselves on having secured premises so conveniently situated, and well adapted for their object, at a comparatively moderate outlay. A building set aside permanently for the purposes of the Craft in Exeter had been long desired, and the brethren having now attained this, will be able to carry on more efficiently and advantageously the various duties connected with their ancient and honourable institution, for the good of Freemasonry in general, and the Exeter lodges in particular. The Committee have been most zealously assisted in their labours by the Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, Bro. S. Jones, P.M., P.P.G.S.D. Bro. J. Jerman is the architect entrusted to carry out the works, and Bro. J. Stocker the builder. The decorations have been carefully and artistically executed by Bro. Algar. Bro. J. S. Warren supplies the furniture and benches, and Bro. R. Rouse the gas-fittings. Much trouble has been experienced in adapting such ancient premises, but the result of the endeavours of the Committee, and those engaged with them, will doubtless commend itself to the favourable judgment of the brethren.

The solemn and imposing ceremony of dedication on Monday, the 23rd ult., brought to a successful conclusion the important work in which, for some time past, the Exeter Freemasons have been engaged. The formal proceedings connected with the opening, commenced at the Victoria Hall, where a Special Provincial Grand Lodge of Devon was opened at two o'clock. The brethren commenced to arrive at the hall soon after one o'clock, and continued to drop in for an hour afterwards.

The Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form a procession was formed, and proceeded to the new Hall in Gandy-street, in the presence of a considerable crowd, which had been drawn together by the novelty of the sight. The weather was decidedly unfavourable for out-door show, but although it had rained heavily just before the procession issued from the hall, it cleared up till the brethren had passed along Queen-street to Gandy-street.

On arriving at the new Hall the Lodge was opened in the First Degree, Bro. Rogers acting as D.P.G.M.

An anthem having been sung,

Bro. Jones, addressing the R.W. Prov. G.M., said it was with feelings of satisfaction, but at the same time with some diffidence, he asked him in the name of the Freemasons of Exeter to open and dedicate that building, so that they would on that day commence labour in a home of their own. The brethren must be highly gratified that this had been brought about. A few months ago he was looking back at the records of one of their lodges, and he found that 55 years ago a lodge then numbered 178, passed a resolution that it was most desirable that the Freemasons of Exeter should have a home of their own, and they backed up that resolution by voting a sum of £315 towards the cost of it. Of course they would have liked to have seen a larger hall, and one built especially for the purposes of Freemasons, but they had to cut their coat according to their cloth. The hall was sufficiently large to hold a Grand Lodge for all practical purposes. He concluded by formally calling upon the G.M. to dedicate the building.

The R.W. Prov. G. Master, then addressing "Bro. Jones and brethren all," said he could not help being gratified at the task which he was asked to perform. He quite concurred in all that had been said by Bro. Jones. It was a most beautiful lodge, and everything about it was fitted up most satisfactorily, and he most gladly acceded to the request for dedication. Before doing so he requested his acting D.P.G.M. to deliver an oration.

Acting D.P.G.M. complied with the request. He hoped this would prove a new epoch for Masonry in Exeter. He then briefly alluded to the antiquity of Freemasonry, and referred to the statement that it had existed from time immemorial. It certainly was in existence in England 150 years before the date given by their opponents. It was said that Masonry only dated back to the 16th or 17th century. He would not discuss all the opposition views, but if they would look back to 1610 and 1620 they would find then that Freemasonry was denounced by the Roman Catholics especially, who in so doing had certainly overshoot the mark. He traced back the origin of Freemasonry, which had certainly existed amongst the Brahmins, the Mahomedans, and Parsees, so that the Masonic idea was cherished in India as in England. Amongst the Persians, Alexander the Great discovered books which took it back to ages long before his time, even before writing was invented, some 3000 years ago, right back to the times of the ancient Egyptians, some of whose records had only recently been described under symbols and allegory, which showed that some ceremonies that existed amongst the ancient Egyptians were the same as existed in our own day. Even Moses was said to be a Freemason, and from him they were able to trace it down to the time of King Solomon. He asserted that it passed through Egypt to Greece, and from Greece to Rome, and some of the hieroglyphics discovered dated back to ages before Christ. They also found allusions to Freemasonry in the Book of Exodus, as well as in other sacred writings of the Bible.

The dedication rite was then proceeded with, and was performed in a most solemn and impressive manner by the G.M., whose venerable appearance and his rich decorations, including a gold chain which had been presented to him, rendered him a striking figure, even in the midst of the throng of brilliant officials by whom he was surrounded. A procession was then formed, the G.M. being followed by his Deputy and P.G. Wardens, bearing the elements of dedication, and proceeded round the lodge-room, solemn music being played during its progress. On returning to the East, the G.M. was presented with a vessel bearing corn, the emblem of plenty, and scattered it over the lodge, the P.G. Chaplain reading at the same time Psalm lxxii., v. 16. The G.C. thereupon said the first prayer, and solemnly dedicated the Hall to Masonry, and then the brethren chanted "Glory to Thee, most high God," &c. A second and third circuit were made with the same ceremonial, wine and oil being used, instead of corn, and the Hall being dedicated to virtue, and benevolence, and charity, which they respectively symbolised. On the conclusion of these dedication acts, a prayer was said by the Grand Chaplain, the brethren all standing.

The musical response, "So mote it be," having been chanted, the G.M. used the "salt," being preceded by the Chaplain, acting as bearer of the burning incense. A prayer after the salt and the chanting of Psalm cxxxiii. as an anthem having been followed by the Benediction, and some more chanting, the "Grand Honours" concluded the ceremonial. The procession then returned to the Victoria Hall, in the same order as it had started therefrom, and the actual proceedings of the dedication were thus finished.

In the evening nearly 100 of the brethren sat down to a sumptuous banquet at Bro. Pople's London Hotel.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF LEICESTERSHIRE.

The biennial convocation took place at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Thursday, the 26th April, and was attended by a more than average number of members.

The chapter was opened by the P.G. Supt., Comp. W. Kelly, assisted by Comp. the Rev. W. Langley as P.G.H., and Comp. H. Deane as P.G.J.

The minutes of the previous convocation having been confirmed, the P.G. Supt. proceeded to install the Principals as follows:—To the chair of Z., Comp. S. S. Partridge, 279; to the chair of H., Comp. J. T. Thorp, 279, E. F. Mammatt, 779, and H. B. Smith, 1130; to the chair of J., Comp. J. M. Kew, 1130.

On the motion of Comp. the Rev. W. Langley, seconded by Comp. J. C. Duncombe, P.Z., the thanks of the chapter were accorded to Comp. W. Sculthorpe for his services as Treasurer, and he was unanimously re-elected to that office.

Some formal business having been disposed of, the Provincial Grand Chapter was closed, and the regular meeting of the Chapter of Fortitude took place.

The officers for the year were invested as follows:—Comps. E. Mason, S.E.; Dr. Grant, S.N.; J. B. Hall, P.S.; C. E. Stretton, Assist. P.S.; W. C. Shout, Treas.; Jos. Young, Dir. of Cers.; and T. A. Wykes, Org.

Three members of the Knights of Malta Lodge, No. 50, Hinckley, were exalted to the Sublime Degree in a very able manner by the newly-installed First Principal, Comp. Partridge.

The mystical lecture was perfectly given by the Prov. Grand Superintendent.

After the close of the chapter the installation banquet took place.

Amongst members present, in addition to those above named, was Comp. Sir Henry Halford, D.P.G.M.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF EAST LANCASHIRE.

The annual meeting of this Provincial Grand Chapter was held in St. Thomas's Schoolroom, Blackburn-street, Radcliffe, near Manchester, on Wednesday, 18th inst., under the presidency of most Excellent Provincial Grand Superintendent Le Gendre N. Starkie, supported by Comp. Joseph Lancaster Hine, as Second Principal, and Comp. James Arthur Birch, as Third Principal. There were about 160 companions present from the different chapters in the province, all of which, with the exception of two, were represented. The sum of £10 was voted in aid of the funds of the East Lancashire Masonic Systematic Educational and Benevolent Institution, and the P.G.S. kindly promised a subscription of £25 towards the Masonic charities. During the course of his remarks in acknowledgment of the gift, Comp. Hine stated that the subscriptions in England, during the last twelve months towards the Masonic Charities amounted to £40,000. Invitations to hold the next annual Grand Arch Chapter were received from Manchester and Littleborough. A banquet was afterwards served at the Bull's Head Inn Church-street, Radcliffe, of which about sixty companions, partook. Colonel Starkie and Comp. Birch warmly complimented the committee of management on the excellence of the arrangements made for the holding of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter. The catering was briefly eulogised by the P.G.S., as well as by Comp. Hine, who remarked that during the long number of years he had been connected with Masonry he never remembered partaking of a better served or more palatable banquet. The usual toast list was gone through and was enthusiastically responded to throughout. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Comp. J. Randle Fletcher, P.P.G.O., and were all that could be desired.

THE JEWS AND THE GERMAN GRAND LODGES.

With reference to this question we are in a position to state that 240 petitions issued by the Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017, have been returned signed, together with many interesting communications containing expressions of sympathy. The committee of the Montefiore Lodge would be glad if the lodges that have not yet signed the petition would at the earliest opportunity take the matter into their consideration. Copies may be had on application, and will be immediately forwarded. As the matter is of great importance, we take this occasion of urging on our brethren the desirability of complying with the request contained in the circular. The words of the famous 165th Section are as follows:—"In the confederacy of the Grand National Mother Lodge, only such a one can be initiated into Freemasonry who possesses the Christian Faith, without distinction of creed," and to our mind conclusively proves the justice of the application made by the Montefiore Committee. We think that all Masons should unite to obtain the removal of a law, which is not only "obnoxious" in itself, but contrary to the fundamental principles on which the Masonic Order is based.

Davis, W.M.; Mallett, S.W.; Dairy, J.W.; Carter, P.M.; Treas.; Stuart, P.M., Sec.; Waygood, I.P.M.; Rumball, S.D.; Morrison, A.W.S., acting J.D.; Walls, A.D.C., acting I.G.; and Past Masters Hopwood, Harris, Taylor, Green, Themans, and Kennett. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the W.M. initiated Mr. A. Aaron in his usual careful manner. A notice of motion that the subscription should be raised was then fully discussed, but upon being put, it was negatived. The petition to the Grand Master for a centenary jewel having been signed, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was well served. The visitors were Bros. Parkin, P.P.J.G.D. of Derbyshire; Walter, W.M. 87; D. Davis, late 141; Masters, Doudney, 145; Pratt, 957; and Palmer, 1293, 1503. The preliminary toasts having been duly disposed of, the W.M. proposed "The Initiate," in which he said that from the great attention Bro. Aaron had paid to the ceremony that night he believed he would become a good Mason. The newly admitted brother briefly replied by stating how gratified he felt at having been allowed to enter into the ancient and honourable society of Freemasons. "The Visitors" followed, and was acknowledged by each brother present. Bro. Stuart, in the absence of the I.P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M." in very flattering terms. In the course of his remarks he said that since Bro. Davis had accepted the chair there had been very great changes in the lodge. The W.M., however, had endeavoured to meet all difficulties, and also had tried to give satisfaction to them all, and he (the speaker) felt convinced that when the time arrived for the W.M. to relinquish the reins of government he would retire with the proud satisfaction of having won the "heartly good wishes" of his brethren of the Faith Lodge. The W.M., in response, said that he had a very arduous task to perform during his term of office, and that was to stint the creature comforts of the lodge. It was very hurtful to his feelings to have to do this, but the funds of the lodge would not permit him to act otherwise, and he was determined not to leave his successor in debt. He thanked the Secretary for the warmth he had displayed in proposing his health; and in conclusion he called attention to the fact that the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls would be represented at its forthcoming festival by Bro. Titley, whom he hoped would be well supported by the brethren of No. 141. The toast of "The Past Masters" was acknowledged by Bro. Stuart in a very characteristic speech. "The Officers" followed, and drew from the W.M. a very high opinion upon the relative merits of the brethren forming the official staff. This health having been duly drunk, was acknowledged in fitting terms by Bros. Mallett, S.W., and Dairy, J.W., upon behalf of themselves and colleagues, present and absent. The Tyler's toast was called at a comparatively early hour, and the brethren separated until the last Tuesday in September next. During the evening selections of harmony were given by Bros. Mallett, Walls, Leftly, Clark, and others, and Bro. D. Davis gave a reading from "The Lady of Lyons."

ROYAL OAK LODGE (No. 871).—A regular meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday, the 26th ult., at the White Swan Tavern, High-st., Deptford. Present: Bros. J. J. Pakes, W.M.; G. T. Lunn, J.W.; William Andrews, P.M., Treas.; Frederick Walters, P.G.J.D. Middlesex, and P.M., Sec.; R. Harman, S.D.; J. G. Vohmann, J.D.; G. Harvey, I.G.; George Andrews, P.M., D.C.; H. J. Tison, P.M., W. Steward; H. J. Fisher, Org.; J. Bavin, P.M. 147, Tyler. Visitors: J. Howe, 1326; J. R. Croft, 1326; H. Bartlett, P.M. 147; J. Evans, 797. Bro. J. J. Pakes, W.M., opened the lodge, the minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. The ballot being unanimous in his favour, Mr. Edward George Goodson Bax was initiated by the W.M. in an efficient manner; the lecture on the tracing board and the charge to the newly-initiated being given by Bro. G. Andrews, P.M. and D.C., for which he received a vote of thanks.

LODGE OF JOPPA (No. 188).—This lodge held its regular meeting at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-st., on Monday, the 7th inst. The lodge was opened in due form by Bro. Lewis Alexander, Senior P.M., in the absence of the W.M., and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. On the arrival of the W.M. a ballot was taken for the admission of Mr. Edmund Cogswell, which resulted in his favour. He was afterwards initiated into the Order. Bro. Althorp was raised to the Third Degree. A letter was read from Bro. Spiegel, J.W., stating in consequence of the death of his father he was unable to attend the duties of the lodge. It was then proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that a letter of condolence be sent to Bro. Spiegel, conveying the sympathy of the lodge in his bereavement. The lodge was then adjourned till the first Monday in June, after which the brethren, including several visitors, adjourned to supper, and passed a pleasant evening.

ROYAL ALBERT LODGE (No. 907).—The installation meeting of the above lodge took place on Monday, the 16th ult., at Freemasons' Hall, when Bro. F. A. White, W.M. elect, was placed in the chair of K.S. with the usual honours. A large muster, both of members of the lodge and brethren from neighbouring lodges, attended, among the latter being Bros. E. West, P.M. 1076 and 1327, P.P.G. Officer for Herts; F. H. Miller, P.M. 901, and a.P.P.G.O. Middlesex; R. A. Wright, P.M. 505, and P.P.G.S. Herts; C. Nash, P.M. 79; E. S. Parker, P.M. 119; H. Roberts, P.M. 79; W. Nicholls, P.M. 203; W. C. Penny, P.M. 79; T. G. Day, P.M. 1076; Dr. Clarke, 255, Tyler 1625; G. Brown, 13; A. Day, 913; C. Jolly, 913; and many others whose names we could not decipher on the visitors' book. The lodge having been opened in the Three Degrees, the W.M., Bro. R. E. Stevenson, in the most impressive manner raised Bro. Strange to the Third Degree. The lodge was then resumed to the Second Degree, and Bro. White was duly obligated. The lodge was then resumed to the Third Degree, and the chairs filled respectively by Bro. John Dennis, P.M., the Installing Officer in the East, and Bros. Moore and Griffiths, P.M.'s, respectively, in the West and South. The W.M. elect was then presented to a Board of Installed Masters, numbering nearly thirty, and was formally inducted into the chair, and on the return of the brethren saluted in the various degrees. He then proceeded to invest his officers as follows: Bros. J. F. Hallet, S.W.; R. Jennings, J.W.; Vaughan, P.M. and P.P.G.C. Middx., Chap.; J. Smith, P.M. and P.G.P. England, Treas.; W. H. Farnfield, P.M., Sec.; H. Lewis, P.M., D.C. and W.S.; W. Snellgrove, S.D.; G. T. Barr, J.D.; S. Butt, I.G.; F. A. Cozens, Org., and Harrison, Tyler. The Past Masters belonging to the lodge present, beside those already enumerated, were Bros. J. Farnfield and Miller. After the ceremony, which was splendidly worked by Bro. Dennis, whose eloquent and forcible manner in giving the charges was most impressive, a cordial and unanimous vote of thanks, to be inscribed upon the minutes of the lodge, was accorded him, for which he returned thanks. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Crown Room, where a superbly appointed banquet awaited them. After "The Queen and the Craft" and "The Health of our G.M." had been most loyally responded to, that of "The Grand Officers" was coupled with the name of Bro. J. Smith, who, in responding, drew attention to the coming time, when they would have the three Royal brethren in the respective chairs at Grand Lodge. Bro. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as G.M.; Bro. H.R.H. Prince Arthur as G.S.W.; and Bro. H.R.H. Prince Leopold as G.J.W. This, he said, would show the great interest our G.M. took in Masonry, and for it they were proud of him. For the honour done him in coupling his name with so important a toast he thanked them. He then, in glowing terms, proposed "The Health of the W.M.," saying there could not be a doubt on the minds of any one present who knew Bro. White's assiduity during the time he had filled the minor offices of the lodge, or who had seen the manner he had that day closed the lodge in the Three Degrees, that he had made himself worthy of the position he had been by them unanimously elected to. He (Bro. White) had been initiated by Bro. Dennis, and now that brother had finished his work by placing him at the head of the lodge, and he trusted that Bro. White might reign as worthily as the brother who had placed him there. Bro. White, in reply, thanked them sincerely for the manner in which they had responded to the toast. They had that day conferred a very great honour upon him. He felt how great the responsibilities were in presiding over a lodge that had upon its roll of Past Masters such a brilliant array as that which sat around him. He should always endeavour to follow in their footsteps, and he felt sure that if he did so he would have, as they had, the esteem and best wishes of every member of the lodge. Bro. White then proposed "The Health of the L.P.M., Bro. Stevenson," who he said had, during his year of office, initiated more members than any preceding Master, and whose universal kindness and courtesy to the brethren had won for him their most earnest regard and esteem. He then placed the collar of a Past Master round Bro. Stevenson's neck, and pinned the magnificent jewel of that office upon his breast (both of which were presented by the lodge) and amid cheers wished the worthy recipient long life and brotherhood among the brethren of the lodge and Order. Bro. Stevenson feelingly replied, gracefully alluding to the many kindnesses received by him from both the officers and brethren during his year in the chair; and in conclusion thanked them from his heart for their magnificent present and reception of his name. Bro. White then eloquently proposed "The Health of the Installing Officer, Bro. Dennis," who he had known for the last fifteen years, and during that time he had been to him one of the best of friends and kindest of brothers he had ever known; and all who knew Bro. Dennis would, he felt sure, agree with him, that he was worthy of every honour that could be paid him for his long and many services to the lodge and its members. Bro. Dennis had initiated him into Freemasonry, and that night, as Bro. Smith had before observed, he had finished his work by placing him in the chair he felt it so great an honour to occupy. The beautiful ceremony Bro. Dennis had so admirably worked that day had made an impression on him that he should never forget, and he knew they must have appreciated the masterly and eloquent manner in which it was begun and finished. For himself, and in the name of the lodge, he thanked him, and called upon them to drink the health of the Installing Officer, Bro. J. Dennis. Bro. Dennis, in the course of an eloquent reply, thanked the brethren heartily for their toast, and the W.M. for so kindly speaking of him and his services. He felt proud to have had the honour of placing Bro. White in the position he was so well calculated to do justice to. They knew it was not his custom to flatter any one, but none could be worthier of the position that he occupied than the brother they had that evening chosen for their W.M. With Bro. White he had had for many years a personal acquaintance, that from its earliest to its present time had been one of close mutual friendship and esteem. Of that friendship he felt proud; but how much more so was he proud now to see him, and to have been the humble instrument of placing him in that chair as Master of the lodge into which he had initiated him as an Entered Apprentice. After advertising most eloquently to the higher aims of Masonry, and the duties attending the proper fulfilment of its tenets, he concluded a brilliant and forcible address, that space prevents the possibility of our doing justice to, by again thanking them for their toast, and resumed his seat amid loud applause. "The Health of the Visitors" followed, coupled with the names of Bros. Wright, W.M. 1364; Bywater, P.M. 19; Roberts, P.M. 76; Fenner, P.M. 162; and Bracebridge, P.M. 781, who severally responded. "The Past Masters" were next honoured, and Bro. J. Farnfield responded. Bro. W. H. Farnfield, P.M., responded for the healths of himself and Bro. Smith, as Secretary and Treasurer of the lodge. The toast of "The Officers" followed, and was severally responded to by them; and then the Tyler's toast concluded the business and pleasures of the evening. During the proceedings a selection of vocal music, under the direction of Bro. Cozens, was given by Bros. Chaplin Henry, Lester, G. T. Carter, and Montem Smith.

STOCKWELL LODGE (No. 1339).—The installation meeting of the above lodge was held on the 19th ult., at the Sarrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell. A large number of the members were present, including all the officers and several visitors, among whom were Bros. John Green, P.M. 27; Blackshaw, 34; Hopwood, P.M. 22; Bennett, 141; Kent, P.M. 177; White, P.M. 22; Dr. Kimber, P.M. 9; Simmons, P.M. 902; Newman, 1385; Dunn, 813; Lamb, J.W. 1201; Cox, 1314; Dodson, P.M. 72; and Waterall, P.M. 1216. The W.M., Bro. C. J. Pain, having opened the lodge, and the minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, proceeded to pass Bros. Carmona and McKay to the degree of F.C., and to raise Bro. Louhami to the degree of M.M., performing both ceremonies with much ability. Bro. Frances, P.M., P.P.G.D. (Surrey), then proceeded to install the W.M. elect, Bro. N. T. F. Bassett, who appointed and invested his officers as follows—viz., Bros. John Bowyer, S.W.; John Coe, J.W.; W. B. Pillinger, S.D.; C. Hinckman, J.D.; H. Hart, I.G.; invested C. Hammerton, P.M., as Treasurer; re-appointed Frances, P.M., Secretary; and appointed Sawyer D.C. and W. H. Boswell, W.S. The manner in which the ceremonies of installing and investing were performed gave great satisfaction to the brethren assembled, and the new Master was cordially greeted. The W.M. then presented the retiring Master, Bro. Pain, with a P.M.'s jewel, which had been previously voted by the lodge, and also presented the lodge with a handsome banner (following the custom of preceding Masters), and the number now adorning the lodge gives it, in the splendid hall in which it now meets, an imposing appearance. The business of the meeting having terminated, the brethren adjourned to partake of an excellent repast. The dinner was heartily enjoyed by the brethren. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and honoured, the healths of the W.M., P.M., and visitors meeting with more than ordinary applause. The evening's amusement was enhanced by some excellent vocal efforts on the part of Bros. Kimber, T. F. Harris, Kay, and others.

CHAUCER LODGE (No. 1540).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held on Wednesday, 25th ult., at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. There were present Bros. J. E. Mason, W.M.; E. S. Stidolph, S.W.; W. J. Kemp, J.W.; T. J. Sabine, P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex, Treas., P.M.; Frederick Walters, P.G.J.D. Middlesex, P.M., Sec.; H. Faija, J.D.; C. Graham, C.S.; W. Y. Laing, P.M. 45, Tyler. Visitors: Bros. W. C. Bland, P.M. 574; C. G. Rushworth, W.M. 1309; David Smith, 1326. The lodge was opened by Bro. J. C. Mason, W.M.; the minutes were read and unanimously confirmed. Bros. F. Mayer, W. J. Harrison, and E. Ricardo, were passed, and Bro. J. Simpson was raised, all the work being well done. A P.M. 62 and 147, Scotch and Irish Constitution, was relieved from the lodge Charity Fund. The petition sent in from Montefiore Lodge, No. 1017, respecting the exclusion of Hebrew brethren in Germany, received the unanimous support of the lodge. Business ended, the lodge was closed.

ALDERSGATE LODGE (No. 1657).—An emergency meeting of the above lodge was held at the Castle and Falcon Hotel, Aldersgate-street, on Monday last. There were present Bros. John Derby Allcroft, W.M.; Rev. Dr. P. H. Ernest Brette, S.W.; Dr. Chas. Hogg, J.W.; George Kenning, Treas.; P. Saillard, S.D.; W. H. Froom, J.D.; A. J. Altman, I.G.; T. Benskin, D.C.; Rev. BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (No. 41).—The last regular meeting before the vacation was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 3rd inst., when the Lodge was opened at 7.45 by Bro. F. Wilkinson, W.M., supported by the following officers: Bros. Brown, I.P.M.; Falkner, S.W.; J. Turner, P.M. as J.W.; Ashley, P.M.; and Treas.; Braham, Sec.; Wilton, P.M. and Dir. of Cer.; Gummer, S.D.; Hunt, J.D.; Radway, I.G.; Robinson, Steward; Bigwood, Tyler; Past Masters Cooper, Moutrie, Clark, Rubie, and Dr. Hopkins, P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire, and P.M. 43 and 958. A few other members were present and many visitors from Nos. 53 and 906. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, several matters of no public interest were discussed and settled. On the circular of summons were the names of five candidates for initiation, already admitted by ballot, of whom two only were present, the absence of the others being satisfactorily explained by the W.M., as also was that of the J.W. All preliminaries having been arranged, Messrs. R. Mann and Cartmel were introduced and duly initiated. Bros. Davies, Peach, W. Baldwin, and Harris passed a very satisfactory examination as to their proficiency, were entrusted, and dismissed for preparation. Before they left the room, however, the W.M. announced a very valuable present to the lodge, consisting of a large, handsomely framed portrait in oil of the M.W.G.M., the Prince of Wales, in full Masonic regalia, the gift of the new member, Bro. Harris. After comments from several of the brethren on this act of liberality, and proof of his appreciation of his admission into the Order, a vote of thanks to the donor was carried by acclamation, who, in his reply, stated the portrait had been executed by his son, an artist by profession, and that as soon as qualified by age he would seek admission into the Craft. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree. The candidates were re-introduced, and passed to the rank of F.C. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Bro. Ashley, in highly complimentary terms, brought before the notice of the brethren the admirable manner in which both the ceremonies had been rendered by the W.M. on this, the second occasion of his presiding over a meeting of the lodge, acquiescence in which was afforded by the frequent plaudits of those present, and the Secretary was requested to insert a special record thereof in the minutes. No other business offering the lodge was closed in the Second, and afterwards in the First Degree, and the brethren separated soon after ten o'clock.

KENDAL.—Union Lodge (No. 129).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday evening, the 26th ult., at 7 o'clock. The W.M., Bro. R. J. Nelson, was supported by Bros. McKay, S.W.; R. Godfrey, W.M. 1074, as J.W.; T. Wilson, P.M.; Banks, Sec.; John Bowes, P.M., P.J. G.W., and a goodly number of brethren. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read and confirmed, the W.M. announced that as there was an initiation, passing, and raising, he should esteem it a favour if Bro. Bowes, the Senior Grand Warden of the province, would take the Third Degree. Bro. Bowes then took the chair of K.S., and raised Bro. Rodick to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. The other labour having been completed by the W.M. in a highly satisfactory manner, the lodge was closed with the usual solemnities.

BEDFORD.—Stuart Lodge (No. 540).—The brethren of the above lodge held their last meeting for the season at the Swan Hotel. There were present in lodge nearly forty members of the lodge and visitors. The W.M., Col. Stuart, in the chair, supported by Bros. Capt. E. Green, J.P., I.P.M.; W. Finlinson, P.M., S.W.; Capt. Colburne, J.W.; R. H. Coombs, S.D.; J. Allan, J.D.; H. Thody, I.G.; Dr. Prior, P.M., Sec.; Alderman Sergeant, P.M., Treas.; Alderman J. R. Bull, P.M., Steward. Bro. Piper, Organist, not being able to be present, Bro. A. Cookson ably performed on the organ during the ceremonies. Amongst the other brethren present we noticed the following:—Past Masters Cuthbert Whyley, G. P. Nash, Billson, and the Rev. Fawcett Ward; Bros. James Howard, J. P. Fry, Major Taselaw, Stafford, Thompson, Pick, Ayres, Roe, Carter, Whittaker, and Harris; and as visitors Bros. R. Broughton Smith, P.M. 511, 1007, 1560, and P.P.G.A.D.C. Leicester and Rutland; A. Lindsell, St. Andrew's, 803; and Bro. Flower, of the Lodge Perseverance, Bombay, 351. Bro. R. P. Jarvis was duly passed to the Second Degree, and Mr. H. Young, of Bedford, was balloted for, elected, and afterwards initiated, both ceremonies being performed by the W.M.; Bro. Dr. Prior giving the charge in the First Degree in his usual happy manner. The votes for the Benevolent Fund having been disposed of, and other items of business gone through, and another resident of Bedford being duly proposed for initiation, the lodge was duly closed, and thirty-one brethren sat down to an excellent supper, and spent a pleasant evening.

WALMER.—Lord Warden Lodge (No. 1096).—On Friday, the 30th ult., the installation of Bro. A. H. Des Barres as Master of this lodge took place in the lodge room at Deal. Bro. T. Ayling, the retiring Master, performed the ceremony in a most impressive manner, and the way in which the new Master and his officers performed their duties afterwards showed they had not suffered from lack of good teaching during the past year. The business of the lodge having been disposed of, the Worshipful Master, on behalf of himself and the whole of the members of the lodge, presented a magnificent jewel (purchased by subscription) to the retiring Master, as some slight token of the high appreciation of his many excellent qualities, but above all his untiring energy and zeal in the cause of Masonry. The Worshipful Master accompanied the presentation with a few well chosen appropriate words, which were heartily endorsed by all present, and suitably responded to by Bro. Ayling. The dinner was held at the Royal Hotel, to which about forty sat down. In the evening the usual toasts were given and heartily responded to, and the claims of the Masonic charities were prominently brought forward. The following visitors were present: Bros. Hayman, W.M.; Bird, Mason, Ralph, Browning, Apps, Cavell, Gregg, Bent, and Solly, of No. 784, Deal; H. S. Watts, W.M.; Emmerson, Mate, Hill, F. Baker, Woodruff, C. Baker, Hathaway, 1206, Sandwich; H. Sanctuary, 1428; H. M. Baker, W.M., and W. H. Smeath, 1208; Igglesden, of Lodge 199. The proceedings were enlivened by songs and recitation, and Bro. Doorne presided at the piano with his usual skill and ability.

HAMPTON.—Hamming Lodge (No. 1512).—An emergency meeting of this lodge, and which was well attended, was held at the Lion Hotel on the 19th ult., when there were present Bros. J. Hurst, W.M.; J. Hammond, S.W., W.M. elect; Hopwood, I.P.M. and Treas., acting J.W.; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, Sec.; Raw, P.M.; Sharp, P.M. 84; Knowles, acting S.D.; Jessett, J.D.; T. Ockenden, I.G.; T. C. Walls, D.C.; and Kent, A.W.S. The visitors were Bros. Bowra, Dobie, Scotland, and Jackson, 1656. The W.M. passed Bro. C. Hole and initiated Messrs. Tozer and Forward. The ceremonies were well performed. A Past Master's jewel having been unanimously voted to the retiring W.M. for his services during his year of office, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a collation. In accordance with Masonic custom, the toasts that followed the refreshment of this emergency meeting were few and but formally given. "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," and "The R.W.P.G.M. of Middlesex" were heartily received. In proposing "The Health of the W.M.," Bro. Hopwood congratulated him upon the success that had thus far attended his year of office. The W.M., in reply, briefly thanked the I.P.M. for the kindness and assistance that he had received at his hands during his Mastership, and which was now nearly at an end. In conclusion he wished the members of the lodge health and every happiness during the summer recess. "The Initiates" and "The Visitors" followed, and those toasts were duly responded to by the brethren thus honoured. The last toast previous to that of the Tyler's was "The Officers." In introducing this the W.M. dwelt at length upon the great assistance he had received during his year not only from the principal officers of the lodge, namely, the Treasurer and the Secretary, but from all his staff down to those subordinate, but most useful officers, the Wine Stewards. He said that no Master could have been better supported, and he considered it his duty to make that open acknowledgment of his satisfaction with their efforts. This toast having been received with excellent "fire," Bros. Hammond, Hopwood, Ockenden, Walls, and Kent replied on behalf of themselves and absent colleagues. The proceedings were enlivened by the vocal efforts of Bros. Hurst, Walls, Knowles, and others. The next meeting of the lodge will be held on the third Thursday in October next, when Bro. John Hammond, P.M. Jordan, S.W., will be duly installed into the chair of K.S.

LIVERPOOL.—The Ancient Briton Lodge (No. 1675).—The first meeting of this lodge after consecration the previous week was held on Tuesday, the 24th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. The following officers were present:—Bros. J. Kellett Smith, P.P.G. Reg., W.M.; Robert Wylie, P.P.G.S.D., S.W.; J. R. Bottomley, J.W.; Rev. Rees Jenkins, Treas.; Thos. Evans, Sec.; J. W. Johnson, S.D.; W. H. Parry, J.D.; along with a large number of brethren proposed for joining and several visitors. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the consecration meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for thirteen gentleman who had been proposed for initiation, and for thirty-six brethren who had been proposed for joining. All being declared duly elected, the following were then added to the list of officers previously appointed: Bros. Edward Jones, I.G.; Robert Fairclough, Org.; D. S. Davies, W.M. 216, M.C.; Dr. J. Howard Pughe and William Griffiths, Stewards. Nine candidates in attendance were duly initiated by the W.M., the ancient charge being given by the S.W. The work as a whole was done in first-class style, and it was generally remarked that all the officers worked well for the first night. A vote of thanks was proposed, carried, and ordered to be recorded for donations by the following brethren:—Dr. J. Kellett Smith, R. Wylie, J. R. Bottomley, W. H. Parry, E. O. C. Rothwell, Edward Jones, Thomas Evans, and also to Bro. R. Wylie for a box of working tools. Previous to the lodge being closed, it was resolved that all the officers and two private members form a committee for the purpose of framing by-laws for the guidance of the lodge. After hearty good wishes had been given by representatives of numerous sister lodges, the labours of the evening were brought to a close, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. During the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. A most gratifying and very unusual announcement was made in the course of the proceedings. The Treasurer stated he had paid all debts and charges, and yet he had £40 in hand on their first regular meeting night. This is a fact which augurs well for the future prosperity of the Ancient Briton, and they deserve the highest credit for thus starting on their career entirely free from the encumbrance of debt, which too frequently hampers and cripples lodges. It may also be incidentally stated that Bro. J. R. Bottomley, J.W., has been most indefatigable and painstaking in connection with the inauguration and organisation of the lodge, and he deserves the highest credit for the very large share of the initiatory work which he has performed.

Lee then occupied the chair, and the ceremony of installation was then excellently rendered in his usual admirable manner, installing Bro. A. Rowley into the chair of K.S. The officers were then installed as follows: Bros. Ross, S.W.; W. Rowley, J.W.; Osborn, Sec.; Percy, S.D.; Somers, J.D.; Fenner, I.G. The addresses were delivered by Bro. Lee, P.M., in a most impressive and excellent manner, which gave great satisfaction to the brethren, and the lodge being closed a very agreeable and enjoyable evening was spent.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners' Lodge (No. 249).—The annual banquet of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, 26th ult., in the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool. The brethren met at 7 p.m. There was a good attendance of members; the following were the names of those present: Bros. Dr. Kellett Smith, P. Prov. G. Reg., Preceptor; J. Hayes, P.M. 249, Asst. Preceptor; Price, P.M. 249; Rose, P.M. 249; John C. Robinson, J.W. 249; W. Garlick, S.D. 249; W. P. Jennings, J.D. 249; Frederick Barnett, I.G. 249; W. Corbett, S. 249; J. Whittall, F. Cooper, J. Wynne Parry, J.D. Ancient Briton Lodge; C. J. Jones, W. Inwood, J. Tyson, 1094; Robert Collings, Sec. 249; Jas. Simpson, W. Mooney, E. A. Wright, G. C. Beecham, W. E. Vernon, J. P. Jones, John N. Pendleton, W. Gamble, M. Goldstone, J. Jemaway, E. J. Callon, Morris Davies, W. G. Veale, Org.; and T. Poyser. Bro. J. C. Robinson occupied the W.M.'s chair, and opened the lodge in due and solemn form. After the minutes had been read several members were proposed, and then the brethren were called off from labour to refreshment. A capital dinner was provided by Bro. Ball, P.G. Tyler. The cloth having been removed the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given. Then followed "Our Masonic Rulers, &c." and "Our Worthy Preceptor, Dr. K. Smith," was received with acclamation. Bro. Dr. Kellett Smith, in responding, said he had been prevented by his professional duties from attending the lodge of instruction during the session, but he had been quite easy in his mind respecting its working, as he had left a very able assistant in Bro. Hayes, P.M., who, he was sure, would take every care that instead of the Mariners' Lodge of Instruction deteriorating under his hands it would improve. He, Bro. Dr. K. Smith, had the permission of the W.M., Bro. Robinson, of giving the toast of "The Health of Bro. Hayes, P.M.," a more efficient Masonic worker than whom could not be found. The toast was heartily received. Bro. Hayes in a few suitable words returned thanks. "The Mariners' Lodge of Instruction," coupled with the name of Bro. Price, P.M.; "The Officers of the Mariners' Lodge of Instruction," coupled with the names of the S.W. and the Secretary; "The Temple Lodge, No. 1094," coupled with the name of Bro. Callon, were all suitably responded to. The brethren were afterwards called from refreshment to labour, and the lodge was closed. Excellent songs enlivened the evening's proceedings.

Mark Masonry.

BATH.—Royal Cumberland Lodge (Time Immemorial).—The annual festival was held at the Masonic Hall, on Thursday, the 26th ult., at 5 p.m. Bro. Carey, W.M., took the chair, supported by the following officers and many members:—Jas. Dutton, I.P.M.; Dr. Hopkins, P.M., P.G.J.W., Chaplain; Thompson, P.M.; Cater, S.W.; John Dutton, J.W., and Treas.; Rubie, Sec.; Falkner, Reg.; C. Wilkinson, M.O.; Braham, S.O.; Brown, J.O.; Murliss, S.D.; Radway, J.D.; Jacob Smith, I.G.; Bigwood, Tyler. Bro. Reeves, a visitor, kindly presided at the harmonium. The lodge having been opened, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. A communication was read from the relatives of the late Bro. Mann in reply to the letter of condolence received from the lodge on their bereavement. The report of the audit committee was brought up by the Secretary, which, though showing a smaller balance than before, indicated a more favourable position, there being no outstanding debts and considerable arrear of subscriptions due. A ballot was taken for Bros. Sparrow and Stukey, which proving unanimously favourable, they were duly advanced to the degree of M.M. Masons, the first part of the ceremony being performed by the W.M., the latter part by the I.P.M., and the explanation of the working tools given by the S.O. A clear ballot was also taken for Bro. F. Wilkinson, W.M. of Craft Lodge No. 41, as a joining member. Bro. Dr. Hopkins then took the chair, to whom Bro. Cater was presented as W.M. elect for installation. As he had not filled the first chair of a Craft lodge, the Installing Master called upon the Secretary to read the dispensation granted by the M.W. Grand Master, which having been done, and the preliminary part of the ceremony completed, the brethren were dismissed, and in their absence Bro. Cater was duly installed. After the readmission of the brethren, and the customary salutations, &c., he appointed and invested the following as his officers:—Carey, I.P.M.; John Dutton, S.W. and Treas.; Rubie, J.W.; Dr. Hopkins, Chaplain; C. Wilkinson, Sec.; Mitchell, Dir. of Cers.; Braham, M.O.; Baldwin, S.O.; Falkner, J.O.; Murliss, Reg.; Radway, S.D.; Jacob Smith, J.D.; Howes, I.G.; Dingle, Steward; Bigwood, Tyler. The Installing Master concluded the ceremony by giving the addresses to the W.M., the Wardens, the Overseers, and the brethren, each of which elicited hearty cheers from those present. The W.M. thanked the brethren for the honour conferred upon him, and after paying a high compliment to the Installing Master as to the style in which he had inducted him into the first chair, proposed a vote of thanks to him, which was carried by acclamation, as also was a similar expression of kindly feeling towards Bro. Carey, I.P.M. The lodge having been closed, at eight o'clock the brethren adjourned to the Castle Hotel for a banquet, prepared by the host and Mrs. Rubie with their usual care. Musical arrangements had been made, which were well carried out between the toasts by Bros. Reeves, Cater, Falkner, Braham, and others. When replying to the toast accorded to the Installing Master, that brother took the opportunity formally to present to the W.M. a large Masonic chart, which he had himself prepared, not only as a compliment to the lodge, but also as a tribute of respect and personal regard for Bro. Cater. A most enjoyable evening was spent by the brethren, who did not separate till midnight.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CUMBERLAND AND WESTMORLAND.

A Provincial Grand Lodge meeting was held at the Crown Hotel, Penrith, on Friday, the 27th ult., by command of the R.W. Provincial Grand Master, the Right Hon. the Earl of Bective, who intended to be present on the occasion, but for some unforeseen circumstances was not able to attend.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was therefore opened by Col. J. Whitwell, M.P., R.W.D. Prov. Grand Master Cumberland and Westmorland; Bro. W. Kirkbridge, P.G. Senior Warden; Bro. Bowes, P.G. Junior Warden; and the rest of the Prov. Grand officers.

There were also present Bros. Lemon, P.G. Treas.; Gibson, P.G. Sec.; Kenworthy, P.P.G.J.W.; McKay, P.M.; Bintley, P.M.; Holmes, P.M.; Talbot, P.M. Kendal Lodge; J. R. Barron, W.M. 339; Thwaites, S.W. 339; Dixon, J.W. 339; Marshall, S.D. 339; Hetherington, J.D. 339; T. B. Arison, Treas. 339; Kidd, I. G. 339; Whitehead, T. 339; Hall, 339; Pearson, 339; Godfrey, P.M. Underley Lodge; Nelson, W.M. Kendal Lodge; Whitehead, P.M. Appleby Lodge; Thornton, Sec. Keswick Lodge; Lamonby, P.M. Cockermouth Lodge; and brethren from other lodges in the province, numbering altogether about fifty.

Business concluded, the brethren retired for luncheon, presided over by Bro. Col. Whitwell, M.P., D. Prov. Grand Master.

After the minutes of the previous meeting at Kirkby Lonsdale had been read and confirmed, the dues from lodges and fees from officers were received.

The next question was the "locale" for the annual provincial festival, in September, when Bro. Lamonby, P.M. and Secretary, Cockermouth, moved, and Bro. Evening, S.W. Cockermouth, seconded, a proposition in favour of a meeting being held under the banner of Skiddaw Lodge, No. 1002, Cockermouth, should the same meet the approval of Lord Bective. Bro. Bowes having spoken in favour of the proposition, it was agreed to, a letter from Whitwell Lodge, Millom, inviting Prov. Grand Lodge to hold its meeting there being previously read.

The last provincial meeting in Cockermouth took place twelve years ago, when the late Bro. Dykes, Dovenby Hall, was Prov. Grand Master, and on the forthcoming occasion it is proposed to consecrate the new lodge premises in Station-street.

A motion by Bro. Lamonby, to abolish the fees of honour due from Stewards was negatived without a division.

The Charity Committee's report was presented, including grants to Aged Masons and their widows, as also the announcement that a boy from Kendal had been elected to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys in London.

After a special vote of thanks to the Earl and Countess of Bective for their princely hospitality at Kirkby Lonsdale, last September, the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed in ancient form.

Col. Whitwell, in proposing "The Health of the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England," mentioned that his Royal Highness had appointed his brothers, the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold, Grand Senior and Junior Wardens.

During the proceedings of the day a meeting of Royal Arch Masons was held, at which it was agreed to form a Royal Arch Province for the two counties, with the Earl of Bective as Grand Superintendent.

FREEMASONRY IN SUSSEX.

A change has recently taken place in the government of this province in consequence of the resignation of Lord Pelham as Prov. Grand Master. On the 1st of the present month notification was sent from Grand Lodge to the W.M.'s of the province that H.R.H. the M.W.G.M. had been pleased to appoint Sir Walter Wyndham Burrell, Bart., M.P., Provincial Grand Master for Sussex. We understand that this appointment has given universal satisfaction throughout the province. Sir Walter Burrell is well-known and popular throughout Sussex. He is genial and warm-hearted, and is very much attached to Freemasonry, and has founded a lodge at Cockfield, where he resides, the Ockenden Lodge, No. 1465, of which he was the first W.M., three or four years ago. Sir Walter has never missed a single meeting of the lodge since it was established. In connection with the lodge he has formed a fund of benevolence, which has been so well supported by the members that already the W.M. is a life governor of each of the Masonic Institutions.

Sir Walter Burrell has appointed as his Deputy Provincial Grand Master Bro. John Henderson Scott, of Brighton. We have reason to believe that this appointment will also be well received by the brethren of the province. That Sir Walter Burrell has taken merit into consideration may be gathered from the following enumeration of what Bro. Scott has done during the last twenty-four years. All his services have been entirely gratuitous.

Bro. John H. Scott was initiated into Freemasonry in the Royal Clarence Lodge, No. 271, at Brighton, February 18, 1853. In 1854 he was appointed I.G., and worked his way, filling every office in lodge up to the W.M.'s chair, in which he was installed in 1859, again in 1865, and for the third time in January of the present year, so that he is the present W.M. of the lodge.

He has been a subscribing member of the Royal Clarence Lodge twenty-four years, and has held office either in lodge or chapter twenty-two years. He is hon. member of the Royal Brunswick Lodge, 732; Ockenden Lodge, 1465; Nova Ecclesia, 1466; Sackville, 1619; St. Cecilia, 1636. He has initiated, passed, and raised a large number of brethren. He has installed nineteen W.M.'s, assisted at the consecration of thirteen new lodges, and worked every section of the Three Lectures.

In the Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex he was appointed Prov. G. S. Deacon in 1859 and 1860; Prov. J.G. Warden in 1861; Prov. S.G.W. in 1865, 1866, and 1867; Prov. G. Sec. in 1873, 1874, 1875, and 1876.

In 1875 he was offered by Bro. Col. Dalbiac, the then Prov. G.M. of Sussex, the office of Dep. Prov. G.M., but declined on the plea of youth. He was appointed one of the Stewards for the Province of Sussex on the occasion of the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as M.W.G.M. at the Albert Hall, and was presented by the brethren of the province with the commemoration jewel.

In Royal Arch Masonry he was exalted in 1857, and in 1859 was appointed E. of the Lennox Chapter, 271. He has served the office of M.E.Z. twice, H. four times, J. three times. He is the father of the Sussex Chapter, 732, of which he was first P.S. and M.E.Z. in 1868. He was the first M.E.Z. of the Cyrus Chapter, No. 38, at Chichester, and received a handsome Past Principal's jewel for his services. He is an honorary member of the Cyrus Chapter, of the Hartington Chapter, No. 916, Eastbourne; and of the Pavilion Chapter, No. 315, Brighton. He has been twenty years a subscribing member of the Lennox Chapter, and eighteen years of the Sussex Chapter. He has installed, with three or four exceptions, every Principal in the Lennox Chapter since 1862, and several Principals in the Sussex Chapter, and exalted too many companions to enumerate. He has assisted at the consecration of three chapters.

Bro. Scott succeeds Bro. G. J. Fromer, P.G.D., an old and distinguished member of the Royal Clarence Lodge for upwards of forty years. Bro. Fromer was appointed Dep. Prov. G.M. for Sussex 1865, and since then almost the entire burden of the duties of Prov. G.M. have fallen upon his shoulders. For the last two years he has been invested by Lord Pelham with full power to act for him and in his stead. His resignation has caused the deepest regret to the Masons of Sussex, and he carries with him into his well-earned retirement the love and esteem of every brother of the province.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgia Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attack no tissue of the human body is exempt, no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills much assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders; whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body. The cure is neither temporary nor superficial, but permanent and complete, and the disease rarely recurs, so perfect has been the purification performed by these searching preparations.—ADVT.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The General Committee of the subscribers to this Institution met on Saturday last at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, V.P., presided. The other members present were—Bros. J. W. M. Dosell, Geo. Angold, Jesse Turner, H. Browne, John W. Dennison, A. H. Lilley, C. F. Matier, R. B. Webster, Rev. Dr. R. Morris, T. H. Turner, S. B. Wilson, Thos. Meggy, H. W. Hunt, W. Roebuck, H. Massey (Freemason), W. F. Collard Moutrie, Joyce Murray, George J. Palmer, S. Rosenthal, Hyde Pullen, F. Adlard, J. G. Chancellor, Alfred Lamb, and F. Binckes, Secretary.

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, the following report of the House Committee on the question of providing increased accommodation at the school, which was ordered at the last meeting of the General Committee to be printed and circulated, and its consideration adjourned to the present meeting, was brought up. We reprint it in order that every means may be possessed by the Craft at large to consider the matter.

The House Committee, to whom by resolution of the Quarterly General Court, of Monday, 15th January, 1877, it was referred:—

"To consider the entire question of increased accommodation at the Institution at Wood Green, and to report through the General Committee to a Quarterly General or Special General Court," submit as follows:—

They have carefully considered various suggested plans for the contemplated enlargement, and are unanimously of opinion that the best and most feasible is that which provides for the removal of the present laundry and drying ground, &c., and for the erection on the site thereof of a spacious dining hall, 100 by 50 feet, extending from east to west, to which access may readily be attained, both through the present west (kitchen) corridor, and by means of the existing covered way from the school and class rooms in the main building.

One prominent advantage of this locality for the dining hall is its proximity to the kitchen, which it is believed by the annexation of the scullery adjoining will be amply sufficient for the cooking and supplies requisite for the fullest number of boys the increased premises would be capable of accommodating. Scullery room would be found by a re-adjustment of the present store-rooms and offices.

The new block of buildings would cover an area of 110 by 55 feet, and would comprise three floors. It would start in a line from the eastern end of the new dining hall and extend northwards.

On the ground floor would be commodious class rooms, four in number, with assistant masters' sitting-room, lavatory, cap-room, and other requisite premises, with convenient exit to closets, urinals, &c.

The second and third floor would contain six dormitories, each for twenty boys, and assistant masters' bedrooms, assistant matron's bed-room, servants' bed-rooms, isolated, and with separate staircase.

The number of boys thus provided for is 120, in addition to the 184 in the main building.

The cost is estimated at about £22,000, or perhaps may be more safely stated at £25,000.

In recommendation of this scheme, which may be thought by some to be more extensive than is absolutely required by present exigencies, it may be stated that to provide for a smaller number, say, seventy boys, would reduce the cost only about £3,000!

The question of annual maintenance of so large an addition to the present establishment has not been lost sight of by the Committee. It is one which deserves most serious consideration, and, at the first blush, would seem to present insuperable difficulties; inasmuch as if the whole 120 boys were admitted as soon as the building was ready for their reception, the annual ordinary expenditure could hardly be estimated at less than £12,000, and might possibly exceed that amount, to say nothing of the sum required for "special expenditure," which varies from year to year, the average probably being about £1,000.

It must be remembered, however, that heavy and continuous as are the demands upon the resources of the Institution, there happily does not exist the necessity at present for the admission of extra boys to anything like the extent of those provided for, nor is it anticipated that such will be the case for some years to come. The Committee are of opinion that an addition of sixty boys will fairly meet the wants of the present generation, as it is not considered advisable, or for the interests of the Institution, that every boy qualified as a candidate under the laws of the Institution should, as a matter of course, be admitted, or, indeed, that election of candidates should be rendered too easy, and indifference and carelessness in selection be thus fostered and encouraged.

The enormous and rapid increase in the numerical strength of the Order is an admitted fact, as is also its advance in material prosperity, while the largely augmented contributions in support of our Institution is a matter of heartfelt congratulation. The considerations arising out of this favourable condition of affairs are not without weight with the Committee, but they cannot forget the arduous labour of the last sixteen years in connection with this Institution, and how much has been done by the Craft at large in assisting them in bringing it to its present position.

The crucial question with the Committee is—Is the Masonic body prepared to find the means necessary to carry out the proposed extension?

In the absence of a favourable response the Committee do not feel justified in undertaking so serious a responsibility, in comparatively so brief a period of the release of the Institution from the burden of debt, its invested capital being only £5,000, which on no account can they consent to be utilised for the object under consideration.

The Committee therefore conclude:—

1. They recognise fully the legitimacy of the demands for further accommodation.

2. They have ascertained the feasibility of carrying out the extension.

3. The issue—shall such extension be proceeded with?—they leave entirely to the decision of the fraternity.

The Committee before closing this report desire to add one word on a suggestion published with reference to a "Preparatory School." They express no opinion as to the advisability of making provisions for the sons of Freemasons at an age earlier than that at which they can now be received—8 years: contenting themselves with stating that the suggested scheme, if adopted, would enable the pupils from eight to twelve to be accommodated in the new building; the elder boys, from twelve to sixteen, being retained in the present building. The advantage of this arrangement, both educational and disciplinary, the Committee feel will be so apparent as to render unnecessary any enlargement thereon.

Signed, BENJAMIN HEAD, Chairman.

Wood Green, 23rd March, 1877.

This report having been agreed to be taken as read,

Bro. Jesse Turner said he had seen the report, and he had made enquiries about it. The result of those enquiries was that the report was only tentative. He agreed that it was so. It was all very well to be told that if they had £20,000 or £30,000 at their disposal, they could provide for 120 more boys, and for £3000 less they might provide for seventy more boys. But the question assumed a very different aspect when they had not the money, and appeals would have to be made for it. Bro. Binckes was very zealous, and had obtained very large sums from the Craft on behalf of the Institution by means of the extraordinary exertions he had made. But could the Institution always be worked at high pressure? They had been working at high pressure, and if there should be a war, or bad crops, the attempts to obtain large subscriptions would fare but badly. But another question remained. If by extraordinary exertions the necessary fund was raised for building a school large enough for 120 or seventy more boys, could a sufficient sum be depended on from the annual festivals to keep the school in a good, healthy, and proper condition? Looking at the question from that point of view, he thought there was opportunity for doing the Institution much good at far less cost. He had been over the Institution, and was thoroughly conversant with it, and he found that an addition might be made to it for £1800 or £2000 which would accommodate a few more boys. If it was possible to do anything like that, was it worth while to commence an effort for raising £22,000 at the present juncture in political affairs? He did not think it was; but that it would be better to leave well alone. Let them do all they possibly could for their own day and generation; and let those who came after them do the best they could for theirs. He merely threw these remarks out as suggestions, and not as a plan to be followed. He would like them to get the opinion of others, but he thought that if the matter were now debated the brethren would come to the conclusion that it was not ripe at the present moment, and should be deferred for further consideration. Perhaps some one would propose a smaller scheme than those named in the report, at a less cost.

The Chairman said that Bro. Turner's remark about the Institution having been worked at high pressure was, no doubt, correct, and he agreed that it would be best just now to let well alone. They might create a fund to assist them hereafter in erecting a building, and when they got on further they might increase the number of boys. If it were moved and seconded that the report be received and adopted, a discussion might very properly arise, and Bro. Turner's observations might be usefully taken into account.

Bro. Jesse Turner thought that as the report was merely tentative it could not be adopted.

Bro. Meggy having moved, and another brother having seconded, that the report be received and entered on the minutes, the motion was unanimously adopted.

Bro. Binckes observed that the report was as Bro. Turner had said, a tentative report. It pledged the brethren to nothing, and its consideration might be deferred to a future time.

Bro. Turner asked whether such a postponement would be "sine die."

Bro. Binckes said no: they might see what was the result of the next festival first. The object of the report was to bring the subject fairly before the Quarterly Court for them to consider. It had not been circulated half widely enough yet, but it would be competent to consider it at any committee meeting.

The Chairman said he thought it would be best to defer it till it had come before the next meeting of the House Committee.

It was then agreed to defer the consideration of the report.

Bro. Thos. Meggy said: before the committee quitted the subject he would like to know one thing, which must throw light on the matter. It would be a very good plan for increasing the accommodation to open out an "Extension Fund" from the receipts of this year; they could take a certain portion of the income which was not absolutely required for providing for the necessities of the Institution, and make up a fund. They could then go to the Craft and say, "we have put so much to the Extension Fund," and by-and-bye they might get all they wanted. They might begin by putting by £5000. (Laughter.)

Bro. Binckes would remind the brethren that Bro. Meggy's motion was unnecessary. Already when they had a surplus they invested it.

The Chairman said that Bro. Meggy had better give notice of motion for his proposition.

Bro. H. W. Hant thought the plan suggested by Bro. Meggy would not be a good one, because if they started an "Extension Fund" they would be pledging themselves to a certain thing.

The consideration of the report was then postponed.

Three candidates were then placed on the list for election.

Bro. Binckes said it was now his duty, although the letter was addressed to him, to bring before the committee a complaint of Bro. Knott, the Secretary of the Charity Organisation of Wiltshire, of the lateness of the issue of the proxies for last election. He did not think, however, that Bro. Knott had much to complain of when all the circumstances were taken into consideration. There was an unusual number this last time, and no doubt they were somewhat later, and this arose partly from the official who was employed to get them out being new to the work. They were all got out, but his arrangements for the future were so organised that there would be no ground for complaint on the score of delay. He had a complaint also from another brother, who said that as a subscriber to the Boys' School he had not received his voting paper. On making enquiry it was found he was not a subscriber entitled to votes which he said he had not received; but that for his life subscription of five guineas he had received his vote. He still persisted that he was, and in support of his statement wrote to say that Bro. Muggeridge received his subscription. On referring to the Girls' list, it was found that the brother was a subscriber to the Girls' School, and as such was called upon by Bro. Muggeridge, who gave him the receipt for the Girls' Institution. Bro. Muggeridge never was the collector for the Boys' School. He brought the matter forward to show that before brethren made complaints they should be careful to see that they had grounds for them.

Two late pupils of the Institution, who had obtained situations, were granted outfits. At the former meeting of the Committee a request was made by another boy who had obtained a situation, for an outfit: but the question of granting it was deferred. Bro. Binckes informing the Committee that he thought it his duty to let the Committee know that after this boy had left the school he had written a letter to another pupil, inciting to insubordination. The Committee allowed the matter to stand over for further enquiries, and the result of these enquiries was even a worse report than that. The mother of the boy had been to Dr. Morris, and requested him not to let the Committee know, as the boy was in a good situation and was doing well; and if the knowledge of what he had done came to his employers' ears it would be his ruin. Dr. Morris was present, and the Committee could put to him what questions they liked.

The Chairman thought Dr. Morris should let them know.

Dr. Morris said that of course if the Committee required him to do so he must; but as the mother of the boy said it would be the boy's ruin, he would put it to the Committee whether they would call upon him to make the statement.

The Committee unanimously resolved under the circumstance that they would not ask Dr. Morris to make the statement.

The following brethren were nominated for the House Committee for the ensuing year: Bros. H. Browne, J. G. Chancellor, Benj. Head, H. W. Hunt, W. F. C. Moutrie, W. Paas, Hyle Pullen, W. Roebuck, S. Rosenthal, J. B. Scriven, Raynham W. Stewart, S. Wood (Birmingham), Geo. Rowe, 1185, T. B. Grabham, P.G.W. Middlesex; Alfred Durrant, P.M. 1185; and George Newman, P.M. 192.

The present members of the Audit Committee were re-nominated.

Notice of motion was given by Bro. Dr. Ramsey to the same effect as that given by him at the last General Committee of the Girls' School, for increasing the office accommodation at Freemasons' Hall for the Boys' Institution.

The Committee then adjourned.

"OUR BOYS."

By OUR "V.P.C."

There's nothing like a good beginning, but then it's so difficult to begin; at least, when you've a good deal, or else nothing at all, to say. Now, I'm just in one or other of those plights or predicaments, and I hardly know which, although I think I have an idea, if not two, like Talbot What-his-name-you-know of our respected Bros. James and Thorne, that is the latter. Well, I think I really have an idea, only our Editor—he's a capital fellow, but awfully particular, that is with me; and he does let his "O.P.D." as he calls himself, make absurd remarks in the middle of my best passages—they'd be better than they are, I believe, if it were not that I stand rather in awe of him—but if I don't start I shall never say what I started to say, and so, as there is a slight kind of indecision as to where to begin first, I'd better do as we used to on frosty mornings when we stood shivering on the river's bank, plunge at once "in medium" (watery, of course, not spirituous like Dr. What-do-you-call-him), because, as our own poet says—

"In middle is riveris veri-simpliciter Igo."

Which I leave our Editor's obliging "O.P.D." to translate. Leaving our admired "Roman Father" Jacobus, then, as being too well known and appreciated to be dwelt upon now (except pausing to say that if so many people would not insist on going to see him at once there would be more room), we will make the fatal plunge into our subject, which is, by the way, some other "Our Boys" than the ones already alluded to.

* "You may take an ass to water, but it doesn't make him into a horse?"—O.P.D.

Once for all, then, I have a complaint to make, and I'll make it—for there's nothing like well airing a grievance if you don't want your spirits damped. I've been regularly victimised by somebody's changing the time of Grand Lodge.

The other day, Jones—you know him very well, for I have spoken of him before—has been, so he said, using his influence with somebody high at court, as we say—I fancy it must be the august somebody who takes care of the things at Grand Lodge, for Jones just slyly hinted that this somebody "had a key that would open the door, my boy"—to get me appointed a Grand something. Well, Jones said that he had received an intimation that I was to be sure to be present at the Festival, and that I should be sure to see and hear all about it. Accordingly, I went up to London last Wednesday on purpose, for I have quite made up my mind to take high rank, as I aspire to "Blow a repetition bubble,

Of imperceptible soap and invisible water,
With a cannon's mouth."

The poet meant of course a good deal bigger one than you can get out of a tobacco pipe, were it to extend even to the proud dimensions of an almost fossil "Churchwarden." Besides, I could not but think how lovely the gold chain and jewel of Second Deputy Pro Grand Assistant Organist (Gy. Grand Bellows-Blower?—O.P.D.) would look, and in our lodge ("Perspicacity, Reciprocity, and Veracity," No. nineteen hundred-and-a-half, Mudford-on-Sprey) would make me—

"The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,

The observed of all observers."

Though why on earth Shakespeare should take "moulded" glass and not "cut," as his pink of perfection, I can't think. Well, I went, fully persuaded that I was to be raised to that high office, and whilst I was waiting to go to the hall I was indulging myself with delicious dreams of the glorious music that we should treat the brethren to—I say we, for Milton most certainly had the idea that the assistant had, if possible, more to do with the music than the head man himself,—

"Let me the pealing organ blow,

To the full-voiced quire below,

A s'rice high, which, when I start,

May, by the skill shown on my part,

Dissolve them into ecstasies

And bring all heav'n before their eyes."

But what an awful disappointment; just as I got to the hall I met all the brethren coming away. I had mistaken the hour of meeting, and so was late, and lost my appointment. And to think of this, after the way that Jones had been congratulating me beforehand on "getting the purple," which he now turns into ridicule by declaring that I did get it, but only "in the face."

I shouldn't have cared so much but I'd had my portrait painted to give to lodge. Jones said the portrait of the jewel was perfect; it was painted (i.e., the jewel) after his instructions, and here they are.

"The jewel of the Second Deputy Pro Grand Assistant Organist is a handle proper, bent three-quarterly; borne by a windbag, (enamelled 'guil') I think he called it) pierced in the rear; the whole bearing an eye not very wide open, with a large spot of vert displayed in the corner." However, its of no use crying over milk spills, and I'll say no more, save that if Jones, who always greets me now with "Bless thee, Bottom, bless thee, thou art translated," gets another opportunity of laughing at me in that particular way I'm rather more green than my dear old aunt generally considers me.

However, although I was dreadfully disappointed, especially as I had a neat little speech already in my pocket in which to have returned thanks for my health at the banquet, I was amply rewarded for all my trouble by hearing the proclamation made that the three august Princes were the occupants of the three chairs. I could not help thinking how delighted the beloved patroness of our Order must be to see "Her Boys" at the head of such a loyal body, and I could share most thoroughly her pleasure when I reflected that if they were "Her Boys," they were, indeed, "Our Boys" too.

This makes me say something about yet another "Our Boys." I mean the proposed alteration, or addition, to the school. Now, I should like to see the child of every poor brother well cared for, but I really think we had better go on as we began, do as much as we can, but no more than we can do thoroughly well; it is always better to build than to pull down, be the pulling down ever so little. Verb. sap.—as Dr. Watts says in the classics; though I fancy, from the terrible number of his dear little ditties, Verbs would have been nearer his mark. However,—we really ought to put everybody's nose to the grindstone, no, I think I mean everybody's shoulder to the wheel, that we can, so as to give a long pull and a strong pull, which makes me call to mind that a kind-hearted lady is going to give a belle-pull (which I hope will prove a real good draw) at the Opera Comique in aid of the good cause. By-the-by, Smith of our lodge says that they want a really efficient prompter and stage manager, and that he will introduce me if I will only consent to act—I don't quite know whether to do it or no—but I would—yes, I really would—if I thought it would do a good turn to our poor brethren's girls, and, therefore our Girls and

The Historic Society of Liverpool has issued its twenty-eighth volume. It contains, in addition to some preliminary matter, articles on Roman antiquities in Cheshire and Lancashire, and some biographical notices, amongst which is a sketch of the late Mr. T. T. Wilkison, F.S.A., of Burley.

The banquet, which was admirably supplied by Bro. E. Dawkins, the manager of the Freemasons' Tavern, was everything that could be desired, and was laid out in the large hall of the tavern. The time fixed for sitting down to it was six o'clock, and very shortly after that hour the proceedings of the evening commenced. The ladies, who were very numerous, were entertained at a banquet in separate rooms, and the ladies' Stewards were unremitting in their attention to the wants of the fair sex. When the brethren had finished their banquet the ladies were admitted, and grace having been sung by the musical brethren and the lady assistants, the toasts of the evening were proposed. After the toast of "The Queen" had been duly honoured, and that of "The Prince and Princess of Wales" had received the customary enthusiastic reception, that of "The Pro G.M., the D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers," was proposed.

The Rev. C. W. Arnold, G.C., in reply, said: I am proud to have to thank you this evening for the kind way in which you have received the toast which I know is always one which Masons receive with honours, that is, the health of our Pro G.M. Lord Carnarvon, and also that of the D.G.M. Lord Skelmersdale. No more need be said by me with regard to those names, but with respect to the Grand Officers, I feel much honoured by having to return thanks for them. There are many among Masons who think the Grand Officers of England are men who have retired from business, and that they enjoy an otium cum dignitate. I can assure you, that is not the case; and all those present at the annual festival of the Emulation Lodge of Improvement in November last, which was presided over by Bro. John Hervey, will confirm me in the assertion that there is life and vigour among the Grand Officers of England, and that on such an occasion they can set an example which every Mason in England may be glad to copy. With regard to the present Grand Officers, all I can say is, that I thank you most sincerely for them, and I hope by our conduct during our year of office, we may at all events prove ourselves worthy of the kind recognition of our names which you have just bestowed. (Hear, hear.)

Col. Burdett proposed "The Health of the Chairman," and said it was one of the most difficult duties he could ever have to perform. He referred to the many acts of his lordship as a Mason as a proof of his truly Masonic feeling. Comparing his lordship with his predecessors in the chair, he found him not excelled by any one of them. In his province, which was an important one, he had given the greatest satisfaction to the brethren, and both as Prov. G.M. and as a nobleman of the locality, he was held in the highest honour by those who knew him best. He trusted he would long live to enjoy the esteem of all by whom he was known, and to be revered as much as his predecessors, in the chair of Prov. G.M. for Norfolk, Bros. Cabell and Walpole. Looking at the energy he had thrown into the performance of his duties as a ruler of the Province of Norfolk, he believed the brethren would never find that any one had performed his duties better.

Lord Suffield, who on rising to respond, was received with loud and long continued applause, said: My friend and brother on the right has said that he thinks it one of the most difficult duties he has ever had to perform to propose the toast which he had proposed to night. Allow me to say, if it is so for him, what must it be for me. You are unknown to me, and it does not certainly become me to speak of myself. I can only say with regard to myself that I am exceedingly gratified; and exceedingly grateful to all my brother Freemasons present here to-night, for the kind and the cordial manner in which they have responded to the toast. Although, brethren, I have been a Mason for a length of time, it is, as my brother has said, almost for the first time that I have had the honour of presenting myself before a body of my brother Freemasons in this great metropolis. I feel the honour you have done me in coming in such large numbers as I see before me, and I am very much gratified by it; but I can assure you that whatever may be my humble capacity I shall always exercise it to forward the interests of the Craft, and in the good cause of Masonic Charity I shall ever be found in the foremost rank. (Loud applause.)

Lord Suffield then proposed the toast of the evening, "Success to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls." His Lordship said: I now, brethren, come to what may certainly be called the toast of the evening, it is "The Success of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls," with which toast I have also to couple the name of the Treasurer, Bro. Tomkins. Much, indeed, may be said about this most noble Institution. You all, brethren, have before you the reports and the statistics of the School. It is unnecessary, therefore, for me, perhaps, to remind you of what you will there see in a much clearer form than I can give. But two or three things I have to say, if you will be so kind as to bear with me. With regard to the good which this Institution has done much may be said. It has had a long life; it is the oldest Masonic Institution, I believe, in the world; and within the last few years it has made extraordinary strides. With these strides we must always recollect there is attendant expense. It is true that the Masonic body has latterly very much increased, partly no doubt by the influence of our Royal Grand Master. There is no doubt that the Order has greatly extended, and I am sure you will all agree with me in the hope that not only may we increase in numbers, but in those material interests for which the Masonic art has always been so celebrated, and that we may have an increased pecuniary support of this institution, for which I am called upon to-night to plead, in order that we may increase its usefulness. The financial position of this institution you will hear from the Treasurer, and so I am not going now to trouble you with it, but I cannot forbear saying, in the language of the book that is before you, because I think it explains in a more business-like manner than I can in a speech, that a special appeal has been made by the Stewards for even more liberal support than has ever been previously extended to the Institution, inasmuch as the School building is now being considerably enlarged to enable the Committee to accommodate sixty additional children. That will make up the number, which is at present, I believe, 161, to the number of 220. I also quote from a report which the brethren have before them: "A detached laundry is also about to be erected on the grounds, and the present laundry, which is situated within the walls of the main building, will then be converted into classrooms, and adapted to other useful purposes. The cost of these additions and improvements must necessarily be defrayed out of the funded property of the Institution, unless the brethren determine so to increase their subscriptions and donations in 1877, as to place the Managing Committee in the proud position of being enabled to announce that the great work has been accomplished solely by the Freemasons of the present day." I must say, brethren, I think that would be a proud position. We have always been celebrated for the charities, and among all, as I have said before, I am quite certain none can surpass this in interest and usefulness. I may venture to hope that I shall not appeal to you in vain to come forward to the extent of your ability in furtherance of the object which we all have in view. You all know the expense of the Institution. There is one thing to be recollected, that the funded property of this School forms only one-twelfth part of the revenue. It is, therefore, apparent to everybody that without individual support, and without increased support, this noble Institution cannot flourish, as I am sure we all wish it should. It is an unfortunate thing that this year we have not been able to pay the annual Steward's visit to the School, but I look forward with great pleasure to having to do so in a short time, accompanied by the Stewards, when we shall have the opportunity of testing the value of the education there given from personal observation. You have all read about it; and I have the best reason to believe that everything is there conducted in the best possible manner, and that very few things could be improved. But it would be a satisfaction to myself as it would be to the Stewards, to go there and see for ourselves what is going on. I believe the system of education has been very successful; and I am glad to find that one of the most successful branches, considering the humble lot of those who are recipients of your bounty, housewifery and cookery, are not forgotten. Not only are they not forgotten, but they form a considerable part of the education in that establishment. We should not lose sight of the probability that the girls in this School may become wives and mothers; and it is of the utmost consequence and importance that they should not be "found wanting" in those accomplishments which may make them good wives and mothers. (Hear, hear.) I will not detain you longer on this subject. As I have said before, you will hear from our Treasurer the financial position of the Institution, and a great deal that no doubt will be very interesting. I am sure you have heard enough from me, and I only wish my powers were greater to do more than I have done to induce you to subscribe liberally to this ancient, most noble, most honoured, and useful Institution. (Great applause).

Bro. Samuel Tomkins in acknowledging the toast said: The great point the brethren had to keep before them was to increase among each other the feeling of sympathy in the work of charity. The Girls' School was one in which they all felt a particular interest, and they thought it their first duty to support the Girls' School. It was their great pleasure to strive to keep it in full and efficient working order. That could only be maintained by the most strenuous efforts of the Craft generally, and it was very gratifying to see so many brethren from the country then present. The Institution was as much for the country as for London, and it was the duty of the brethren throughout the country to strive to support it. With respect to the financial matters which the chairman had said he (Bro. Tomkins) would give them, he thought it was quite unnecessary, because the whole of the accounts were in the hands of the brethren.

Bro. Thomas W. White, P.M. 21, and P.G.S., a member of the House Committee, then read the following Stewards' lists proposer of this toast this evening, when commercial matters are not quite as we would wish them to be, perhaps we have more anxiety than we ordinarily have. The first of our festivals was celebrated in February last with an enormous success, on which we all congratulated my good friend and brother who stands on my immediate right, and all connected with that Institution, most heartily. You have celebrated another success this evening, not perhaps so far in its amount as that which was celebrated in February, but still a magnificent amount, and which reflects honour upon the Craft. Well, now, you know there is another anniversary festival to take place in June. (Great laughter.) Well, now, brethren, why this laughter? I am endeavouring to treat a serious question in a serious way: why do you meet me with smiles and laughter? I say there is a third anniversary to be celebrated at the end of June; and there are three degrees of comparison, as is very well known to any one who has learned his English grammar. I did not know how these three degrees would be compared until the result was announced this evening; but I consider this evening has been very good; last February was better; but do let me indulge in an earnest hope that June next may be very much the best. It is not for me to say which Institution is more or less deserving of your support. I have always said, and I do not hesitate to repeat myself this evening, that I believe the whole of our Institutions deserve the very best support that Freemasons can render; and we stand on one common platform—we are doing all we can, I know, to rival each other in the amount of support we get, and I, for one, shall be a very disappointed man if I am not able to announce at the Alexandra Palace on the 27th June, a larger amount than has been announced up to this present moment by the other Institutions. Now, never mind what has been said about the Boys' School; we are doing the best we possibly can to maintain in that Institution the largest number that we can accommodate. The question of increased accommodation is before the Craft. It is for you to judge, for you to decide, and for you to determine. All we ask is, give us the means, and we will do everything in our power to answer your requirements and your requisitions. Without your support we can do nothing. But while, I am sure, it would be idle for me to take up any portion of your time this evening in speaking of the magnificent results you have achieved for this Institution, I hope for a larger number of brethren to rally round the Boys' School; and let us say from year to year as we have in the past, we have not to lament over a decreased amount of subscriptions, but still keep ahead of the other institutions, and thereby induce on their part an increased rivalry, and so do good to all our Institutions. There is only one observation I have to make: Our excellent and good friend, Bro. Philbrick, in proposing this toast said that last year we achieved £20,000. Our Bro. Philbrick made a very great mistake, because the amount was very nearly £40,000—at all events, it exceeded £39,000; and, therefore, I think the credit should not be withheld from the Craft, all the credit due to it for this most magnificent and liberal support. But, bear in mind, brethren, that what you have done in the past is nothing to what you will be called upon to do in the future. The Order you know is increasing to an enormous extent; the demands are increasing in a relative proportion; we must open our doors; extend our benefits; and give more liberal accommodation to those you force upon us as the recipients of our benefits.

Bro. James Terry, in response to loud and repeated calls said, I am sure you will not require from me any lengthened remarks at all, after those you have had the pleasure of listening to from my good friend, Bro. Binckes; but permit me, in the absence of Bro. Little, simply in his name, to thank this great gathering for all they have done on behalf of the Girls' School on this occasion, and I truly wish that he were present and had the power, as I am sure he has the will, to express to you his unmitigated feelings of gratitude to the Board of Stewards, and to the noble lord who presides, for everything that has been done on the present occasion. For myself my lord, speaking for that which is past, I can but thank very many who are now present for having in February last given to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution the largest amount that that Institution ever had the honour of recording, viz., £12,866. (Cheers.) My lord, I can only hope that what has been stated to-night by Bro. Binckes, that we have three degrees of comparison, the positive, comparative, and superlative, may prove the case with respect to the results to our three Institutions, that large as has been the increase in the subscriptions to the Benevolent Institution, large as has been the amount to the Girls' School, Bro. Binckes in June next may have the honour and gratification of announcing an amount in advance of what he had last year as Bro. Little and myself had to our Institutions. I thank you for giving me the opportunity of speaking in Bro. Little's absence, and I thank my lord also for having granted myself the privilege of speaking as the Secretary of the youngest Institution which is doing the largest amount of work of either of the three. (Great cheering.)

Bro. Hervey, G.S., proposed "The Stewards," and in submitting the toast complimented those brethren on the excellence of their arrangements for the success of the evening.

Bro. F. A. Philbrick, President of the Board of Stewards, responded. The Stewards had endeavoured to carry out the duties which they took upon themselves when they accepted office; and if they had done so to the satisfaction of the brethren that was the best reward they could hope for, and in obtaining it they had more than secured the end that they had proposed to themselves.

Lord Suffield gave "The Health of the Ladies," to which Dr. Woodman responded, and the brethren then joined the ladies in the Temple, where a charming concert was given by the following distinguished artists:—Bros. Baxter, Carter, Montem Smith, and Chaplin Henry; Miss Florence Lavender, Madame Thaddeus Wells, Miss Kate Baxter, and Bro. Theodore Distin.

The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Theodore Distin, whom we have to congratulate on the success of his pupil, Miss Lavender, the young lady obtaining encores in "Robert, toi que j'aime," and "The last Rose of Summer." Bro. F. H. Cozens presided at the pianoforte.

Bro. Harker was Toast Master at the banquet.

GRAND LODGE OF SCOTLAND.

The Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland was held on Monday, the 7th inst., in the Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh. The throne was occupied by Bro. Henry Inglis of Torsonce, Depute Grand Master, who was supported by Bros. the Rev. Dr. Gray, Grand Chaplain; Lord Inverurie, Captain Harriot, Provincial Grand Master of Wigtown and Kirkcudbright; F. A. Barrow, Depute Provincial Grand Master, Glasgow; A. Hay, Grand Jeweller; Daniel Robertson, Grand Bible-bearer; Muller, Grand Director of Music, &c. The Wardens' chairs were occupied by Wm. Mann, G.P.S.W., and W. Hay, Grand Architect, Acting J.W. Among those in the hall were Bros. Monro, R.W.M., Lodge Commercial; Stobo, R.W.M., Lodge Plantation; Jas. Thomson, R.W.M. No. 102; McNaught, R.W.M. No. 556; W. H. Bickerton, Provincial Grand Secretary; J. Wallace, Halkett, Wheeler, Glasgow, &c. After the lodge had been opened it was intimated that presents had been received from Grand Lodges of Virginia, Connecticut, and Missouri, and a vote of thanks was awarded to these bodies. Petitions in favour of the following new lodges were considered and granted:—St. Andrew, Campbeltown, near Fort-George; Leucophibia, Whithorn, Grenville, Canada; Robert Burns, Christchurch, Canterbury, N.Z.; Eureka, Christianstadt; St. Croix, Danish West India Isles; Rosslyn St. Clair, Roslin; and Prince's, Glasgow. The following Provincial Grand Masters were appointed:—The Hon. Frederick Whittaker, New Zealand, North Island; Bros. Connor, South Australia; and Provost Forrest, of Hamilton, Lanarkshire, Middle Ward. Bro. Walker, P.G.M., was appointed representative to the Grand Lodge of West Virginia. The report of the special Committee appointed to regulate the duties of Grand Secretary and Cashier was next taken up. The Committee then recommended that the appointment of Bro. Kinnear as cashier should be confirmed at a salary of £200 a year. After some discussion the report was adopted.

A petition and appeal was submitted by Bro. Robert Steven of Lodge St. Vincent, Sandyford, No. 553, Glasgow, who had been suspended from all Masonic privileges for five years by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow.

Bro. Law (Springburn) read a statement in reference to the dispute, in which Bro. Steven stated he had been the originator of this lodge, and the cause of his suspension was the opposition he made to the fixing of the bye-laws, which he alleged were designed to deter the majority of the members from entering the lodge. At a meeting of the lodge where Bro. Barrow acted as Provincial Grand Master he stated that they had come to the resolution to confirm the bye-laws. When Bro. Steven heard this statement he craved admission to retire, and in doing so protested against the proceedings. At the word protest Bro. Barrow ordered the Wardens to put him out. This the Wardens were reluctant to do, and when he again asked permission to retire. Bro. Barrow suspended him from membership. Several of the members of the Provincial Lodge went to the support of their Master, and some disturbance arose. The whole affair did not last two minutes, and the appellant asserted that he was not in any way responsible for any unseemly or "unmasonic" conduct.

Bro. Barrow, on behalf of the Provincial Grand Lodge, made an explanation of what steps had been adopted to ascertain whether the bye-laws had been carried by a majority of the members of Lodge St. Vincent. The deputation from the Provincial Grand Lodge had made a very careful examination into the whole subject before they formed their opinion that the majority had approved of the bye-laws. When he (Bro. Barrow) announced the decision Bro. Steven rose and menaced him in such a manner that he was really afraid. (Laughter.) The course followed by the Provincial Grand Lodge had been perfectly justifiable, and they did no more than was necessary to maintain the dignity of their position. He denied however that he had been personally interested in what had been done, and declared that the sentence passed on Bro. Steven of suspension for five years had been given unanimously by the Provincial Grand Lodge. ("No, no.")

Bro. Stevens was heard in support of his appeal, and asked that the Grand Lodge should give him every consideration. The decision of suspension for five years he asserted was most atrocious, and was passed on him for asserting his own rights, which could not possibly be construed into un-Masonic conduct.

Bro. James Wallace (Glasgow) moved that the decision of the Grand Lodge of Glasgow be rescinded. If Bro. Stevens was required to apologise for his conduct he thought that apology should be made to the Grand Lodge. As far as he was aware the appellant had been tried and condemned without a hearing.

Bro. D. Robertson seconded the motion. This suspension, he thought, was merely a piece of great favouritism, and the appellant was a victim. He was of opinion that the case should not only be dealt with justly, but mercifully.

Bro. Halkett (Glasgow) knew the whole of the facts of the case, and considered the decision of the Provincial Grand Lodge was just and reasonable. He therefore moved that it should be confirmed.

Bro. Thomson (102) seconded the motion.

After some discussion it was unanimously resolved to rescind the decision of the Provincial Grand Lodge.

A petition, memorial, and appeal were next heard from a number of members of Lodge Clydesdale against a decision of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Glasgow. The complaint of the brethren in this lodge was in regard to the last election of office-bearers. Between the date of nomination and the day of election it was alleged that a number of members were affiliated into the lodge for the purpose of influencing the election. Those who objected to the office-bearers chosen appealed, and the Provincial Grand Lodge ruled that those who had been affiliated between the day of nomination and the election were not entitled to vote. Thereupon a new election was ordered, to which a number of members objected, and protested and appealed.

The facts of the case having been submitted to Grand Lodge, and representatives on both sides heard, it was resolved by a small majority to confirm the decision of Provincial Grand Lodge, and declare the present office-bearers of Lodge Clydesdale duly elected.

The remainder of the business consisted principally of amendments in regard to a number of the Grand Lodge laws.

With the return of spring, our hospitals begin to look gay with flowers, and, according to the Lancet, there is scarcely a ward to be found which is not decorated with its quota of primroses and hyacinths. Do those who so thoughtfully send these beautiful things from the bright country into the sick wards of our dusky town ever think how their presents are displayed? The "putting up" of flowers is an art that hospital nurses are often little skilled in, and between a lack of talent or of time, and a want of suitable vessels, the flowers are often not shown to the best advantage. Wallflowers tightly jammed into a half-pint mug scarcely look their best, and a common washing-basin is hardly a suitable vessel for the display of primroses. But what is to be done if no proper flower-vases are to be had? No hospital committee would feel justified in spending money on such trifles, and no one seems ever to think of making such a present, which would be most acceptable to a hospital. In the present day when the fashion in table decorations changes every season, one would suppose that disused and obsolete flower-stands are to be found in almost every glass or china closet, and we feel sure that we have only to make this little want of our hospitals known to ensure its being speedily satisfied.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Earl of Powis to be Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Montgomery in the room of the late Lord Sudely.

THE MOVEMENTS OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

Our readers will be glad to see and to hear that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has returned to England from his continental trip, and is much benefitted by it. He has as usual been hard at work since his return home, holding a levee the afternoon of his arrival, having travelled by night from Paris, and presiding on Monday evening at the gathering of an excellent object "The Licensed Victuallers' Benevolent Institution" with his accustomed geniality and eloquence, to which Lord Granville very happily alluded. It may also be added, that the returns of the festival amounted to £5000.

FESTIVAL OF THE ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The Anniversary Festival of the Girls' School was held on Wednesday evening, under the presidency of Lord Suffield, and we are happy in announcing that the returns amounted to £9828 3s., with 22 lists to come in. We shall recur to this subject in our next.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

Bro. Hubert in the Chaine d'Union for May reproduces some words of ours at page 276, to which he is good enough to apply the epithet of "sages paroles." We thank Bro. Hubert for his friendly and fraternal recognition, alike of the intent of our remarks, and of the spirit by which they were actuated. They were permeated, as Bro. Hubert has had the rare sagacity to see, with the most friendly feeling to all French Freemasons. We feel sure, with Bro. Hubert, (as we are happy to note that he and we almost entirely agree), that if this untoward movement has a successful result, if such a "betise" can be "bien vue" by our French brethren, French Freemasonry is preparing for itself a great fall, and a sad future. We beg to say once for all, that we have no interest in the matter, but that of French Freemasonry itself, and of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry, as far as we understand the true position of the one or the other. Our worthy opponents, Bros. Caubet and Grimaux and others, think that our "lunettes" are very much obscured just now, and that we see all things in France, "a tort et a travers." But we assure them and all who read our humble lucubrations, that we venture to express our honest opinion warmly and clearly, because we feel strongly the importance of the whole question, and because we think we see, and see with deep regret, the undoubted and melancholy "avenir" which some French Freemasons are preparing for their Order in France. For just let us look on a little, and try to realize what the position of the Grand Orient will be, if this new agitation against the recognition even of belief in God be triumphant, Bro. Caubet and his co-sympathisers may carry the suppression of Article 2, et puis? What then? What will be the position of the French Grand Orient as before the world? It has overthrown one of the universal and abiding landmarks of Freemasonry, profession of belief in God, and how does it stand in relation to Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry? to German Freemasonry? In fact, to the whole Masonic family? In our humble opinion it unmasons itself, if we may use such an expression. It ceases to be a true Grand Lodge of Freemasons, and it imperils its lawful jurisdiction over Freemasons at home. As regards Freemasons abroad, it forfeits all international Masonic rights. It, in fact, is no longer a proper, lawful, regular, Masonic body. To use the language of an able friend of ours, "the foundation being cut away, the building falls." It will be impossible, as Bro. Hervey pointed out in a recent friendly warning, to maintain any longer, if such a revolution be carried through, any "entente cordiale," as between the English and French governing bodies. Nay, we venture to think, as he did, though of course it is only our individual opinion "quantum valet," as it was his, but speaking unofficially of course, that in such a portion of affairs the English Grand Lodge will be unable any longer to recognize the Grand Orient of France, to admit the validity of its certificates, or to consent to mutual representation, or, indeed, any international intercourse. And then comes in this further question: will not the English Masons resident in France and Belgium, (for the same perversity is apparently there also succeeding), have a right to petition our Grand Master, and ask for warrants to enable them to meet in countries in which Freemasons have abjured the very foundation truth of our Order? We fancy that they will; and that in truth, under such circumstances, there can be but one reply to such petitions for relief, and for permission properly to carry on the work and teaching of true Freemasonry. For they cannot clearly enter French and Belgian Lodges, and are they to be debarred from all Masonic life and work? According to Bros. Grimaux and Caubet, indeed, (whose views on international Masonic law appear very queer), there would be nothing contrary to Masonic law or order, if English brethren met together now, in France and Belgium, with or without warrants. For if Bro. Grimaux's special pleading, which the Monde Maconnique appears to approve, be correct as regards Les Philadelphes, then, according to their principles, there is nothing to prevent English brethren meeting qua English brethren in lodge whether in France or Belgium, without referring to or considering those who claim Masonic authority in those two countries? We do not ourselves, however, go so far as such a very remarkable assertion of Masonic "Communism," but we do venture to hold that where there is no proper national Masonic authority, or lawful jurisdiction, any Grand Lodge may issue its warrant for lodges to meet. And, as we said before, this question must supervene: If the Grand Orients of France and Belgium actually do away with the recognition of God, will they not have forfeited, by the great common law of Freemasonry, all claim to jurisdiction, authority, and even the name of lawfully constituted Grand Lodges, the power of national and International Masonic jurisdiction? Our readers will see, as we have been trying to point out to them, the great seriousness of the whole question, and the important issues involved in these regrettable and revolutionary proceedings of a section of French Freemasons. Let us trust as Bro. Hubert does, that the good sense of our French brethren will yet put an end to the sterile discussions, and prevent unhappy complications, by the maintenance of the existing constitutions, and the determination "Stare super vias antiquas."

PEACE.

As Freemasons, we must all deplore the advent of war and the loss of peace to Europe and to mankind. For peace represents, let us not forget, tranquil progress and civilizing influences, the development and victory of the arts that embellish, the liberties which uphold social society, and that real agglomeration of humanity which we term the world. War, on the other hand, symbolizes all that is most destructive and antagonistic to order, law, true happiness, and national prosperity. We do not mean to say that no war is justifiable, or that no war is ever needed alike for the defence of a country, the honour of a people, the stern and vindicating requirements of justice, truth, and right. We do not because we are Freemasons belong to the peace-at-any-price party. We freely admit, that there are to-day, as there ever have been in the past annals of nations, as there ever will be in the future of our race, times and seasons when we must draw the sword in defence of all that we hold most sacred, of all that we count most dear. But, on the other hand, we must be ever on our guard against the many temptations and tempters to hasty wars, to rash wars, to unjust wars, to uncalled-for wars. Bro. Sala, always an eloquent writer, puts it well in the Illustrated London News, when he says:—

"The bodies of some 8000 Englishmen moulder peacefully in this (Scutari) graveyard. I fancy that the remembrance of their deaths might moderate the frenzy of the politicians who seem bent on hounding England on to a fresh war with Russia. Surely those politicians must be mainly young men, or they must have very short memories. I remember the episodes of the Crimean War as though they had happened yesterday, for then, as now, I was earning my daily bread by literature and journalism, and the war brought me every day fresh materials for my pen. I was within an ace in 1856 of going to Sebastopol, but I went to Russia instead. Can you not recall, you who are middle-aged and whose memories are good, those two miserable years between the fight at the Alma and the fall of the Malakoff? Do you remember the Ghost's Derby Day of 1855? Do you remember when, on the cliff of Brighton and the Marina at St. Leonard's, you could hardly walk ten paces without meeting groups of ladies and children clad in deepest mourning for their fathers, husbands, brothers, sweethearts, slain in that wretched Chersonese, or who had sickened and died in the cheerless wards of the Scutari Hospital. Are we to have these years of private agony and bereavement, of public blundering and mismanagement, over again? I suppose so; glory is a very fine thing. I am only a pékin, a civilian, and I know nothing about glory; but I confess that my blood grows cold and that my heart sickens when I hear politicians prating about the 'arbitrament of the Sword,' and 'war clearing the atmosphere,' and so forth. I never met Glory yet, and I don't know what he or she is like; but I have met War face to face half-a-dozen times in as many countries. I have looked into the whites, or rather the crimsons, of his eyes, and I have gazed upon the Sisters who follow him wheresoever he goes. They are three Sisters, and their names are 'Rapine,' and 'Disease,' and 'Death.' This is, of course, a miserably craven and spiritless way of looking at War. I cannot help it. I have seen only War's madness and wickedness, its foulness and squalor. To me it has represented nothing but robbing and profligacy, but famine and slaughter; and I can but think that if the warlike politicians were to witness just half an hour of actual warfare as I have witnessed it in America, in Italy, in Mexico, in France, in Spain, their martial ardour would cool down a little, and they would not be quite so prompt to blow the bellicose trumpet." We fully agree with these straightforward manly words. We can recall some touching lines of Præd, which we think serve to cap, as poetry, the eloquent prose of our literary brother—

"And all the bitter tears we wept,

In those our days of fame,

The dread that o'er our heartstrings crept,

With every post that came;

The home affections waged and lost

In every far off fray,

The price that British glory cost.

Ah! take the sword away."

We fear that our hopes are vain, but we still cherish the assurance that even under the present most inauspicious appearance of affairs, some peaceable intervention may yet induce the Turks to listen to reason, and thus best advance and best uphold the rights of suffering populations, and insure peace to the world. The English Government has manfully laboured from first to last to bring about (perhaps an impossible result) namely, the safe maintenance of the liberties of all, and the great blessing of peace.

BRO. HARTY'S ENGRAVING OF THE INSTALLATION OF OUR ROYAL GRAND MASTER.

We have been favoured with a view of this interesting souvenir of the above memorable event, in a very advanced state, and Bro. Harty will give our readers next week a full account of the present position of the engraving. There are still about six portraits required to fill up the picture, which promises to be alike worthy of the artist and the occasion it seeks so fitly to commemorate.

THE EXCLUSION OF THE HEBREWS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I must, I am sorry, refute your remark at the foot of my letter I sent you last week, wherein you question the correctness of the facts I reported to you. And I again repeat my statement, which is based upon very sure fundaments. So I say again, of the two other Grand Lodges in Berlin, the Royal York of Friendship has repealed (already) similar sections, but not all her daughter lodges admit non-Christians as yet; while the third Grand Lodge, the Grand Countries Lodge of Germany, is as intolerant as the Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes, nay, more intolerant than the latter, as it never wanted to repeal its constitution as the Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes several times attempted to repeal that famous section 165 A.C., so in April, 1873, in May, 1874, in 1875, and in 1876. The result of the last meeting I reported to you in October, 1876. I searched for the Freemason of 21st of October, 1876, and I find that the name of the Grand Lodge in question is not quite correct as you have it in the letter of mine, "Grand National Lodge;" this is not the full name, it is "Grand National Mother Lodge of the Three Globes."

I am, dear Sir and brother, yours fraternally,

J. STRAUSS.

[We have written to Bro. Findel for an accurate statement of the whole affair, as Bro Strauss will see.—Ed.]

To Bro. Findel, Leipzig.

Dear Bro. Findel,—

We have had, as you will doubtless be aware, the most contradictory statements, as to the exact position of the Hebrew exclusion question in Germany. In a recent Bauhütte one able writer rather smiled at our ignorance of the "status in quo," and to say the truth, I hardly know what to accept myself amid this plethora of assertion and counter assertion, of affirmation and denial. I had understood, alike from the Bauhütte and other sources, that, in both the Grand Lodges of the Three Globes, and the Royal York, Hebrews could now be admitted, and that in the Grand Countries Lodge alone, their exclusion was unwisely maintained, for want of a two-thirds majority. Bro. Dr. Strauss, thinks that I am wrong; so will you enlighten us in England as to the actual state of affairs, give us the simple facts of the case, and tell us in what Grand Lodge this unjust persecution of a worthy body of men and Masons is really perpetuated.

I am, dear Bro. Findel, yours fraternally,

THE EDITOR.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have frequently to pass our noble school on Wandsworth Common, both inside and out much to be admired, but from the main road the approach to it is a disgrace to the neighbourhood. The only approach from Clapham Junction is over a miserable, shaky little iron bridge, in wet weather one long puddle, in dry a dust trap, the two ends closed by awkward swinging gates, the stones in which they are fixed being well worn with holes, so that the rain water is caught, and so are the passengers' feet. One pities the neat little feet of our school girls that must be daily subject to such an ordeal, and surely it is a matter for our Craft to undertake to set right. The bridge crosses the South Western Railway. Do, Sir, insert this, and let us hope it will lead to the matter being set right.

Yours truly,

A CONSTANT READER.

QUALIFICATIONS OF CANDIDATES FOR THE SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am very glad to see the question of the qualification of candidates for our Schools raised in your columns. I think it deserves the serious attention not only of the Committees of the Schools, but of every Mason anxious for the best interests of the Craft.

Before reading your last article, and Bro. Tombs' second letter, I had prepared some facts as lessons from the results of the last elections, and, with your permission, I will lay them before your readers. Fourteen boys and thirteen girls have just been elected. Of the 27 brethren, parents of these children, ten only supported our charities. The average number of years during which the parents of the successful girls subscribed to a lodge, omitting four exceptional cases of 28, 24, 13½, and 13½ years, was 5½ years; the average in the case of the boys, similarly omitting four cases of 17, 17, 16, and 13 years, was four years.

The daughter of a brother who has been a non-subscriber to a lodge for 27 years, and who has only subscribed for five years, was elected. The son of a brother who had been a non-subscriber of a lodge for 15 years, and who had only subscribed for four years, was elected, he having a brother in the school at the present time.

None of the parents of these two cases had supported our charities.

The father of the boy at the top of the poll had subscribed 2½ years to a lodge.

The father of the girl at the top of the poll had subscribed 1½ years to a lodge.

A friend of mine, not a Mason, tells me the moral of these facts is, that Masonry is not a lottery with respect to the pecuniary benefits to be derived from it, but that the less a Mason subscribes to our Benevolent Fund, the less he supports our charities, the more likelihood is there of his children obtaining the advantages of those charities. The deduction I draw from the above statistics is, that if a child be of the required age and can obtain friends enough to defeat other candidates at the poll, it matters not how little the services of the father may have been to Masonry, there is no protection on the part of the managing committee of the deserving as against the undeserving candidates.

I think there should be a regulation providing that the parent of a candidate, before he or she be accepted, shall have subscribed a minimum number of years to a lodge, I should like also to require some support on the part of the father to our charities. I would also thoroughly urge the desirability of a certificate of the good character of the father being required. During the last few days I have been asked to support a child whose father is said to have misconducted himself, and I must confess that, whilst pitying the mother and the family, if the allegation be true, I cannot consider the case a deserving one.

I find lodges recommend cases brought before them; solely with reference to the official record of dates, &c., that is, that a lodge considers itself responsible only for the dates of initiation or joining, and the number of years the brother has subscribed; and that the certificate of the lodge will be attached to the form, whilst the opinion of every brother signing may be that the case is not a deserving one.

I would urge that some special circumstances should be required to be stated respecting every candidate. There will be no want of deserving cases. Of the 113 candidates, 40 are children of parents who have subscribed 10 years and upwards, and, other claims being equal, I cannot but regard these as having a prior claim on us, yet 8 only were elected.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. E. LE FEUVRE,

P.G. Sec. Hampshire and Isle of Wight.

ELECTION OF PROVINCIAL CANDIDATES TO THE MASONIC CHARITIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read your excellent article on Boys' and Girls' School voting in the Freemason of the 28th ult., and the same has suggested to me that in many provinces there is a great waste of voting power, and I think the plan adopted for some years in the Province of Staffordshire, if generally known and adopted (with such improvements and alterations as may suggest themselves to the brethren), would be found of immense help in securing the return of candidates for the various charities.

In the first place, I would suggest that some worthy brother should be appointed by each Provincial Grand Lodge to receive the voting papers from the whole of his province, and, by this means, to bring the whole voting power of provinces to one centre. And in order to carry out the same, a brother shall be appointed annually in each lodge, whose duty it shall be to secure the voting papers belonging to members of his lodge, and to forward them to the provincial centre. By this means each province can at once ascertain its voting power, and be enabled to borrow votes to secure the return of their candidate should circumstances render it necessary so to do. And I would recommend that the brother appointed by the province should have full power to use all the voting papers so received in any manner which may be most advantageous to the interests of candidates belonging to his province. The names of all candidates (before receiving such support) shall have been brought before a meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the case, after full enquiry, be approved of by same. This, if adopted, would check any abuse of the charity as alluded to in the recent correspondence of Bro. Tombs.

We all feel justly proud of our Grand Masonic Charities, and it is the duty of every true-hearted and earnest Mason to guard them from abuse, and, at all times, to further their interests by all means in his power. In many country lodges I fear that the charities are not sufficiently well known, and if, in each lodge, a brother were appointed whose special duty should be the work of the charities, he would be able, at convenient periods, to bring the subject prominently before the members of his lodge, and, possibly, by this means, induce many brethren to take a more lively interest in, and give to them support which as yet may not have been given, simply because it has not been directly brought under their notice.

Quoting from a speech of our very respected Bro. the Rev. R. J. Stimpson, P.G.C.:—"Every Mason is bound, according to his ability, to let charity be a part of his Masonry." I sincerely hope the day may yet come when every lodge under the register of the Grand Lodge of England shall pay over to one or other of our noble charities a part of the initiation fee received from every newly-admitted brother. And, further, that every brother may, according to his means, assist forward in some way the great and good work of our noble institutions.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

F. MOUNT HUMPHRIES, P.M. 539,

Prov. Grand Sup. of Works Staffordshire.

CHARITY VOTING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In accordance with your kind permission, contained in the Freemason of last week, I proceed to give you a few extracts from the last circular of our Charity Voting Reform Association, in the hope that they may suggest some reforms worthy of consideration in regard to the elective system of our own noble charities.

The Committee of the Charity Voting Reform

Association, in their report, rendered at a public meeting held in July last, were enabled to point to many and very decided proofs of the prevalence of a more enlightened opinion among the supporters of Voting Charities, showing that they were beginning to recognise the evils which had grown up around the present mode of admission to the benefits of these institutions. Recent changes in the direction recommended by the Committee were cited in proof of tangible progress in no less than ten metropolitan charities, and the cordial support of a considerable number of subscribers to the Voting Charities was attested by the fact that upwards of 4000 members have joined this association—nearly all being subscribers to such institutions—no less than 1200 having added their names during the preceding year.

The Committee further had the satisfaction of seeing their exertions emphatically approved, on public occasions, by many of the most enlightened men of the day; notably by Mr. Gladstone at the Mansion House; Lord Wharncliffe at the annual meeting of the Albert Asylum for Idiots and Imbeciles at Lancaster; by Lord Aberdare at the last public meeting of the association; by letter from Lord Overstone, Lord Shaftesbury, Sir Sydney Waterlow, the Bishops of London and Peterborough, the Dean of Westminster, Miss Florence Nightingale, and a large number of distinguished persons well known for their philanthropic labours. These have, one and all, borne the same undeviating testimony in favour of the efforts of this association, and against the evils of the voting system.

The main object of the association is to abolish the great abuses which have gradually overgrown the voting system, such as—

- The absence of comparative selection;
- Trafficking in votes;
- Canvassing by applicants, either personally, or by card or circular;
- Public polling days.

The Committee venture to offer the following suggestions, as calculated to correct existing evils arising from admission to charities by the votes of the whole body of subscribers:—

- 1st. The circumstances of the candidates recommended by the subscribers should be investigated by the Committee, both as to their positive eligibility and relative urgency, special reference being had to the consideration whether the candidates have claims for support on friends or relatives prior to those upon public charity.
- 2nd. Those candidates who are proved by investigation to be eligible should be arranged according to the strength and urgency of their claims, such moderate number only being included in the list as would be likely to be elected within a reasonable time.
- 3rd. Lists so prepared should be sent to the subscribers, and be returned by them to the Committee, with marks against the names of the candidates for whom they vote. The lists should then be handed to the scrutineers, and the result should be made known by public advertisement; thus abolishing public polling days.
- 4th. Trafficking in votes, and the use of canvassing cards and circulars, should be prohibited under pain of forfeiture of the candidate's claim.

It is further suggested that committees of charitable institutions should intimate on their voting papers that subscribers who have no means of ascertaining the comparative merits of the candidates, or who, for any other reason, decline to exercise their privilege of voting, should sign and send their proxies to the committees to be distributed amongst the poorest and most deserving.

One important function of the association, already employed with success, is to prevent, in the case of new charities, the introduction of the present system of election, or at least of its admitted abuses. And the Committee may here mention that "the managing body of the Railway Servants Orphanage having unreservedly adopted the suggestions of the Charity Voting Reform Association, have reported that their first election was carried on with perfect satisfaction to their subscribers, and without a penny of expense to any applicant."

To release hundreds of poor toiling widows and other applicants from cruel and unnecessary labour in canvassing, as well as from heavy and useless expenditure of time and money; to spare poor maimed and crippled invalids a weary and painful hunt for hospital and other letters; to discourage that systematic and shameless habit of begging, which is the fruitful source of pauperism, begging-letter writing, and imposture; to cover rather than coarsely expose the domestic woes and wants of our less fortunate neighbours by not compelling them to parade their sorrows in thousands of printed cards and circulars; to try and ensure a measure of attention and justice to the candidates and their comparative claims, rather than to foster a desire to "oblige friends" or gamble in votes; in fine, to help the most helpless and befriend the most friendless, are objects worth earnestly contending for, even against the most formidable opposition; objects which, in the opinion of the association, appeal not merely to the sense of justice and fair play of Englishmen, but to the hearts and the tenderest sympathies of a Christian and humane people.

That the Committee are justified in thus speaking of the work of the association is well expressed in the words of one of the Vice-Presidents, a most munificent subscriber to all the great charities, and formerly a large and influential employer of labour. He writes:—"If my poor name will be of any use as a Vice-President to your very valuable society, pray use it, for I firmly believe when you succeed, as I hope you will, you will more benefit the impoverished, respectable, suffering classes, than any of the societies I have the privilege of supporting."

Their conviction remains unshaken as to the great hardship, injustice, and waste of money which are perpetually recurring owing to a faulty system of election. In the words of Mr. Gladstone, at the Mansion House, they emphatically claim to "belong to that section of the community who believe that the system of election for charities, with the expensive operations it entails, is a most ingeniously constructed machine for intercepting on its way to other benevolent ends a large portion of the alms of the community."

Let me add that there are few, if any, associations (except Masonry itself), that can point to men of such varied opinions in politics and religion banded together for a common object.

In addition to those named in an extract already quoted I may mention as members and Vice-Presidents the Dukes of Northumberland and Westminster, Lord Derby and the Marquis of Salisbury, Lord Shaftesbury and Lord Grey, Earl Percy and Lord Ebury, Lord Overstone and Mr. Plimsoll, Sir Charles Trevelyan and Lord Chelmsford, Mr. W. H. Smith and Mr. Pease, Lord Lichfield and Canon Miller, Sir Rutherford Alcock and Bro. Thomas Brassey, M.P., and a host of others, including Lord Justice James, Mr. Russell Gurney, Recorder of London, Bishops of London, Winchester, and Manchester, &c. You have, dear sir and brother, ably contended that Freemasonry is not a mere benefit society, and that its three great charities ought not to be based on this idea, and this is in perfect keeping with the spirit of Masonry and of the expressed profession we make on entering the Order. It is obvious that the principles and practice I now advocate set in strongly in the same direction, and may I hope commend themselves favourably to you and to a large majority of our brethren.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, fraternally yours,

R. J. SIMPSON, P.G.C.

142, Clement's Inn.

MASONIC HISTORY.

Dear Bro. Kenning,

I have seen in your last Freemason an address of our worthy Bro. Rogers, Acting D.P.G.M. in Devonshire, which, in these critical times, appears to demand a few queries from one who, like myself, have been for some years carefully verifying all the facts of our Masonic history. I confine myself, however, to-day to three queries, which, I trust, our good brother will kindly answer. 1. Bro. Rogers states, that in 1610 and 1625 "Freemasonry was denounced by the Roman Catholics especially." But I know of no earlier Roman Catholic attack than the Bull of Clement, 1738. Where, then, did this condemnation take place? 2. Bro. Rogers states, that "among the Persians Alexander the Great discovered books which took it, (Freemasonry), back to ages long before even paper-making was invented—some 3000 years ago." To what transaction does Bro. Rogers allude? 3. Bro. Rogers states, "they also found allusions to Freemasonry in the Book of Exodus, as well as in other sacred writings of the Bible." What are these? Now, I ask these questions in no captious spirit. I agree with Bro. Rogers' exposition of the historical lines of Masonry, but think it is always better to keep to strict and indubitable facts. Perhaps our worthy brother can give us the authorities for these statements of his, which must have much interest for Masonic students?

Yours truly,

MASONIC STUDENT.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A P.M. jewel has engraved upon it the 47th proposition, 1st Book Euclid's Elements. Kindly tell me what is the connection this proposition has with Masonry? The brethren here cannot enlighten me. I am a young M.M., therefore pray excuse my ignorance and the trouble I give you.

Yours fraternally,

J. W. MAYER.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In your account of the Grand Officers in your impression of last week, I observe that you describe Prince Leopold as W.M. of the Westminster and Keystone Lodge, No. 10. This is a mistake, as Bro. Reginald James Mure is the W.M. Prince Leopold is a member of the lodge, but at present holds no office in it.

Yours fraternally,

OCTAVIUS HENRY PEARSON, I.P.M. 10.

Review.

LA CHAÎNE D'UNION.

The May number of this interesting periodical, most ably edited by Bro. Hubert, is before us, and we venture to commend it to the attention of all who are anxious to know anything about French Freemasonry. The number for May is full of a vast deal of information, quite new to English brethren, and though we do not pretend to say that all French Masonic intelligence will commend itself to our English Craft, yet we can say this, that the Chaine D'Union deserves the perusal of all who can read and understand French.

Three memorial windows, by Messrs. Ward and Hughes, have been placed in the chancel of the Church of Teversal, Notts, in memory of the late Henrietta Anna, Countess of Carnarvon, by her tenantry and other friends, to record their gratitude for her unwearied beneficence and reverence for her Christian character.

CONSECRATION OF THE CHAPTER OF FELICITY, No. 58.

On Friday, the 27th ult., the Chapter of Felicity, No. 58, was consecrated by Bro. Dr. Hamilton, Grand Superintendent of Jamaica, at the City Masonic Club, 101, Queen Victoria-street. He was assisted by Comp. John Boyd and Comp. Hyde Pullen as H. and J., and by Comp. H. G. Buss as D.C. The other companions present were: Comps. A. R. Marten, F. S. Knyvett, W. Smithett, O. H. Colvin, C. E. Smith, W. S. Crump, Fred W. Smith, Thos. Reynolds, jun., James Ford, Capt. N. G. Phillips, G.S.N.; Alex. Cameron, P.Z. 180; J. Reed, P.Z. 160; A. J. R. Trendell, P.S. 10; Edw. B. Grabham, 9; G. T. Carter, 27; John Large, H. Massey, 619 (Freemason); W. Pink, 180; A. Tisley, 1319; Fred. H. Cozens, Org. 1216; John Hervey, G.S.E.; John A. Rucker, P.G.P.S.; Lovell Keys, 49.

After the chapter had been opened, the introductory portion of the ceremony performed, Comp. Hyde Pullen delivered an oration, and the ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with. Comps. Theodore Distin, G. T. Carter, Fred H. Cozens, and J. Large performing the musical portion. When the chapter had been duly constituted, Comp. Arthur R. Marten was installed M.E.Z., Comp. F. Sumner Knyvett, H., and Comp. William Smithett J. Comp. O. H. Colvin was elected and invested as Treasurer, Comp. Charles E. Smith S.E., and Comp. Radford, janitor. The whole of the ceremony was most fluently and impressively performed, and when the ceremonies were over Comp. Knyvett proposed that Comps. Hyde Pullen, John Hervey, S.E., Capt. N. G. Phillips, H. G. Buss, and J. A. Rucker be elected honorary members of the chapter. The motion was seconded by the M.E.Z., who said that all the companions were much indebted to those companions for having so kindly given up a great deal of time and shown so vast an amount of ability in assisting in consecrating the chapter. It was a very small return to make to them to elect them honorary members of the chapter, and the members of the chapter wished them every happiness, and hoped that as often as they could use their privilege and come to visit them they would do so. The motion having been carried unanimously, a vote of thanks was passed to Dr. Hamilton for performing the ceremony of consecration with such distinguished ability.

Dr. Hamilton, in acknowledging the compliment, said that it was a labour of love to him to perform such a work, and he was very much pleased that his efforts had given satisfaction, though he felt he had not been in his usual training.

Comps. Hyde Pullen, Boyd, Buss, and Hervey also acknowledged the vote.

Comp. Knyvett then proposed, and Comp. Smithett seconded, the names of nine brethren as exalted at the next convocation of the chapter. One joining companion was proposed, and the chapter was afterwards closed.

Before adjourning to the banquet, the companions were shown a handsome present made to the chapter by Comp. Burroughes, which consisted of a handsome walnut-wood case containing three dozen firing-glasses, elegantly engraved. The banquet was then partaken of. It was of a recherché description, and was provided by Comp. G. S. States, the manager of the club.

When the banquet was disposed of, the M.E.Z. proposed the customary R.A. toasts. After disposing of that of "The Queen," and "The Grand Z., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," he proposed "The Health of the Pro Grand Z., the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Skelmersdale, H.; and Lord De Tabley, J.; and the rest of the Grand Officers."

Lord Skelmersdale, who had been invited to attend, had written to say that he had every evening fully engaged up to the end of June, and he exceedingly regretted he could not be among the companions. Many of these evenings would be spent in the service of Masonry, and the companions fully appreciated how hard the noble companion's work was as a Grand Officer. The other Grand Officers also did their very utmost to promote the good of Freemasonry. Some of them were present, and among them was Grand Scribe E., whom it was no small pleasure to the companions to see among them. He was a very old visitor at the Lodge of Felicity, and he was present there when he (the M.E.Z.) was initiated in Freemasonry. So often was he a visitor there, that any of their meetings without him were incomplete.

Comp. Hervey, in reply, said the M.E.Z. in proposing the toast had done so, much too kindly and favourably, as far as he (Comp. Hervey) was concerned. He did not remember that he was present in Lodge of Felicity when the M.E.Z. was initiated; but such was the case with many brethren—they forgot things which had passed but a very short time ago, and yet recollected things which had occurred many years ago. The M.E.Z. had run his course thus far very rapidly, and they found him now at the head of a new chapter, which he hoped was destined to play an important part in the Masonic body of the country. He would not take out of the hands of Comp. Dr. Hamilton what he would say at a later period of the evening, but would content himself with thanking the M.E.Z. and the companions for the toast. He felt also that he ought to thank the chapter for having so kindly elected him an hon. member. He was taken quite by surprise that such a proposition was made, because he had done nothing to deserve it. As far as he was concerned he felt that he had simply to look on and admire the manner in which the ceremony was performed, and all must confess that it was admirably performed. He had no claim and no expectation to be among the honorary members; but as they had done him the honour to make him one, he had nothing to do but to accept the compliment, and to thank the companions for it. The peculiar honour, though most gratifying, was quite undeserved. For the rest of the Grand Officers he might say they felt equally honoured, and they were equally pleased, and as deeply impressed with the ceremony as he had been himself.

The M.E.Z., in giving the next toast, "The Consecrating Officers," said, on a June evening, some 140 years ago, the Earl of Darnley went to the Gun Tavern, in St. James's-street, to consecrate the Lodge of Felicity. On a May evening in 1877 the Grand Master of Jamaica had done the companions the honour to come to the City Masonic Club to consecrate the Chapter of Felicity. He asked the companions to drink his very good health, thanking him very cordially indeed for the kindness he had shown them in coming to take the very arduous and onerous burden upon him of the work which he had done that night. With him he coupled the other companions who had so kindly and readily given their time and ability to assist him, and to make the ceremony successful, which, he was quite sure, would live in the minds of all who witnessed it as long as they remembered the ritual of R.A. Masonry. It was the first consecration of a chapter he had seen; but he was quite sure, that although some of the companions had seen many, none of them could have seen a consecration performed in a more solemn, careful, and thoughtful way than that of that evening. He coupled with Dr. Hamilton's name the names of Comp. Boyd, Comp. Hyde Pullen, and Comp. Buss, thanking them at the same time for the great services they had rendered to the chapter.

Comp. Dr. Hamilton, in replying, said he remembered reading some time ago in a leading article—he was not sure whether it was in the Daily News or the Daily Telegraph, a paragraph, in which it was said that something or other was like the Provincial Grand Masters in Masonry, who might be compared to the fifth wheel of a carriage, more for ornament than for use. Now, while he did not repudiate the last part of the simile, he was happy to say, from the expressions which had fallen from the M.E.Z. that night, he believed it was felt that a District Grand Master, or Superintendent, could do some little good, and that they were not all like the fifth wheel of a carriage, only to be admired. He was greatly obliged to the M.E.Z. for the honour he had done him in asking him to consecrate this chapter. He was about to return soon to his own province, so that he could not hope to see the companions of this chapter very often, but as Jamaica was but the short distance of a three weeks' voyage, it was more than probable he would soon be back again. When he came back he hoped to have an opportunity of witnessing the progress which this chapter should have made. It was one thing to do work, but to have that work carried out properly it was necessary to have assistance, and, as they well knew, if everything had succeeded that evening it was because others had so admirably filled the different parts of it, and made of them a good whole. As those companions were present, perhaps they might have their own opinions; and as they had all taken part in the ceremony, and had also had the honour of being elected honorary members of the chapter as well as himself, he should simply return thanks generally for them, and particularly for himself, leaving them to express their own views of the honour which had been done them.

Comp. Hyde Pullen said he thanked the companions for electing him and his companions to the honorary membership of the chapter. He would say for them as well as for himself, that they would watch with something more than simple and common interest to see the progress the chapter made. It was something to start a chapter like this; it was something more to keep the chapter in all its excellence, through all its workings, trials, and difficulties, and steer it through troubled waters which it might encounter; but he hoped and trusted that however great or difficult those trials and troubles might be, the head of the chapter, from time to time, might have the capacity to steer through them. If the Consecrating Officers had by their little efforts given satisfaction, pleasure, or gratification to the companions, they were pleased, and they could only trust that the success of the chapter would be all that the members of it desired.

Dr. Hamilton proposed "The M.E.Z., and the two other Principals," and in the course of his address said he hoped for the chapter all the good which Comp. Hyde Pullen had wished. He complimented the M.E.Z. on obtaining that high position, and said that a great responsibility rested upon him, but there was no doubt whatever that he was fully alive to that, and would discharge his duties efficiently. The companions knew the M.E.Z. better than he (Dr. Hamilton) did. They knew he was an earnest Mason, and would perform his work with zeal and fidelity, that he would strictly adhere to the forms and ceremonies, and would be as able throughout his year as he had shown himself that night.

The M.E.Z. in reply said that for the confidence the companions had shown in him he hoped he should prove himself grateful. He trusted he should not abuse that confidence, and that the chapter would even exceed the anticipations which had been entertained of it. They had had an excellent example set them by the lodge to which the chapter was attached, and which had been established since 1737. It had always been a bright and shining light in Masonry. It was a small lodge, but by its working in the Craft had obtained a high position. It was selected as one of the Grand Stewards' Lodges, and had done much good in the cause of Freemasonry. In addition to returning Grand Stewards it had within the last five years provided a Treasurer, a President, and a Secretary to the Board of Grand Stewards. The chapter would follow the example of the lodge; and from what he knew of the members of the lodge who had been proposed that evening as candidates for exaltation, he saw before the Chapter of Felicity a bright and glorious future.

In giving "The Health of the Visitors" the M.E.Z. said they were honoured that evening by the presence of several distinguished visitors. It had always been in Freemasonry one of the stand-points to shew hospitality as well as good brotherhood and charity. In the Lodge of Felicity they had always prided themselves on their pleasure at seeing visitors, and he trusted that the chapter would not be behind the lodge in the virtue of hospitality.

Comp. J. A. Rucker, P.G.P.S., said he could very well understand what the M.E.Z. said with reference to the Lodge of Felicity. Although he had never had the pleasure of being there, he had often heard of it much in the same terms as the M.E.Z. had expressed. He would not detain the companions by expatiating on the enjoyment he had experienced by what he had heard at the consecration ceremony, but he should feel that he was doing an injustice to himself if he did not personally express the very great pleasure he had had in the work which had been done. He earnestly prayed that the work in the chapter that night might be only a simple augury of what would be done in the future. They could hardly desire to improve on what they had seen and heard, but they could earnestly desire to follow it closely.

Major Shadwell Clarke in responding said he was in the position of one who had to speak at a late period of the evening, when all the pretty things and true things which he might wish to say had been said before his turn came. As he did not like to plagiarise he must content himself by keeping to the simple facts. In his own instance, as in the instance of the other companions, he had been honoured by the invitation he had had to visit the chapter. They had met some very pleasant companions, they had seen some excellent work, they had had a capital dinner, they had received great kindness and hospitality, and for all these many blessings they were deeply thankful.

The M.E.Z. proposed "The Officers of the Chapter." They had not appointed many officers that evening. As there were so many distinguished Craft Masons proposed for exaltation they had left that open till another evening. They had, however appointed a Treasurer and Scribe E., and what they had known of them for some time warranted them in saying that their duties would be properly discharged.

Comp. O. H. Colvin replied, and said they had honoured him by making him Treasurer of funds they had not got. But he was very proud of the office, and would do all in his power to deserve their confidence.

This closed the business of the evening, which was enlivened by some beautiful part singing by Comps. Theodore Distin, G. T. Carter, and J. Large.

The Janitor's toast was given before the companions separated, and the companions left the City Masonic Club with hearty good wishes for the success of the Chapter of Felicity.

CONSECRATION OF THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE OF MARK MASTERS.

The consecration of this, the latest addition to the rapidly increasing roll of lodges of the Mark Degree, took place at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, on the 27th ult. Bro. F. Binckes, the Grand Secretary of this degree, officiated, and was ably supported by the following brethren, viz., Jas. Stevens, as S.W.; S. Lazarus, J.W.; C. F. Matier, Chap.; and J. B. Shackleton, I.G. The officers and brethren engaged in the interesting ceremony having taken their respective places, Bro. Binckes proceeded with the consecration, which was performed in that brother's usual able and impressive style, giving the customary oration with an eloquence seldom equalled and never excelled.

At the conclusion of the ceremony of consecration the chair was taken by Bro. C. F. Matier, who in an impressive manner installed the W.M. designate, Bro. J. B. Shackleton. This duty performed, the newly-installed W.M. proceeded to appoint and invest the following brethren as officers for the ensuing year, viz.: Bros. Meyer, S.W.; H. Meyer, J.W.; Dietrich, M.O.; Fieldwick, S.O.; Lovelock, J.O.; Stokes, Reg.; Bonner, S.D.; Dietrich, Org.; Lorkin, I.G.; and Gilchrist, Tyler. The other appointments were left open till next meeting.

A special dispensation having been obtained from the Grand Master, the following brethren were advanced at an early hour, so as to enable the new members of the Order to be present at the consecration and installation, viz.: Bros. Fieldwick, Lorkin, W. Ferrar, Johnson, Delafons, Lovelock, Dietrich, Stokes, Godfrey, Bonner, G. Ferrar, Kelday, Brewster, and Thompson, S.C.

Several brethren were proposed for advancement at the next meeting, and after electing as honorary members the brethren who had taken part in the consecration and installation, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, to which full justice was rendered.

The cloth having been removed the usual loyal toasts, and those peculiar to the Mark Degree were given and responded to.

After replying to the toast of "The Masonic Charities," Bro. F. Binckes proposed "The Health of the newly-installed W.M.," congratulating him upon the position he had attained in the Mark Degree, concluding by wishing prosperity to the lodge and its members.

The W.M. having suitably responded on behalf of himself and his officers, proposed "The Health of the Visitors," to which Bro. S. B. Ellis, W.M. 1239, responded.

Some other toasts having been given the Tyler's toast ended the proceedings of an evening agreeably spent.

VISIT OF "GRECIANS" TO THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—On Tuesday afternoon the Grecians of Christ's Hospital were taken by Bro. the Rev. R. Lee, the head master of the college, and Bro. John Derby Allcroft, the treasurer, (W.M., Lodge 1657), to inspect the antiquities in the Assyrian galleries of the British Museum. They were met at the Museum by Dr. Samuel Kinns, F.R.A.S., who conducted them through the rooms, and delivered an entertaining and instructive lecture on the History, Manners, and Customs of the Assyrians, as illustrated by the various bas-reliefs, bronzes, vases, &c., contained in this valuable collection.

A meeting of the officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Northumberland will be held in the Freemasons' Hall, Grainger Street West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Thursday next, May 17th inst., for the purpose of consecrating the St. Nicholas Lodge, No. 1676, at half-past three o'clock precisely.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of this Institution met on Wednesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall, Col. Creation, V.P., in the chair. There were also present Bros. S. Rawson, Benj. Head, R. W. Giraud, J. Newton, F. Adlard, Capt. John Wordsworth, Raynham W. Stewart, J. M. Case, Griffiths Smith, C. J. Remont, Geo. Bolton, C. A. Cottebrune, W. Stephen, I. A. Mansfield, James Brett, W. Hilton, L. Stean, M. Levy, Hyde Pullen, C. F. Hogard, H. Massey, (Freemason), and J. Terry, (Secretary).

Bro. Terry reported that the death of four annuitants had taken place, viz., Bro. Robert Old, after having received his annuity to the total amount of £383; Bro. John Wood, £39; Bro. D. S. Potts, £111; and Mary Richards, £277 5s.

Bro. Terry then read a letter from Bro. J. A. Farnfield, with respect to the field opposite the asylum at Croydon, which the Institution sought to lease. The lessors had waived their objections, for the lease was then completed. Bro. Terry then obtained the authority of the Committee to lodge the deeds with the bankers of the institution.

The Wardens' report was then read, giving an account of the amateur musical entertainment given by the Croydon Amateurs, through Dr. Strong, to the inmates of the Asylum.

The attendances of the different members of the Committee of management were then read by Bro. Terry, and the retiring members, Bros. J. Bellerly, R. W. Stewart, and R. W. Little, were nominated for re-election.

The Draft report of the Committee to be read on Friday next was submitted to the Committee and approved.

Bro. Griffiths Smith moved, and Bro. Raynham W. Stewart seconded the following resolution:—

"That in the opinion of this Committee the accommodation provided for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, in Freemasons' Hall, is totally inadequate for the increased and increasing labours which have to be performed, and that it be referred to the Board of General Purposes to ascertain what better accommodation can be provided.

This motion was carried unanimously.

The chairman said that the accommodation was really so limited as to be no accommodation at all.

The Committee then adjourned.

Obituary.

BRO. GEORGE FRANK GOULEY.

We announced Bro. Gouley's tragic death in our last. We take the following obituary of our distinguished and lamented brother from the Keystone, which has justly commended his worth:—

Bro. Gouley was made a Mason during his residence in Washington. Soon after settling in St. Louis he became a member of Missouri Lodge, No. 1; St. Louis R.A. Chapter, No. 8, and St. Louis Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar. In 1864 he became the assistant of Bro. Anthony O'Sullivan, Grand Secretary of the Grand Masonic bodies of Missouri, and immediately after Bro. O'Sullivan's death in 1866, Bro. Gouley was chosen Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge, A. F. and A. M. of Missouri, to which position he has been annually elected ever since. He also succeeded to the office of Grand Secretary and Grand Recorder of all the other Masonic bodies of the York Rite; and was appointed chairman of the various committees on foreign correspondence year after year, for eleven successive years. Bro. Gouley was also Past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of Missouri. He filled all his Masonic offices with marked ability and honour, and performed all his Masonic duties with zeal and fidelity. He was an acknowledged power in the Masonic fraternity of Missouri, and won a national reputation as a Masonic writer. For several years he edited and published the St. Louis Freemason, a Masonic journal, which gained a wide circulation and influence amongst the Craft.

Bro. Gouley's body was taken, after the accident, to the Masonic Hall, where it was laid in state from Friday until the burial on Sunday. It was placed in a handsome casket, mounted upon a catafalque, and surrounded with flowers arranged as Masonic emblems. The coffin lid bore the inscription: "George Frank Gouley, Past Master Missouri Lodge, No. 1, R.W. Grand Secretary M.W. Grand Lodge of Missouri, A. F. and A. M. Died April 11, 1877. Aged 45 years."

A guard of honour of Knights Templar was in attendance, detailed from St. Louis Commandery, No. 1; Ivanhoe, No. 8; Ascalon, No. 16; and St. Aldemar, No. 18. Missouri Lodge conducted the services at the Hall. A lodge was opened at 1 p.m., and the members escorted to the large room under escort of the Grand Commandery of Missouri.

The following was the order of the funeral exercises:—Prayer. Hymn. Address by M.W. Xenophon Ryland, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Missouri. Address by W. Bro. John Goodin, P.M. of Missouri Lodge, No. 1.

Missouri Lodge No. 1, having the place of honour, then took the casket in charge, and the funeral procession formed, with the Knights Templar in front of the hearse and pall bearers, followed by the Master Masons. The procession was a very large one. The body was taken to Bellefontaine cemetery and placed in a vault, where it is to remain for ten days, when it will be brought East, and finally interred in Wilmington, Delaware.

BRO. JOSEPH SAMUEL PULLIN.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. Joseph Samuel Pullin, one of the oldest members of the Etonian Lodge of St. John, No. 209, which took place at Old Windsor on the 19th ult. Bro. Pullin was initiated in the Etonian Lodge in 1856, elected to the chair in 1860, during the three following years he filled the office of Secretary, and from 1864 to 1875, inclusive, that of Treasurer. Bro. Pullin during his lifetime, by his general urbanity and kindness, made many friends. In the lodge his death will cause a gap which cannot easily be filled, he being essentially one of those truly Masonic men whose absence the brethren will sincerely deplore.

A FEAST OF UNREASON.

We have received the official transactions of the Grand Orient of France, at its Annual Assembly in September last, and feel it is a duty to call attention to the treatment of a most important question, that the Masons of this continent may be enabled to judge how much claim the Grand Orient really has to be considered and treated as a Masonic organisation.

The first section of the French Constitution contains these words:—"Freemasonry is based on the existence of God and the Immortality of the Soul," than which nothing could be more strictly and literally true. It is clearer and more direct than the language employed in the Ancient Charges published with the first English Constitution, and still regarded as declaring the foundation of the principles of the Craft, thus:

"A Mason is obliged by his tenure to obey the moral law; and if he rightly understands the art he will never be a stupid atheist, nor an irreligious libertine. But though in ancient times Masons were charged in every country to be of the religion of that country or nation, what ever it was, yet 'tis now thought more expedient only obtain that religion in which all men agree, leaving their particular opinions to themselves; that is, to be good men and true, or men of honour or honesty, by whatever denominations or persuasions they may be distinguished; whereby Masonry became the centre of union, and the means of conciliating true friendship among persons that must have remained at a perpetual distance."

Of which, it may be explained that the words "irreligious libertine" mean what our modern euphuists call a Freethinker, or, in plain English, one who scouts at the existence of God, and hence at all religion, so that it is a law frequently enunciated in our lodges that "No atheist can be made a Mason." On this point there can be no compromise. A candidate may affect any religious belief he chooses, and we have nothing to say, but he must answer affirmatively the question, "Do you believe in the existence of God, the Almighty and ever living," or we cannot admit him.

When, therefore, any body of men departs from this, the original plan of Freemasonry, it steps at once beyond the pale, and ceases to be Masonic, in fact, whatever it may call itself.

Starting from this point, the reader will be able to appreciate the action of the French Orient, to which we now proceed to call attention. A proposition was presented to the body to strike from the Constitution the words quoted above. It was referred to a committee, which reported in favour of indefinite postponement. Upon this a lengthy debate ensued, and as the speakers were requested to furnish copies of their argument, in writing, to the Secretary, we are justified in believing that they are fairly reported in the volume before us. We cannot of course, give these arguments in extenso, but we select a few paragraphs to show the avowed belief of the speakers. The first one said: "I recognise the fact that Masonry is neither Deism, Atheism, nor even Positivism. As an institution affirming and practising human unity, it is a stranger to every dogma or religious creed whatever. Its only basis is absolute respect for liberty of conscience. In matters of fact it neither affirms nor denies anything, hence our doors open with equal facility to the Protestant and the Catholic; the Mussulman and the Christian; the Atheist and the Deist."

A speaker on the other side remarked: "I am in favour of absolute liberty of conscience. You cannot change the fact that an immense majority of the Masons, spread over the surface of the globe, believe in the Great Architect of the Universe and in the immortality of the soul; yet this in no wise affects the liberty of conscience, since it is provided in paragraph 3 that Masonry regards the liberty of conscience as the personal right of every man, and excludes no man for his belief. Let me relate a fact recently occurring in a lodge. A candidate, with excellent recommendations, was unanimously accepted. Before his final admission, however, he was asked, among other things, whether he ever prayed, and upon his answer, that in moments of suffering he had addressed his prayers to the Supreme Being, twenty-seven black balls were cast against him, and initiation was refused! And yet our lodges will admit a candidate who believes in nothing." Another insisted that the contradiction of requiring belief in God, and at the same time according perfect liberty of conscience, must be cured by striking out one or the other, and as a belief in God is a form of religion (Deism), and Masonry cannot be the champion of one form more than another, the first should be stricken. And so of others. Finally the vote was taken, when sixty-five voted in favour of indefinite postponement, and one hundred and ten for accepting the proposed amendment and sending it to the subordinates for discussion preparatory to final action next year.

This, of course, is not such action as would justify any one in saying that French Masonry has become Atheistic, nor that the amendment will be finally adopted, but it does demonstrate that in the French lodges an Atheist can be initiated, which, as has been seen, they justify under the plea of perfect liberty of conscience. As will also have been seen, Masonry proper limits this liberty, and it does so on the ground that to one that has no belief in God conscience is an idle term, having no fixed standard and no boundary but such as the individual himself may fix. The conclusion is inevitable that the Grand Orient of France is not a Masonic organisation, and that its adepts do not receive at its hands what it has not given, Ancient Craft Masonry, and that the sooner Masons everywhere disentangle themselves from its alliance the better it will be for them and for the institution. New York Dispatch.

The word "Bankrupt" is derived from two Italian ones, banco rotto, broken bench; because bankers and merchants used formerly to count their money and write bills of exchange on benches in the street, and when a banker or merchant lost his credit, and was unable to pay his debts, his bench was broken.—City Press.

MACE FUND.—Bro. W. Portlock Dadson's letter on this subject reached us, unfortunately, too late for insertion in this week's issue. The communication shall appear in our next number.

The Volunteer Inter-Regimental match was shot off on Wednesday, from teams selected from upwards of sixty corps throughout the United Kingdom. #### FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

CENTENNIAL OF THE GRAND LODGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

This anniversary occasion was suitably observed on Thursday, March 8th, by our Massachusetts brethren, and a large number of invited guests. Massachusetts Freemasonry dates from 1733, when Henry Price was made Provincial Grand Master. In 1769 the Grand Lodge of Scotland commissioned Joseph Warren to be Grand Master of New England, and afterwards increased his authority to cover the whole of North America. In 1777, after the Revolution had progressed too far to admit of any compromise between the colonies and the mother country, the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts declared itself independent, and from that time forward has exercised all the rights and privileges of a sovereign Grand Body. It was the anniversary of such new departure made a hundred years ago that was celebrated on the March 8th. A select re-union and banquet, at which about 300 Masons were present; an address by Grand Master Everett, and an historical oration by Past Grand Master Charles L. Woodbury, constituted the order of the day. The exercises were of great interest and most suitable to the day and the dignity of Freemasonry.

GRAND LODGE OF TEXAS.

The proceedings of this Grand Body with accompanying papers make a volume of almost 300 pages, for Texas, like California, gives in print the number of its entire membership, and in a jurisdiction of some 400 lodges these names of themselves take a good deal of room. The Report on Correspondence, from the pen of the R.W. Bro. Cushing, is brief and to the point. Considerable space is given to Ontario, the matter being of more than ordinary interest, as Texas had given its recognition to the Grand Lodge of Ontario soon after the formation of the last named body. After presenting the case, with the arguments relied on by the opposing parties, the committee came to the conclusion that the Grand Lodge of Ontario has no legal Masonic existence, and recommend a resolution annulling the act of recognition of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, passed by the Grand Lodge of Texas in 1875.

GRAND CHAPTER OF RHODE ISLAND.

On the 13th March the seventy-ninth Annual Convocation of the Grand Chapter of Rhode Island, was held. Grand High Priest Wardwell presided with grace and dignity. His address was brief and to the point, setting forth his official acts for the year, and giving a general account of Royal Arch Masonry in this jurisdiction. A considerable amount of business was transacted, including the adoption of a new Constitution, the merits of which were fully discussed. M.E. Comp. W. T. C. Wardwell received the compliment of an unanimous re-election to the office of Grand High Priest, and the other officers were chosen with a substantial unanimity. M.W. Nicholas Van Slyck, Grand Master of Masons, administered the official obligation and installed Comp. Wardwell into his high office, after which the other officers were duly installed by the Grand High Priest.

THE SCOTTISH FREEMASON,
Published Fortnightly, Price 2d.

The want of an organ to efficiently represent the interests of Freemasonry in all degrees under the Scottish Constitution has long been felt, and to meet this want will be the constant endeavour of the Conductors of The SCOTTISH FREEMASON, who will spare no efforts to make this new candidate for public favour worthy the liberal support of the great and influential body, whose interests it will represent.

It contains Masonic News from all parts of the Globe, but devoted chiefly to the proceedings of the MASONIC FRATERNITY OF SCOTLAND. The meetings of all the Lodges, Chapters, &c., throughout Scotland will be published, on Secretaries sending notice of the same.

A series of original articles will be contributed by eminent literary brethren, on various topics connected with the History and Antiquities of the Craft in Scotland, and correspondence is invited on such subjects, as also on Masonic sayings and doings of the present day.

From T. D. Swallow, M.D., M.R.C.S., Eng., L.S.A., Surgeon to the Royal South London Dispensary, and Medical Officer to the London City Mission.

"I have great pleasure in stating that I am constantly prescribing Freeman's Chlorodyne in Consumption and Asthma, and as a Sedative in Cancer, and in cases of Diarrhoea and Dysentery, I am daily witnessing its striking effects."

JANE WHITEMAN,

Widow of the late Dr. R. Harland Whiteman, of Putney, who was initiated into Freemasonry in the Lodge of Unions, now No. 256, in the year 1854, and served the office of W. Master in the year 1860. He was also one of the founders of the William Preston Lodge, No. 766, and served the office of W. Master in the year 1861. He served as Steward to all the Masonic Charities, and qualified as a Life Governor on such occasions, he was also an Annual Subscriber. Dr. Whiteman carried on his profession of a Surgeon, at Putney, but owing to a painful disease, from which he suffered, his practice decreased to a considerable extent during the last few years of his life; and at his death, on the 29th August, 1876, it was sold, realising a small sum sufficient only to pay the funeral expenses and his debts. P.M. 15, and P.Z. 13, Aged 63 Years, of 48, Hoxton-square. The said Bro. R. E. Barnes was initiated in the Kent Lodge, No. 15, on the 17th day of November, 1835, and has subscribed thereto 41 years; he has also acted as Honorary Secretary to the same for 35 years; served the office of W.M.; and is now the Father of the Lodge. He joined the United Mariners' Lodge, No. 30, on the 4th day of November, 1845; subscribed thereto 31 years; and is also the Father of that Lodge. He was exalted in the Union Waterloo Chapter, No. 13, on the 26th day of July, 1842; served the office of M.E.Z.; has acted as Scribe E. for 30 years; and is now the Father of the Chapter. He was for upwards of 30 years Master and Proprietor of Hoxton Educational Institution, Hoxton-square, a profession and position he was gradually compelled to relinquish in consequence of the erection by public subscription, within a few hundred yards of his own establishment, of a large Middle-class School, capable of accommodating 1200 boys, with which he was totally unable to compete. Has a family consisting of a wife and three children, entirely dependent upon him for support, and failing sight is a source of great anxiety.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

UNITED MARINERS' LODGE (No. 30).—This lodge held its last regular meeting of the season at the Guildhall Coffee-house on Tuesday, the 17th ult., when there were present Bros. A. Lefaux, I.P.M. (who presided in the absence of the W.M., Bro. Thos. Smith, from domestic affliction), assisted by Bro. J. Driscoll, P.M., as S.W. pro. tem., and Bro. Charles Davey, J.W., also Bros. Wm. Ansell, P.M.; Joseph Harling, P.M.; Jesse Turner, P.M. and Treas.; R. E. Barnes, P.M., Hon. Sec.; J. Clark, S.D.; H. Cosedge, J.D.; S. Hoare, D.C.; A. Coudry, Organist; J. W. Crossley, I.G., and other brethren and visitors. The lodge being opened in due form, the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, and Bro. Marks having proved his efficiency, the lodge was opened in ancient form in the Second Degree, when Bro. Marks was regularly introduced and passed to the degree of F.C. The lodge was closed in due form in the Second Degree, when Bro. A. Lefaux, I.P.M., informed the lodge that a serious domestic affliction had occurred to the esteemed W.M., which prevented his attendance. On a motion duly proposed and seconded, it was unanimously resolved, "That the lodge having heard with sincere regret the serious domestic affliction which had befallen their highly esteemed and respected Bro. Thomas Smith, W.M., beg to assure him of their sincere sympathy in the hour of trial, and trust it may please the Great Architect of the Universe to grant him every support and consolation under the painful circumstances which have attended his bereavement, and that a copy be forwarded to Bro. Smith." In order to assist the funds of the Masonic charities, it was resolved that 20 per cent. be deducted from the annual subscriptions for that special purpose. The lodge being closed, the brethren adjourned to the banquet. Upon the cloth being withdrawn, the W.M. gave the customary loyal and Craft toasts, which were duly honoured. Bro. Joseph Driscoll, P.M., in proposing "The Health of the I.P.M., Bro. A. Lefaux," who presided in the absence of the W.M., said: Brethren, the only toast I have the pleasure of proposing is that of our I.P.M., Bro. A. Lefaux, who has so ably presided over us this evening. Let us give honour to him to whom honour is due. I, as an old P.M. of this lodge, must say, and those present will agree with me, that the manner in which the ceremonies have been performed by him during his year of office, and on the present occasion, reflects great credit. He not only enters into the duties with ability, zeal, and energy, but endeavours to carry that true Masonic spirit away from here into the outside world, hoping he may be spared to be in our midst for many years to come. Bro. Lefaux, in reply, said:—Brethren, I thank you very much for the very cordial manner in which the last toast has been received and responded to, and can assure you I do not look upon it as an empty compliment coming from the members of this lodge, feeling that, during my year of office, I gained the good wishes and respect of the brethren of our ancient lodge, and it is still more gratifying to find I still retain them. I little thought I should have the pleasure of once more occupying my old seat. It is my good fortune, but, unhappily, our respected W.M.'s misfortune—you all know the reason of his absence to-night. We can, indeed, brethren, congratulate ourselves upon the prosperity of our old lodge. The Treasurer has a good balance in hand, and we mean for him to always have a good balance, in that as well as in every other respect. We are not united in name only, but in reality. We have individually and collectively sent a good sum of money to the various charities connected with our Order, and trust ere this year closes we may be enabled to send a still larger amount. I hope we shall all meet at our next gathering in October in as good health and spirits as on the present occasion. Bro. Lefaux, W.M., P.M., then proposed "The P.M.'s of the Lodge," viz., Bros. Jesse Turner, Wm. Ansell, J. Harling, and J. Driscoll, to which the worthy P.M.'s severally responded. To "The Health of the Visitors" Bro. Mather, P.M. 65 and 1471, responded, expressing his great pleasure at the good working of the lodge, and the truly fraternal reception that himself and brother visitors had received that evening, and hoped, on a future occasion, to have the pleasure of paying a visit to the United Mariners' Lodge. The Tyler's toast concluded a very happy evening.

Battersea. Bro. Gibson was installed W.M. for the ensuing year by Bros. Goutham and Kempster, P.M.'s., and the W.M. appointed as his officers Bros. Joseph, S.W.; Miller, J.W.; Pidditch, S.D.; Sinclair, J.D.; Young, I.G.; Giles, D.C.; and Austin, W.S. The following visitors were present: Bros. Thos. Read, 913; Geo. Jeffery, P.M. 7; H. E. Wallace, S.W. 33; C. A. Cottebrune, P.G.P. 1237; F. H. Meredith, W.M. 1257; C. W. Hudson, J.W. 315; W. Grove, I.G. 749; L. Coleman, 186; Major A. G. J. Jocelyn; John Osborn, Sec. 1602; Chas. F. Poupard, W.M. 1441; P. Cooke, W.M. 1044; John Elliott, W.M. 1348; F. Binckes, G.S.; Thos. Baxter, 145; G. J. Carter, 145; and S. A. Ardotti, 145. After the labours of the evening the brethren and visitors sat down to an excellent repast. Several excellent speeches were made, and many capital songs sang during the evening.

METROPOLITAN LODGE (No. 1507).—An emergency meeting of this flourishing lodge was held at the Metropolitan Club, King's Cross, on Thursday, May 3rd. Bros. Williams, in the chair; Kingham, S.W.; Side, J.W., owing to the absence of Bro. Douglass, through indisposition; Willing, jun., P.M. and Treas.; Stiles, Sec.; Scaler, S.D.; Clarke, J.D.; H. Stiles, I.G.; P.M. Michael; Bros. Tuck, Solomon, Saintsbury, Hewison, Brooker, Gilbert, Child, Lovegrove, Rogers. Visitors: Bros. Dyer, P.M.; Fortescue, Pinhey, Harris, Levy, and many others were present. Bros. Boschart, Trotman, and Bruton were raised to the Third Degree. Bros. Hatch, Pouchot, Edmonds, and Wiltshire were passed Fellow Crafts, and Messrs. Fortescue, Parfitt, Denham, and Tombs having been balloted for, were initiated into the mysteries of the Order, the ceremonies being given in a distinct and emphatic manner. This being the last meeting at the Club, owing to the great increase of members, 218, was voted towards the testimonial to Bro. W. Smith, which is being raised by a committee of the lodges and chapters meeting at Anderson's Hotel, of which committee Bro. Willing, Treasurer, is chairman. The testimonial is to be presented on Bro. Smith having completed his twenty-third year of service. Bro. McEwan was unanimously elected a joining member, and the brethren, nearly sixty in number, sat down to a most excellent banquet, and separated after a very pleasant evening. The next meeting will be the installation of Bro. Kingham, which will take place in October.

NEW CROSS LODGE (No. 1559).—Saturday last was the occasion of the usual quarterly assemblage of the brethren of No. 1559, but considering the total strength of the members' list, and the fact that the lodge meets but four times in the year, the muster of members upon the present occasion was a wretchedly poor one. The hour for opening lodge was 3 p.m., and punctuality was observed to a greater degree upon the present occasion than we ever remember to have been the case before. The W.M. and Sec. were the first on the scene of action, but the Deacons were close at their heels; the two initiates however by the respect they showed for time give promise of future excellence in the matter of punctual attendance. Lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. Henry Keeble, P.M., the following officers occupying their respective posts at one time or other during the afternoon: Bros. Walter B. Woodman, I.P.M. and W.S.; E. Thielay, S.W.; Walter Simmons, J.W.; Louis Beck, S.D.; H. J. Green, J.D.; Solomon Jewell, I.G.; T. Grumman, Sec.; F. Walters, P.G.J.D. Middlesex, P.M., Treasurer. The following brethren were also in attendance: Bros. H. Henton, Moss, Ernest Smith, Cowley, Metham, Steers, Buck, Macgillivray, Knibbs, Swain, Thornton, Willson, C. J. Hogg, P.M., P.G.S. Visitors: Bros. John Keeble, P.M.; J. Ives, P.M.; G. Andrews, P.M.; Aimé Hugon, 145; Kitson, Wellington, Bonner, 1287, and one or two others who did not sign the book. Lodge having been duly opened, Bros. Swain and Thornton, candidates for passing, were interrogated. The ballot having been favourably taken for Messrs. Stephen Wise and Edmund Fry, they were admitted and duly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. Bros. Swain and Thornton were then passed to the degree of a F.C., and subsequently Bros. Knibbs and Willson were similarly privileged. The W.M. having risen thrice (two gentlemen for initiation at the next meeting being proposed), the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been given the I.P.M., Bro. W. Woodman, gave "The Health of the W.M." in his usual happy and facetious manner. The W.M. in replying regretted that sickness at home, as well as his own ill-health, had operated against his working in the manner he should have liked, but he should during his year of office do just as well as he was able to, and more than this the brethren could not expect. We may here put in a word to the effect that Bro. Keeble, although struggling hard against severe indisposition, acquitted himself in a highly satisfactory manner. "The Health of the Initiates" was next proposed and duly honoured. Bro. Fry replied on behalf of himself and fellow initiate. The toast of "The Visitors," proposed by the W.M., was responded to by Bros. Ives, Andrews, and Bonner. To "The Officers" Bro. Jewell replied, and "The Grand Officers," coupled with the name of Bro. C. J. Hogg, P.G.S., evoked from that brother one of his interesting addresses. Some capital harmony was extracted from Bros. P. H. Woodman, Swain, Louis Beck, Bonner, and Steers, while Bro. Hogg delighted his hearers with his clever recital of "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

RAVENSBORNE LODGE (No. 1601).—The first anniversary and installation meeting of this lodge was held on Friday, April 27th, in the Board Room of the Lewisham Board of Works, Catford Bridge. The Rev. W. Taylor Jones, W.M.; C. W. Thompson, S.W. and W.M. elect; W. Bache Roberts, J.W.; Nelson Reed, S.D.; Dr. Steele, J.D.; F. Burdett, I.G.; and Shaw, Tyler. The members present were Bros. Magnus Ohren, J. Terry, Sec., Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; W. J. Tasman, J. Kimpton, A. G. Hennell, C. Couchman, R. Moss, S. Jerrard,

B. Horton, W. H. Young, L. Sindell, E. Howard, &c., and the following visitors:—E. Rumsey, P.M. 235; T. Sewell, P.M. 21; Henley, 181; G. Honey, 1319; Laver, P.M. 211; C. Thomas, 969; J. Norton, 969; H. Thompson, 1426, and P.M. 177 and 1158; (Freemason), Littell, P.M. 860; Bishop, P.M. 66; David James, ("Our Boys"), P.M. 969; H. Neville, (Olympic Theatre), W. Smallpiece, P.M. 1395; C. Stewart, 1319; Sir John Bennett, No. 1; Todd, P.M. 183; A. Stewart, 969; R. Smith, 101; J. W. Burt, W.M. 18; J. West, P.M. 548; Fletcher, 1050; F. Keiley, P.M. 1293; and Prov. Grand Treasurer for Middlesex; Wilcox, 1752; Sanders, 905; and Harcourt, 1319; &c. The lodge having been opened in the First and Second Degrees, Bro. F. E. Wilkinson, P.M., presented Bro. C. W. Thompson, the W.M. elect, to receive at the hands of Bro. the Rev. W. Taylor Jones, the retiring W.M., the benefit of installation, and it was unanimously admitted that that important rite as well as the concluding addresses, were never delivered in a more correct, able, and impressive manner than was done by the reverend brother on this occasion. The new W.M. having been duly installed into the chair by a Board of Installed Masters, and the brethren below the chair admitted, he appointed his officers as follows:—Bros. Roberts, S.W.; Nelson Reed, J.W.; W. G. Lemon, P.M., Treasurer; S. Edwards, Secretary; the Rev. Taylor Jones, I.P.M., Chaplain; Francis Burdett, S.D.; Magnus Ohren, J.D.; S. J. Jerrard, I.G.; Dr. F. E. Wilkinson, P.M., and Dr. C. Steele, P.M., Stewards; H. Shaw, Tyler. At the conclusion of the investment of the officers a very handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. the Rev. W. Taylor Jones on his retirement from the chair, which he suitably acknowledged. After some other business had been disposed of, the lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer, and the brethren, according to previous arrangement, proceeded to the Ship and Turtle, in Leadenhall-street, where the installation banquet was to take place. Shortly after seven o'clock the brethren sat down, the W.M. presiding, and all the officers in their proper places, and one of the most recherché banquets was served up ever seen in Bro. Painter's famed hotel, and from its variety, quality, and quantity it really left nothing to be desired. On the withdrawal of the cloth, and grace said, the W.M. rose and said he hoped that night the brethren would not complain of long speeches, as they all knew what were the Masonic toasts, and they might always be given in a few words. He therefore without further observations asked them to join him in drinking "The Health of the Queen and the Craft," a toast which was heartily responded to. The W. Master said: Brethren, the next toast I have to propose is one that I know will be received with enthusiasm by every brother, as it is "The Health of our Most Worshipful Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," and we must all regret that the state of his health prevented him from being present at the Grand Lodge on Wednesday last. Still we all know the deep interest he takes in all that appertains to the welfare of the Craft on every occasion, and I am sure that a more hearty and enthusiastic brother could never be at the head of the Order. I therefore give you "The Health of the Prince of Wales." The toast was enthusiastically received. The W. Master said the next toast was one of the greatest possible interest to Masonry and to the members of the Craft, as it was "The Health of the Grand Officers," and he particularly referred to those two distinguished members the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, and he was sure that all the brethren would feel great interest in drinking that toast. In their own little lodge he was happy to say that they numbered two Grand Officers; one of them was not able to be present with them though he took a great interest in the lodge, and regretted that he was unable to come amongst them that evening, but he had given a very good reason for his absence. Bro. Brackstone Baker, who was an old and most distinguished Grand Officer, however, was present, and he would call upon him to respond to the toast of the Grand Officers. Bro. Brackstone Baker, P.G.D., said he would endeavour to follow the example so worthily set by the W. Master as to being brief in their speeches, as the hour was getting late and they would hardly be enabled in time to complete the duties of the evening. The officers of the Grand Lodge, and he was sure every one else, must feel gratified by seeing the two chairs in the Grand Lodge occupied by two of the Royal Princes, which they had not seen since 1812, when the Prince of Wales, afterwards Prince Regent, was Grand Master. They would now see two Princes of the Royal blood occupying the two chairs in Grand Lodge, which showed that Freemasonry was in a flourishing condition, notwithstanding all the Papal allocutions and anathemas which had been hurled against it, and, therefore, most gratified must every one be at its extension. At that time last year the Ravensbourne Lodge was last on the list, but now there were sixty lodges beyond it, and if Freemasonry went on progressing as it had done he did not know where it would end, or where they would find accommodation for all the lodges appointed to meet at Freemasons' Hall. He thanked them for their estimation of the services of the Grand Officers, and said they highly appreciated their recognition of the duties they had performed. Bro. the Rev. W. T. Jones, I.P.M., said the toast he had to propose was one that the brethren would at once understand by seeing the gavel, the emblem of authority, once more in his hands. He cordially welcomed the Worshipful Master into the chair, and he sincerely wished him a good and successful year of office. He congratulated him on the accomplishment of his ardent desire as the founder of the lodge, for it was from his brain that arose the Ravensbourne Lodge, and most heartily did he rejoice that he now occupied the chair. He trusted that every wish he entertained for its prosperity might be fulfilled, and that he might be blessed with health and success during his year of office. He asked the brethren to join with him in drinking "The Health of their Worshipful Master," a request which was most heartily responded to. The Worshipful Master said: Brethren and Past Master Jones,—I thank you most sincerely for not only drinking my health but for placing me in this chair, which it was an ardent object of my ambition to fill. I was most desirous to have a lodge in Catford, and when it was called the Ravensbourne Lodge, it was not to serve my own ambition, but in connection with my public duties to be associated with gentlemen in the Craft. We had, too, a building which was suited for the purpose, and I thought it would be a desirable thing to found a Masonic lodge there, and I am happy to say that I was warmly supported by you and all the brethren I see around me in the lodge to-night. We overcame some little temporary difficulties at first, and made a most successful start; and since last year most gratifying has been our success. In succeeding you, Bro. Jones, I cannot hope to emulate you in consequence of your greater experience in Freemasonry. I am afraid I cannot do that, but I will endeavour, although a long way off, to follow in your footsteps, and do my best to discharge my duty and make myself acceptable to the brethren. With me this Ravensbourne Lodge, and all I have done in connection with it, is a labour of love, for from its inception I have taken a keen interest in its welfare, and not only has its success in the first little year of its existence been marked and clear, but we have a happy augury for the future, and I hope those who have to follow me to preside over the lodge will be surrounded by as many good and kind friends as are with us to-night. In conclusion, I thank you most cordially for having placed me in this chair. Bro. Walter Pelham gave a comic recitation on "Penny Readings," which was eagerly listened to, and excited roars of laughter. The W.M. said the next toast he was about to propose was a toast that was always welcome in every Masonic lodge. It was always particularly welcome to the Ravensbourne Lodge, for it was essentially a social one, and possessed great advantages in promoting sociability amongst them, for it would be materially injured if visitors did not come amongst them. He was certain that within the last few minutes one of their visitors, Bro. Pelham, had amused them very much. He (the W.M.) had visited many Masonic lodges, and he never failed to find that the toast of the visitors was received with great pleasure by the brethren in every lodge when that toast was proposed. They had never yet had a meeting without having visitors amongst them, but that night they were distinguished both by rank and number, and the number of them was so imposing that a mere recital of their names would be somewhat of a lengthened task. He would ask them to drink "The Health of the Visitors" most cordially, coupling with the toast the names of Bros. Sir John Bennett, Norton, and Emmanuel. (Drunk with honours.) Bro. Sir John Bennett said he felt it almost impossible to do justice to the toast, for when he saw several Grand Officers near to him it appeared that he was hardly the man who should be called upon to respond for the visitors. They had that night a most remarkable festivity, and he had come by invitation to do honour to the Craft, but more especially to pay his respects to the Worshipful Master who presided over them, and who possessed qualities of the highest order. He not only held the highest character as a Mason, but in his other duties he had laid the foundation and formed the plan of some of the most vast architectural buildings in the City of London. Himself a good Mason, in the course of his duties he had to deal with thousands and tens of thousands of pounds of property, and although there was the old proverb that it was impossible to please everybody, yet he (Sir J. Bennett) must say, at the same time, that he never heard anybody say that they were dissatisfied with him. Having alluded to the wealth of the people and charming scenery of the neighbourhood in which the Ravensbourne Lodge was held, he said that in years hence the W.M. would look back with pride to being nearly the father of the lodge, and when the visitors heard his cheerful voice, and knew his good qualities and cultivated genius, they must all feel gratified at being present that night. On behalf therefore of the visitors, he returned them their best thanks, and thus ended the first lesson, but they would endeavour to improve upon it on some future occasion. Dr. Norton, W.M. of the Maybury Lodge, congratulated the members of the Ravensbourne Lodge on having installed so excellent a Master, and he had no doubt he would be a great credit to the Maybury Lodge when the Ravensbourne had finished with him, and that, at no very distant day he should see him installed as Worshipful Master of the Maybury Lodge. Bro. Emmanuel, P.M. 213, also returned thanks, bearing testimony to the excellent qualities of the W.M., and expressed the delight he had experienced in being in the lodge at Catford Bridge to witness the beautiful manner in which the ritual of installation had been rendered by the immediate Past Master. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was one that would not only be drunk with pleasure by the members of the Ravensbourne Lodge, but by all who were present that day at Catford Bridge, and witnessed the able manner in which their Past Master had performed the ceremony of installation. All who knew him had a real affection for his good qualities, and as "good wine needs no bush," anything he could say could not add to their esteem of him, and therefore he asked them one and all to drink health, long life, and prosperity to the esteemed Past Master of the lodge, Bro. William Taylor Jones. (Loud cheering.) Bro. Jones, P.M., said he returned his sincere thanks in simple language for the honour they had done him, and he wished he deserved the encomiums the W. Master had passed on him, but he accepted the kindly feelings which he had expressed towards him for having presided over the lodge. He knew at that time of the evening they could not go into what had been done during the past year, but he might say that they had not failed to support the Masonic charities; there had been complete harmony and no difference of opinion amongst them; and in addition to supporting the charities, they had carried out the same principles in their daily life, and had not only worked for the support of their Masonic festivals, but as individuals, in either a public or private capacity, endeavoured to do good and confer the greatest happiness upon the greatest number. After a few other observations, he thanked them most cordially for the manner in which his health had been proposed and received, and hoped to see the lodge go on in continued prosperity. The W.M. then, in very eulogistic terms, proposed "The Health of Bros. Lemon and Edwards," the Treasurer and Secretary of the lodge, for which those brethren respectively returned thanks. The W.M. said the next toast he had to propose was one essentially Masonic in its nature, as it was that of the great charities with which they, as Masons, were so intimately connected, and which it was their pride to own. Their charities were dear to all of them, as they knew their value and recognised their importance. In that lodge the toast was always well received, and after alluding to the presence of Bro. Terry, asked the brethren to drink "Continued Prosperity to the Masonic Charities." Bro. Terry, in responding, said that although the Ravensbourne Lodge had only been twelve months in existence, it had made its mark in the annals of Freemasonry, for he recollected that at their first meeting the W.M. accepted the office of Steward to represent the lodge at the festival for the Benevolent Institution, and the present Master would represent them at the festival of the Girls' School. He then alluded to the large number of candidates, and the inadequacy of meeting them for want of the necessary funds, although in 1876 no less a sum than £39,000 was collected for the three institutions, which were in themselves most glorious results. The W.M. proposed "The Health of the Officers," which having been responded to by Bro. Roberts, S.W., the Tyler's toast was given, and this brought a very harmonious meeting to a close before eleven o'clock.

FAVERSHAM.—Lodge of Harmony (No. 133).—The annual installation meeting of this lodge took place at the drill hall of 2nd Kent Artillery Volunteers on the 7th inst., when the W.M. elect, Bro. J. W. Penton, was duly installed in the presence of a numerous gathering of members of the lodge and visiting brethren, Bro. J. M. Goldfinch, P.P.G.J.D., and R. Griggs, P.M., acting as Installing Masters. The other officers appointed for the ensuing year were as follows:—Bros. J. M. Longhurst, S.W.; F. Whiting, J.W.; W. H. Drake, S.D.; G. Trench, J.D.; C. A. Faure, I.G.; F. W. Underdown, D.C.; F. A. Gauge, Treas. and Almoner; F. Jackson, Sec.; and Bro. J. E. Cook, Tyler. After the ceremony the brethren adjourned to the Ship Hotel, where the banquet was served, the newly installed W.M. presiding, the members of the lodge and visitors numbering over forty, and altogether a most profitable and enjoyable evening was spent.

DARTFORD.—Lodge of Emulation (No. 299).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday last, at the Bull Hotel, when Bro. Thos. Wills was duly installed in the chair according to ancient custom, the ceremony being most ably performed by the retiring Master, Bro. Davison. The W.M. selected as his officers the following: Bros. W. G. Wingrove, S.W.; G. W. Churchley, J.W.; E. J. Sears, S.D.; W. Healey, J.D.; A. W. Wells, I.G.; Peter Harvey, Sec.; Noah Martin, Treas.; Miles, Charity Steward; Boardman, Org.; W. Egerton, D.C.; Light and Neech, Stewards. A handsome banner was presented to the lodge by Bro. Pearce. At the banquet which followed (superbly furnished by Bro. Bray), the W.M. was supported by Bro. A. Spencer, Grand Secretary of Kent; Bro. the Rev. J. Jamblin, Vicar of Wilmington; Bros. Spurrell, Neate, French, Hicks, T. Smith, Nettingham, Earnshaw, and many others. In the course of the proceedings the Grand Secretary reported that Freemasonry was in a flourishing state throughout the province. The warrant of the Emulation Lodge is dated 1794, but there are nine others in the province of older date, while thirty more are its juniors.

LIVERPOOL.—Harmonic Lodge (No. 216).—The brethren of this first-class lodge set a noble example in the direction of charity at their last anniversary meeting, which, while rarely if ever equalled in the history of Freemasonry in the extensive province of West Lancashire, is certainly worthy of imitation and cordial approbation. The meeting was held on Thursday, the 10th inst., at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, where Bro. D. S. Davies, W.M., presided over a large assemblage, which included Bros. W. Derryhouse, I.P.M.; J. Skeaf, P.G.O., P.M.; J. McKune, P.G.S., P.M.; J. Beesley, P.M.; W. Laidlaw, P.M., Treas.; John Jones, P.M., Dir. of Cer.; Rev. J. R. Jenkins, S.W.; H. R. Burrell, J.W.; Dr. D. D. Costine, S.D.; Counsellor G. Fowler, Dr. Kisch, T. J. Hughes, J. Shaw, J. Busfield, and others. Bro. Cohen having, most satisfactorily and accurately answered the usual questions, was passed to the Second Degree by the W.M., Bro. D. S. Davies, in a manner which elicited universal admiration from even the oldest Mason. In accordance with previous notice, Bro. W. Laidlaw, P.M., the venerable and esteemed Treasurer of the lodge, moved that a sum equal to nearly £120 should be voted from the funds to the following Masonic charities: The West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution, forty guineas; the Hamer Benevolent Fund, twenty guineas; the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, twenty-five guineas; and the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, twenty-five guineas. These separate votes were cordially proposed and seconded by leading members of the lodge, and most heartily carried by the members without a single dissentient. It may here be stated that the "Harmonic" has already been a large subscriber to the Masonic charities, so that its latest gift will greatly enhance its position and voting power. The W.M. expressed the pride and pleasure he felt in presiding over a lodge which had so nobly assisted that day in carrying out the true principles of charity. After hearty good wishes from a number of visitors, amongst whom was Bro. J. Allan Jones, P. District Grand Sec. for Egypt, the brethren adjourned to a recherché banquet, under the presidency of the W.M., who proposed the usual loyal and Masonic toasts during the evening with much pointedness. Excellent music was furnished by Bros. J. Busfield, T. J. Hughes, J. Jones, P.M., D.C.; Dr. Kisch, &c., Bro. J. Skeaf, P.M., P.G.O., playing the accompaniments with fine taste.

LEICESTER.—St. John's Lodge (No. 279).—The meeting of this old lodge, held on the 2nd inst., was the largest assemblage of brethren that has been witnessed in an ordinary lodge for some years. Such a large attendance is, however, easily accounted for by two very special attractions, viz., the deserved and increasing popularity of the young and talented Master, Bro. C. E. Stretton, and the initiation of five gentlemen, who came, well and worthily recommended, to participate in the privileges of our mystic Craft. The W.M. performed the impressive ceremony to the expressed delight and satisfaction of two old Past Masters of nearly forty years' standing, and placed his first stones in the north-east corner of the building in a truly workmanlike manner. The candidates on this occasion were Dr. R. S. Mutch, L. P. Chamberlain, W. Langmore, R. Michie, and Mr. Scott, also Bro. C. McBride as a joining member. The W.M. was supported by Bros. Wm. Kelly, F.R.H.S., P.P.G.M.; J. Buck, P.M.; C. Stretton, P.M.; A. Palmer, P.M.; J. W. Smith, P.M.; J. M. McAllister, P.M.; George Toller, hon. mem., Grand Sword Bearer of England; R. A. Barber, P.M. 1391; F. J. Baines, P.M. 523; W. B. Smith, P.M. 523; S. Cleaver, S.W.; J. Farndale, Sec.; C. Gurden, Treas.; O. Law, S.D.; E. Newton, J.D.; J. Jessop, D.C.; T. Colman, T.G.; and a large number of members and visiting brethren.

CHESHUNT.—Gresham Lodge (No. 869).—The first meeting of the season of the Gresham Lodge took place in the Old Baronial Hall of Cheshunt Great House, Cheshunt Park (so kindly placed at the disposal of the brethren by their venerated Chaplain, the Rev. Chas. Erskine Mayo), on Saturday, the 12th inst., under the presidency of Bro. J. E. Giggott, P.G.S.W. of Herts, W.M., assisted by the Wardens and officers. The lodge being opened, the ceremony of initiating Mr. H. A. Johnson into the mysteries of Freemasonry was performed by the W.M., after which (the lodge being opened in the Third Degree), Bro. Mabey was raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M. by Bro. Gompertz, both ceremonies being performed in a very impressive manner. The next business was to elect a W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year; Bro. Etherington, S.W., being elected to the former, and Bro. F. D. Rees Copestick, P.M., to the latter office, by the unanimous votes of the brethren. The Treasurer next proposed that the sum of two guineas be given to the Henry Muggerridge Testimonial Fund, and in doing so spoke of the many advantages the brethren had derived from the Masonic teaching of that revered and eminent brother. The proposition was seconded by Bro. Cheese and carried unanimously, and the lodge being closed the brethren repaired to the Green Dragon Hotel to partake of the good things provided. The usual toasts were duly given and responded to, and altogether the evening was a very pleasant one. The brethren present were Bros. J. E. Giggott, W.M., P.S.G.W.; Gilbert, P.G.J.W.; Copestick, P.P.G.J.W.; Bruce, P.P.G.D.; Gompertz, P.P.G.P.; F. D. Rees Copestick, P.P.G.S.B., P.M. and Treas.; Pottle, P.G.S.B.; Chapman, P.G. Steward; also Bros. Etherington, W.M. elect; Mugliston, P.M.; Perry, Cheese, Mayo, Chap.; Hughes, Mabey, Regnal, Gompertz, jun.; Dickie, Clegg, Johnson, and others.

MANCHESTER.—Shakespeare Lodge (No. 1009).—The festival of St. John and the installation of the W.M. was celebrated on Monday, the 7th inst., by the members of this lodge at the Freemasons' Hall, Cooper-street, Manchester. The lodge was opened at four p.m. precisely. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Anthony Marshall, W.M. elect, was then presented by Bro. R. L. Mestayer, W.M., for installation, the Installing Masters being Bro. R. L. Mestayer, W.M.; C. H. Coates, P.P.J.G.W.; S. Y. Bradshaw, P.G.C.; and C. E. Austin, P.M.; Bro. F. Hepton, P.M., acting as Director of the Ceremonies. On the re-admission of the brethren, the W.M. was saluted according to ancient custom. The officers invested were as follows: Bros. G. Smith, S.W.; Hollins, J.W.; Caswell, S.D.; Psarafis, J.D.; Wilson, I.G.; Constantines and Duncan, Stewards; Rev. S. Y. B. Bradshaw, P.G.C. East Lancashire, Chaplain; V. Kilborn, P.M., D.C.; C. E. Austin, P.M., Treas.; Cox, P.M., Sec.; H. T. Robbards, Org. The formal business being over, the brethren adjourned to banquet, the following brethren acting as Stewards:—Bros. Richard Hartley, P.M.; W. A. Duncan, and G. W. Wilson. The menu and toast list, compiled by the retiring Secretary, Bro. W. Talford Gunson, was graced by a à propos and most judicious selection of mottoes from Shakespeare. The first toast on the list, "Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen" ("Highest Queen of State"—Tempest), was proposed by the W.M., and drank with musical honours. "The Princess of Wales and the Members of the Royal Family" was the second toast, proposed also by the W.M. The toast of "The M.W.G.M., H.R.H. the Prince of Wales" ("He is the Prince of the World"—All's Well), was received with great cordiality. Bro. Petty, P.M., gave "The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro. G.M." Bro. Coates proposed "The Health of Bro. George Mellor, J.P., Deputy Prov. G.M. of East Lancashire, and the rest of the Prov. Grand Officers, Past and Present." Bro. Mellor was unavoidably absent through indisposition. "The Immortal Memory of William Shakespeare" was proposed by the Chaplain, Bro. Bradshaw, in a speech of great learning, giving an account of the life of the great bard and an analysis of the immortal plays of the poet. The toast was drank with great enthusiasm. Bro. Mestayer proposed "The Health of the W.M." in most eloquent terms, Bro. Marshall responding in a neat and forcible speech, thanking the brethren for the honour they had done him in electing him to preside over such a distinguished body of Masons. Other toasts followed, the brethren separating at a late hour. Amongst the visiting brethren we noticed Bros. Hooper, P.G.T. E. Lanc.; Heywood, Hind, Bonehill, Allison, Church, Benton, Timberley, Darbyshire, &c. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bros. T. Roberts, Thomas, and Shorrock.

MANCHESTER.—Lodge of Truth (No. 1458).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held at private rooms, Newton Heath, on Saturday, May 5th. The W.M., Bro. James Batchelder, was unable to be present at the opening of the lodge, having been prevented by a professional engagement. Bro. Caldwell, P.M. and D. of C., therefore opened the lodge at 3.30 p.m., supported by Bro. J. Kinder, S.W., and Bro. G. H. Needle, J.W.; Bro. T. Tyers, P.M. and Treas., was also in his place; and there was also a fair gathering of the brethren generally. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. Tyers, P.M. and Treas., thanked the brethren for their kind expression of sympathy with him in his recent bereavement. The lodge was next opened in the F.C. Degree, and then in the Third Degree. Bro. Richardson was raised to the Sublime Degree by Bro. Caldwell, P.M., Dir. of Cer. Bro. Hyams received the same advancement from Bro. Tyers, P.M. and Treas. At the close of the last ceremony Bro. Batchelder, the W.M., was announced and admitted, and having taken his proper position, he raised Bro. James Smith to the Third Degree. Bro. W. J. Kinder, S.W., then presented the working tools, and delivered the Historical Lecture relating to the M.M. Degree; we are proud to record that the lecture was given in a very clear and impressive manner, and appeared to impart great interest, not only to the newly-raised, but to the brethren generally. Bro. W. J. Kinder bids fair for being a Mason well versed in Masonic lore; he is at the present time W.M. of Lodge 367, and we think we shall be correct in saying the youngest Master in the province of East Lancashire. The business in the circular having been disposed of, it was proposed by Bro. C. J. Kent, I.P.M., and seconded by Bro. Taylor, J.D., that the lodge adjourn during the months July and August. The result of this proposition will be declared at the June meeting. "Hearty good wishes" were brought from Lodges 467, 1011, and 1140; also from Revere Lodge, Boston, U.S.A. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren retired for refreshment. The cloth having been withdrawn, "The Health of the Queen" was drunk with that loyal fervour to which Freemasons are accustomed. Then followed the toast to her illustrious son, "Our Grand Master," coupled with that of his consort, a princess whose virtues all would do well to imitate. After the usual toasts had been duly disposed of, including that of "The Visitors," and "The Officers," the brethren separated at 9.30 p.m. During the evening the brethren were favoured with some capital singing; Bro. J. H. Pearson, the well-known member of the cathedral choir, sang "The Maid of Athens" with grand effect. Bros. Goodchilde and Hyams introduced a little of the volatile element, causing more than one brother to laugh heartily.

PONTYPRIDD.—Merlin Lodge (No. 1578).—Twelve months ago the Merlin Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons was consecrated with becoming eclat. Some of the notabilities of Freemasonry from the East and Western Provinces of South Wales and other provinces; the then Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. E. J. Morris, Bro. J. C. Parkinson, and a great gathering of the Craft met to do honour to the occasion, and to instal as first Master Bro. J. E. Price, a well-versed and deservedly popular member of the Craft. The lodge proper then consisted of the magic and Masonic number of seven, but the roll at present musters seventy. Although it was evident at the initial stage of the lodge's existence that it would be a vigorous offshoot of the wide-spreading tree of Freemasonry, it could hardly have been anticipated that the young plant would flourish to such an extent in so short a period of time. Bro. Price worked zealously for his lodge prior to its establishment, and during his term of office, and he may with good and sufficient reasons turn with pride and pleasure to the splendid results which have been achieved during a brief twelve months. It was intended to present him with a jewel at the annual festival, but it did not arrive in time. It would be invidious if we refrained from mentioning the large assistance heartily afforded him by his staff of officers, and speaking of these generally we may point to them as a model set of Masons working hand-in-hand to bring about good and harmonious results. Nothing "succeeds like success," but the gratifying results produced by the master and officers of "The Merlin" during the past year could only have been obtained by dint of great industry, discrimination, and a generous exercise of the best Masonic qualities. On Monday last the annual festival was held, when the retiring Past Master, Bro. J. E. Price, resigned the chair in favour of his worthy coadjutor, Bro. Matthew Wayne Morgan, and there was a large and influential gathering of the Craft, representing lodges from various parts of the province, including Aberdare, Aberavon, Cardiff, Llanelly, Merthyr, and other towns. The appointments of the lodge were much admired, and some of those who were present recognised the handsome canopy and W.M. chair, which had been lent by the brethren of the "Merlin" for installation purposes, at Aberdare, when Sir George Elliot was elevated to his exalted post in Masonry. The lodge-room was also chastely decorated with the choicest flowers of the season. The ceremony of installation was performed by Immediate Past Master Bro. J. E. Price in a manner which gave further illustration of his efficiency, and elicited the warm encomiums of experienced members of the Craft. The W.M. Bro. M. W. Morgan, invested the following officers for the coming year:—Bros. G. T. Alexander, S.W.; J. Jones, J.W.; the Rev. W. Watkins, Chap.; Wm. Williams, Treas.; W. Merchant, Sec.; Dr. Hunter, S.D.; Dr. Dickson, J.W.; Dr. Leckie, D.C.; J. Rees, Org.; F. M. Cooke, I.G.; Bairstow, Tyler; Male and Morgan, Stwds. The appointment of the officers having been completed, a vote of thanks was given to the retiring W.M. for the efficiency of his services in the chair during the past year. Bro. Hurman was elected P.M. of the lodge, and notice was given to appoint Bros. Evan Jones and Weichert hon. members. The W.M. elect returned thanks in a brief and suitable address for the honour they had done him in electing him to the chair, and after the usual Masonic ceremonies the lodge was closed. In addition to those already named the following were among those present:—Bros. Evan Jones, P.M.; J. Hurman, P.M.; Rev J. D. Griffiths, W. Merchant, Sec.; W. Tolfree, J. Williams, J. D.; A. F. Lucas, Frederick Atkins, Org. There was a full attendance of the Merlin Lodge, and among the visitors were Bros. S. G. Homfray, P.A., D.C., D.P.G.M. Monmouth; Evan Thomas, P.G.D.C. 679; M. Tennant, P.P.G.W. 833; T. G. Glass, W.M. 36; Wm. Taylor, 36; D. Watson, P.G.D.C. 36; J. W. Morris, P.P.G.P. 679; J. W. Mayor, 38; Wm. Weichert, 6; S. Weichert, P.M. 960; D. Hopkins, W.M. 960; J. Jones, Prov. G. Treas. 833; R. Sothorn, 36; D. T. Alexander, 37; J. Hemming, 833; S. Cooper, P.M. 36. In the evening a banquet was held in the lodge-room, to which about seventy sat down under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. W. M. Morgan, who was well supported by the members of his lodge and visiting brethren. The repast was served up by Mr. and Mrs. Morris, of the New Inn Hotel, in a manner which deserves the highest praise. The menu was of the choicest kind, and the catering liberal and praiseworthy in every respect. The wines were also of excellent quality. The evening was spent in a most pleasant manner, and the toast list was well discussed by the various speakers. "The Queen and the Craft" having been duly honoured, as also "The M.W. Grand Master" and the "R.W. Prov. Grand Master," Bro. Homfray proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master," and in doing so referred to the rapid strides which the Merlin Lodge had made under the able presidency of Bro. Price, who had that day so perfectly installed into office a good and able successor, and he was sure that the newly-elected Master was greatly esteemed by them all. He was one who would do his best to maintain the prestige of his lodge; and he had all the capacity and generous willingness to do it. He felt sure that the W.M. had not taken the onerous duties of his office without a firm intention of carrying them out to the full extent. They had in him a good man and true, and he asked them now to cordially drink his health, and to rally round him in his year of office. The Worshipful Master, who was received with loud and prolonged cheering, suitably acknowledged the toast which had been so warmly given and responded to. The office he had obtained was one which it was only laudable ambition for every Mason to strive to gain at some time or other of his Masonic career. He should strive to carry out the duties to the best of his ability, and he relied on the support of the officers and members of the lodge to enable him to do this. He again thanked them, and resumed his seat. "The Health of Past Master J. E. Price" was warmly drunk, and replied to in an eloquent and feeling address. "The Visitors" was proposed by Bro. Weichert, and replied to by Bro. Major Powell, of Aberdare. Bro. M. Tennant proposed "The Lodges of the Provinces," and Bro. Hopkins, W.M. Bute Lodge, responded. "The Masonic Charities," proposed by Bro. Jones, J.W., foundable advocates in Bros. Tennant (Afan) and Taylor (Merthyr). Several excellent songs were sung by Bros. Jones, Leckie, Dickson, Homfray, Rosser, &c., a most convivial evening being concluded with the Tyler's toast.—Central Glamorgan Gazette.

WALTHAMSTOW.—Beaconsfield Lodge (No. 1662).—The general meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 5th May, 1877, at the Chequers, Marsh-street, Walthamstow. Present: Bros. W. T. Christian, W.M.; W. Groome, S.W.; W. H. Brand, J.W.; J. Pinder, P.M.; F. Hallows, Hon. Sec.; C. T. Saunders, S.D.; T. Franklin, J.D.; W. G. Hallows, acting I.G.; T. Upward, Org.; J. H. Cambridge, W.S., and W. Gilchrist, Tyler. The lodge was opened in the First Degree, and the minutes of the last lodge meeting were read and confirmed; the lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bros. Clark, Carter, Dendy, Delvalli, and Hurst were asked the usual questions entitling them to be raised to the Third Degree. These being all satisfactorily answered the lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and the above named five brethren were raised in the usual manner according to ancient rite and custom. The lodge was resumed in the Second Degree, and Bro. Wm. Moffat was passed. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and two candidates were proposed and seconded for initiation at the next meeting of the lodge. The ordinary business was then gone through, and the lodge was closed in due form and adjourned until the 6th October. Among the members and visitors present were Bros. H. Field, John Bell, 1178; Walter Claridge, 1598; C. Carter, 1507; E. Brown, 1598; G. E. Laverack, 917; Samuel Morris, 1421; J. S. Baxter, 206; T. Elves, 174; J. Lake, 1471.

INSTRUCTION.

JORDAN LODGE (No. 201).—This lodge, which has been dormant for many years, is likely to find a new home at Bro. Hiscox, Devonshire Arms, Devonshire-street, Portland-street. A preliminary meeting was held on Tuesday last, Bro. John Hammond, P.M. 201, in the chair, Bros. Peter Robinson, Sec. 201; Savage, P.M. 201; Harper, J.D. 201; and a large number of brethren from the neighbourhood were present. Certain details were arranged, and another meeting at the above address will be held on Tuesday next, at eight o'clock, to discuss the question of Bye-laws, and other matters. Brethren, especially those of the mother lodge, are particularly invited to attend.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—Holmesdale Lodge (No. 874).—The usual weekly meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, 14th inst., at the Sussex Hotel. The brethren present were Bros. W. B. Bacon, W.M. 874; H. B. Wilmott, I.P.M. 874; Williams, S.W. 874; Bates, J.W. 874; C. Graham, J.D. 1326 and 1540; Spencer, I.G. 874; Dunkley, and others. The lodge was opened in ancient form and minutes read and confirmed, when the W.M. vacated the chair. Bro. Wilmott occupied the chair, and rehearsed the ceremony of initiation (Bro. Bates acting as candidate) in an excellent manner, and afterwards gave the charge of the First Degree. The W.M. then resumed the chair, and the lodge was opened and closed in the Second and Third Degrees, and finally closed in due form, and the brethren separated shortly.

WOOLWICH.—Union Waterloo Chapter (No. 13).—One of the most successful meetings of this chapter took place on Wednesday, the 25th ult., at the Masonic Hall, William-street, Woolwich, Comp. H. Bickerstaff, P.Z. as Z.; Comp. E. Denton as H.; Comp. Fred. G. Pownall as J. Amongst the companions present were C. Coupland, M.P.Z. 13 and 913; J. Henderson, P.Z.; W. A. Weston, P.S.; J. Warren, A.S.; H. Shaw, A.S.; G. Kennedy, Scribe E.; J. Scott Mutch, D. Deves, T. Hutton, J. Wilkins, H. S. Syer, T. D. Hayes, P.S. elect 913; H. Pryce, Scribe E. 913; and F. Cartland, 913. The minutes of the previous meeting were confirmed. The ballot being unanimous in favour of the admission of Bro. T. B. Wylie, United Military Lodge, No. 1536, to the privileges of this degree, and he being in attendance, was duly admitted and exalted, the ceremony being performed in a most impressive manner by the M.E.Z. and his officers. The M.E.Z. then proceeded to present Comp. Coupland, who had occupied the First Principal's chair for two years, with a valuable P.Z.'s jewel, which had been voted to him at the previous meeting in recognition of the eminent services he had rendered the chapter. In so doing, Comp. Bickerstaff said it afforded him very great pleasure to present to Comp. Coupland the jewel on behalf of the chapter. It was hardly necessary for him to mention the many services he (Comp. Coupland) had performed in the interest of the chapter, or the high estimation in which he was held—his efforts had been so successful, and were known to them all. He trusted, in conclusion, that he would live long to wear in the chapter of which he was so brilliant a member the decoration that he had now the pleasure of fastening on his breast. Comp. Coupland, who seemed much affected at the cordial expression of feeling evinced, said he considered the present one of the proudest moments of his life. He would prize the jewel very highly, not on account of its intrinsic value, but of the associations connected with it. It had been his good fortune to have served, with one or two exceptions, every office in the chapter; and he enjoined the companions to be equally assiduous in the discharge of their duties to the chapter. For his part, nothing would be wanting to promote its prosperity, and to the best of his belief he had never yet missed a meeting. He again and again thanked them for their appreciation of his services. The remaining business having been disposed of, the companions adjourned to an excellent repast at Comp. De Grey's, Freemasons' Tavern.

William Barlow, P.M., Sec., and Reg., as Installing Master, and the W.M. elect, Bro. John Heap, S.W., was presented by Bro. Nathaniel Horrocks, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. of Lancashire. The Worshipful Master appointed the following brethren as officers of the lodge: Bros. John Davison, S.W.; Orlando Startup, J.W.; Joseph Bentley, M.O.; W. H. Kirkman, S.O.; Thomas Laycock, J.O.; Rev. George Chatton, Chap.; Richard Chambers, P.M., Treas.; Wm. Barlow, P.M., P.P.G.S.B. of Lancashire, Sec. and Reg.; Ralph Brinkles, S.D.; Jos. Ragdale, J.D.; J. Eccles, I.G.; Whitworth, Tyler. The lodge closed at 6.15 p.m., and the brethren adjourned to banquet and an enjoyable evening, under the able presidency of Bro. Heap, W.M. The following brethren were also present: Bros. Thomas Cort and J. Brooks. The evening was enlivened by several good songs. The brethren separated at an early hour, full of zeal for the coming year.

After the E.P. had been saluted in the usual form, he proceeded to invest the following as his officers: Sir Knights Thos. Chesworth, Prelate; M. Mawson, 1st Constable; W. H. Shakespeare, 2nd Constable; H. Firth, Treasurer; J. Gallagher, Registrar; J. E. Jackson, Almoner; W. Doyle, P.E.P., Dir. of Cer.; J. Capell, Expert; J. Skeaf, Organist; H. Burrows, 1st Std. Br.; J. #### PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF LEICESTERSHIRE.

The annual communication of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge was held under the auspices of the Knights of Malta Lodge, at Hinckley, on the 3rd inst., and under the presidency of the R.W. Prov. G.M., Bro. Wm. Kelly, F.R.H.S.

It is gratifying to remark the increasing interest evinced in the prosperity of the Mark Degree in this province, and it is most satisfactory to be able to announce that, according to the reports from the Worshipful Masters of Lodges, that the interest continues unabated.

ORDER OF ST. LAWRENCE.

In Notes and Queries of April 28th (5th S. vii., 336) under the head of "Citizen and Girdler" appears the following: "There was a company of girdlers incorporated in 1448 or 49. There were a Master, three Wardens, twenty-four assistants, and eighty-four liverymen. Their hall was in Basinghall Street (now at 39, Basinghall St.) Burke describes their armorial ensigns thus: "Per fesse arg. and or, a pale counter charged, three gridrons of the last, the handles in chief. Crest: A demi man proper, representing St. Lawrence with glory round his head or, issuing out of the clouds of the first, vested arg., girt round the body with a girdle of the second, holding in the dexter hand a gridron of the last, and in the sinister a book ar. Motto: Give thanks to God."

"These arms were granted by John Smith, Garter, 32 Henry vi., 1454."

Did the Masonic Order of St. Lawrence take its rise from this guild?

BRO. EMMA HOLMES'S TALES, POEMS, AND MASONIC PAPERS.

In answer to our dear Bro. W. J. Hughan, and to numerous others, kindly allow me to state, that the subscribers to this little work may expect to receive their copies within a few weeks from the present time, the whole of the letterpress being nearly completed.

The work, I may add, will be supplied to subscribers only. There will be a second series, uniform in size and price (2s. 6d.) with the present, the profits to be devoted to the same benevolent and Masonic object; and the few copies of the first series still unsubscribed for will be kept for completing both series for subscribers whose names are not yet on the list, of which more anon.

GEORGE MARKHAM TWEDDELL.

Every Freemason knows how worthily, persistently, and energetically the Secretaries of the Masonic charities plead for the several causes in which they are interested. Their good tempered advocacy is well known and highly appreciated. Was it therefore by accident or design that on the occasion of the great Masonic banquet, when the toast of the "Masonic Charities" was proposed, and while Bros. Binckes, Terry, and Little were collecting their thoughts, the vocal brethren present sang, "The Three Chafers?"—World.

Obituary.

BRO. THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF SHREWSBURY.

It is our melancholy duty this week to record the very sudden and unexpected death of Bro. the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Shrewsbury, which sad event took place at an early hour on Friday morning, the 11th inst., at his town house, Dover-street, Piccadilly. His lordship was in his usual health up to a late hour on the preceding evening, but feeling faint on retiring for the night it was thought advisable to call in medical advice. Sir James Paget and Mr. Prescott Hewitt met Mr. Venning, his lordship's usual medical attendant, but after consultation it was considered necessary for Mr. Venning only to remain. He, however, at a subsequent hour recommended that Sir William Gull should be sent for, who, on arrival, spoke hopefully, like those who had left, but his lordship did not rally, and eventually in their presence his heart ceased to perform its functions. The late Charles John Chetwynd Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, Earl Talbot of Hensol, county Glamorgan; Viscount Ingestre, county Stafford; and Baron Talbot of Hensol, county Glamorgan, in the peerage of Great Britain; and Earl of Waterford, in the peerage of Ireland, was the eldest of the five sons of Henry John, eighteenth Earl of Shrewsbury, by Lady Sarah Elizabeth Beresford, eldest daughter of Henry, second Marquis of Waterford. He was born 13th April, 1830, and married 15th February, 1855, Anna Theresa, eldest daughter of the late Captain Richard Howe Cockerell, by whom he leaves issue an only son, Charles Henry John, Viscount Ingestre, born 13th November, 1860, who succeeds his father as twentieth Earl of Shrewsbury and fifth Earl Talbot, and three daughters, namely, Lady Theresa, married to Viscount Castlereagh; Lady Gwendolen, married in January last to Lieut.-Col. E. Chaplin, M.P.; and Lady Muriel, married in December last to Viscount Helmsley. The deceased peer was hereditary Lord High Steward of Ireland, as declared by the House of Lords in 1863. He was from 1851 to 1853 in the 1st Life Guards, but retired in the last-mentioned year; and was for some years major in the Queen's Own Royal Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry. In February, 1875, he was appointed, on the resignation of the Marquis of Exeter, Captain of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms. He was a deputy-lieutenant of Staffordshire, and a magistrate for the county of Middlesex. The following account of the noble lord's Masonic career will, we think, be of great interest to our readers. His lordship was installed Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire June 24th, 1871, and at once took great interest in the various lodges in his province, establishing quarterly communications for the different parts, holding a meeting in each part every three months, so that all Masons could have an opportunity of attending Prov. Grand Lodge, and becoming acquainted with its members. He himself regularly attended these meetings, and, consequently, soon knew all the prominent members of each lodge, which enabled him much better to select the P.G. Officers at the annual meeting at Stafford. He also caused at each of these four meetings the charity box to go round, giving largely himself; the proceeds to go to a fund called the "Shrewsbury Fund," for local charity only. His lordship was installed a Knight Templar in the Godefroi de Bouillon Encampment, then meeting at Newcastle-under-Lyne, on September 13th, 1872, and served the office of Preceptor in that preceptory in the years 1873 and 1874. At the installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the Order on April 7th, 1873, Lord Shrewsbury was appointed Great Marshal in Convent General, and also a Knight Grand Cross of the Order. On the death of Lord Athlumney in December, 1873, the late Earl was appointed Great Constable in Convent General, and this office he held until his installation as Great Prior of England and Wales on the 8th December in last year. His lordship's death occurred on the morning of the regular annual day of meeting of Great Priory. But few members knew of the loss the Order had sustained until they reached the place of meeting, and then not until it was announced from the chair. Major Shadwell H. Clerke, Grand Sub-Prior of England and Wales, opened Great Priory for the purpose of formally announcing the sad intelligence, and immediately closed it, no business whatever being transacted. The announcement was a great shock to many. His lordship took very great interest in the three great Masonic charities, volunteering to take the chair of each at the annual festival dinners in rotation. He began with the Boys' in 1872, at which £5510 was collected, Lord Shrewsbury himself giving a large sum he had collected from his friends to the Stewards from his province, who supported him on that occasion. In the following year he presided at the Girls' School, giving away at Wandsworth the prizes to the various young ladies who had earned them, assisted by Lady Shrewsbury and his daughter, Lady Theresa Talbot; expressing his great delight at the splendid schools, and the proficiency of the scholars. To celebrate the event the Masons of his province subscribed, and Lady Shrewsbury presented the schools with an entirely new service of pottery ware, breakfast, dinner, &c., sufficient to supply the whole school, and a few over in case of breakage. Each article is impressed with a design of the schools, and under is the Staffordshire knot, which gives a very pretty effect, and will remind the girls of the donors. In 1875 he presided at the dinner for the Aged Freemasons, when £7020 was collected; and at the festival of the same institution, which was held on the 12th February of the present year, he presided, in the unavoidable absence, through illness, of H.R.H. Prince Leopold, when £12,656 13s. was collected, being the largest amount yet obtained at any of this Institution's festivals. Perhaps, however, Lord Shrewsbury's Masonic love for the brethren of his province was best shown when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed at Albert Hall as Most Worshipful Grand Master of England. Knowing that a good many brethren would then be in London who were not in the habit of often going, and that they would not know where to go on their arrival, he caused his P.G. Sec. to issue circulars inviting all the Worshipful Masters, Wardens, P.G. Officers, &c., who were going, to meet at his house in Dover-street, Piccadilly, where he had a splendid lunch ready, and sufficient carriages and omnibuses to take the whole of the brethren to the Albert Hall, giving to each a ticket on which was the number of his carriage, to prevent confusion, and appointing a place to meet again. When the installation was over the carriages were again waiting, and the brethren were taken back to Dover-street, the noble lord driving first in his own carriage to welcome the brethren on their arrival at his house, where another substantial meal was ready for those who would partake of it, and wine in profusion was served during the whole time the brethren were present. Such a truly Masonic gathering did not take place in any other house in London on that great day, and the Staffordshire Masons felt justly proud of their Prov. Grand Master, and it was with very great pleasure when, at the annual meeting of Prov. Grand Chapter, it was arranged to present a marriage present to Lady Theresa Talbot, who was about marrying the Viscount Castlereagh. Almost every member of the province subscribed, feeling that in so doing it would in a small way shew the respect and esteem in which they held his lordship.

The funeral took place at Ingestre, near Stafford, on Wednesday. The body was brought down from London on the previous evening and removed from the train at Colwich Junction, and from thence taken in a hearse to Ingestre Hall. The ceremony took place in the afternoon, and the body lay in state. A procession was formed at half-past one (A.M.), the coffin being carried on the shoulders of bearers to Ingestre Church, which is close to the hall. The bearers of the pall were Lord A. Paget and B. Paget, Captain A. Duncombe, Hon. A. Morgan, Mr. Iveson, Mr. Præ, Lord Lovatt, Hon. A. Cockerell, Hon. H. Langham, and the Hon. G. W. Finch. The mourners consisted of the Countess of Shrewsbury, Viscount Ingestre, Lord and Lady Castlereagh, Lady Waterford, Viscount Helmsley, Hon. Mrs. North, Colonel Chaplin, Miss Chetwynd, Hon. Captain Carpenter, Lord Eglington, Hon. and Rev. T. C. Talbot, Lord Rendisham, Hon. F. Montgomerie, Hon. W. North, Hon. G. Vernon, and other relatives, besides deputations from the Stafford Town Council and members of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Staffordshire. The coffin was covered with a crimson and white pall, with wreaths of hothouse flowers resting on the surface. The deceased earl's coronet was carried in front and Colonel Kerr was present as representing her Majesty. The funeral service was read by the Hon. and Rev. A. C. Talbot. The body was deposited in the family vault. Although the funeral was considered to be strictly private, a considerable number of persons resident on the estate and in the neighbourhood were present.

The Daily Express states: By the sudden and lamented death of the Earl of Shrewsbury, the Church has lost one of her most faithful and staunch supporters. His death will be deeply and widely felt by many who had learnt to reckon upon that clerical help which was never withheld from any true and hearty Church work. In London, as well as at Ingestre and at Alton Towers, many benefactions attested his kindness of heart. The clergy found in Lord Shrewsbury a ready friend. None who had the privilege of spending a week at Alton Towers, when the Church Congress was held at Stoke, can ever forget the heartiness with which he threw himself into all the arrangements for the comfort of his guests, amongst whom were several of the American bishops and other clergy. We are reminded at the present time how his lordship spoke twice at the Congress, dealing, in his latter speech, with the subject of Christian burial, and pleasantly drawing a picture of the kind of funeral which he should desire for himself, of the simplest and plainest kind. On the day before his death, Lord Shrewsbury attended and spoke with his wonted geniality at the annual gathering at St. John's College, Hurstpierpoint. None then could have anticipated that so sudden an end was at hand to one who was loved by many, and respected by all who knew him.

BRO. MAJOR HAMILTON RAMSAY.

We regret having to announce the death of Bro. Major W. Hamilton Ramsay, 30° (of Garion), Grand Viceroy of the Red Cross Order in Scotland, and which melancholy event occurred somewhat suddenly on the 28th ult. Bro. Ramsay was a very energetic Mason, and amongst other offices held for many years the posts of Prior of the Lothians and Treasurer of the Scottish Order of the Temple. In 1875 he was elected Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. We understand that Lord Inverurie will succeed the deceased as Grand Viceroy of the Scottish Grand Council of the Red Cross Order.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DORSETSHIRE.

Who was the first Freemason, or when the ancient fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons was established, are questions which we shall not attempt to answer. It is quite clear that somebody, at some time, and somewhere, conceived the idea of a great brotherhood, drew the plan, and to day the sun never ceases to shine on Masonic institutions. There have been periods in the history of the Craft when the aims and objects sought to be accomplished by the members have been misunderstood by the outside world, and even at the present time it seems that in Catholic countries the ban is put by the priesthood upon Freemasonry, on the plea that it is a secret society. But whatever may have been the disadvantages under which the Craft was placed in bygone days in this country, or even at the present day in some parts of the continent, it is quite certain that in Great Britain and America, Ancient Freemasonry never occupied a higher or more prominent position than it now does. Royal patrons, from the days of King Athelstan, who granted a charter to Freemasonry in 926, have not been wanting, who were willing to give their support to Masonic institutions, and to cast in their lot with the brotherhood, and at the present time it is no small matter of satisfaction to every member of the great fraternity to be able to point to the fact that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the heir to the throne of this great country, is the Grand Master of the United Lodges of England and Wales. It is also a matter worthy of note that at no period in the history of the Craft have the various provinces been governed by a higher class of men—as Provincial Grand Masters—than at the present time. Gentlemen, moving in the very first ranks of society, and of unimpeachable character, have readily undertaken the duties appertaining to the office, and the result has been that many persons who were averse to Masonry have been led to review their fancied objections, and not a few of them have sought admission into Masonic lodges.

The Province of Dorset, which consists of thirteen lodges, has been governed from the earliest days of its formation by a succession of Grand Masters, who have sought at all times the advancement of the Provincial Grand Lodge and also the subordinate lodges in the province. The result has been that the membership during the last twenty years has greatly increased, and the Province of Dorset, small as it is compared to that of those of the more thickly populated counties in the north of England, has sent up to the Masonic charities in London larger subscription lists than have many other provinces with double or even treble its membership. The late Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Joseph Gundry, &c., of the Hyde, Bridport, was greatly respected and honoured by the brethren, and as a tribute to his great worth a deputation attended his funeral from almost, if not every, lodge in the province. The question was then very generally asked by Masons of each other—"Who is to be our Provincial Grand Master?" There were those in the province who had gained great credit for being good Masons, and who from their social positions were mentioned as probable successors to the office, but generally the name of Bro. Montague Guest came uppermost, and when it was announced that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of England, had appointed this gentleman to the high office, every Mason regarded Bro. Guest as "the right man in the right place." It is a trite saying, and often used in a meaningless way, when it is said of a person that he is "respected by everybody who knows him," but to say this of Bro. Montague Guest is only to utter what is true to the very letter. His appointment, therefore, was received with unbounded satisfaction, and we are sure that Masonry in Dorsetshire under his rule will gain many fresh adherents, whilst the lodges in working will vie with each other in seeking to extend the principles which they are established to propagate.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset, which assembled at Wimborne on Saturday afternoon last, was probably the largest Masonic gathering which has ever taken place in the county. Certainly not less than 350 members assembled at the Corn Exchange, which, we should mention, is the property of the members of Cuthberga Lodge, No. 622. The large room was prepared in due form by the Wimborne brethren, who seemed to consider no amount of trouble too great to render the meeting a success. No doubt they regarded it a great honour that a member of their lodge was to be elevated to so high an office, and that on this account the installation ceremony was to take place in Bro. M. Guest's own lodge. According to announcements the lodge was to be tyed at two o'clock, but this did not take place until after three o'clock. As a matter of course, it took some considerable time to obtain a correct list of the brethren present, together with their various titles. This was got over more easily than might have been expected. Bro. R. N. Howard, Provincial Grand Secretary, was quite equal to the occasion, and the names of all present were duly recorded. On the members entering the lodge they arranged themselves under their respective banners, and Bro. William Smith, P.M., the Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies, was indefatigable in his exertions in getting everything in perfect order previous to the arrival of the Grand Lodge Officers. About three o'clock the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, the Deputy Grand Master of England; Sir A. Woods, Grand Director of Ceremonies; G. Kuhe, Grand Org.; Viscount Holmesdale, Provincial Grand Master of Kent; Lord Methuen, Provincial Grand Master of Wiltshire; W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire, and other distinguished members arrived, and entered the lodge with Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers. The Deputy Grand Master, on entering, was saluted according to ancient Masonic form. After some routine business had been gone through, the Right Worthy Deputy Grand Master briefly addressed the lodge, stating the object of the meeting that day.

The minutes of the Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Shaftesbury on the 14th September last, were then read. These minutes included a resolution to the R.W. Bro. W. Eliot, Past P.G.M., congratulating him on having been a subscribing member of the Lodge of All Souls, No. 170, Weymouth, for an uninterrupted period of sixty years, and on his being the oldest member on the provincial roll, and that in recording this interesting fact on its minutes, this Provincial Grand Lodge would bear testimony to the highly moral and religious character of the R.W. Bro., who has thus during his long life so well and worthily represented the true principles and practical teaching of our Order.

The arrival of the Provincial Grand Master designate, Bro. M. Guest, having been announced, and the patent directing his installation duly examined, a deputation of Masters retired with the Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies to introduce him to the Provincial Grand Lodge. The ceremony of installation, which was of a very impressive character, then took place, and on the new Provincial Grand Master taking the chair he was duly proclaimed and saluted. We may here mention that all the brethren, with but few exceptions, were attired in evening dress, and as most present wore jewels of various kinds and Masonic clothing, according to their respective offices, the scene at the installation ceremony will not soon be forgotten by those whose good fortune it was to be present.

It is the custom among Masons for the Provincial Grand Master to appoint his own officers, and this was done on this occasion by the newly-appointed Provincial Grand Master. The appointments were as follows:—
T. B. Hanham, P.M. 472 ..... Prov. G.S.W.
C. Tucker, P.M. 707 ..... Prov. G.J.W.
Rev. H. Everett, 417 ..... Prov. G. Chap.

R. N. Howard, P.M. 170 ..... Prov. G. Sec.
G. M. Evans, P.M. 707 ..... Prov. G.S.D.

Stewards: Bros. T. Wootton, 1367; E. Tolman, 1367; J. Lowe, 707; J. S. A. Herford, 622; W. D. Dugdale, 137; J. K. Shopland, 1266.

We may mention that the above officers, with one exception, are the same as those appointed at the provincial meeting held at Shaftesbury in September last. The exception is that of Bro. Case, as Treasurer, who has well earned his appointment by the assiduity with which he has worked in various ways in his own lodge—Faith and Unanimity, Dorchester—and also as a Provincial Grand Lodge officer.

The business of the Provincial Grand Lodge was brought to a close by the passing of votes of thanks to the installing officers and to the members of Cuthberga Lodge for making the necessary arrangements for holding the meeting that day.

Amongst those present were:—Officers of Grand Lodge—Bros. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M. and P.G.M. West Lancashire; Lord Methuen, P.G.M. Wilts; Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., P.G.M. Kent; M. J. Guest, P.G.D., P.G.M. Dorset designate; W. W. B. Beach, M.P., P.G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; J. Hervey, G. Sec.; Sir A. Woods (Gariter), P.G.W., G.D. Cers.; T. Fenn, P.G.A.D. Cers.; C. W. Kuhe, G. THE TESTIMONIAL TO BRO. TWEDDELL.—The Newcastle Daily Chronicle thus notices the testimonial now being got up to our well known brother:—"A testimonial is being got up to be presented in the agreeable shape of a purse of gold to Mr. George Markham Tweddell, the well known Cleveland poet, essayist, and lecturer. The appeal is a touching and affecting one. The testimonial is intended to help Mr. Tweddell through heavy losses and family affliction, over which he had no control. The Cleveland district has always been rich in men abundant in literary ability. Before iron was discovered and Middlesbrough was made, Cleveland, like the Tyne, had a reputation for literary culture and scientific research. It is quite a mistake to treat Cleveland as a modern place. It has a character of its own. Cleveland has an old life, as marked as that of Newcastle, and its literary reputation is greatly due to such men as Mr. Tweddell." We have already alluded to it favourably and warmly in our columns. Bro. George Kenning is the London Treasurer to the fund.

We heartily congratulate Bro. Robert Wentworth Little on his recent appointment as Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Middlesex, in the room of Bro. Sir George Eliot. Our worthy brother's labour for this distinguished province has entitled him to this honour, and we sincerely wish him an early restoration to better health to enable him to enjoy his new office.—The Masonic Record of Western India.

The installation meeting of the Sir Hugh Myddleton Lodge, No. 1602, will take place at the Agricultural Hall, on Friday next, at four o'clock. The installation of Bro. Edward G. Sim as W.M. will be performed by Bro. E. Somers, I.P.M.

The Queen has expressed her desire that some adequate provision should be made for the Misses De Foe, the lineal descendants of the author of "Robinson Crusoe," and Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to direct that a pension of £75 per annum should be granted to each of these three ladies.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 19, 1877.

DEATH OF LORD SHREWSBURY.

We deeply deplore the loss which the Craft in general, and Staffordshire in particular, has sustained by the loss of our distinguished brother, the Earl of Shrewsbury. He died very suddenly on Friday morning at 6 a.m., having only been taken ill at 2. The cause of his death, the Times of Saturday states, is "believed to be syncope of the heart." His love of Masonry, and his kindly presence will long be remembered by the brethren, and he will be a very missed man among his tenantry and a large circle of friends, and especially in that great Order of ours, of which he was so distinguished a member. We print an obituary elsewhere.

INSTALLATION OF BRO. M. J. GUEST, AS PROV. G.M. FOR DORSETSHIRE.

On Saturday, the 12th inst., an influential gathering of Freemasons took place at Wimborne, on the occasion of the installation of Bro. Montague John Guest, P.G.D., as Prov. Grand Master of Dorsetshire. The ceremony was conducted in the Masonic Hall, Wimborne, under the direction of Sir Albert W. Woods, (Garter) P.G.W., Grand Director of Ceremonies, assisted by Bro. T. Fenn, P.G.D. and P.A.G. D.C. The R.W. Dep. G.M., Lord Skelmersdale, presided as Installing Master, and was supported by the presence of the R.W. Prov. G.M. of Wiltshire, Lord Methuen; the R.W. P.G.M. of Kent, Lord Holmesdale; the R.W. P.G.M. of Hampshire, Bro. Beach, M.P.; the V.W. Bro. Lord Henry Thynne, P.G.W.; Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary; Bro. Hon. Ralph Harbord, Bros. Vere Barnett Lanford, M.D.; Arthur Guest, J. P. Gundry, Kube, P.G.O., and many other distinguished brethren. Bro. Joseph Parks Gundry, son of the late Prov. G.M.; was appointed P.D.G.M., and the other officers were re-appointed. After the ceremony the Prov. G.M. entertained nearly 300 of the brethren at a magnificent banquet at the mansion of his brother, Sir Ivor Guest, Canford Manor. The dinner was supplied by Messrs. Gunter's in a style which could scarcely be surpassed, and the hospitality of the Prov. G.M. was acknowledged with the most enthusiastic cheers when his health and that of his brother, Sir Ivor Guest, were proposed. Our readers will see a report in detail in another column.

A LABOUR OF LOVE.

We are most glad to call attention to a paragraph in another column by which it is stated that the talented wife of our very esteemed brother, the President of the Board of General Purposes, assisted by a genial band of skilful amateurs, has most kindly, by the successful theatricals at the Opera Comique, obtained for the two great Schools of the Craft, 210 guineas. We thank very much, as all our brethren will do, that kindly company and our "gifted sister."

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

Our second great charity gathering has passed over for 1877, and may be said to have resulted in the return of £10,000, in round numbers, to that most admirable Institution of ours, the Girls' School. There is, as our readers will note an apparent falling off in this amount, as regards the first collection this year, for the Benevolent Institution, but it is one which we think is explicable by several causes, which are just now very active. One of the speakers, (we believe Bro. Binckes), spoke of the positive, comparative and superlative degrees of the charity returns, but in this special case it was rather an Irish way of putting the cart before the horse, unless, indeed, he meant, as he probably did—for Bro. Binckes is very facetious—that the positive represented Bro.

Little, the comparative Bro. Terry, and the superlative himself. Be it so. We shall join in the superlative wish, that Bro. Binckes may be favoured with superlative everything—weather, attendance, results, for his great gala in June. Yes; let us all say—"So mote it be." But do not let us run away, on the other hand, with the idea that the charity returns are going to fall off, (as we are all often alternately over sanguine and over depressed in things Masonic and profane), because the Girls' School festival is a little behind Bro. Terry's magnificent "throw off" for 1877. In the first place, trade has not recently been flourishing, and is still lagging sadly behind, affecting, no doubt, Freemasons as much as any one else. The returns of the Bankers' Clearing-house show this most conclusively, and though they are somewhat formidable to the non-expert in figures, and to those who, as we say, have forgotten their "tallies," yet we think it well to repeat them here, as they make this fact quite clear and conclusive. During the last year these wonderful returns amounted to the enormous sum of four thousand eight hundred and seventy-three millions of pounds sterling. And even this amount, large and marvellous as it seems, is 500 millions less than last year. As trade is slowly recovering, and would recover at once were it not for Eastern complications, we may hope that better days are in store for Freemasons generally. In the next place, we must remember that we have been working at "high pressure" for some time as regards our charities, and that in all human affairs and efforts there is always the ebb and flow, the elevation and the depression, the advance and the retrogression. There is nothing, therefore, abnormal or alarming in this slight falling off. Again, it is a mistake to suppose that the Craft is a very wealthy body. We have many very opulent members, but the great bulk of our fraternity are hard-working bread winners, to whom a life governorship represents a considerable sum. We do not deny that there is yet a virgin soil to be tilled by our good brethren the Secretaries as regards lodges and chapters, and therefore we do not yet see the limit by any means of what may be done for the charities. So that, on the whole, when we call to mind what a few years ago we considered a "noble return," and what zealous brethren have done for the goodly cause of charity, we feel strongly more than ever how much cause we have to be proud of our charitable brotherhood, and we sincerely congratulate the executive of the Institution, and especially our esteemed and worthy brother R. W. Little, on the result of the Girls' School Festival in 1877 which is about £1200 in excess of last year. As regards the returns themselves they are very suggestive indeed. The metropolitan brethren have contributed, (all honour to them), the goodly figure of £5228; West Yorkshire, always active in the cause of charity, and keeping up its high character, has sent up forty-six Stewards and £840; while Middlesex has manfully supported Bro. R. W. Little with £745, and Lancashire, W. Division, has forwarded £310 16s.. Then follow Durham with £286; Sussex, £233 7s. 6d.; Hants, £222 12s.; Norfolk, £209; Dorsetshire, £180 12s.; Warwickshire, £176 5s.; Kent, £175 4s. 6d.; Hertfordshire, £143 16s. 6d.; Gloucestershire, £135 9s.; Wiltshire, £122; Berks and Bucks, send £114 9s.; and Northamptonshire and Hunts, £105. There are several smaller amounts, making up the Provincial returns £4600. The twenty-two returns which are wanting are not likely to make any material difference in the net amount, but, on the whole, we may congratulate the Craft on a return of subscriptions of about £10,000 for our Girls' School.

THE INCREASE OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The proceedings of the General Committee, reported in our last impression, suggest one or two very serious considerations. In the first place we cannot disguise from ourselves, do what we will, and with the best feelings in the world to all concerned, that matters are assuming a rather hazy and incongruous appearance. There is, it seems to us, a forgetfulness of the original reference of the Quarterly Court to the House Committee, and we do not note that any reference whatever has been made to the recent "instruction of another Quarterly Court." We cannot understand, either, why the matter has again to go to the House Committee. The House Committee having reported to the General Committee, for the duty of the General Committee, as we understand it, is to pass the report on to the Quarterly Court, and if the General Committee does not see the need of a Special Court it should say so by distinct resolution. The consequence is, and will be, that the matter will be "hung up" until the next Quarterly Court, and the subject, perhaps, hastily decided, without giving to it that cool, calm consideration which it undoubtedly demands. We regret this, as we feel sure that all that is wanted is a clear business-like statement of needful additions to the School to secure the assent of our liberal Craft. We remark also that in the report reference is again made to the "preparatory school," and it is suggested that the boys from eight to twelve shall be located in the "new buildings," and from twelve to sixteen in the "old." Now, this is an entirely novel suggestion, and we apprehend scholastically unworkable and quite contrary to the normal condition of similar institutions. It is one thing to have a preparatory school in another building, which may be a good thing, and quite needful in the progress of time, and development of the larger school; but it is quite another thing to have the actual school and the preparatory school in the same building and under the same head master. We cannot believe that it will answer, and we know no precedent for it. We are also struck, as all must be, with the financial calculation. On what authority is based the apparently singular statement that you can accommodate 120 boys for £25,000, and seventy for £22,000? We do not profess to understand on what system of probable expenditure such an estimate can be founded. Altogether we feel bound to repeat our humble opinion, previously expressed, that the proposal as originally contemplated for the preparatory school, and the suggestion of the increase at Wood Green, are rather hasty in their inception, and incomplete in details, and require alike architectural estimates and more minute information, in order to be appreciated and understood. We are very glad to see that Bro. Jesse Turner, whose business habits are well known, agrees with the view we have ventured to express, that by a small outlay for dormitory accommodation, £1800 or £2000 (which he says is quite feasible), we may increase the school to 200, for which number it was expressly built, (with additional dormitories), and so with the increase of eleven boys (a very sensible augmentation), the school may be left for the next three years to work on in peace and quiet. It may be then a question of large needful increase. We shall not grudge it if it be really required, but just now, for many reasons, we feel sure that it is most inopportune and unwise to announce fresh building operations, and to make a new appeal to the Craft.

CHARITY VOTING.

We have read the remarks of our able Bro. R. J. Simpson on this very difficult subject with the attention which they deserve, and we feel bound to say, at the outset, that we are like the lady in dispute with her good husband in the old story—we are "not convinced." We think that our respected P.G.C., with the best intentions in the world, over-estimates the "evils" he complains of, and that the "remedy" he suggests would be decidedly "worse than the disease." After giving the very closest attention to the subject in all its bearings, alike theoretically and practically, for years, having incidentally seen more of the minute and actual working of the Masonic voting system than falls to the lot of most of the Craft, we beg at once to demur to Bro. Simpson's theory of great abuses or evils existing in our present charity voting system. Like all purely earthly institutions it has its weak points no doubt, and is susceptible of improvement, for nothing is perfect here. But the "reform" which Bro. Simpson suggests, would simply be revolution, in that it would bring with it evils greater than any now existing, and would put a stop to all personal interest in the charities, and would, as far as the provinces are concerned, simply take away from them the voting privileges for which they have liberally paid and manfully laboured. To delegate to a committee in London, made up only of metropolitan brethren, the whole voting power of selection for the charities—for no provincial brother could afford time or money to attend the needful assemblies of the central committee—would introduce a very questionable novelty, and would practically deprive the candidates of all provincial support or local interest, and would, ipso facto, "kill the golden goose." We say nothing of the breach of faith involved, as regards those who have largely subscribed on the faith of certain well-known rules and regulations. Who of us, seriously speaking, is prepared to delegate to a committee sitting in London, composed if you will of the elite even of the brethren of our Order, either the power of selection or the power of erasure; the right of limiting the number of candidates or recommendation of special cases? The only result of such a system must be—we say it with all respect to our good brother the Past Grand Chaplain—favouritism and partiality. Nay, do we not open the door to possible jobbery of the most malignant character? At the present moment the only evils we know of are counterbalanced by publicity, open voting, and free discussion; but give us the proposed central committee, shadowed out by our kindly critic, and all these requisites will be wanting. In the next place, there are no evils attendant on the present system which cannot be checked by careful supervision, by the action of open discussion and public opinion. The polling days are admirably conducted, and fair play is given to all petitioners and all cases. By no possibility could a central committee advance the cause of comparative or absolute selection, because in the nature of things we defy any one to lay down infallible canons and absolute axioms of what constitutes the "most distressing case." So long as an application for relief is a bona fide and proper one per se, so long has it a "fair claim upon our charity," and in so far as it conforms to our regulations in so far as it is a befitting case to be submitted to the notice of the subscribers. It is impossible to believe that 10 or 20 brethren, however gifted, would be in a better position to select the most absolutely distressing cases than the subscribers, and until we can agree upon some distinct conditions of ineligibility, all cases which conform to our regulations, and are in themselves prima facie proper and justifiable, have an absolute right to be entertained. On one point only do we agree with Bro. Simpson, viz., that in the original reception of the case the committee of the institution should make a little more enquiry, and require a little more evidence of absolute poverty! Why should not a special paper of questions, be prepared by each charity and made a condition of acceptance? This is a common pre-requisite in all well conducted charities. The questions need be few, but they might be pertinent and go to the root of the matter, the distinct need of eleemosynary aid. For, as we recently observed, the greatest evils lie in the want of conscientiousness in those who put forward applicants for relief, when their family or relations might fairly spare the funds of the charity. But how this evil is to be remedied by our good Past Grand Chaplain's proposals we do not profess to see or understand. We feel sure that the general feeling of the Craft will be to "let well alone," inasmuch as the evils in our Masonic charity voting are so few that they can very easily be removed by the public opinion of the Craft, while the "cure" proposed for the imaginary malady savours, in our humble opinion, something like those imaginative advertisements, which skilful empirics put forth for the attraction and edification of the easy-going and credulous. We deprecate in conclusion the use of great names as an "argumentum ad rem," or "ad hominem," as we feel strongly that we all have reason and intellect given to us by T.G.A.O.T.U. for good purposes and proper use, and we decline to submit our own clear perceptions of what is needful and right, to any "Pope," or any number of "Popes" in the world! Thanking our worthy brother for the kindly enunciation of his views, we regret that we can neither record our agreement with his argument, nor our approval of his suggestions, though made, we know and believe, with the best motives, and with the most fraternal feelings. We will next week go into the question of exchange of votes, to which some objection is raised.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

H.R.H. PRINCE LEOPOLD.
To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

By a singular error you do not seem to be aware that H.R.H. Prince Leopold is W.M. of the time honoured Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2. H.R.H. was elected W.M. February, 1876, and is still W.M., our esteemed Bro. Philbrick, G.C., being the Dep. Master.

I am, yours obediently and fraternally,

A MEMBER OF THE ANTIQUITY.

[We have to apologise for the error, which certainly ought not to have appeared in the Freemason.—Ed.]

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.
To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Permit me to contradict the statement contained in your report of one of the speeches at the recent festival of this Institution, that I was not present on that occasion. With the exception of the forenoon, when I was engaged with the noble Chairman at his lordship's house, I was at Freemasons' Hall the whole of the day and evening, examining and arranging the Stewards' lists, in which work I received the able assistance of Bros. T. W. White and R. B. Webster. These brethren accompanied me into the dining hall where Bro. White kindly announced the lists, in consequence of my voice being weak.

I should not trouble you with this correction were it not for the fact that the statement has somewhat startled some of my friends.

Yours truly and fraternally,

R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

EXCLUSION OF THE HEBREWS.
To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With pleasure I make you the following statements, as you wish:—

About ten years ago some German Grand Lodges denied not only the initiation of Jewish aspirants, but also the right of visiting the lodges to brethren of Jewish faith. It was the first step, when all German Grand Lodges conceded the right of visitation. The next position was gained when the Grand Lodge of Concord at Darmstadt, the independent Lodge Minerva at Leipzig, and the Grand Lodge of Royal York at Berlin altered the sections in the constitution which prohibited the initiation of non-Christians. A new position was won, when the German Grand Lodge League (Grand Masters' Union) voted and published a series of fundamental principles, which should be a common basis for all German lodges. In this declaration there was no profession of faith required for admission into pure ancient Freemasonry is an universal brotherhood in the sense of the Old Charges of 1723.

Notwithstanding all these progresses, there were some daughter lodges of Royal York, in which all Jewish candidates were blackballed, as they did not like to have any Jewish brother in the ranks of their members. But this is, as you will perceive, only a local prejudice, as the law of Royal York does not hinder the initiation, and a great many of its lodges have initiated Jewish candidates and affiliated Jewish brethren.

At present there are only two Grand Lodges which rest on a unimasonic basis—viz., the Grand Mother Lodge of Three Globes and the Grand Countries Lodge (Swedish Rite) at Berlin.

At the annual Grand Lodge Conference of the Grand Mother Lodge of Three Globes, the Jewish question was discussed three times, and twice the majority of lodges voted for repealing of the famous section 165 of the constitution, without success, as some brethren voted against it and so prevented the necessary majority of two-thirds. We hope for better success this month, as the great majority of lodges, and the whole of the Grand Lodge Directory will vote in the sense of Masonic universality. In the Grand Lodge of Three Globes the matter is only a question of time, for the abrogation of the section which demands a two-thirds majority.

Of the Grand Countries Lodge (Swedish Rite), which rests on thorough unimasonic principles, laws, and traditions, or, as Bro. Schiffmann has proved in accordance with the statements of my own ("History of Freemasonry") "only by fraud." I say of the Grand Countries Lodge nothing is to be hoped, as it is intolerant in all its convictions and traditions, and neither Masonic in doctrine, nor in law, nor in its historical fundamentals, nor in its usages. Founded by a Masonic swindler (Von Zinnendorf) without any legal warrant, this Grand Lodge is the worthy rival of the Roman Catholic Church and of Papacy; it is a shame of our brotherhood and the permanent source of discord and scandal within our holy circle. Some years ago I declared that I could not acknowledge it as a regular, just and perfect Grand Lodge, but as the very contrary of all Masonry, and some months ago I made the proposition that the German Grand Lodge should no longer acknowledge it, and have no connection with it at all.

This Grand Countries Lodge has excluded from the whole fraternity the venerated and merited Bro. Schiffmann, because he has written some historical articles of great value, but the German Grand Lodges have not acknowledged this unjust verdict of exclusion, and have nominated Bro. Schiffmann as honorary member.

So, I hope, you will now be clear, that only the Grand Countries Lodge (Swedish Rite) is to be expelled from the fraternity.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. G. FIMBEL.

PALESTINE EXPLORATION FUND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A short time since I accidentally met with Mr. Emanuel Deutsch's Report on the Operations of the Palestine Exploration Fund, and I was so much interested in perusing his observations on the singular marks discovered on the foundation courses of the great wall of underground Jerusalem, that no apology is necessary for introducing them to the notice of your readers and the Craft in general. These marks were discovered ninety feet below the present surface of the city, and Mr. Deutsch in reference to them says:—"I have come to the following conclusions. 1. The signs cut or painted were on the stones when they were first laid in their present places. 2. They do not represent any 'inscription.' 3. They are Phœnician." He considers them to be partly letters, partly numerals, and partly special Masons' or quarry signs. Some of them are recognisable at once as well-known Phœnician characters; others, hitherto unknown in Phœnician epigraphy, he was able to identify on undoubted antique Phœnician structures in Syria such as the primitive substructure of the harbour at Sidon. He also observed these marks on the bevelled stones taken from ancient edifices and built into later work throughout Phœnicia. A striking and obvious instance of this is the ruined citadel standing above Saida, the stones of which are old Phœnician stones immured in their present place at subsequent periods. These stones teem with "fantasies" identical with those of Jerusalem. The signs have never been noticed before, Mr. Deutsch having been the first to point them out to the excavator of the Ashmunazar Sarcophagus. He further states that although he found extremely well preserved painted frescoes in Phœnician tombs, all the stone marks just alluded to were cut, not painted.

Mr. W. K. Loftes, in his "Researches in Chaldea and Lusiana," gives six columns of builders' marks found by him in "Shushan the Palace," now Shush. Those he gives are from composition bricks, and the marks, when not scratched in the wet clay while the composition was soft, are framed with dark-coloured enamel, or are laid on in glaze. It also appears that marks of a similar kind occur upon many ancient stone buildings in the East, as at Takte Suleyman, near Persepolis; also at the base of the sculptured rock of Bisutun; in blocks near the Zenderund, and in the garden of the Chehil Situn at Isfahan; and especially on the walls of Al Hadhr, near Mosul. It is not improbable that those observed in the Chehil Situn were derived from more ancient structures erected by Adeshur Bubezan, A.D. 230. With regard to others of similar kind elsewhere, it has been suggested that they are the marks of Chaldean masons. However this may be, it is curious to find them existing on edifices far apart, and erected at various periods from 335 B.C. to the end of the sixteenth century of our era.

In the ninth plate of Dr. Aveling's "History of Roche Abbey," founded in 1147, there are fifty-nine Masons' marks, very clearly given, all found at Roche.

In my reading I have also found some very interesting information about Freemasons as ecclesiastical builders, but my present communication has already encroached so much on your valuable space that I must defer this subject to a future occasion if you will kindly allow me space for the purpose.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. E. N. No. 766.

A QUERY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Is a respectable and well-conducted man ineligible to be made a Freemason on account of his being illegitimate by birth?

Yours fraternally,

ENQUIRER.

[Undoubtedly, by the old rules of the operative guilds the candidate must be born in wedlock, and be the issue of a lawful marriage; and the "filius nullius" was inadmissible. The rule of the Craft is adverse to the reception of all not born of "honest parentage."—Ed.]

MASONIC CLUBS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Would you kindly inform me, through the medium of your journal, if there are in or about London what are called Masonic Clubs, as I am told there are many.

A Masonic Club, I am told, is a Lodge of Instruction held without a warrant on Sabbath evenings by brethren that cannot attend Lodges of Instruction, with a warrant, during the week, and are called Masonic Clubs because neither the M.W.G.M., nor any private lodge, will issue a warrant for a Lodge of Instruction to hold its meetings on the Sabbath day.

If you would kindly state if such meetings are held by the brethren in London I would feel greatly obliged.

Yours fraternally,

T. B.

N.B.—The Masonic Club held at 101, Queen Victoria-street, I presume is altogether of a different nature to those to which I refer.—T.B.

THE MACE FUND.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We have much pleasure in announcing that the result of our appeal on behalf of the above fund has been so far satisfactory as to have enabled Mr. Mace to have studied at Queen's College, Cambridge, for the last six months.

He has passed his preliminary examination, and will be sufficiently prepared by a few months' further study to undergo his final examination prior to presenting himself for ordination.

We feel that, having gone thus far, the brethren will not allow the fund to lack support for so worthy an object as assisting one of our Masonic boys, who, having carried off the silver medal and Maybury prize at our school, pursued his studies at his own expense, after his day's work was done, in the evening classes of King's College, London, and there, by hard work, gained the Divinity prize, several first-class certificates, and the associateship of that college.

We feel, therefore, justified in appealing for further subscriptions, which we hope to receive early, as the fund at present is entirely exhausted.

We are, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. PORTLOCK DADSON, Treasurer.

FREDERICK BINCKES, Secretary.

THE STRUGGLE IN FRANCE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Referring to the leading article in the Freemason of the 12th inst. on "The Struggle in France," I would beg leave to remind you that for very many years Craft lodges have existed and worked in France under two separate jurisdictions, namely, the Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and the Grand Orient. Now, whatever the Grand Orient may think fit to decree, or its lodges to practise, the Supreme Council and the lodges under its jurisdiction, are bound to acknowledge the Great Architect of the Universe, and this was most explicitly acknowledged by the delegates sent from that body to represent it at the Lausanne Congress in 1875.

It is now as ever the rule of the Rite.

In Belgium the Supreme Council possesses the undoubted power of establishing Craft lodges under its jurisdiction, but for weighty reasons that body was anxious to follow the example of the Supreme Council of England, and leave the government of the Craft degrees to their Grand Orient. Should the Grand Orient of Belgium, however, follow the example of France, it is possible that the Supreme Council, which also is bound by the treaty of Lausanne, will assert its rights and powers.

Should England, therefore, be forced to cease Masonic relations with one or both of the Grand Orient and the lodges under their jurisdiction, there is no reason why the large number of Craft lodges working under the authority of the Supreme Council of France should be included in the same measure, nor why it should be extended to those which exist, or may be established under the Supreme Council of Belgium.

Would it not, on the contrary, be but right to extend the hand of fellowship to those Masonic bodies which are combating for the fundamental principles of Freemasonry, and who acknowledge the Deity even as we do ourselves.

As many lodges will thus exist which English Masons can conscientiously visit, there can be no valid reason or necessity for petitioning the Grand Master of England to establish English lodges in foreign jurisdictions.

I am, dear Sir and Brother,

ONE OF THE ENGLISH DELEGATES TO THE LAUSANNE CONGRESS.

[We do not profess to understand how the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite anywhere can claim to establish Craft lodges, though we are glad to note the statement of our esteemed correspondent.—Ed.]

FREEMASONRY IN PERU.

The following has been forwarded to us for publication:—

"An answer to Mr. Artidi Martin's extracts from the 'Bulletin' of the so-called Supreme Council of Peru, pages 137 to 139, of the Chaine d'Union for March."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I take the liberty of addressing you under this fraternal title, although you do not deign to use it in your extracts when referring to me I beg to inform you that I am no doctor, but merely a brother Mason.

After extolling the Peruvian brethren with complimentary gallantry, for which accept my thanks, although I do not hail from the section of the fraternity that you defend, or whose publications have served you for extracting your information, but rather representing the Grand Orient of Peru, in the name of which I permit myself the liberty of addressing you now. Allow me, as a Mason that should always speak and write the truth, to protest also, as a resident of Lima for the last twenty-three years, and have never been absent from this city during that period for six months in succession, against your assertion of having seen in this capital, in the processions, women dancing before the same, disguised and masked (travestis et masqués) in the streets of Lima, to the airs of dances from "Traviata," or any other tune or tunes.

Probably you may have seen the Indians on some festive occasion, masked and disguised, dancing in the streets in commemoration of some of their ancient usages, but it appears strange that during my long residence here I have never seen the burlesques that you refer to in the religious processions in Lima.

Notwithstanding the state of ignorance of the population of Peru, they have not found a "Miraculous Virgin of Lourdes," nor the salvation of their souls by the celebrated waters of that place, which is imported here from France.

Your astonishment at learning that from the Entered Apprentice's Degree to the Thirty-third pays into the treasury of the so-called Supreme Council 4743 francs, may be increased when you learn that although 10,000 Masons have been initiated in Peru, the aforesaid body has not got a foot of ground they can call their own, nor even a house on lease, and this after thirty years' administration, whereas a symbolic lodge (Peace and Concord, No. 445) installed ten or twelve years since by your humble brother, in union with two others in Callao, have built a Masonic Hall which has cost them 100,000 francs.

I must request you to take note that the majority of the members of the so-called Supreme Council of the Thirty-third and last degree of the A. and A. S. Rite in Peru are foreigners, and the Peruvian brethren cannot be blamed for the sins of others, as Dr. Antonio Sausa Ferreira (Sov. G. Com.) is a Portuguese, and his son-in-law, Richard H. Hartley, says he is an Englishman; these two worthy Sov. G.J.G.G. have managed to get and keep hold of that lodge, and as to the funds, all I can say is that they have not five hundred francs in the world, either in cash, stock, or valuables.

You will find this corroborated by reading the bulletin, No. 23, of the Grand Orient of Peru, which I have the honour to forward by this mail to your address, and therein you will see, pages 490, 492, 503 to 509, why the Grand Orient of Peru still exists, the Bulls of the body that receive its life from the Grand Orient not producing any effect against us.

The Masonic Hall in Lima has existed in the Calle de San Francisco since time immemorial, say for the last thirty years; the address printed on the official paper of the Grand Secretariat of the Grand Orient of Peru is that of San Francisco. Probably this may be the reason why the brethren that publish the Calendar of the Grand Orient of France may have supposed that all regular Masonic bodies in Peru held their communications and meetings in the Lima Masonic Hall, Calle de San Francisco. But I appeal to those illustrious brethren to say whether I ever gave them the address, as you appear to insinuate.

The decree that you mention from the spurious bulletin in question, of the building of a Masonic Hall, will never produce any other effect than the consignment of it to printed pages.

Referring to your last extract about the History of Freemasonry in Peru, I have the honour of being its author and compiler from the archives of the Grand Orient, and that the second and last parts of that history were never seen by the members of that so-called Supreme Council till they saw the former in the pages of the Chaine d'Union, and will read the last part in the Freemason when published. This is not the only one of my compilations, that the said brethren have laid hold of, having others belonging to yours fraternally,

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 1lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism or Neuralgia Affections.—No diseases are more frequent, painful, or difficult to cure than these. From their attack no tissue of the human body is exempt, no age, sex, or calling secure. It is a blessing, however, to know that all these sufferings may be completely and expeditiously subdued by Holloway's remedies. The Pills much assist in banishing the tendency to rheumatism and similar painful disorders; whilst the Ointment cures the local ailments, the Pills remove the constitutional disturbance and regulate the impaired function of every organ throughout the human body. The cure is neither temporary nor superficial, but permanent and complete, and the disease rarely recurs, so perfect has been the purification performed by these searching preparations.—A.D.V.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF NEW ZEALAND.

The ceremony of installing Bro. William Simmons Hammond, P.M., as District Grand Master of Tasmania, and of opening the District Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England, took place in the Masonic Hall on Tuesday, 27th February, 1877. The dais was reserved for the Worshipful Masters, Past Masters, and other members of the District Grand Lodge; the west end of the hall was set apart for the Master Masons. Admission to non-members of the District Grand Lodge was by card, and the proceedings, which were on a grand scale, were, of course, of a semi-private character. The number of brethren present was about 120.

Out of 27 who could claim to sit in the District Grand Lodge, 23 signed their names in the attendance book. Among those present were the following:—Lodge 536, Hobart Town: Worshipful Master, Dr. Huston; Past Masters, C. Toby, F. H. Wise, L. Susman, John Clark, W. A. B. Jamieson, and W. H. Burgess, jun.; Wardens, R. Fitzgerald and John Perkins, jun.—Lodge 618, Launceston: Past Masters, J. F. Hobkirk, W. R. Davey, G. Smith, R. M. Johnston, R. J. Sadler, and C. W. Rocher.—Lodge 801, Hobart Town: Worshipful Master, T. H. Magrath; Past Masters, Rev. R. D. P. Harris, H. Nelson, J. R. Scott; Acting Senior Warden, T. M. Evans; Junior Warden, G. Richardson.—Irish Lodge, 345: Worshipful Master, B. Webb; Past Masters, J. T. Robertson, S. Smith, C. H. Miller, and R. Hood. In addition to these, there were several other Masters, Past Masters, and officers of both the Irish and Scotch Constitutions. The brethren all appeared in evening dress, and full Masonic (Craft) regalia; the officers of lodges wore the insignia of their respective offices.

The doors were opened at 5 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock they were closed. The authority of the R.W. the District Grand Master for opening the District Grand Lodge having been read, it was proposed, seconded, and carried that Bro. P.M. Toby act as Installing Master; Bro. P.M. Wise acted as Senior Warden; Bro. P.M. Susman as Junior Warden; and Bro. P.M. Clarke as Sword-Bearer.

The District Grand Lodge was then opened in form, and an announcement was made by the sound of the trumpet, by Bro. P.M. Smith, as Herald, that the R.W. the District Grand Master desired admission, to receive the benefit of installation, which having been duly reported, and his patent of appointment received and read, a deputation, consisting of Bros. P. Masters Jamieson, Scott, Davey, and Smith, the Chaplain, and four Stewards withdrew, for the purpose of introducing the Grand Master, and re-entered in the following order:—Two Stewards, bearing the Grand Master's insignia (apron, collar, and jewel) on a cushion; the four Past Masters, the Chaplain, the D. Grand Master, and two Stewards.

As the procession moved up the centre of the hall, the organ, at which Bro. H. W. Chapman presided, played a march. The D. Grand Master having been introduced by the Past Masters, was conducted to a seat on the left of the Presiding Master, and presented for installation. The Installing Officer addressed him in prescribed form on the importance of the office to which he had been appointed. He was then requested to kneel while the Chaplain offered up the installation prayer; and, still kneeling he was obligated by the Installing Officer, after which he was clothed and invested with the insignia of his office and conducted to the chair. The Herald sounded the trumpet, and Bro. P.M. Wise proclaimed the installation, and the brethren saluted the Deputy Grand Master according to ancient form, passing round the lodge, the organ playing the march from "Eli."

The Deputy Grand Master then appointed his Deputy District Grand Master, Bro. P.M. George Smith, who was obligated, proclaimed, and saluted according to ancient form. The D. Grand Master appointed the other officers of the D. Grand Lodge for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. F. H. Wise, District Grand Senior Warden; L. Susman, D. Grand Junior Warden; Rev. R. D. P. Harris, D. Grand Chaplain; C. Toby, D. Grand Secretary; W. A. B. Jamieson, D. Grand Senior Deacon; C. W. Rocher, D. Grand Junior Deacon; J. A. Ferguson, D. Grand Director of Ceremonies; John Clark, D. Grand Sword-bearer; Geo. Beaumont, D. Grand Tyler; Jno. Hamilton, D. Grand Steward for Lodge 536; W. R. Davey for Lodge 611; and G. W. Fletcher for Lodge 801. Bro. W. H. Burgess, jun., was elected by the D. Grand Lodge to be the D. Grand Treasurer. All these officers, with the exception of the D.G.D.C., were severally invested with the insignia of office. Bros. Jno. Hamilton and T. M. Evans were appointed as Auditors, and the following brethren as a Committee of General Purposes, viz., the Senior and Junior D. Grand Wardens, the D. Grand Chaplain, D. Grand Treasurer, D. Grand Secretary, Senior and Junior D. Grand Deacons; G. F. Huston, W.M.; T. H. Magrath, W.M.; J. Perkins, jun., and R. Fitzgerald, Wardens of Lodge 536.

The D. Grand Lodge was then closed in due form, and the brethren retired, the processional march being repeated.

At eight o'clock there was a grand banquet in the hall, about 110 members being present, on the invitation of the D. Grand Master. Everything was prepared in splendid style, the caterer being Bro. Currie, of the Club Hotel; the wines were of really first-class quality, and highly praised. The D. Grand Master presided, supported on the right by W.M.s, and on the left by the P.M.s, the vice-chair being occupied by Bro. P.M. Wise. After the removal of the cloths, the toasts of "The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England," and "His Excellency the Governor," were proposed by the Chairman, and enthusiastically received. Bro. F. H. Wise, in proposing "The Right Worshipful District Grand Master," said: Right Worshipful Master and brethren—After some twenty-three years' active experience in Freemasonry in Tasmania, to be permitted the pleasure of witnessing such a gathering as assembled in lodge this evening to do honour to you, Worshipful Sir, was indeed truly gratifying. The toast placed in my hands at so short a notice is one that I cannot render that justice to which it deserves upon the present occasion. Upon so memorable an event I could have wished, had time been allowed me, to offer for the information of this younger brethren a short history of Freemasonry in the colony, but, as I cannot do so, I must content myself with recalling to mind a few of the events which have passed under my immediate experience. It will be in the recollection of some of our older brethren how, years back, we had to carry on the good work of Freemasonry under serious difficulties. Many will remember occasions during the last twenty years when we could scarcely gather enough members to open a lodge, and others will recollect when for a time we did not meet at all. But, thanks to the indomitable perseverance of a few brethren, who, knowing they were associated in a good cause, strove manfully to preserve our ancient and honourable institution, and to tide it over the difficulties which surrounded it, happy am I, Right Worshipful Sir, that those difficulties have been satisfactorily surmounted, and that instead of meeting few in number and in an unsuitable building, we now hold our lodges in a hall which is the admiration of our visitors, and in which our brethren can assemble in numbers with a feeling of honourable pride and comfort. (Cheers.) The Fund of Benevolence, contributed to by the lodges in this city, has done much good, and is now, owing mainly to the continued exertions of its energetic Secretary, in a most flourishing position. (Applause.) Yours, indeed, Right Worshipful Sir, must have been a pleasing duty this evening to preside over so many brethren occupying high social positions, not only in the city, but also in the northern capital and in other parts of the island. When I observe that besides the brethren who were to-night invited to your District Grand Lodge, the attendance included nearly the whole of those entitled to that distinction, I cannot but feel that you, Right Worshipful Sir, must be satisfied that the honourable position which His Royal Highness the M.W. Grand Master of England has been pleased to bestow has fallen upon one justly considered by his brethren worthy of precedence. The power now placed in your hands, Right Worshipful Sir, will, I feel assured, be conscientiously exercised for the general benefit of the Craft; and should differences of opinion arise amongst Masons, I believe all here present have sufficient confidence in your ability and good judgment to bow to your ruling, and cheerfully abide by your decision. In conclusion, I earnestly hope that henceforth a brighter era in Freemasonry is dawning upon us, and that those brethren who to-night have assisted in the ceremony of your installation will all combine, under your guidance, in forwarding the cause of Masonry in Tasmania. The pleasing duty is mine now, Right Worshipful Sir, of asking the brethren to unite with me in wishing you health and happiness and a long and prosperous Masonic career.

The toast was received with Masonic honours and heartily responded to.

The District Grand Master, in reply, returned thanks for the manner in which the toast had been received, and also for the kind and considerate remarks of the proposer. He was fully sensible of the great honour that had been conferred upon him, and he trusted that he should realise the hopes that were entertained respecting his performance of the duties entrusted to him; at all events, he should endeavour to exercise the power he had for the general benefit of the Craft, and he knew that he should have the support of his brethren. He could endorse all that had been said by Bro. Wise concerning the Craft in this colony, and he trusted with him that Masonry would progress in Tasmania more than it had ever done before.

The remaining toasts were: "The Deputy D. Grand Master and Officers of the District Grand Lodge," proposed by the Chairman, and responded to by Bro. Smith, D.D. G.M.; "The W.M.s and P.M.s of Tasmanian Lodges under the E.C.," proposed by Bro. J. T. Robertson, P.M., and responded to by Bro. Huston, W.M.; "The W.M.s and P.M.s under other Constitutions," proposed by the D.D. Grand Master, and responded to by Bro. J. T. Robertson, P.M., and Bro. Conway, P.M., for the Irish Constitution; "Our Visitors," proposed by Bro. F. H. Wise, and responded to by Bro. Conway, P.M.; and "The Ladies," proposed by Bro. C. W. Rocher, P.M., and responded to by Bro. Coates.

The entertainment was interspersed with songs by Bros. Dr. Smart, Ferguson, Chapman, R. J. Harris, Rogers, Moir, and others, Bro. Packer presiding at the piano; and a most enjoyable evening was closed by the company singing the National Anthem.

ROBERT BURNS LODGE, S.C.

Thursday, the 22nd February, 1877, will long be remembered in the annals of Christchurch Masonry, for on the afternoon of that day the first lodge, holding under the ancient Scottish rite, established in the Canterbury capital, was consecrated to the service of the Craft. A large number of brethren assembled at the St. Augustine Lodge room, and the lodge was duly opened by Bro. Donald, District Grand Master of E.C., kindly acting as deputy for Bro. J. Hislop, the Provincial Grand Master of New Zealand, Scotch Constitution. After the opening ceremonies were concluded Bro. Donald addressed the brethren assembled in a very eloquent manner, pointing out to them the importance of the step which they were about to take in establishing a new lodge devoted to the sacred principles of Freemasonry. After the charter and dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Scotland had been read, the ceremony of consecration was proceeded with, and the Robert Burns Lodge was opened in ample form. The following officers were then installed by the W.D.D. G.M.:—Bros. Jas. P. Parker, R.W.M.; W. M. Smith, W.D.M.; W. Ferguson, W.S.M.; L. A. Elerig, W.S.W.; J. Johnson W.J.W.; Fulton, Treas.; Spence, Sec.; R. Brown, S.D.; W. McLean, J.D.; T. J. Newbury, I.G.; R. McLean, O.G. A banquet was held in the evening. Songs, recitations and toasts were given with great spirit, and the company present seemed to enjoy themselves thoroughly. A large number of visiting brethren attended the opening and the banquet, and several country lodges were represented on the occasion. The only Dunedin Lodge represented was the Celtic, S.C., the representative of which offered "hearty good wishes" for the success of the Robert Burns, on behalf of the Dunedin Masons.

Reviews.

OFFICIAL DIRECTORY FOR THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CORNWALL, Edited by Bro. W. J. Hughan, P.M., P.G.D., P. Prov. G. Sec. Cornwall.

We are glad to note that this useful little work is in its seventh year of publication, and edited by our well-known and able Bro. W. J. Hughan, comes before us with every sign of vitality and utility. It contains a great deal of information in respect to the province of Cornwall, alike most valuable and needful, and we always hail its appearance, in common with many other equally serviceable Provincial Directories and Calendars. The only one addition we should venture to announce is the last "Annual Balance Sheet." It seems that there are in Cornwall twenty-seven Lodges and 1467 Masons, an average of sixty-one members per lodge. There are also nine chapters. We thank Bro. Hughan for his little work.

DAME EUROPA'S REMONSTRANCE AND HER ULTIMATUM. Kerby and Endean, 180, Oxford-street.

We have received this little brochure, which we have read with much interest, and which we see has already reached a tenth edition. Its very reasonable price of 6d. will command for it, we feel sure, a ready sale and a large circulation. At this time, when the East is once again likely to become the theatre of stirring events, and war has again loosed its angry "dogs," all that fixes attention on that remarkable portion of the world, has its deep interest for the reflecting and the discriminating. We agree with the view of the writer of this little "piece d'occasion," whosoever that writer may be, and we sincerely trust that the result of this great struggle may tend to the pacification of Europe, and the liberty of oppressed populations. It is quite true, high time, indeed, in our humble opinion, that such atrocities as have been perpetrated in Bulgaria should be put an end to, and Europe has a right to demand that if the Turk is unable to pursue his abnormal position in Europe, for the reign of a Mahomedan victor in Europe is practically a solecism, that Christian populations shall be protected and preserved alike in safety and honour and in peaceful progress, and under good government. How far it may be true that the time has come that the Ottomans should retreat to their original country, we do not pause to enquire, nor do we profess to lay down, as the slim logic of facts, what will probably overthrow all the dispatches of diplomats and all the supposition of politicians. We do not, however, believe that the balance of power depends on the maintenance of the Turks in Europe. At the same time, we feel satisfied that the dominant interests of Great Britain in all that especially concerns the East, will be carefully watched over, and gallantly upheld, by Her Majesty's Government. We commend this little pamphlet to the notice of our readers. It is most clearly written and admirably expressed.

THE SCOTTISH FREEMASON.

We greet No. 7 with much pleasure, and we sincerely trust that the Scottish Freemason has a long career of usefulness before it. If the Scottish brethren will accord to our zealous publisher the support he so fairly asks from them, we have no doubt but that the Scottish Freemason will soon "pay its way." We see many papers day by day, and we know of none that excels it in neatness of appearance and the thorough workmanlike style in which it is produced. It promises to be a very valuable and readable journal.

MASONIC MUSIC.—New Masonic Anthem. "Hail thou Source of Love." Manchester: J. S. Jones and Co., 44, Corporation-street.

Bro. J. Batchelder, W.M. of Lodge of Truth, 1458, Manchester, has issued this very effective anthem, which he has dedicated to Bro. Lieut.-Col. Le Gendre N. Starkie, R.W.P.G.M. for E. Lancashire. We beg to call the attention of our brethren to it, for the purpose of consecration and church service, as they will find it alike most suitable and seasonable for such interesting occasions.

THE MASONIC ADVOCATE OF INDIANAPOLIS.

The Masonic Advocate of Indianapolis is in its eleventh volume. We wish it all success. The Masonic Advocate is most interesting to Masons, and we read it regularly, and "pleasure and profit" are the "mutual result."

The Globe states that Lord Zetland has intimated that with the sum, amounting to between £4000 and £5000, which he has received as compensation for the abolition of patronage in Orkney and Shetland, he intends to found several bursaries in connection with the Faculty of Arts in Edinburgh University. His lordship, in so disposing of the money, has in view the advancement of the educational interests of those islands, of which the intending bursars must be natives.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC MEETINGS.

The Editor will be glad to receive notice from Secretaries of Craft Lodges, Royal Arch Chapters, Mark Lodges, Preceptories, Conclaves, &c., of any change in place or time of meeting.

THE SCOTTISH FREEMASON.—We have received the first number of this new periodical, which is very creditably got up in style and contents. Several attempts were hitherto made to establish a Masonic periodical in Scotland, but after a short time the journal ceased to exist. Bro. George Kenning, the spirited proprietor of the London Freemason, has established the new paper, and there is not the slightest doubt that it will keep its place in Masonic literature, and we sincerely hope, for the honour of Scottish Freemasonry, that the brethren in Scotland will support the new journal. There are a great many Masonic irregularities which require looking after in Scotland, and the discussion of these matters will meet with greater attention if ventilated in a journal on the spot than in one at a distance.—The Masonic Record of Western India.

TWO POUNDS REWARD.—Lost, on the evening of the 8th inst., on either the North London or Metropolitan District Railways, a Japanned-tin Case, containing Masonic clothing, wrapped in brown paper.—Apply to the Inspector, Mansion House Station, Metropolitan District Railway.

TO ARCHITECTS.—Wanted, by a Brother, a Situation as Assistant (is a good draughtsman, a tasteful designer, perspective, able quantity surveyor); or as Clerk of Works (had a large and varied practical experience); or to combine the two. Good references, &c. salary moderate.—Address S. T., 25, Gloucester-st., Middlesbrough-on-Tees.

BRO. FRANK ELMORE begs to announce that he still continues to provide his well-known Musical Entertainments at the Banquets of the City Companies, Masonic Lodges, Concerts, Private Parties, and Charitable Institutions. The best available talent engaged. Books of Words printed, and all arrangements completed at a few hours' notice.—For Terms, Address to his residence, 16, Fernhead-road St. Peter's Park, W.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 9th inst. at the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, St. Leonard-gate. Bro. R. Taylor, the W.M., presided, and there was a very good attendance of members and visiting brethren. The lodge having been opened with solemn prayer, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Melrose having answered the usual questions, was entrusted and retired, and the lodge having been opened in the Second Degree he was re-admitted, and duly passed to the Second Degree by the W.M., the S.W. presenting the working tools. The lodge was then resumed in the First Degree, and a unanimous ballot having been recorded for Mr. Edmund Johnson, he was initiated into the mysteries of the Craft by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the J.W. A candidate was proposed for admission at the next meeting, after which the usual proclamations were made, which elicited hearty good wishes from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was subsequently closed in peace, love, and harmony.

WOOLWICH.—Nelson Lodge (No. 700).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Masonic Hall, William-street. Bro. T. Butt, W.M., presided, and was supported by the following officers: Bro. T. Ward, P.M.; C. Hobson, P.M.; G. Crawford, P.M.; E. Bowles, P.M.; S. Waters, S.W.; A. C. Woodley, J.W.; J. Henderson, Sec.; J. Warren, S.D.; E. B. Hobson, J.D.; C. Cooke, Org.; W. McCoy, D.C.; and B. Norman, Tyler. Among the visitors were Bros. W. Weston, W.M. 1536; W. Hogg, P.M. 1349; G. Spinks, S.W. 1536; W. A. Watkins, 1536; J. Frankling, 913; and C. Jolly, 913. The business before the lodge consisted of the balloting for as joining member of Bro. J. Epsom, of Lodge 1107, and Mr. J. Epsom as an initiate. Both being approved of, Bro. John Epsom was formally introduced, and Mr. James Epsom duly initiated into Freemasonry. Bros. Glocock and Skillen were then passed, and Bros. Lacey and Hillier raised to the Sublime Degree. The three ceremonies were, as usual in this lodge, splendidly worked. After two charitable appropriations had been made the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshments. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been most enthusiastically responded to, Bro. Ward, the I.P.M., proposed the toast of the W.M. in flattering terms, and Bro. Butt in reply said he fancied Bro. Ward had been listening to an old song in which it said "His virtues were so rare," and attributed to him virtues that he was afraid he did not possess; however, he trusted that during his year of office, that had now so nearly expired, he had done all he could, as Bro. Ward said he had, for the benefit and welfare of the lodge. "The Healths of the Joining Brother and Initiate" followed, Bro. J. Epsom responding. "The Visitors," coupled with the names of Bros. Weston and Jolly, followed, and was responded to by those brethren as well as by Bro. Osbourne, 387, I.C., Malta, who gave a very interesting account of a visit he had paid to an Italian lodge, and the earnest way in which the work was carried out in that lodge. To a very cordial toast of "The Past Masters," Bros. Ward and Crawford replied, the latter regretting the unavoidable absence of P.M. Dawson, their esteemed Treasurer, through domestic affliction; and after "The Health of the Officers" had been proposed, drank, and responded to, the Tyler's toast concluded the business of the meeting.

EGGLES.—Bridgewater Lodge (No. 1213).—On Thursday evening, the 10th inst., the ceremony of installation was rehearsed at this lodge by Bro. J. Gibb Smith, P.P.G.J.W. East Lancashire. The lodge met at its usual trysting place, Bro. J. Pearson's, the Cross Keys Hotel, Eccles, and about seventy brethren, including visitors, were present. Bro. J. Gibb Smith having opened the lodge in the different degrees, proceeded with the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. Edward Distin Wills, a brother well known for his probity and high character among the members of the Craft in Yorkshire and Lancashire, the whole ceremony being given beautifully. The W.M. invested his officers as follows:—Bros. Harry Lynill, S.W.; Chas. V. Brown, J.W.; J. Cater (Worsley), Chap.; W. Bowden, P.M., Treas.; Jas. Shepley, Sec.; H. E. N. Puenjer, S.D.; J. H. Hassall, J.D.; John Willis, I.G.; T. Cavanah, P.M., D.C.; G. Wait, Isaac Sim, and W. Powell, Stewards; Stanislaus and Brenner, Musical Directors. A banquet afterwards followed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts being duly honoured.

WEST DERBY.—Pembroke Lodge (No. 1299).—The usual monthly meeting of the members of this suburban lodge was held at Rawlinson's Hotel, West Derby, near Liverpool, on Thursday, the 17th inst. Bro. W. S. Vines, P.M., P.G.S., the W.M., presided, and amongst other brethren present were Bros. R. Bennett, I.P.M.; P. Macmildrow, P.M., P.G. Pur., Treas.; J. Capell, S.W.; J. Sellar, P.M., acting as J.W.; T. G. Fisher, Sec., &c. There was a good representation of visitors. Mr. H. Bloomer and Mr. H. Lyon, jun., were duly initiated, and Bros. T. W. Rudd and W. K. Greenway were passed to the Second Degree. A sum was voted from the funds of the lodge in order to qualify the J.W. as a Life Governor of the Hamer Benevolent Fund. Refreshments followed business, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

MORECAMBE.—Morecambe Lodge (No. 1560).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Hall, Edward-street, on the 4th inst. There was a good attendance of members and visiting brethren, among the latter being Bro. Johnson, Prov. G. Steward for West Lancashire. Bro. Dr. Moore, P.M., P.G.S.B., occupied the chair of K.S., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. Capt. Garnett, W.M. The minutes of previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the lodge was raised to the Second Degree, when Bro. Schofield, having proved his proficiency as a Fellow Craftsman, was entrusted and retired. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and Bro. Schofield having been re-admitted he was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M. by Bro. Dr. Moore, the working tools being presented by Bro. Longman, I.P.M. 1051. Bro. Duff, S.W., was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year, the installation taking place on the 1st proximo. A candidate was proposed for admission, and the usual routine business having been transacted, the lodge was closed with the formalities of the Craft.

INSTRUCTION.

LONDON MASONIC CLUB LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—A meeting of this lodge was held on Monday, the 14th inst., at 101, Queen Victoria-street, there being present Bros. Hawksley, W.M.; Tickle, S.W.; Shand, J.W.; Wall, S.D.; Howard, J.D.; Willett, I.G.; C. J. Hogg, Treas.; J. Mander, Precep.; S. E. Shaw, Sec., and other brethren of the Masonic Club. The lodge having been opened in usual form, and the minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the initiation of Bro. Eastgate, E.A. 1563, was rehearsed. The lodge was then opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. Hogg was passed to the Degree of F.C., after which the lodge was closed to the First Degree. Bro. Tickle, 1196, S.W., was elected W.M. for the next meeting, which takes place at 6 p.m. on Monday next.

Royal Arch.

WIGTON.—Chapter of St. John's (No. 327).—A convocation of this chapter was held at the Lion and Lamb, High-street, Wigton, on Wednesday, the 16th inst. Present: Comps. John Gate, P.P.G.R., Z.; Henry Bewes, H., and James Gardiner, J.; and others. The chapter having been opened in due form and the minutes read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Bro. Harris, of St. John's Lodge, No. 327, which proving unanimous in his favour, he was introduced, obligated, and exalted to the Sublime Degree of a Royal Arch Mason, the ceremony being most impressively performed by Ex. Comp. Barr, P.Z. 119, assisted by Comp. Bewes, H., the beautiful Mystical Lecture being given by Comp. Barr with his customary elocutionary power, and the Historical and Symbolical by Comp. Bewes. The companions were greatly struck at the admirable way in which the degree was worked and at the solemnity and decorum which pervaded the proceedings. Two brothers having been proposed for exaltation at the next meeting, the chapter was closed and the brethren retired for refreshment.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1423).—An emergency meeting of this new chapter was held at the Island Hotel, on Saturday, the 12th inst., to consider a notice of motion "That the chapter should be removed from the King's Arms Hotel, Hampton Court, to the above-mentioned place." There were present Comps. Sabine, M.E.Z.; Moss, P.Z., acting H.; Baldwin, M.E.Z. Lebanon, acting J.; Faulkner, acting S.N.; Dubois, acting S.E.; Walls, P.S. 185, acting P.S.; Johnson, acting 1st A.S.; W. Hammond, P.Z., D.C.; Gilbert, Janitor. The subject of the removal of the chapter having been fully ventilated, it was unanimously resolved that it should be forthwith carried out. The convocation having been adjourned until the second Saturday in the ensuing July, the companions partook of a well served collation. The customary preliminary toasts having been fully done justice to, "The Health of the M.E.Z." was proposed by Comp. Thielay, the Second Principal. In introducing this toast the worthy companion expatiated at length upon the great services of Comp. Sabine to the cause of Freemasonry in general. He had but recently vacated the chair of the Chaucer Lodge; he was on the road to the Master's chair of the Era Lodge, and last, but not least, he occupied the high position of founder and First Principal of the Era Chapter. He went on to state that the principal members of both lodge and chapter were the proud recipients of Provincial Grand honours, which distinctions not only gave a lustre to their own names but shed a ray of brightness upon No. 1423. In conclusion, he said that he hoped the M.E.Z. would live many years to enjoy the society of his colleagues and companions of the Era Chapter. Comp. Sabine, in reply, made a very telling speech, in which he augured a very bright future for the Era Chapter, which had met under such happy auspices that day. In conclusion, he told them that nothing should be wanting on his part to make the chapter a great success. The remainder of the evening having been agreeably spent the companions separated.

Mark Masonry.

MARYPORT.—Whitwell Lodge (No. 151).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday evening, May 17th, at 7.30 p.m. Bro. James Gardiner, W.M., P.G. Inspector of Works, was in the chair, supported as follows: Bros. Thos. Moore, as S.W.; T. Mandle, J.W.; Jos. Nicholson, P.M., P.P.G.S.W., Treas.; P. Dodgson, Sec.; G. M. Tickle, as Chap.; J. R. Banks, M.O.; J. Quay, as S.O.; J. H. Banks, J.O.; J. Smith, P.G. Org., Org.; J. Thompson, S.D.; J. W. Robinson, J.D.; E. G. Mitchell, I.G.; other brethren also being present. The minutes of the April meeting being read and confirmed, a communication was read from an approved candidate for advancement, apologising for unavoidable absence. A ballot was then taken for Bro. R. Hetherington, Craft Lodge No. 371, which being unanimously favourable, he was duly advanced to the degree of M.M. by Bro. Gardiner, in his usual workmanlike style, whilst the candidate was ably chaperoned by the veteran, Bro. Nicholson, as S.D. The next business was to elect W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler for the ensuing year. The Secretary having read the list of those qualified for the chair, the W.M. mentioned that Bro. W. F. Lamsonby, a recently joined member of Whitwell Lodge, was also qualified. Bro. Lamsonby, however, withdrew his claim on the present occasion, and intimation of the remainder, with one exception, having adopted the same course being severally announced, Bro. T. Mandle, J.W., and W.M. of Craft Lodge No. 371, was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Mandle having expressed his acknowledgments for the high honour conferred upon him, a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Gardiner for his services in the chair. Bro. Nicholson was next re-elected Treasurer with acclamation, and Bro. Harris was also elected Tyler. The lodge was finally closed in form a little after nine o'clock. The installation festival will take place in June. We may mention that the Grand Mark Lodge of England will hold its next annual meeting within the Province of Cumberland and Westmorland during the present year.

Jekyll, as Organist. A resolution was entered on the minutes expressing the deep sorrow of the members at the death of the Great Prior of England and Wales, the Right Hon the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, who had honoured the encampment with his presence at the last meeting. A communication was read from Convent General, ordering mourning to be worn for the next six months. Comps. F. J. Ricarde-Seaver, Capt. Francis Pavy, Capt. William Arthur Hicks, Edwin Matthew Lott, and Capt. Kilner, A. A. Brasin-Creagh, were balloted for and approved, together with Comps. the Right Hon. Lord Henniker and Sir T. Douglas Forsyth, C.B., K.C.S.I., and Comps. Capt. Pavy and E. M. Lott being in attendance were duly installed as Knights Templar, and proclaimed accordingly. Comps. Lieut.-Col. Bousfield, M.P., and Capt. W. M. A. Barnes were proposed as candidates for ballot at the next meeting. The Treasurer's report was submitted by the Audit Committee, showing a balance in favour of the encampment of £66 5s. 6d., and on the charity account of £2 17s. 3d., after giving donations and subscriptions to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys and Girls, and other charities. Sir Knt. Captain Adolphus Nicols, P.E.P., proposed, and V.E. Sir Knt. Col. Somerville Burney, E.P., seconded the following resolutions:—"That a cordial vote of thanks be tendered to Sir Knt. Captain W. F. Portlock Dadson, P.E.P., in recognition of his services, in having by his indefatigable zeal raised the Kemeys Tynthe Encampment to its present very high position, both in strength of arms and the status of the knights (such vote to be entered on the minutes), and that in addition thereto some appropriate gift, or token of our regard, to the value of ten guineas, from the funds of the encampment, be also presented to our worthy brother, the Audit Committee being instructed to consult his wishes as to the form of the gift." This was supported by Sir Knt. Peter Laird, P.E.P., and carried nem. con. Sir Knt. Colonel Randolph was then duly installed and invested as E. Preceptor for the ensuing year, by Sir Knt. Colonel H. Somerville Burney, and appointed his officers as follows: Sir Knts. J. Lewis Thomas, F.R.G.S., as Constable; the Rev. P. M. Holden, as Marshal; Capt. W. F. Portlock Dadson, P.E.P., as Treasurer; Thomas Harrison, P.E.P., as Registrar; J. Sandilands Ward, as Sub-Marshal; Edwin M. Lott, as Organist; Capt. C. F. Kempster, M.D., as 2nd Standard-Bearer; Capt. H. S. Andrews, as 1st Herald; Capt. W. S. Gilbert, as 2nd Herald; Frater George Austin, as Equerry. The encampment was then closed in solemn form and with prayer. The members appeared in mourning, and the annual banquet was postponed in consequence of the death of the Great Prior. The following interesting account of the family of Tynte was given by the P.E.P., Colonel Burney. Of the surname of this family, tradition (says Burke), has handed down the following derivation:—"In 1192, at the celebrated battle of Ascalon, a young knight of the noble house of Arundel, clad all in white, with his horse's housings of the same colour, so gallantly distinguished himself that Richard Cœur de Lion remarked publicly after the victory that the maiden knight had borne himself as a lion and done deeds equal to those of six crusaders. The king then rewarded him for his prowess, conferring on him for arms a lion argent on a field gules between six crosslets of the first, and for motto 'Tinctus cruore Saraceni.'"

Bro. Terry afterwards read the following report of the Committee of Management:—

The year which has just passed has been the most successful the Committee of Management have ever had to report to the Governors and Subscribers since the formation of this Institution.

The annual festival, which was held on the 12th February last, the committee had hoped would have been presided over by H.R.H. Prince Leopold, R.W. Prov. G.M., Oxon., and J.G.W. of England; but, unfortunately, and to their great regret, at the last moment he was compelled to decline, owing to the state of his health. His place was taken by the late Right Hon. the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, Prov. G.M. for Staffordshire, who very graciously consented to do so, that the Institution might not suffer. The amount announced was £12,866, being an increase of nearly £3500 beyond any previous festival. Your committee have unfortunately to announce that his lordship has, to the great regret not only of themselves but of the whole Craft, been suddenly called away. While deeply deploring this fearful visitation, they will ever have in grateful recollection the ability with which he presided, and the earnest manner he advocated its claims upon this and other occasions. To the Board of Stewards, 274 in number, who worked so strenuously and zealously to make the festival a success, their thanks are justly due.

There are on the list for election to-day 70 candidates, 34 men and 36 widows. The deaths during the past year has been 14 men and 9 widows and the Committee with such a large list of candidates claiming election determined to fill up the vacancies thus created but also to place an additional number upon the funds, and considering that the Craft had very generously subscribed nearly £13,000 at the festival they felt themselves justified in adding 30 more annuitants to the list, viz., 15 men and 15 widows; so that the total to be elected to day will be 29 men and 24 widows. When this has been done there will be 145 men and 125 widows recipients of the fund. In addition to this there are 13 widows receiving half the amount of their late husband's annuity, and which is paid them unless they are previously elected to the full pension, for three years—a boon, it is believed not conferred by any other Institution. The payments to these annuitants will absorb a sum of £10,035, being an increase during the past five years of 99 annuitants, and £4608 in annuities.

To meet this larger expenditure the Committee cheerfully rely upon the continued and increasing liberality of the Craft, which during the last few years has been evinced in a manner totally unprecedented in the history of the Order.

Two vacancies in the Trusteeship of the Male Fund have been created by the deaths of the R. W. Bro. Alexander Dobie, P. Prov. G.M. for Surrey, and the Right Hon. the Earl of Shrewsbury and Talbot, Prov. G.M. for Staffordshire, and will have to be filled up to day.

The Committee desire to express their thanks to the Grand Lodge of England for their renewed grant of £70, which has enabled them to provide the residents of the Institution at Croydon during the whole of the winter months with coals.

To the Honorary Surgeon, Henry Jno. Strong, Esq., M.D., they also tender their sincere thanks, not alone for the manner in which during the past year he has ministered to the comforts and alleviated the sufferings of the residents, but for the kindness invariably shown by him during the fifteen years he has given the Institution the benefit of his valuable services.

The Institution at Croydon requiring a thorough repair the committee have given directions for the same to be done, necessitating the outlay of a considerable amount, which it is hoped will not exceed £1000.

Subjoined is a statement of the receipts and expenditure during the past year ending the 31st March, 1877, together with the particulars of the permanent income of the Institution.

This report was then received and adopted. Bros. J. Bellerby, Raynham W. Stewart, and R. W. Little were re-elected on the Committee of Management, on the motion of Bro. Joseph Smith, seconded by Bro. James Brett. Bros. John Symonds, H. G. Warren, and A. H. Tattershall were re-elected Auditors on the motion of Bro. Joseph Smith, seconded by Bro. Captain Wordsworth.

Bro. Terry said that in consequence of the death of the Earl of Shrewsbury, another Trustee would have to be elected, as well as one in the place of the late Bro. Dobie. He had received the following letters:—

Carlton Club, May 17, 1877.

Dear Sir and Brother,—
I shall have much pleasure in accepting the Trusteeship of the Male Fund of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons, providing I shall not in any way be made pecuniarily liable. Awaiting your reply, believe me, yours fraternally,
Bro. JAMES TERRY. FREDK. M. WILLIAMS.

37, Portman-square, 16th May, 1877.
Dear Sir and Brother,—
I shall be happy to accept the Trusteeship of the Male Fund of the Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows, rendered vacant by the lamented death of our brother, Lord Shrewsbury.
Yours truly and fraternally,
J. TERRY, Esq. LEIGH.

Bro. J. M. Case, P.G.D., rose, and said: Before you proceed to elect a new Trustee in place of the late Lord Shrewsbury, I propose that we should pause to pass some testimony of the great loss this society, as well as the other Masonic societies generally, have experienced in the death of Lord Shrewsbury. At the last festival of this Institution Lord Shrewsbury took the chair, under circumstances which redounded greatly to his credit. Our Royal Bro. Prince Leopold, was unable, on account of illness, to preside, and the Institution was at some loss to know how to supply his place. The Secretary, with commendable alacrity, looked round for some one to occupy the chair, and with great discrimination he applied to Lord Shrewsbury, who agreed, at a very short notice, to occupy the chair. How successfully he did so I need not call to your minds; the result of the meeting amply justifies me in saying that it was successful. As I happened to be President of the Board of Stewards on the occasion, I had an opportunity of seeing how readily he took the office, and how successfully he performed its duties; and, therefore, I beg to propose that we should now offer our testimony of respect to the late Lord Shrewsbury; and of the great loss this Institution has sustained by his death. He was a Trustee and a Vice-Patron of this Institution, as well as a great supporter of it. But he was equally a supporter of the other Masonic Institutions, though this is not a place to advert to that circumstance. I propose that we pass a resolution to the effect I have mentioned, and also expressing our sympathy with the Countess of Shrewsbury and her family in their bereavement. (Hear, hear.)

The Chairman said: I shall have great pleasure in seconding the resolution, but I would suggest that an addition should be made to it to the effect that a letter expressive of our sympathy should be written to the Countess.

Bro. J. M. Case said he would adopt the proposed addition.

The motion was then put and carried nem. con.

The Chairman proposed, and Bro. Raynham Stewart seconded, Sir F. M. Williams, Bart., as a Trustee in place of the late Bro. Alex. Dobie, and Lord Leigh in place of the late Earl of Shrewsbury.

Carried unanimously.

Bro. S. Rawson rose to move an alteration in the laws of the Institution with respect to the annuities to widows. He said it was not with the object of altering the rules so much as to afford aid in the interpretation of them that he proposed the amendment. On a recent occasion, at a meeting of the committee, a widow of a Freemason, who married again after her husband's death, came forward as a petitioner to be placed on the list of candidates for election. It was announced by the committee that the rules excluded her, as she was not qualified for the widow's fund. Some of the brethren, though a very small minority, thought that that reading was not right, and therefore she submitted an addition to the law, which should admit, in the event of a widow marrying again, and being again left a widow, still being eligible as a candidate. If the brethren carried this motion, they would only be applying the same rule as was now applied by the Government as regarded the army and navy, and the East India Government, that if a widow who had been in receipt of a pension lost it by reason of her marrying again, if she for the second time became a widow, she could again receive her pension. He thought he need say no more, and therefore he would propose that an addition should be made to the laws on the subject, that in the event of the widow marrying again, and a second time becoming a widow, she should be eligible as an annuitant.

Bro. J. M. Case, P.G.P., seconded the motion. At the time the subject came before the committee he was confined at home by illness, but when he read an account of what had taken place he was afraid there was some misapprehension on the subject before the brethren. The Institution being a Benevolent Institution, one of its objects should be to extend its benefits rather than to narrow them; and, as in other institutions which he knew of, widows' pensions reverted to them when they became a second time widows, he took the opportunity of mentioning the subject to Bro. Rawson, who at the next meeting brought it forward. He (Bro. Case) had in his hand an extract from the book of rules of the Admiralty Navy List, bearing on this subject. It was as follows:—"In all cases of a widow remarrying, since 3rd December, 1830, (up to that time a widow lost her pension if she did re-marry), 'her pension shall be suspended from the date of her re-marriage; but, in the event of her again becoming a widow, her pension may be restored upon proof being adduced to the Admiralty that her private income does not exceed the limit fixed from time to time by the Admiralty for the rank last held by her husband, and that she is otherwise deserving the public bounty, but it will be again liable to suspension during future re-marriage.'" He had also a book of rules of the Royal Naval Benevolent Society, with which he had been associated for fifty years. The rule on this subject was: "No widow, orphan, mother, or sister of any naval officer shall have any claim to relief from the corporation during coverture, nor if the subscription of the officer shall be in arrear for three years preceding his death, provided the officer held wardroom rank so long. But this rule is not to affect the relatives of subscribers who died before the 21st of April, 1851." With these precedents for the guidance of the brethren he begged leave most strenuously to second the motion of Bro. Rawson, feeling that the desire of the Institution should be to extend its benefits and not to restrict them. (Hear, hear.)

Bro. Joseph Smith, P.G.P., said he thought the brethren were much indebted to Bro. Rawson for bringing forward this motion, and asking the meeting to decide what should be the course to be pursued for the future. He apprehended that Bro. Rawson did not say that if a widow who had received the annuity, married, and lost it, and a second time became a widow, she was to receive her annuity without being a second time elected. (No.) The brethren should certainly be the judges of her qualification. There might be a very strong case. A widow might marry some brother who had held a very high position in the Craft, and if she was not a very old woman, some brother in the Craft who had known her before might marry her. He might be a very influential man, who had taken an active part in Freemasonry, and if he died it would be a very unjust thing to say that his widow should not be eligible for the annuity. He thought Bro. Rawson meant that she should become a candidate a second time, and if the subscribers chose to elect her she should have the annuity. The brethren must remember that by marrying again she did the Institution a benefit, for she saved the Institution the amount of the annuity by being married.

The motion was carried unanimously and the Chairman declared it carried subject to the approval of Grand Lodge.

Bro. Dr. Erasmus Wilson was not present to move on a subject of which he had given notice.

Scrutineers of votes were then appointed for the election, and the Chairman said that in consequence of deaths which had occurred since the proxies were issued the number of men and women to be elected would be 29 men, and 24 widows.

At the declaration of the poll the following was found to be the result:—

Votes of thanks to the Scrutineers and the Chairman of the day closed the proceedings.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DORSETSHIRE.

At the close of the Provincial Grand Lodge (the proceedings of which were fully reported in our last) the brethren were invited to a magnificent banquet provided in the great hall of Canford House, by Messrs. Gunter, of London. A number of carriages were in readiness in the Square, Wimborne, ready for the conveyance of the brethren to Canford, and the entire company were speedily conveyed thither. According to the notice on the agenda paper, the brethren appeared at the banquet in Masonic Craft clothing. The tables were splendidly laid out, and the liberality which prompted Bro. Montague Guest to invite so large a company to so sumptuous a banquet called forth the highest praise. As a matter of course, the newly-installed P.G.M. occupied the chair, and he was supported by Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, D.G.M.; Bro. J. Hervey, G.S.; Bro. Sir Albert Woods, (Garter), P.G.W., G.D.C.; Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe, G. Org.; Bro. Viscount Holmesdale, Prov. G.M. Kent; Lord Methuen, Prov. G.M. Wiltshire; Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.; Bro. Lord Henry Thynne, Bro. W. T. Benett-Stanford, M.P.; Bro. J. M. Brymer, M.P.; Bro. A. E. Guest, Bro. the Hon. R. Harbord, Bro. C. Hambro, and other distinguished Masons.

Grace was said before and after dinner by Bro. the Rev. H. Everett, of Dorchester.

Bro. Winn, of Her Majesty's Chapel Royal and Vicar Choral of St. Paul's Cathedral; Bros. Baxter and Carter, of Westminster Abbey; and Bro. Beckett, of Her Majesty's Chapel Royal, during the evening sang a number of glees in excellent style, which called forth repeated applause.

The Chairman proposed "The Health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, the Patroness of Freemasonry." He said that he felt he need not say anything to commend the toast, for it was always well received (cheers).

The Chairman next proposed "The Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family." Those who were present two years ago at the installation of his Royal Highness would, he was sure, never forget the imposing and impressive sight. He thought no person in England could maintain the dignity of the office of Grand Master better than did the Prince of Wales. (Cheers.) Two of the Prince's brothers were also Masons—the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold. (Cheers.) The Princess of Wales was also deserving of their esteem and regard. (Cheers.)

The Chairman proposed as the next toast, "The Health of the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master of England, the Right Hon. Lord Carnarvon." He felt so much had been said in praise of his lordship during the last few years that he need not on that occasion say anything respecting him, because they all knew how much his lordship had done. (Cheers.) He had hoped their Pro Grand Master would have been present with them that day, but was prevented by other duties, his lordship sending a very kind letter, expressing his regret, and hoping they would have a pleasant evening and fine weather. (Cheers.)

The Chairman said he was sure they would be pleased to receive in the most enthusiastic manner the next toast which he would have to propose. It was "The Health of their Deputy Grand Master Lord Skelmersdale." (Cheers.) He felt he could personally do no more than the Provincial Lodge had already done, viz., thank his lordship for his great kindness in coming down on this occasion to assist them. This he could assure their Deputy Grand Master was no idle praise. He had known his noble friend for many years, and he knew how many matters his lordship had to engage his attention, and also how he had to tear himself away from other important duties so as to be with them that day. (Cheers.) Whatever his lordship did was always successful, and he felt that his coming down to them that day had made the meeting a success. (Cheers.) His lordship was always successful, whether as a breeder of short-horns or as a hardworking member of his party in the House of Lords. The Chairman concluded by again commending to them the toast.

Lord Skelmersdale said he thanked them most warmly for the kind way in which they had received the toast of his health. He assured them it had been a real pleasure to him to meet them that day. He was glad that the meeting had been fixed for Saturday, as that was his free day. The Chairman had said that whatever he took in hand proved successful, and he hoped that in this present instance this would prove true, and that his coming amongst them that day would be an augury of the future prosperity of the province under the rule of its newly-installed Grand Master. (Cheers.) His lordship then referred to the death on the previous day of the Earl of Shrewsbury, than whom, he said, no person took a greater interest in Freemasonry, and concluded by proposing "The Health of the Provincial Grand Master of Dorset." (Cheers.) The toast was received with great enthusiasm.

The Chairman, in responding, thanked the Deputy Grand Master for the way in which he had proposed his health, and for the good wishes which he had expressed towards him. He felt that a sorrow overshadowed their meeting that day, occasioned by the death of their late Provincial Grand Master—Bro. Joseph Gundry, who for 18 years ruled over the Province. They all knew how well he had worked, and he was sure they would agree with him that he filled the office with impartiality and ability. He felt it was an exceedingly difficult task to follow after one who was so much appreciated, but he was certain it would be his endeavour to fill worthily the post to which he had been appointed by the Right Worshipful the Grand Master, the Prince of Wales. It would be his endeavour to personally work amongst them, and he should be pleased to listen to any suggestions which might be made by any of his brethren for the furtherance of the interests of Masonry in general, and of that Province especially. The Chairman then proposed the health of four Grand Masters of other provinces—Lord Methuen, Wiltshire; Bro. W. W. B. Beach, Hampshire; Viscount Holmesdale, Kent; Lord Skelmersdale, West Lancashire. He most sincerely thanked them for attending that day, and he could only hope that he should prove as good a Provincial Grand Master as they were.

Lord Methuen briefly responded. He said Masonry was largely compounded of loyalty and charity. They all knew that their charity abounded, and that nothing could destroy their loyalty.

Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., in responding, said he could not help coming down that day to see his old friend, Bro. Montague Guest, installed as Provincial Grand Master.

Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., in responding, referred to the thoroughly amicable feelings which existed between the Provinces of Hampshire and Dorsetshire.

Lord Skelmersdale said he appeared that day before them in two characters—as Deputy Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England, and as Provincial Grand Master of West Lancashire. He could assure them, as Grand Master of a Province having more than 80 lodges, with the largest Masonic constituency of any province of England, that the brethren of Dorset had the hearty greetings of the lodges over whom he had ruled.

The Chairman then proposed "The Health of the Officers Past and Present, of the Grand Lodge," and he associated with the toast a gentleman whose name was familiar to all of them, Lord Henry Thynne. He knew the toast would call forth the hearty response which it always did. He would mention in connection with the toast the names of Bros. Hervey, Grand Secretary; Sir Albert Woods, Grand Director of Ceremonies; and Chevalier Kuhe, Grand Organist.

Lord Henry Thynne, in responding, said he could assure them that for various reasons he had much pleasure in being present. He was greatly pleased at seeing the enthusiastic way in which his old friend, Bro. Montague Guest, was received into this province. He also expressed his satisfaction at seeing the good fellowship which existed between the provinces of Dorsetshire and Wiltshire.

Bro. J. Hervey, Grand Secretary, said he had been much gratified with the manner in which the proceedings of that day had been carried out. When he looked at the services rendered by Bro. Sir Albert Woods he felt they must acknowledge that the officers of the Grand Lodge were alive to the duties devolving upon them, and were always ready to perform those duties. Although that was not the first time he had been present at their Provincial Grand Lodge he was impressed that day by the manner in which everything had been carried out, and by the hospitality shown them—(cheers)—and which he had never seen exceeded—he might say he had never seen equalled. He felt he must pay this tribute to the generosity and kind feeling of the chairman. (Cheers.)

Sir Albert Woods also briefly responded. He said that he, like the previous speaker, had felt it his duty to be present on that occasion, and to render any assistance in his power, which every officer of the Grand Lodge was always ready to do, and if he had contributed in any way to the success of the ceremony he was pleased. (Cheers.)

Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe, Grand Organist, in responding, expressed the pleasure he felt in being present that day. Twenty-one years ago he spent his honeymoon in that very house, and he had a dim recollection of several lads who at that time were dressed in jackets (laughter). These were now men, and it was a great pleasure to him to be there again that day to witness Bro. Montague Guest's Installation as Provincial Grand Master. (Cheers.)

According to custom the box was passed round in aid of the Masonic charities. The collection amounted to £27 3s. 3d.

The Chairman said although the toast he was about to propose came at a late hour of the evening, yet he was sure it was not to them the least in importance. It was "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master of the Province, and Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers." The Chairman made special allusion to Bro. W. Eliot, of Weymouth, a Past P.G.M. of Dorset, who had been 61 years a Mason, and was the oldest member of the fraternity in the county. He regretted Bro. Eliot, owing to his great age, was unable to be present that evening, but he should like to read the following letter which had been received from him:—

Weymouth, 12th May, 1877.

To the Right Worshipful P.G. Master, Deputy G. Master, and Brethren of the Province of Dorset.

My dear Brethren,—

During the long period I have been a Freemason, having been initiated in the All Souls Lodge, Weymouth, in the year 1816, I have on many occasions received from the brethren of the Province of Dorset repeated marks of their kindness and brotherly affection towards me, but the address, or I may say the resolution, passed at the Provincial Grand Lodge held at Shaftesbury on the 14th September, 1876, affords me still greater gratification. In the evening of my life, whilst memory gifts the past and hope looks brightly on the future, my proudest consolation is the recollection of your brotherly esteem and affection towards me, not only on the present occasion, but during the period I had the happiness to preside over you as your P.G. Master.

And now R.W. Master, I sincerely congratulate you on your appointment as P.G. Master of Dorset, a high and distinguished situation, and I congratulate you, my brethren, on having a P.G. Master who will do honour to Freemasonry, and whose life I earnestly pray may be prolonged for very many years to rule and direct Freemasonry in this Province.

In conclusion, my dear brethren, let me most earnestly impress on your minds not to neglect the practice of the fundamental truths of our Order, and may that bright morning star whose rising brought peace and salvation to the faithful and obedient of the human race be your shield, buckler, and stronghold, and may the Grand Architect of the Universe, the disposer of all events and the giver of all good, instil into all our hearts a deep sense of His power, goodness, and mercy, and may He pour down His blessing on you, my dear brethren, and at the termination of your earthly career receive you into His heavenly lodge, where peace and joy reign to all eternity. With fraternal regard I remain, very sincerely, WILLIAM ELIOT.

Past P.G.M. of Dorset.

I very much regret that the infirmities of old age prevent my joining you this day to assist at the installation of your P.G. Master. My best wishes are with you.

The Chairman proceeded to say that it would be his endeavour to work with the Grand Officers of the Province, and he was sure they would assist him to the best of their power. He would connect with the toast the name of Bro. T. B. Hanham, who was for the second time the Provincial Grand Senior Warden.

Bro. Hanham, in returning thanks, said he did not think he should be called upon to respond to the toast of the Provincial Grand Officers of Dorset, who attended on that occasion, and whom he so unworthily represented. They gave their thorough acquiescence to the appointment of Provincial Grand Master that had been made, and they were determined to show that was their feeling by supporting their Provincial Grand Master, and maintaining that position which the province of Dorset had achieved. He hoped all the Provincial Grand Officers would concur in his remarks.

Lord Skelmersdale said he rose to propose a toast which was not strictly Masonic, viz "The Health of Sir Ivor Guest." He was sorry that Sir Ivor was not one them. (Hear, hear.) They all owed him a debt of gratitude for enabling his brother to entertain them so regally that evening. He was sure they would drink the toast with hearty cheers (Applause.)

The Chairman proposed "The Health of the Visitors," connecting with the toast several brethren present belonging to the Meridian Lodge of the 31st Regiment, stationed at Portland, and particularly mentioning the names of Bro. Montagu, the son of their Deputy Grand Master, and Bro. Ralph Harbord, brother of Lord Suffield—Provincial Grand Master of Norfolk—who was an active Mason.

Brother Montagu briefly responded.

Brother Rev. Dr. Collis also responded.

The Chairman then proposed "The Masonic Charities." Lord Methuen had said that the motto of Freemasonry was loyalty and charity, and he could not help asking them to drink the health of Bro. Binckes, Secretary to the Boys' School, and Bro. Terry, Secretary to the Benevolent Institution.

Bro. F. Binckes said the toast had come home to them when they heard all present join in wishing happiness and prosperity to the institution just mentioned by the Provincial Grand Master. But another toast ought not to be forgotten. There was a large amount of Masonic distress which they were called upon to relieve and assist in every way they could, but he should not take advantage of an exceptionally auspicious occasion like that to occupy their time with regard to it. He thought they might boast upon their inexhaustible loyalty and charity, and he asked them to give their thanks to Mr. Bennett-Stanford, who had accepted the position of Steward of the Boys' School this year, and to assist him in taking up a good list of subscriptions with him. He hoped the brethren would support him both materially and personally, and he was proud to acknowledge the present Right Worshipful Grand Master as one of the most munificent supporters of the benevolent institutions. (Cheers.) He had every confidence that, under his benign rule, the Province of Dorset would reap the greatest advantage. (Applause.)

Bro. Terry said he thanked them very sincerely on behalf of the Benevolent Institution. He was most grateful to them for the support which it had received from the province, and he felt certain that the effort which would be made on the following Friday would result more successfully.

The brethren then separated, highly gratified with the princely liberality with which they had been entertained.

CONSECRATION OF THE HENRY MUGGERIDGE LODGE, NO. 1679.

On Saturday last this new London lodge was consecrated by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, at the Prince George Hotel, Park-road, Dalston. The arrangements which had been made for the ceremony were perfect, and Bro. E. B. Crichton, proprietor of the hotel, had exerted himself to the utmost to render the day a complete success. On entering the hotel the brethren found all the approaches to the lodge-room bordered by a profuse collection of elegant ferns and flowers, while the lodge-room itself was decorated with Masonic and national flags. The room provided was a very commodious one, and Bro. Crichton had at his own expense adapted it to the wants of the Craft by shutting it off from the outside portion by a double door in one part of the wall, and placing a new door to lead from the clothing and preparing room to the lodge. The room was admirably adapted for holding a Masonic lodge, as it had the advantage of a quiet locality, wherein passing street sounds would not be likely to interfere with the due performance of the ceremonial observances.

The ceremony was opened shortly before four o'clock, when the brethren were marshalled by Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, who acted as D.C.; and the brethren who joined in the procession were Bros. John

Hervey, Grand Secretary; H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary; W. T. Howe, Assistant Grand Pursuivant; Henry Muggeridge, P.M. 192 and 715; Francis Fellows, S.W. 192; Edward F. Storr, W.M. 22; J. Lorkin, 192; Henry Birdseye, P.M. 715; John Jonas, P.M. 715; A. H. Tattershall, P.M. 140; Joseph Defriez, W.M. 45; J.D. 1278; W. J. Hunter, 228; Thomas Goodes, S.W. 1288; H. J. Thompson, P.M. 192, 869, P.P.G.S.W. Herts; J. B. Scriven, P.G.S., P.M. 5; S. W. Iron, D.C. 1579; Henry John, 749; R. W. Robinson, 177; S. Lazarus, 53; G. C. Young, 820; Thomas White, P.M. 22; T. Burdett Yeoman, S.W. 1460; Thomas Richardson, 1599; J. H. Weedon, P.M. 715; C. Lorkin, 1524; George Phythian, S.W. 22; Edwin Payne, Organist 1261; William George, 742; Mark Hubbard, 22; John Elves, 174; H. Watkins, 72; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); W. Fredetick, 1264; G. Blackie, S.D. 1426; Henry Leah, J.W.; 193; Ernest Dietrich, 1524; Oscar Dietrich, 1524; Thomas Charles Chapman, P.M. and Treas. 1524 E. B. Crichton, S.D., 869 and 192, and H. P. Matthews, 569. Bro. Geo. Bilby, Org. 185, presided at the harmonium, and played a march as the procession entered. Bro. Hervey, on taking his seat, placed Bro. Henry Muggeridge on his left as P.M., Bro. Birdseye as S.W., Bro. John Jonas as J.W., Bro. J. B. Scriven as Sec., Bro. George Phythian as I.G., and, as we have said above, Bro. H. G. Buss as D.C. He then formally opened the lodge in the three degrees, and offered up the prayer usually rendered by the Chaplain. After the brethren had taken their seats, Bro. George Bilby played a voluntary on the harmonium, and at its termination,

Bro. John Hervey said: Brethren, it is usual on these occasions to address a few observations to the brethren round the room, but I shall not trouble you with many remarks on the present occasion, but I should not like the business of the day to commence without expressing the great gratification I feel in coming down here to-day to perform the ceremony of consecration of a lodge which is about to be presided over by so eminent a Mason as my good brother on my left. I can assure you I feel much complimented by being invited to perform the ceremony this day, and nothing should have interfered with the pleasure which I anticipated in having the opportunity of placing him in the chair of a lodge bearing his name. It is not often that one has the opportunity of installing an old friend, I may say, in a new place; it is not often that it falls to the lot of old Masons like Bro. Muggeridge and myself to come before the Craft to take the control of a lodge when we are not quite so young as we used to be, and once more enter into the arena of competition perhaps with not more experienced brethren, but at any rate with our juniors in the science, and those who from circumstances of health and other reasons are probably more vigorous than we are ourselves; therefore it is to me a peculiar pleasure to come here this day. I have known you—our—respected Bro. Muggeridge many years, and I believe that to know him is to respect him. Therefore it is that we are assembled here this day, and I see around me many of those with whom I have been associated some years past in various grades of Masonry, assembled here to take part in the proceedings of the day. That those proceedings may be carried to a successful issue is my earnest hope, and that the lodge which we are about to consecrate now will, under the experienced guidance of our good friend, attain to a position which will be second to few in the Craft, I sincerely trust. Young as it is, it will be guided in its course by a very experienced brother, and a brother who knows how to carry out everything which he undertakes in Masonry with success, and with, I may say, éclat. We all know the gatherings which take place annually, now, at the Cannon-street Hotel, and I recollect the time when they used to take place at Radley's, and I am quite sure they tend to stimulate the feelings of brethren who are entering Masonry to exert themselves, to show that they are willing to work for the honours which the Craft gives, and for the offices which may be conferred upon them. No lodge can be carried on without good officers, and if the officers be good, yet if they do not attend, then there is a lapse which we all know who have worked a lodge, creates a difficulty. If either of the officers are absent or incapable they injure the working of the lodge. Our good brother here will, I know, so tutor his officers that there is little chance of their not being efficient in the various offices they undertake to fill. But, brethren, I would ask those who are about to take office this day not to leave Bro. Muggeridge in the lurch when their services are wanted, but to attend at the time named in the summons, and to be ready to perform the duties they have to fulfil at the proper time; or if they are unable to attend at the proper hour, that they should give him timely notice of their inability to attend. You will pardon me for making these few observations. I have told you already how glad I am to perform the ceremonies of to-day, and how pleased I am to see an old friend, not with a new face, but at any rate in a new position. (Cheers.)

Bro. Henry Muggeridge, in place of the Chaplain, thereupon delivered the oration, which all brethren who have seen Bro. Muggeridge consecrate a lodge are well acquainted with, wherein he sketches the three degrees of Freemasonry, and explains their application to the life of man upon the earth, and his preparation for a future state of bliss.

When this oration had been concluded, Bro. Hervey proceeded with the consecration and dedication of the lodge. This having been performed, Bro. Henry Muggeridge was installed by Bro. Hervey as W.M., the new Master being presented by Bro. Buss, and declared to be found well skilled in the noble science, and fitted to preside over the lodge. The installation took place before a numerous board of Installed Masters, who, on Bro. Muggeridge being placed in the chair, offered him their hearty congratulations on his selection by the Prince of Wales to take the management of the new lodge. Bro. Scriven was invested as I.P.M. The board being then closed, the brethren below the rank of an Installed Master were admitted, and the customary ceremonies in the three degrees having been observed, Bro. Muggeridge invested the following brethren with the collars of their respective offices:—Bibb, Francis Fellows, S.W.; Bro. Edward F. Storr, J.W.; Bro. J. Lockin, S.D.; Bro. Henry John, J.D., pro tem.; Bro. J. H. Wilkins, I.G.; Bro. W. F. Darnell, Steward; and Bro. Gilchrist, Tyler.

Bro. Hervey delivered the addresses, and afterwards, on the motion of the W.M., seconded by the J.W., the lodge passed a vote of thanks to Bros. Hervey and Buss for attending and consecrating the lodge. On the motion of the W.M., seconded by the J.W., a vote of thanks was also passed to Bros. Bilby, Birdseye, and Jonas for performing the duties of Organist, S.W., and J.W. respectively during the consecration ceremony; and on the motion of Bro. Fellows, S.W., seconded by Bro. Storr, J.W., the honorary membership of the lodge was conferred upon Bros. Hervey, Buss, and Bilby. Responses in acknowledgment of these compliments having been made, Bro. Muggeridge read the list of names proposed as candidates for joining and initiation at the next meeting of the lodge which takes place to-day, the proposals were duly seconded, and the lodge was then closed. The brethren afterwards partook of an elegant banquet, arranged with great taste by Bro. Crichton, and late in the evening honoured the usual toasts.

The W.M., after the brethren had fully recognised the toast of "The Queen and the Craft," proposed that of "The M.W.G.M." and in doing so, said that he intended to make very short speeches during his year of office, unless he had something particular to say, in which event, he should not hesitate to say it, they might rely.

In giving "The Health of the Pro Grand Master," &c., the W.M. observed, that though the brethren did not so often meet Lord Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale as they did the rest of the Grand Officers, they had not that intimate knowledge of them as they had of the latter brethren. As they met these brethren often, they knew perfectly well their great merits, and it was with peculiar pleasure that they found Bro. Buss recently enrolled among the ranks of the Grand Officers. He was a brother who richly deserved promotion, not only for his long devotion to Masonic working, but for the great support he had afforded to the different Masonic charities. The brethren of the lodge were greatly indebted to Bro. Hervey, Grand Secretary of England, Bro. Buss, the Assistant Grand Secretary, and their good friend, Bro. W. T. Howe, who had such a good feeling towards the promoters of the lodge as to come and consecrate.

Bro. John Hervey responded. He was glad he had not to return thanks for the Foreign Secretary instead of the Colonial Secretary, inasmuch as they might then be induced to embark in political allusions, which would be best left alone at this time. But he had great pleasure in responding for the Colonial Secretary, because he dealt only with those subjects which were connected with our own kingdom and our own colonies. There was no man in this country more worthy of having his health proposed and responded to than the Earl of Carnarvon. He was a man who in every position of life had proved himself to be a good man and true; whether as a literary man, or as a politician, or as a Minister of the crown, or as Pro Grand Master of Freemasons, he had shown himself equal to the occasion; well able to cope with the duties he had to perform, and capable of holding his own well and worthily. He might say the same of Lord Skelmersdale and the Grand Officers who were now present, as well as he himself, were proud of having their names associated with those of such noblemen, feeling that they borrowed some of the reflected light of such characters, so amiable in themselves, and whose principles were unchallenged. With regard to the toast it might be said to be more of a personal than a general one, and he could only repeat what he had said in the lodge before the consecration, that nothing had given him greater pleasure for a long time than to come to Dalston to consecrate the lodge which bore a name which was connected with Masonry in every shape and way; which was known not only through the length and breadth of London but through the length and breadth of England. Bro. Muggeridge was associated with Masonry in other ways than as regarded lodge working. He was connected with the charities as a great contributor to them, and he must say that this was a more intimate and gratifying association than any, and it was combined with kind feeling, with good fellowship, and with uncompromising integrity. Those were really points which any man might be proud of; and therefore he (Bro. Hervey) had come down with very great gratification to consecrate the lodge. He hoped he had performed his duties to the satisfaction of the brethren, and he trusted the Henry Muggeridge Lodge would not, after their good friend had been called to his last home, fail to perpetuate his memory, so that if any man in ages yet to come should ask who was Henry Muggeridge, they would get their answer in this lodge. After thanking the brethren again for the toast, and also for the hospitable entertainment which they had given the Grand Officers, Bro. Hervey proposed "The Health of the W.M." The brethren might perhaps think he had in some measure anticipated the remarks to be applied in this toast by those he had previously made with reference to the Henry Muggeridge Lodge. He would only repeat one thing, that the respect in which Bro. Muggeridge was held in the Craft generally was not one likely or lightly to be interfered with. Bro. Muggeridge was one of those whose popularity was universal. Long might it continue, and long might Bro. Muggeridge continue to be the ornament to the Craft which he was now. In conjunction with the name of Bro. Muggeridge he would propose "Success and Prosperity to the Henry Muggeridge Lodge," and it was with all sincerity he wished both health to the W.M. and success and prosperity to his lodge.

The W.M. in reply said he need scarcely tell the brethren that he rose with a great deal of pleasure to return his most sincere thanks for the very kind manner in which the V.W. Grand Secretary, his esteemed friend, Bro. Hervey, had proposed this toast, and for the kind way in which the brethren had responded to it. He could assure them he was very pleased, and now they would permit him to depart a little from the rule he had laid down to make short speeches, for he wanted to say a little more than he would like to say on all occasions. In the first place he felt highly honoured and exceedingly gratified by his name being attached to this lodge. To take events in the order of their occurrence, the idea had been conceived by somebody, and it had been realised, and he had to thank the brethren who conceived the idea of calling the lodge the "Henry Muggeridge Lodge." That was an honour to him—a very great honour, and he esteemed it as such, felt deeply grateful for it, and fully appreciated it. The authorities had recognised the wish of the promoters of the lodge that it should be named after the humble individual who now had the honour of addressing the brethren. It was an honour conferred by the promoters, and it was no less an honour conferred by the authorities. Twenty years ago he was the promoter of a lodge called the Panmure Lodge, in the same neighbourhood, which was consecrated at the Pembury Tavern. It was then numbered 1017, and he (Bro. Muggeridge) was the first W.M. He took a great deal of pains in obtaining the warrant for the lodge, and in the course of his proceedings he had occasion to feel deeply indebted to his good friend, the Assistant Grand Secretary, Bro. Buss, because he got the Canonbury Lodge, of which he was Secretary, his friends, the Master and Wardens, to sign the recommendation. The Panmure Lodge was consecrated by Bro. Havers, P.G.W., in 1857, assisted by Bros. Edwin Fox, P.M. 235, H. G. Buss, W. G. Clarke, G. Sec.; J. B. King, P.G.D.; George Biggs, and several other distinguished Masons. It gave him great pleasure to be after the lapse of so many years, in the same parish again in the same position. He was not however the prime mover in getting the present lodge, but Bro. Fellows was; and Bro. Fellows asked him to accept the office of first W.M. He hesitated and required time for consideration, not from any affectation. He felt proud to have his name given to the lodge. He liked to have his own way, and he told them that if he became Master he must be allowed to rule the lodge his own way. He could assure them he did like a good dinner, but at the same time he liked Masonry better; and he would rather spoil a dozen dinners than one Masonic ceremony. The great object of the lodge should be not the dinner, but Masonic working: it should be Masonry. They would not hurry over work, but when they got to their banquet they would endeavour to enjoy it; and they would enjoy it much better for knowing that they had done the work well in the lodge. He knew he was expressing the feelings, sentiments, and opinions of the founders when he said they did not wish to make this a numerous lodge—there was no occasion to do so. They might depend upon it that the most numerous lodges were not the most comfortable or most happy. They would study the true interests of the lodge if they endeavoured to keep it within moderate bounds. As to the initiation ceremony, he thought it the best way to initiate only one candidate at a time, an opinion which was shared by a late Grand Secretary, William Henry White, a letter of whom he had in his possession stating that it had been most injudicious to initiate more than one candidate at a time.

The other toasts were then given and honoured, and the brethren separated after spending a delightful evening.

GRAND LODGE OF MUNSTER.

I have the pleasure to announce through the favour of my esteemed friend and brother, J. H. Neilson, P.M. 620 (Representative of the Grand Orient of Egypt at the Grand Lodge of Ireland, &c.), the following curious addition to the History of Freemasonry during the third decade of last century.

In the Records of the Council of Cork the following entries occur:—
2nd Dec., 1725, "That a Charter be issued out for the Master, Wardens, and Society of Freemasons, according to their petition."

31st Jan., 1726, "The Charter of Freemasons being this day read in Council, it is ordered that the further consideration of said Charter be referred to the next Council, and that Alderman Phillips, Mr. Croker, Foulks Austen, and Mr. Corn Speaker do inspect same."

A careful search has been instituted, but nothing more on the subject can be discovered in the minutes of the Council. There is, however, no doubt as to the references being to Freemasons, not "Freemen," and thus we have a record unexampled in the annals of our Fraternity.

Our distinguished Bro. Neilson has been so much engaged in Masonic matters of international importance that he has been unable as yet to fulfil his promise to me, to thoroughly investigate the character and extent of the Grand Lodge of Munster Records, still happily preserved at Cork (City), and we thankfully accept the foregoing as an earnest of the contents of those very valuable and interesting minutes.

It will be observed that the records herein noted refer to the Registers of the Council, which are quite an unexpected source of "Masonic light."

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

A complimentary dinner will be given on Monday next to Bro. Wm. Creswick, the eminent tragedian, prior to his departure for Australia. The dinner will take place at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street, at three o'clock, Dr. Doran, F.R.S. in the chair.

NEW CONCORD LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The ceremonies of consecration and installation will be performed in this lodge on Wednesday next, at seven o'clock, by Bro. James Terry, P.M. 228, 1278, and 1366. Brethren will be in Craft clothing.

A meeting of the Grand Mark Lodge for the Province of North Wales and Chester, was held on Saturday last. A report will appear in our next.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—ONE SHILLING DAY.—MONDAY, MAY 21.—Admission by season tickets, 4,329; ditto by payment, 55,605. Total visitors, 59,934.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on Wednesday inspected the Thunderer, Minotaur, and Vernon at Portsmouth, and from the latter vessel witnessed a number of experiments with torpedos, mines, hand-grenades, and other explosive materials. In the evening his Royal Highness was the guest of the officers of the Thunderer.

A Reuter's telegram from Athens states that Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales will start on Monday on her return to England.

The Manchester Guardian says:—The best known monastic liqueurs are the Trappist, made by the Trappists; the Benedictine, distilled by the Benedictine monks, once world-famed for their book erudition; and above all the Chartreuse, the queen of liqueurs, the unrivalled production of the monks of the Grand Charterhouse in the mountains of Dauphiny. The head of this latter firm—or to give him his religious title, the General of the Order—Dom Saisson, has just died, and it has therefore become necessary to give him a successor. This is a matter of great importance for the religious prosperity of the monastery, as every gourmet, French or foreign, acquainted with the extensive sale of Chartreuse, white, yellow, or green, can tell. The profane will be surprised to hear that the profits of the business are figured by millions of francs; but out of this—by way, no doubt, of sanctification—a yearly tribute varying from 300,000 to 500,000 francs is sent by the venerable brothers to the Pope. We have it on the authority of one of the lesser prophets that "Il y a avec le ciel des accommodements." The recipe for making this deservedly famous liqueur has been a secret for the last three centuries, and the only copy of it extant is said to repose beneath the centre stone of the high altar of the chapel of the monastery; in the spot, that is, where in other churches and chapels the relics of saints are deposited. It is only when a new General of the Order is elected that the stone is unsealed and taken up. According to a French contemporary, that ceremony will take place in a few days with great pomp.

BAYARD LODGE No. 1615.—A full report of the proceedings at the meeting of this lodge on Monday will appear in our next.

LONDON COFFEE TAVERN.—The first temperance public-house of the Coffee Tavern Company was opened on Tuesday, at 344, Edgware-road, London. The house is called the Glasshouse Tavern, and is elegantly fitted up. It is open daily from 5 a.m. till 12 p.m., and hot and cold beverages are served up at a moment's notice. Amongst the company at the opening ceremony were the Right Hon. W. F. Cowper Temple, M.P. and Mrs. Cowper Temple; Hon. Rollo Russell, Canon Duckworth, Dr. Norman Kerr, and Mr. Ernest Hart. The tavern has been already extensively patronised, and it is hoped that many other houses will shortly be opened. The Market Tavern, close to Billingsgate fish market, is nearly ready.

We have been favoured by Messrs. Locke and Whitfield, of 178, Regent-street, with four excellent portraits of the late Earl of Shrewsbury, to which we beg to call the special attention of our readers, as many of them would like to possess a souvenir of our noble and lamented brother.

The Lord Mayor and Sheriffs have accepted Sir John Bennett's invitation to visit him in state at his country seat, The Banks, Mountfield, Sussex, June 30th. The Mayor and Corporation of Hastings and about a thousand guests are expected. The Garden Party will include, as did the one two years since, some of the most eminent individuals, in politics literature, art, science, and public life.

PROVINCIAL MAYORS.—The Lord Mayor intends giving a ball at the Mansion House to the provincial mayors on the 21st of June.

On Tuesday evening General Sir Hastings Doyle, K.C.M.G., had the honour of entertaining H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at dinner, when his magnificent set of Masonic gold plate decorated the table.

LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS COMPANY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending May 20th amounted to £18,890 18s. 7d., against £11,237 1s. 9d. last year.

Henley-on-Thames Regatta is fixed for June 21 and 22.

The Floating Swimming Bath on the Thames, near Charing-cross, is now open for the season.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, MAY 26, 1877.

H.R.H. The DUKE of CONNAUGHT at the MASONIC ORPHAN SCHOOL GATHERING, DUBLIN.

All the members of our Craft will read with the deepest interest the record of the day's proceedings of that interesting anniversary, the manly speech of our Royal Brother, and the account of the prosperity of these useful institutions. They will be pleased to think that so much prosperity is attendant on the charitable educational efforts of our good Irish brethren, and we propose to recur to the subject in our next. But we note with pride and pleasure—and we feel sure that the Craft in Great Britain will coincide with us in the feeling—that, like our Royal Grand Master, his brothers lose no opportunity of evincing their kindly sympathy and attachment as regards our often calumniated Order, a sympathy and attachment which are as becoming to our august brethren as they are grateful and consolatory to us. The words of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught will long be remembered by those who had the privilege of being present, and by the children to whom he spoke so naturally, so kindly, and so well.

THE LAST ELECTION FOR THE BENEVOLENT ANNUITY FUND.

We rejoice in being able to report that 24 widows were elected out of 36, and 29 men out of 34 male applicants, at the election on Friday last. All our brethren will be glad to realize the great prosperity attendant on this invaluable charity of our Order, and we congratulate the executive and Bro. Terry warmly and sincerely on that most happy position of affairs, which marks the onward progress of that well-managed Institution, the Royal Masonic Benevolent. As regards its exact financial condition, it is one of unexampled prosperity. Up to the 31st March, 1877, the Male Fund stood thus:—

THE EXCHANGE OF VOTES.

With reference to the question of a reform of the "voting system" in our Masonic institutions, one of the points often alleged is the "exchange of votes." The argument on this head seems to be this. "The voting paper is a responsibility (per se), and therefore the brother voter ought to give it to one of the cases presented to his notice." Now, this we maintain, in our humble opinion, involves two fallacies. First, it is not necessary that the voter should exercise his franchise, he may refuse to vote at all, and, therefore, he cannot be compelled to vote, just as he cannot be required to vote in lodge, unless he thinks fit to do so. There is no compulsory voting in Freemasonry. Secondly, the voter has a clear right to take this view of his privilege. Bro. A., for instance, says to Bro. B., "You have Case 24 this time, which you deem a most deserving case, now I have a case coming on next time that I consider a most distressing case. If you will vote for me, or obtain for me so many votes this time, to carry my candidate in, I will vote for you and endeavour to obtain an equivalent number of votes for you next time." There is surely nothing wrong in this; and all exchanges, as a general rule, whether by individual or charity committees, proceed on the assumption of a special case, which is considered most pressing. We have seen that no one voter can be compelled to vote at all. We have before pointed out that it is impossible to lay down what is absolutely the most distressing case; and therefore there can be no necessity for any one directly to vote, if for any reason the voter thinks it best to allow another person to use the votes which belong to him. For all cases are supposed to be deserving "per se," (whether they are all equally so is not the point for the voter, but the committee to consider), and we assume as a matter of fact, that no improper case is on the list, and that therefore the exercise of the voting power becomes simply a matter of private judgment and of individual discrimination. It must be remembered also that all exchanges, presuppose, the eventual good of some one or more candidates. They are not made at hazard or corruptly. They are not entered into from any unworthy motive. There is nothing prima facie wrong, legally or morally, about them, but they simply represent a use of the voting power, clearly within the voter's competence, to effect the election of a particular candidate, a special case. Now, let us suppose, as an illustration, the following incident, which as we know has taken place more than once. A charity committee of a province takes up the Girls' list, and finds that it has no candidate. But it knows, as a fact, that it will have a candidate at the October election. It has, say, 800 votes of its own, and it is aware that it will require 1200 to succeed. Is it not justified in saying to the charity committee of another province, "You have a case which you are anxious about, we will give you our 800 votes, on the condition that you give us 800 votes next April, which will ensure the return of our candidate, and leave us 400 to carry to the credit of our second candidate?" Is there any technical or moral wrong in such course of action? Nay, is it not both a fair and prudent course of proceeding? Admitted, if you like, that the votes might have been given to another case, yet, as these votes need not have been polled at all, the committee, as acting for the voters, having their "power of attorney" so to say, have a distinct right to use them so as to bring about the successful election of a fitting candidate, at another election, of their own. The great object of all provincial voting is to secure the election of provincial candidates, by the great power of voting aggregation, who otherwise would be "left out in the cold," and we feel sure of this, that any theory that you are bound to take a list of thirty names, say, and select the most distressing case, is an ideal and transcendental view of duty, alike unreal and unpractical, and unworkable to boot. If it were possible, which it is not, to lay down any abstract canons which could mark out infallibly the most distressing case, or cases, something might be advanced for so hyper-sentimental an argument, but as it is, we feel bound to relegate it to the "limbo" of many of those dogmatic declarations, those visionary and partial theories, however well meant, which practical experience must criticise, and common sense and kindly feeling must equally resist and reject.

THE EXCLUSION OF THE HEBREWS.

Thanks to Bro. Findel, we have now the case clearly before us, divested of all doubts and disputes, on a matter of fact. Two of the Grand Lodges of Germany, the Three Globes and the Great Countries G. Lodge, still unwisely keep out the Hebrews from initiation, and some private lodges of the Royal York. Bro. Findel thinks that the exclusion by the Three Globes will not long be maintained, though he seems to apprehend that it will be perpetuated in the Great Countries Lodge. We deeply regret the fact, that any German Grand Lodge should still maintain a relic of what may be fairly termed the despotism and superstition of the dark ages. We had hoped that we had outlived all such theories of intolerance, and all such teachings of irreligion. But it seems that there still linger among the Freemasons of Germany the crude dogmata of a mistaken mysticism, and the untenable assumptions of a so-called religious bigotry. We hope and trust that the day is not far distant, when all the German Grand Lodges will see that their unwise and unjust exclusion of Hebrews is put an end to, and that the sacred principles of toleration are practised as well as professed in all Masonic lodges and under all Masonic authorities in that important section of our great Masonic world. We do not go into the question which Bro. Findel has treated with his usual frankness and forcibleness of expression, as regards the position of the Great Countries G. Lodge, because we do not deny that the Great G. Countries Lodge is a lawful Grand Lodge, and has an inherent right to lay down its own laws for its own members, for those who belong to its lodges and acknowledge its jurisdiction. Though we should gladly wish that that Grand Lodge would have its avowed teaching, such as we consider Masonic, and equitable, and tolerant to all, yet, we must not forget that it is a lawful body, and has all along acted on these, to us, unwise and obsolete principles. It is no new law, no sudden act of retrogression, which has left the Hebrews out of its pale, and we therefore, while we deeply deplore its persistence in such intolerant principles, cannot say that it is "hors de la Maçonnerie." But it will be perfectly competent for all Grand Lodges, which uphold principles of Masonic toleration and philanthropy, to say to it, that until it removes from its laws an unjust exclusion, a most unfair proscription, it cannot expect to enjoy any recognition or mutual interchange, whether of representatives or courtesies. We do not say that all Grand Lodges are bound, so to speak, but all may say so, though we feel, that there is a good deal to be urged for the actual independence of each lawful Grand Lodge, and that this is a most important truth in itself, which cannot be lightly treated or carelessly overlooked. But our opinion is unchanged, that the exclusion of Hebrews from Freemasonry anywhere, under any pretence, is most impolitic and un-Masonic, and most antagonistic to the aims and teachings of Cosmopolitan Freemasonry. As a fact, we know, all of us, that the Hebrews make excellent Masons, and to say to any one, "you shall not be admitted because you are a Hebrew" is both, in our opinion, an outrage against justice and propriety, toleration and liberality, religion and brotherly good will. We have not gone either into Bro. Schiffmann's case, though we recognize that brother's literary merits and Masonic worth, because we feel strongly that, as outsiders, it is impossible for us to express our opinion on a matter (except generally and abstractedly), which requires us to act as judges, and hear both sides of the pleadings. We thank Bro. Findel, however, very warmly for his letter, which has the singular merit, in these long-winded days, of putting the whole matter, as a "matter of fact," clearly and condensedly before us.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

THE INSTALLATION ENGRAVING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The above engraving, as you and several friends are aware by ocular evidence, is now in a very advanced state, but I find on close examination that there is fully six or eight weeks of close and constant application to be given to it yet before I can pronounce it fit for the hands of Messrs. McQueen, the printers. As it is my ardent desire to produce a work worthy of the great event, and I trust satisfactory to all, I feel convinced, from opinions already expressed to me, that brethren will not grudge this delay in publication. It affords me much pleasure in stating that the encomiums of eminent official brethren, so far, are very encouraging, and I hope will but prove a forecast of the general verdict of the Craft. The blank spaces I expect to have finally occupied with portraits by Tuesday next, after which the efforts of the engraver will be occupied solely in producing effects of light and shade.

Thanking you heartily for your kind indulgence in permitting me to occupy your space so frequently, I remain, dear Sir and Brother, very truly and fraternally yours,
EDWD. J. HARTY.

213, Regent-street, W., May 17th, 1877.

ILLEGITIMACY AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to take exception to your answer to "Enquirer," in which you state that the "rule of the Craft is adverse to the reception of all not born of honest parentage."

As it is not the fault of the individual that he is illegitimate, I shall be glad to be favoured with a copy of the rule or law by which he is excluded from Freemasonry, according to the Grand Lodge of England.

One of our most talented Masons of the last century was an illegitimate, viz., Thomas Dunckerley, Provincial Grand Master and Grand Superintendent of a host of provinces, and according to the authority of the Grand Secretary of Scotland, Bro. D. Murray Lyon, that Grand Lodge has been equally liberal in its reception of such persons, if otherwise worthy.

Yours fraternally,

REVIRESCO.

[There is no law on the subject. We were talking of the unwritten "common law" of Masonry, and the "tongue of good report." Dunckerley is not quite a case in point.—Ed.]

CHARITY VOTING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me, Brother Editor, to warmly support your able leader on the subject of "Charity Voting," and to differ most positively from the previous communication of the Rev. Bro. R. J. Simpson, M.A., P.G.C.

It appears to me that the only security we can have that the various Royal Masonic Institutions of London shall be, in the main, used only for the purposes intended by the numerous donors, is by the present system of voting.

Each subscriber has now an opportunity to record his votes for the candidates he favours, whereas to delegate that power to a small committee would be to introduce, as you say, "favouritism and partiality."

It seems to me quite impossible that these excellent Institutions can be much abused under present circumstances, and, indeed, we know that they are not, but judging from other societies we have a sure index to guide us as to their fate if in the hands of a few individuals.

I think, however, that it is advisable that the petition of each candidate of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, &c., should be signed by the Master and Wardens, and a majority of the members present at any regular meeting of the lodge to which the father did or does belong, or by the lodge supporting the petition. As it is now any two subscribers can sign the application, which I consider an insufficient test.

Fraternally yours,

WM. JAMES HUGHAN, P.G.D.

MASONS' MARKS.—LAUSANNE CONGRESS AND THEIR BEARING UPON FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am interested in the letter of "W. E. N." in your last issue, and should like to see him contribute copies of these Masons' marks from both Jerusalem and Shushan. I do not doubt that Mr. Deutsche is correct in his statements and conclusions, and some years ago I pointed out that a large proportion of the old English marks were well formed letters of the Runic alphabet, but occasionally Masonic symbols, and even Roman letters. But as this truth did not square with the assertions of the recently concocted and modern Mark Degree, I was voted heterodox, and some Manchester agents, jewellers, and tailors went about saying, "Do not read his books and writings, they are spurious!" with a sign of horror.

This brings me apropos to the remarks of "One of the English Delegates to the Lausanne Congress," who is proposing that we should ignore the lodges of the erring Grand Orient of France, and that English Craft Masons should seek refuge and protection in the spurious Craft lodges of the spurious Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in France. This is to seek legitimacy in a way which the Craft will appreciate, but perhaps the letter is intended merely as a hint to their own members. The carefully concealed cloven-hoof of the English "Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite" is coming out with a vengeance. Will this worthy delegate oblige your readers by explaining fully what Lausanne adopted in relation to the Deity? I am told that they fell back upon the ancient Chinese Yang and Yin theory, which we explain by attraction and repulsion, and upon a denial themselves of the Being—God.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A jealousy (pardonable I trust) for the reputation of my province respecting the charities, and specially so at the present time while mourning for the loss of our late highly esteemed and respected R.W. Prov. G.M., Lord Shrewsbury, to whom is due to a great extent the awakening of the brethren to their duties in connection with the charities, will, I trust, be a sufficient excuse for my trespassing upon your time in calling attention to your article in last week's issue on the above subject. I find that the province of Staffordshire, although contributing the sum of £161 3s., is passed by without special notice, while the provinces of

Hertfordshire, contributing	...	£143	16	6
Wiltshire	"	122	0	0
Berks and Bucks	"	114	9	0
Northampton and Hunts	"	105	0	0

have all had special reference made of their returns, Staffordshire being classed among the "several smaller amounts," making up the provincial returns £4600. As I do not think this fair, either to the memory of our late lamented Prov. Grand Master, or to the charitable spirit of the province, which has for some time taken a respectable position at each of the festivals, I shall esteem it a favour if you will make some note of this in your next issue.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

T. MOUNT HUMPHRIES, P.M. 539,
Prov. G. Sup. of Works, Staffordshire,
Steward at Boys' Festival, 1876,
Steward at Girls' Festival, 1877.

P.S.—Out of the twenty-six lists as given out at the festival, Staffordshire then stood tenth in amount. I presume lists sent in subsequently have improved the position of Warwickshire.

[We quite agree with our brother's remarks. The omission was a pure oversight, and certainly most unjust to Staffordshire.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With reference to the letter of Bro. Little in your issue of last week, I shall feel obliged if you will allow me to inform your readers that the report was accurate, and faithfully represented the statement referred to. Whether the statement was inaccurate or not, there was no inaccuracy on the part of

MY LITTLE REVIEW.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have to call attention to the numerous errata in my little review of "Dame Europa's Remonstrance" in your last, which make my humble words read like utter nonsense. Whose fault that may be, I do not stop to enquire. "It is quite true," should be "It is quite time;" "able to pursue," "able to maintain;" "slim logic of facts," "stern logic of facts;" "Christian populations," "the Christian populations;" "diplomats," "diplomats;" and "supposition," "suppositions."

Be so good as to insert this explanation, and oblige, yours fraternally,

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Will you permit me to direct attention to one incident of the election on Friday, the 18th inst., which may be considered not only as an act of injustice to a poor candidate, who has been deprived of the benefits of the Institution, but as seriously damaging to the principle of election by the votes of subscribers.

Briefly, the circumstances appear to have been these:—

A brother representing a Prov. G.M. had been entrusted with a number of votes more than sufficient to ensure the election of a particular candidate, but in marking a portion of the proxies a tick was placed on one side of the name and the number of votes on the other, the number inadvertently being in the wrong column, so as to read opposite the name of another candidate, to whose credit the scrutineers (after observing the contradiction) passed the votes. A first appeal to the chairman was somewhat abruptly replied to by one of the scrutineers, and a subsequent demand for a scrutiny, after the declaration of numbers, was ruled out of order.

The consequence was a triplicate error. 1. A candidate whom a large number of subscribers desired to elect was excluded. 2. A candidate, who friends had already polled sufficient proxies for his election, received a large number of votes to which he had no right, and of which he had no need. 3. A candidate, for whose case comparatively few votes were recorded, was declared elected.

How can such a miscarriage of justice be rectified, and a repetition be avoided at future elections?

The only possible rectification would now appear to be that the excluded candidate should be declared by the Committee elected to fill the first vacancy subsequent to the day of election; and to prevent the recurrence of so serious a mistake, the duties of the scrutineers should be more clearly defined. Cases of doubt or difficulty should be always referred by them to the chairman of the meeting, whose decision alone should be recognised. Had this been done in the case under notice, this unpleasant circumstance could not have occurred. The chairman would at once have referred to the brethren representing the interested cases; one of whom would have claimed, the other repudiated, the proxies in question.

The case is a chapter of errors, to which each of the parties—candidate, scrutineers, and chairman—have contributed a verse. It will not, however, prove altogether an evil, if it should result in an improvement of our election regulations, and it is with this object that I ask you to invite attention to the matter.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
H. T. THOMPSON, P.M.

MASONIC ORPHAN SCHOOLS, DUBLIN.

The annual festival of Masonic charity was celebrated on the 8th May, in the Exhibition Palace, with a success alike worthy the cause and the influence of the Order. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of England, presided. Round him was gathered the cream of the Order and of Irish Society. There were noble lords and landed proprietors, merchant princes, the leading members of the learned professions, and of the middle classes—all these representing learning, rank, wealth, and commerce assembled under the chieftainship of a Prince of the Blood Royal in proclaiming to the world that the general outcome of Masonry is good will and charity. That his Royal Highness has faith in the principles of the Order, and desires initiation into all the arcana, the fact of his advancement beyond the domain of Craft Masonry fully attests. In conjunction with Lord Pelham Clinton, of the Rifle Brigade, he has lately obtained at the Freemasons' Hall in this city, the Mark Degree, the Royal Arch, and the other day, he became a Knight Templar. His Royal Highness is now Great Prior Elect for Ireland, and would have been in office ere this but for the sudden death of the Earl of Shrewsbury, who was to have come over specially to instal him. The sight which presented itself to his Royal Highness must have confirmed his opinion of the power and utility of the Order. Before him was arrayed a fashionable multitude of Freemasons and their lady friends, numbering fully seven thousand. Of the Masons the numbers who displayed badges were remarkable, showing to the eye what a widespread interest there exists in the cause of charity, and which the figures in the reports likewise testified to those who heard them read. The figures may be repeated here. During the year the receipts for the Boys' School amounted to £2375, exceeding those for the previous year by £493, and making, after paying expenses, a total to credit of £8869. In this school twenty-two boys are maintained. Of the Girls' School the account was still more satisfactory. During the year the receipts amounted to £5315, and the total to credit, after paying expenses, £8850. Forty-five girls are maintained. The foregoing figures demonstrate the thoroughness of the interest taken in this branch of the Masonic charity. Still they do not approach the sums contributed in England. At the annual Festival of Masonic Charity in London no less a sum than £12,000 is taken; and the liberality of the subscriptions may be inferred from the ability of the Grand Lodge to grant for two lifeboats, the sum of £4000, as a thank offering on the safe return from India of the Grand Master, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The enlightened, who know that Masonry is "a beautiful system of morality veiled in allegory," prize it and practise its tenets, while the ignorant question its principles and sneer at its mysteries. Freemasonry, the ignorant allege, is opposed to religion, social order, and the rule of kings. Yet Popes in past days granted the Masons bulls of protection and recommendation, as the precursors of religion and civilisation. Kings and princes of the present day are the chief rulers of the Craft. Its Chaplains are in most instances eminent divines, one of those of the Irish Grand Lodge being a Bishop. For sixty-four years the late Duke of Leinster—clarum et venerabile nomen!—was head of the Order in Ireland. There are those who will remember his grace's testimony in the House of Lords to its worth, obtaining, despite the ungenerous opposition of the emissaries of dogma and superstition, its exemption from the Illegal Oaths Act. Again, witness the testimony of Ireland's late popular viceroy, his Grace the Duke of Abercorn, the present Grand Master of Ireland, delivered this time twelve months, on an occasion similar to the present: "It gives me most sincere gratification (said his grace) that my first public appearance in the high position in which I have been placed as Grand Master of the Freemasons of Ireland has been an occasion which so fully exemplifies the leading object of our great and ancient Order. These objects are unity, benevolence and charity to all men; and in no way can these great principles be better or more usefully carried out than in contributing as far as lies in our power to the education and instruction of our rising generation in such a way as, by God's providence, may serve to render them sincere and good Christians, and also useful members of the universal brotherhood of mankind." On that same brilliant occasion another speaker, Colonel Ffoliot, who is remarkable both for his piety and loyalty, testified that the charity in whose cause they had met was "the noblest example of Masonry, in which everything was carried out in the exercise of practical Christian feelings and principles." Few there are, whatever they may think of Masonry, who will not regret that the cause of the absence of the Duke of Abercorn from this ceremonial is the continued indisposition of the Duchess. It may not be amiss to mention here that the present viceroy, his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, is also a brother of the mystic tie. Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from the Marquis of Headfort, Senior Grand Warden; the Earl of Bandon, Grand Secretary; the Most Rev. the Lord Bishop of Meath, Grand Chaplain; the Hon. David R. Plunket, Q.C., M.P., Senior Grand Deacon; the Earl of Huntingdon, Provincial Grand Master of the Midland Counties; Viscount Powerscourt, K.P., Provincial Grand Master of Wicklow and Wexford; the Marquis of Donegall, K.P., Provincial Grand Master of Antrim; Lord Harlech, Provincial Grand Master of North Connaught; and the Right Hon. Edward Gibson, M.P., Attorney-General for Ireland. All these noblemen and gentlemen, clerics and laymen, including those who make the laws of the land and those who administer them, are responsible guarantees for the utter untruth of accusations that the Order is anarchical, anti-social, and anti-religious. The repudiation of the "facts and fictions" in a vile print published in Dublin, purporting to disclose the secrets of the Order, will be hailed with satisfaction by the public, who do not doubt that Masons have their hearts in the right place. The Duke of Connaught, too, testified to the excellence of the Order, showing that "charity has ever been the first principle of Freemasonry;" and he also regretted the absence of the Grand Master, the Duke of Abercorn, "who takes a deep interest in the institution and in everything connected with Freemasonry." It is needless to say that his speech was cheered. The other speeches were characterised by ability and earnestness, vindicating "The Christian principles of Masonry."

The Solicitor-General was particularly happy in his speech of "thanks and hope," inculcating the performance of the grateful duty of "protecting the orphans of those brethren who die by the hands of those who survive," and pointing out that the present meeting was an answer to the calumnies uttered against the Order. The fraternity, he said, was one not of crime and secret, but of love and charity—the love beginning at the throne extending to the poorest brother of the Order. His announcement that the Grand Lodge of England was at present governed by three brothers, the sons of our Most Gracious Sovereign Lady the Queen, was greeted with prolonged cheers.

On the arrival of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught at 1.30, he was received by the Stewards, the band playing the National Anthem. A procession was then formed, consisting of the Grand Officers, the Provincial Grand Officers, Foreign representatives, and the officers of the Dublin lodges, who conducted his Royal Highness from the robing-room to the dais in the Grand Concert Room, through an avenue composed by the brethren; Bro. Charles Grandison playing Gounod's "Marche Romaine" on the organ, and the combined bands of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, under Bro. J. Brophy, and of the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons, under Bro. H. Murray, playing Mendelssohn's march from "Athalie" until the processionists took their places on the dais, in proper order.

Then came the pupils of the schools two-and-two, led by Stewards, the Hon. Secretaries, Bros. J. F. Elrington, Q.C., Major L. H. Deering, and the Assistant Secretary, Bro. Whitty, and some members of the committee. The girls were dressed in blue and white, and presented a pleased and happy appearance. They took their places on the front tier of the dais to the left, the boys occupying the right. Though absent, a salute, according to ancient usage, was given to the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, by a running fire of eleven "on the third coming down," taking the fire from the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master (R. W. Shekleton, Q.C.), who announced that the Duke of Abercorn is in the south of France. His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught was then accorded a similar salute, the even cadence of the fire in both instances telling with fine effect. Led by the Right Worshipful the Rev. John James MacSorley, Grand Chaplain, the rooth Psalm was sung, "With one consent," the ladies joining the brethren in producing a glorious volume of praiseful sound to the Almighty Architect of the Universe.

His Royal Highness wore the collar of the Senior Grand Warden of England, and on his left breast the stars of the Orders of the Garter and St. Patrick.

Bro. Dr. Elrington, Q.C., Hon. Sec., read the Governor's report of the Female Orphan School for the year ending the 31st December, 1876:—"The amount received from all sources, including the balance of £825 12s. 2d. from the former account, and proceeds of sale of stock, amounting to £1772 17s. 8d., was £5315 12s. 3d. The net revenue exceeds that of the previous year by £75 7s. 3d. The expenditure, including the purchase of a plot of ground adjoining the schoolhouse, and £1000 invested in railway securities, amounted to £3746 10s. 3d., leaving at 31st December, 1876, a balance of £1569 2s., out of which £1046 2s. 5d. has been invested in Indian Four Per Cent. Stock since the commencement of the present year. The increase in the receipts of the school arises principally from the annual subscriptions of individual and official governors, which is a very satisfactory source of increase. This class of subscription exceeds that of last year by £128 3s. 6d., [while the donations of Life Governors of all classes presents a decrease in the whole of £47 2s., which makes the net increase from donations and subscriptions amount to the sum of £81 1s. 6d. for the past year."

The report of the Boys' School was next read, from which we learn that "The total receipts from all sources exceeded those for the year 1875 by the sum of £493 19s. 5d. During the same period—the year 1876—six boys left the school. The number of boys at present maintained in the Institution is twenty-one, and they are still in the establishment of Bro. the Rev. S. S. Skeen, at Merriem. The committee continue to have special examinations of the boys at Midsummer and at Christmas; and they are happy to be able to state that the several examinations generally reported favourably on the results of the examinations. The committee cannot close their report without again urging the brethren in the country to come forward and support the Institution more liberally than they have hitherto done, and thus enable the committee to extend the benefits of the school, and to provide for a larger number of the orphans of their deceased brethren."

The Right Worshipful R. W. Shekleton, Q.C., Deputy Grand Master: I ask the brethren to assist me in saluting the patron of the Order represented by the Senior Grand Warden of England H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. The salute was given according to ancient custom.

Bro. Shekleton: I have been directed by the M.W. Grand Master, His Grace the Duke of Abercorn, to express his deep regret that he is not able to be present. He is absent in the south of Europe, and but for that he would have been at the annual distribution of prizes to the children of the Masonic Schools, in which he takes a deep and warm interest. I desire on behalf of the Order at large to return our thanks to the fairer portion of the audience for their kindness in attending here to-night. It is a great satisfaction to us that they have not been deterred from venturing amongst Masons by certain pictures which were exhibited recently in reference to Masonry. I am sure our lady friends do not consider that we Masons in Ireland, or Masons in any country, would participate in those barbarous and cruel atrocities which are portrayed in those pictures to which I refer. I can assure you those pictures and these facts are as unfounded as their anatomy is at fault. In these pictures they represent Masons as having their hearts at the right side. Now, I can assure you Masons hearts are at the left side, but though at the left side, they are in the right place.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, on coming forward to propose the first resolution was received with enthusiastic applause. He said: Most Worshipful Grand Master, my lords, ladies, and brethren, I have the pleasure to propose "That the report now read be circulated, and that the thanks of this meeting are due to the members of the several committees of the Institution, and also to the medical officers of the school, for the zealous and efficient manner in which they have discharged the duties devolving upon them, and for the lively interest they manifest in everything conducive to the prosperity and progress of the pupils of the Masonic Female Orphan School." I hope I may be allowed, sir, this opportunity of expressing to every one here present the great pleasure I feel in being present on this interesting occasion. As a Grand Officer of the Grand Lodge of England, this pleasure is very much enhanced by my being enabled to express to you the deep sympathy and interest taken by our Fellow Craftsmen in England with their brethren in this country. I have to thank you, sir, for affording me this opportunity of meeting so large and so influential a number of the Freemasons of Ireland. Charity has ever been the first principle of Freemasonry; and I am sure, when we look on this charming array of girls and boys, who show by their appearance and by what we have just heard, that everything connected with the mind and with the body is cared for. I say when we see this, I am sure you will agree with me, we should congratulate those connected with the Institution on the admirable manner in which they carry out this principle. I cannot sit down without expressing my deep regret that the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, his Grace the Duke of Abercorn, should be absent on this occasion. You all know the deep interest he takes in this Institution, and in everything connected with Freemasonry.

Judge Townsend, in seconding the resolution, spoke of the flourishing financial condition of the schools. He remembered the time when the total annual expenses did not amount to as much as one item of the expenses did now. A great deal of this was owing to those who were called governors, but who were merely subscribers. It could not be expected that the large number of those who were governors would pay any attention to the government of the school, and so it was managed by committees elected from out of these, and he (Judge Townsend) was quite certain everyone would agree with him that they had performed their duties well. The appearance presented by the pupils of the school that evening was a sufficient proof that their temporal condition had been well cared for, and the result of the examination showed how well their education had been looked after. They were a credit to the Institution in which they had been brought up, and to the exertions of the committee who directed the school.

The resolution was passed amidst applause.

General Darby Griffith moved the following resolution:—"That while acknowledging with gratitude the liberal support and assistance with which the Institution had hitherto been favoured, the governors would earnestly invite the co-operation of the brethren, in order to still further extend its usefulness." He said that as representative of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, who always felt the sincerest interest and sympathy with the Freemasons of Ireland, he had very great pleasure in being present that evening, and on being called to propose a resolution in favour of the noble Institution in which the interest felt was plainly manifested by the magnificent assemblage that evening. He felt the greater pleasure and an additional pride owing to the presence that evening of his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who had kindly consented to distribute the prizes to the orphans of their deceased brethren, the pupils of the Female Masonic School, which was a noble example of Christian charity. The report which had been read showed that the financial condition of the school was satisfactory; but the governors had further efforts in view, and they were deserving of hearty support.

The Solicitor-General in eloquent terms seconded the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

In the intervals between the speeches a selection of music was admirably played by the pupils on the piano-forte. Considering their tender age and the time they have been in the Institution, the proficiency they displayed was a satisfactory test of their training and talent. Each performance was cordially applauded.

The National Anthem having been sung, the procession was re-formed, and conducted the Duke of Connaught to the dais at the northern end of the glass building, where he performed the ceremony so gratifying to the students—namely, the distribution of the prizes.

[We are indebted for this admirable report to the courtesy of an Irish brother, and the Dublin Morning Mail.]

After the chapter had been opened and the introductory ceremony performed, Comp. H. J. Gratte delivered a short oration, and the ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Comp. H. J. Groves. P.G.O. of Monmouthshire.

When the chapter had been duly constituted Comp. Thos. John White was installed M.E.Z.; Comp. Rev. W. J. L. Standing H.; and Comp. Thomas James, J. The whole of the ceremony was most ably performed by Ex. Comp. Capt. S. George Homfray.

A vote of thanks was then unanimously passed to Comp. Capt. S. G. Homfray, for his kindness in coming such a distance to perform the ceremony, which was duly acknowledged by him.

Comp. T. J. Homfray then proposed and Comp. Stradling seconded over twenty-three candidates to be exalted.

The chapter was then closed in harmony, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet at the Salutation Hotel, presided over by Bro. T. Rule Owen.

The usual Masonic toasts were given, and in responding to "The Health of the Consecrating Officer" Comp. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray thanked the brethren for the compliment paid him, and said that it afforded him great pleasure to attend to the wishes of their P.G.M., Major T. A. Lloyd Phillips, an old esteemed friend of his, by attending to consecrate the chapter, and regretted that a family bereavement prevented his attendance.

Comps. H. J. Groves and Captain S. Geo. Homfray contributed much to the harmony of the evening.

A chapter was held on the following day, when twelve candidates were exalted, the ceremony being most ably performed by Ex. Comps. Capt. S. Geo. Homfray as M.E.Z.; H. J. Gratte as H.; and W. J. Morgan as J. and their skill in Masonry will be long remembered in the town of Haverfordwest.

Obituary.

BRO. FREDERICK PATTISON, P.G.W.

Another of the old familiar forms and faces in Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter will now be missed. Bro. Frederick Pattison, P.G. Warden, died at his residence, 11, Montague-place, Russell-square, on the 10th inst., with but little previous warning. The announcement will take the Craft by surprise, as, at his last appearance in public, he had about him all the external signs of the possession of the best bodily health. As an old Past Warden of England he usually occupied the J.G.W. chair when the J.G.W. for the year was unable to attend; and the regularity of his visits to Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, caused him to be looked upon as almost an essential part of the quarterly meetings of these two great bodies. Bro. Pattison was initiated on the 14th Feb., 1839, in the Lodge of Friendship, No. 6, of which lodge he became W.M. in 1849. In 1850 he joined the Royal Alpha, No. 16, and in that year he was appointed, by the late Earl of Zetland, Junior Grand Warden for the year. On the 26th of June, 1840, he was exalted in the Chapter of Friendship, No. 6, and became Z. of that chapter in 1856. In addition to being Grand Warden of Grand Lodge, Bro. Pattison was a Past Scribe N. of Grand Chapter; and his services to the Masonic charities, were comprised in his Life Governorship of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

FATHER BURKE AT ST. FINBARR'S.

The concluding sermon of the very successful retreat preached during the past week by the Very Rev. Fr. Burke, O.P., for the Men's Confraternity of the Holy Family and the working men of the south parish, was delivered on Saturday morning, immediately after the celebration of five o'clock Mass, at which a very large number of men communicated. Father Burke said—My dear brothers, I suppose we have not gone through our retreat, and opened our hearts to God, without making some resolutions, and I suppose these resolutions, principally are the following. First, never to neglect the monthly communion; secondly, to try in preparing for confession, to find the sorrow that springs from the love of Christ rather than from the fear of Him; thirdly, to try to sanctify our day and our day's work (as I told you yesterday morning) by mingling it with prayer, by offering it to God, and by thinking of God throughout the day, as often as we can making a little interior act of faith, of hope, of sorrow, or of love, as the case may be; fourthly (and perhaps I should have put this first), a resolution to avoid every occasion of sin, especially anything that could lead us, no matter how remotely, to the sin of drunkenness, or to the sin of impurity. I ask you also, my brothers, to make another resolution—to try and induce as many of your friends and your acquaintances as you can to enter the Confraternity, to become members of the Holy Family, to try to bring them within the sacred sacramental influences that it is your privilege to possess. Remember that whenever St. Joseph had a friend, or made an acquaintance, he always said to him, "come with me; there is a little child at home in my house, and I would like you to see him;" and he brought his friend, and brought his acquaintance, and the Child from Heaven blessed them, and they were saved. The Blessed Virgin also occupied herself amongst her neighbours and her friends, and brought them to Our Lord, saying, "Come, until I show you the little boy I have at home." And she would bring the women and all humble friends to Jesus, and He laid His hands upon them, and they were saved. Remember, you are members of the Holy Family. Remember, my brothers, you belong to Jesus, Mary and Joseph. Ah, try to bring your friends to them. Try to bring every poor fellow you may know or that comes under your influence—try to bring them to Jesus, to Mary, and to Joseph. You may, perhaps, think and say in your humility, "I have no influence. I have no power to bring any man." I deny it. I tell you you have. I tell you any Catholic man with the education that you have—and, now, I am speaking to the humblest man amongst you—with the knowledge of your faith that you have, with the education that you have, and above all, with the character that you have for morality and for sobriety—I say that that man has influence. He has influence amongst his fellow men, amongst his fellow labourers, he has an influence as great as I, perhaps, may have amongst my fellow priests. Use it, use it for God, use it for Jesus, Mary and Joseph. Ah, my brothers, though I am speaking to you from this pulpit, in heart and in mind, it is on my knees I am before you—on my knees I am before you, because so many amongst you, sitting around me here, have my Lord and my God in your hearts. You know how grand a thing it is and how sweet a thing it is to belong to the Holy Family of Nazareth. You know that there is nothing in this world—nothing that money could give, nothing that the world could give of honour or of dignity, nothing that genius or talent could give—to be compared with the joy of going up to the altar rail and receiving the Son of God, the Lord of Heaven, into your hearts; and you have done it this morning. Try to bring others, my dear brothers to the same happiness as you possess, and to make them members of the Holy Family. And if there be here this morning one man or boy who has not yet been enrolled, it is my parting request, and I beseech such a one to enter at once into the Confraternity—at once. For, we live in an age when the world is divided into two great camps—into two great confraternities—one belongs to God, the other belongs to the Devil. Freemasons, you have all heard of them, and they may call themselves by a dozen other names—they are banded together by secret oaths and obligations—for what purpose? To oppose the Catholic Church, to pull down the Catholic altar, and if possible, to put to death the Catholic priest for no crime under Heaven except that he chooses to lead a chaste life, and to speak the Word of God to his fellow Catholics. They are banded together, you know it. There are whole nations—Italy, a great part of France, Portugal, the Republics of South America—I know it, for I have been in those countries, and I have asked the priests and bishops—"What is your difficulty here? Why is it that you cannot manage your people?" "Ah! they are all Freemasons. We never can come near one of them." Now, if the devil is able to band his children together, why should not Almighty God, and the Lord that is in that tabernacle, band us together? And if we only unite and keep together, in humility, in charity, in poverty and prayer, we will be more than a match for all the devils in hell, and for all the men that choose to serve the devil upon this earth. In the darkest day of our national history, when there was a cloud of persecution over Ireland that rained blood upon the land; when our grandfathers—for we may start with them and go back two hundred years—were ground to the very earth in slavery and in bloodshed for the Catholic Faith, was not Ireland still more than a match for all her enemies? And to-day, with our improved education, and with our magnificent religious organisation, surely we can still triumph, and triumph easily, over every enemy and every power that Hell can bring amongst us, if we are only banded together. Therefore, oh my brothers, I ask you to be faithful to the great Confraternity, be faithful to the Holy Family, be united in God; and if you are united in God, you shall always be able to conquer everything, for "This is the victory that overcometh the world, our faith," says St. John the Evangelist. But, my brothers, I must also ask you now that I am taking my leave of you—I must also ask you to persevere. It is not the man that begins, nor it is not the man that perseveres for a time that is crowned; but it is the man who perseveres unto the end. "Be thou faithful unto death," that is to say, to the last moment, "and I will give thee the crown of life." These are the words of Christ. And now, if you ask me, How am I to be faithful? I will give you the secret in one word. If you want to be faithful unto death and to persevere, don't look beyond to-day. Be faithful to the graces of to-day. Say to yourself, "I don't know whether I will live until to-morrow. I don't know whether there is any to-morrow for me. I will just do what I ought to do to-day, as if it was the last day of my life. I will say my prayers to-day the best way I can, just as if I was certain that to-morrow I would be before my Judge. I will try to avoid temptation, and to fulfil all my duties to-day as well as I can." Don't be saying, "Oh, how on earth will I be able to live this way for the next twenty years?" Who told you you would live for twenty years? Who told you you would live for a day? Remember the words of our Lord "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," and sufficient unto the day are graces thereof too. Whatever confession then, you make, or whatever other duty you perform, just say to yourself, "Perhaps I will never have a chance of doing this again; I may be dead before to-morrow. I will try, then, to do it as well as I can." Live, as the proverb says, from hand to mouth from day to day. Be faithful to-day, and God will give you grace to be faithful to-morrow, and the next day, and the next day, until at length the day arrives which will crown your lives with the crowning grace of final perseverance; for "as a man liveth, so shall he die;" and the man that lives faithful to the grace of God in that grace shall die; and by that grace he shall be translated from glory unto glory, until he beholds the face of the Lord his God in the eternal kingdom.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.—The Eboracum Conclave, No. 137, will be consecrated at the Masonic Rooms, Micklegate, York, on Tuesday, the 29th inst., at three o'clock.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as samples, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.—Every variety of sore, ulcer, eruption, boil, and carbuncle is safely stopped by the timely application of this healing Ointment. It arrests unhealthy and substitutes healthy action, thus curing the inflamed, irritable, and spreading diseases affecting the skin. Holloway's Ointment has gained an imperishable fame for its facility in healing old inflammatory sores about the shins and ankles, and for bad legs and old wounds it cannot be equalled; nor is it less efficacious in gathering breasts and abscesses. When the complaint has been of long continuance, Holloway's Pills will expedite recovery if taken in those doses which act as alteratives on the stomach and tonics on the constitution.—ADVT.

ALEXANDRA PALACE LODGE (No. 1541).

—The usual meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 20th ult., at the Alexandra Palace, Muswell-hill, and the fineness of the day attracted a numerous attendance. Bro. G. Kelly King, W.M., presided, supported by Bros. Palmer, S.W.; Haigh, J.W.; Dyte, P.M.; Treas.; J. R. Stacey, and the rest of the officers, as well as several visitors, amongst whom were Bros. H. Thompson, P.M. 177 (Freemason); Durrant, Zetland, and several others whose names were not ascertained. The lodge having been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, when Bros. Ward and Rubenstein were passed; and afterwards it was opened in the Third Degree, and Bros. Sherrington and Croft were raised to the Sublime Degree of M.M., both ceremonies being most ably performed by the W.M. The lodge having been lowered to the First Degree, the next business was to proceed to the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and the choice fell unanimously upon Bro. Palmer, the S.W., and when it was announced that the vote was unanimous, there was loud cheering, which Bro. Palmer acknowledged. The next business was the election of a Treasurer for the ensuing year, and Bro. Dyte, P.M., also received a unanimous vote in his favour. It was then proposed that a Past Master's Jewel should be given to Bro. Kelly King, W.M., as a small testimony of the esteem in which he was held by the brethren, which was carried unanimously, and after some other business had been disposed of the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a splendid and sumptuous banquet, provided by Messrs. Bertram and Roberts, which left nothing to be desired, for it embraced every delicacy of the season. On the withdrawal of the cloth, the W.M., in proposing the first toast, said that Masons were proverbial for their loyalty to the throne. The Heir-apparent to the throne was their Grand Master, and two Royal Princes occupied the other two chairs in the Grand Lodge, and notwithstanding all the Papal denunciations, Freemasonry continued to increase and flourish. To make the toast Masonic, he proposed "The Queen and the Craft," a toast which was heartily responded to. The W.M. said that having sworn allegiance to the Queen, he asked them to drink the health of the Grand Master, the Prince of Wales, who did them the honour of presiding over them. They all knew how well he discharged all his engagements, and it was a great honour to them to have as their chief the heir to the throne, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. His Royal Highness had thoroughly identified himself with the Craft, whose fame had not only spread in this country, but throughout the world. As time was getting late, to save it, he coupled with the toast that of the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master; the Earl of Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master; and the rest of the Grand Officers, Past and Present. Drunk with great cheering. The acting I.P.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M.," and remarked that he had filled the chair for two years. That was the last occasion upon which they would have the pleasure of drinking his health as W. Master, and he was sure that as that was so, they would drink it with all the cordiality it deserved. The W.M. in reply, returned thanks for the kind manner in which they had accepted the toast proposed by their worthy brother. He felt great interest in Freemasonry, and especially so, as the original projector of that lodge, although not the originator, but without the assistance of kind friends he could do nothing. It was gratifying to him to have been connected with the lodge from its commencement, and also to see its prosperity, and he might say that they had scarcely any drawback from the beginning. As their first Master was unfortunately not able to be much with them his duty had devolved upon him, and although there might have been shortcomings on his part, he had done his best, and he believed he had presided over a truly happy family, and if they would allow him to say so, he looked upon them all as his children, and congratulated himself on having such a happy family. He hoped and trusted that that lodge would make its mark in the Craft, and having alluded to those connected with the press, and others who constituted the members, said he could not wish to meet with more social, genial, and hearty companions than the members of that lodge. The next toast was "The Visitors," which was briefly responded to. The W.M. said that without a good superstructure the edifice would soon fall to the ground, and without fresh members Freemasonry would soon come to an end, and he had to propose the health of three gentlemen who had become members of their Order, and he believed that they were proper persons to become Masons. He gave "The Health of their Brother Initiates." Bros. Rubenstein and Ford severally returned thanks. The W.M. proposed "The Health of Bro. Rooke, P.M.," who returned thanks, and also that of Bro. Doyle, Treas., and Bro. Stacey, Sec., and who also severally returned thanks. "The Health of the W.M. Elect" was next given, but as that worthy brother had been compelled to leave for Peterborough, Bro. Lee, his locum tenens, returned thanks in his stead. Some other toasts were given and responded to, and a very happy evening was brought to a close shortly after nine o'clock, when the W.M., members, and visitors returned to town by the Great Northern Railway.

SIR HUGH MYDDELTON LODGE (No. 1602).—This lodge held its installation meeting on Friday week at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. Bro. Elias Somers, W.M., presiding. The lodge was draped in consequence of the death of Bro. Ellen, J.D., whom the brethren followed to the grave two days prior to the meeting of the lodge. Lodge was fully attended, and all the officers were in their places. The members present were Bros. E. Somers, W.M.; Ed. G. Sim, S.W., W.M. elect, I. J. Coombs, J.W.; I. Weston, Treas.; J. Osborn, Sec., A. F. Rowley, S.D.; W. F. Poulton, D.C.; W. Morris, I.G.; J. H. Appeakein, C. Knight, J. G. Revell, H. Field, N. Dawson, J. H. Rafferty, R. Allison, G. Tarrant, T. Franklin, E. Adams, I. Gibbs, R. G. Thomas, N. Payne, J. Hiscock, C. I. Parslow, S. Rowley, G. S. Furlong, T. Upward. The visitors were Bros. Albert, P.G.P., P.M. 188 and 1017; Buss, Asst. G. Sec., Johnson, P.M. 468; Jones, P.M. 917; Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); Lazarus, P.M. 53; Wilson, P.M. 1298; Levy, P.M. 188; Howe, P.M. 1445, Asst. G. Purs.; Terry, P.M. 228, P.G.D.C. Herts; Todd, P.M. 183; Tongue, P.M. 534; Jaffa, J.D. 1579; Nathan, 205; Braine, S.W. 1471; Field, S.W. 917; Barham, W.M. 754; Pare, J.W. 185; Todd, P.M. 183, and Lee, W.M. 775. The lodge having transacted some business which was on the agenda paper, Bro. Edwd. G. Sim, S.W. and W.M. elect, proposed "That Bro. W. H. Lee, W.M. 975 and P.M. 1524, be elected an honorary member of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, in recognition of his services to it." He said there was nothing more difficult in founding a lodge than to be without a P.M.; but in this lodge Bro. Lee came forward at their W.M.'s request, and had been present every time of their meeting, and had done everything in his power to render the different ceremonies a success. In showing their appreciation of such services he (Bro. Sim) thought it the bounden duty of the brethren to pass this vote, in proof of the obligation they felt they were under to Bro. Lee. He believed that lodges were permitted to do this for brethren who had performed acts which called for some special mark of approbation. In making the motion he felt sure that it would meet with unanimous approval. Bro. Coombs, J.W., seconded the motion which was put by the W.M., and carried unanimously. There were no initiations, passings, or raisings before the brethren, and the only remaining work to be done was to instal Bro. Edward G. Sim, the W.M. elect, and this ceremony was performed by Bro. Somers, who also delivered the address to the W.M. Bro. Lee delivered the addresses to the Wardens and brethren. The officers appointed were Bros. Coombs, S.W.; Rowley, J.W.; J. Osborn, Sec.; Weston, S.D.; Norris, J.D.; Poulton, I.G.; Upward, Org.; Field, D.C.; Oppenheim, W.S.; and W. Steedman, P.M., Tyler. Bro. Somers, P.M., gave notice of motion, that the founders of the lodge be allowed to wear a founder's jewel; and Bro. Furlong afterwards moved a resolution of condolence on the part of the members of the lodge with the widow of Bro. Ellen, late J.D. He said that Bro. Ellen was one of the founders of the lodge, and was well known and respected by all the brethren. He was sure he was only echoing the sentiments of all present when he said that to know Bro. Ellen was to respect him. Bro. Ellen worked very hard for the purpose of establishing the lodge, and during his year of office he gained the affection of all with whom he came in contact. His death was a matter of very great regret to the brethren, and while the W.M. expressed his regret, the lodge felt equal regret that so promising a brother as their departed friend had been taken from amongst them so soon. Bro. Ellen had left a widow and orphan to mourn his loss, and to them it would be some consolation in their affliction to know that the brethren with whom he had been associated had passed a resolution expressing their feelings at the loss of this brother, and directing that a letter of condolence should be sent to his widow and child. Bro. R. G. Thomas seconded the motion. The W.M., in putting the resolution to the lodge, said he felt that though the family of their late brother might like to have this expression of feeling in writing, they could not wish a stronger mark of the esteem in which Bro. Ellen was held than that which was given two days ago, when all the brethren of the lodge, with one or two exceptions assembled at the cemetery to witness the committal of his remains to the earth. Nearly every member of the lodge was there, and no stronger token of their regard for their brother could be paid than was paid then. The motion was then put and carried unanimously. Lodge was thereupon closed, and the brethren proceeded to the Cock, Highbury, where a banquet was elegantly provided by Mr. R. Baker. The toasts followed, and "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," and "The Pro Grand M." having been received with the most loyal enthusiasm, the W.M. next proposed "The D.G.M. and the Grand Officers." He said that if it were not for the Grand Officers the lodges could not exist, and it was because the Grand Officers did their duty that the lodges got on so well. Everything was sure to go on amicably and well while a ship was well commanded and steered, and lodges had to look to Grand Lodge to take the helm of affairs in Masonry; and while it might be said that it did not depend upon one brother they knew the ark was made up of units, and it was to each one individually doing his duty that the success of the whole was attributable. Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, responded. In the person of the D.G.M. they had one of the best Grand Officers that ever took that rank. He was at all times alive to everything that required attention in Masonry, and he gave that attention without hesitation. The same might be said of every other Grand Officer. Bro. Albert, who was present, had gone through his year of office, and had thoroughly applied himself to its duties. All the Grand Officers felt as sensible as he (Bro. Buss) of the great compliment that had just been paid them. They were all anxious to perform their duties, and it was in the power of all to become Grand Officers some day or other, if they applied their minds to it (cries of "Oh, oh"). Well, here was Bro. Albert, who four years ago would not have thought it possible to become a Grand Officer; and Bro. Howe, who equally, a few months ago, would not have thought it possible that he could ever become a Grand Officer. Again, he (Bro. Buss) a short time ago could not have expected that he would be enrolled in the ranks of the Grand Officers. He supposed that there had been something in their abilities which had led the Grand Master to give them preferment. Of this, at least, he was quite sure, that the brethren chosen for Grand Office had always the best interests of the Craft at heart, and those Grand Officers who were present were not the least among those so disposed. Bro. Somers proposed "The W.M." Another captain had now the command of the ship, and he hoped the new commander would do it as well as he (Bro. Somers) had endeavoured to do. He had no doubt of it. The vessel was equally well officered; every appliance had been carefully provided, and he trusted the ship would be well manned. He looked to the brethren to support the new captain with the same readiness as they had the old one. He (Bro. Somers) had retired (he could no say on half pay), but he should still use his best exertions to persuade all volunteers who might join the lodge to help the W.M., and as far as he (Bro. Somers) was concerned, he would take care that Masonry was properly carried out. The brethren were all pleased to see his friend, Bro. Edward George Sim, installed in the chair of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, which he hoped would be a credit to the Craft. The brethren had endeavoured to the utmost to raise the lodge to the highest point; and when there was such an endeavour it was very seldom that failure was experienced. The W.M., replying, said he felt under a very great obligation to Bro. Somers for the remarks he had made, and to the brethren, not only for the cordiality with which they had received these remarks, but for having placed him at their head. He trusted that he should occupy the chair to their satisfaction, and that the duties which would devolve upon him during his year of office would be carried out with efficiency. In any way that they could command him in connection with the lodge he should consider himself at their service; in fact, he would consider himself under an obligation to them to do anything in his power for the benefit of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge. He trusted that his year of office would be a happy one, and a prosperous one for the lodge; and that, at the end of his year, he would have the same good feelings evinced towards him as had been shown on the present occasion to the worthy brother who now occupied the distinguished position of the P.M. In giving "The Health of the Visitors," the W.M. said that the brethren were always pleased to hear the expression of the opinion of the visitors on the subject of the conduct of lodge business. He was happy to say that visitors, especially those who held high offices in Masonry, considered it their privilege to express their opinions. It was as well that they should do so. For himself, he never would suggest for one moment that a visitor who held any position in Masonry, and who saw anything wrong, should not at once take the opportunity of having it corrected. By that means, lodges would do the thing that was right, and always keep Masonry pure. He then read the list of visitors as given above, and called upon Bros. Barham, Todd, and Braine to respond. These brethren having complied, the W.M. proposed "The Health of the Installing Master," and remarked that that brother had performed his duties in a very able manner. At the same time he would present to Bro. Somers a handsome and valuable Past Master's jewel, upon which when Bro. Somers looked at any time he would recal many pleasant evenings he had spent with the brethren. He could not look upon it without great pride, because it must remind him that he was one of the founders and the first W.M. of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, which he believed would occupy one of the first positions among all the lodges in the world. If it did not it would not be for want of its members endeavouring to raise it to its proper standard. He hoped the name of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge would, like that of the man whose name it bore, be a password for straightforward, honest, and honourable conduct. Bro. Somers, in reply, said that as one of the pioneers in the formation of the lodge he had learned that although he had succeeded the path was a rugged one, but those who did their duty honestly and satisfactorily to the Craft must not expect for a moment that they were going to find it a smooth, comfortable, or convenient way of travelling. Still it was a maxim in Masonry that the difficulties they found in the way should stimulate them to the performance of higher duties, to the which if they attained they would be placed ultimately in the proud position he had the honour now of occupying. He could only add that he had used his best exertions for the benefit of the lodges with which he had been associated, and he could distinctly assert that he had worked honestly and sincerely,

into the room, while it was undecided whether the candidates were or were not successful, and then when the scrutineers announced the result, to become aware of the gratifying intelligence that they were successful, it was a pleasing fact for all subscribers to know they had contributed to so much ultimate pleasure. He was pleased to say that the Girls' School was also eminently successful this year, having received £1500 above any amount yet contributed to it in one year. Thus £5300 had been realised at these two festivals beyond what had been obtained for these two charities in one year. If report spoke truly, he believed that at the next festival of the Boys' School at the Alexandra Palace on the 27th June, although he as Secretary of the Benevolent Institution had been able to announce the receipt of £13,300 on its behalf, a still larger amount was to be announced for the Boys' School. Well, the 190 boys now receiving the benefits of that Institution amply repaid all the amount laid out upon them. It might seem a large sum that each boy cost, and they were large sums that each Institution had to do with, but all he had to say on behalf of the Secretaries of the other Institutions, the Boys and Girls' Schools, was that they appreciated as well as himself (Bro. Terry) the efforts which were made by the lodges, and this lodge especially, for having sent in twelve months Stewards to bring in these large amounts. He had no doubt that the brother who would represent the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge at the Boys' Festival would be as eminently successful as the W.M. had been, and he could only express the wish that as the Worshipful Master's list had nearly doubled the list of Bro. Somers, the Steward for the Boys' Festival might be able to take up a list proportionately in advance of the Worshipful Master's. Year after year he hoped similar strides would be made, and that the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge would prove as great a benefactor to the Institution as Sir Hugh Myddelton was himself to the whole of humanity in London. As each new member was made in the lodge he hoped it would be impressed upon him that the whole success of the Institutions depended mainly on that one brother. If each brother would only follow up what the W.M. had said, and remember that charity consisted not in giving out of their abundance, but out of their acts of self-denial, they would be acting up to the true spirit of Freemasonry. After making a further appeal for the support of all the Masonic charities, Bro. Terry resumed his seat amidst loud applause. The brethren then honoured the other toasts and separated. A pleasing selection of music was performed by Bros. A. Hubbard, T. W. Simons, J. Fountain Meen, and F. H. Cozens, under the direction of Bro. A. Hubbard. Bro. J. F. Meen presided at the piano.

Sadler, P.M. 14, and others. The prosperity of the lodge has been very marked, as will be seen from the following facts, which has transpired in connection with it during the last twelve months. The lodge was consecrated on the 17th May, 1876, by the Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, Prov. G.M. for Bristol. Lieut.-Col. Somerville Burney was its first W.M. There are now seventy-eight members, of whom twenty-nine have been initiated in the lodge, or only one less than could have been made, according to the constitutions, at the six regular meetings. These members include, one peer one count, one baronet, two chevaliers, two M.P.'s, one ex-M.P., five priests, five justices of the peace, seventeen holding university or literary degrees, and thirty-eight who hold or have held commissions in the army, navy, or militia. Donations have been made of one hundred guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, one hundred guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and £50 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution; thus qualifying the lodge as a Vice-President of all these charities, a thing never before done by any lodge in the first year of its existence. The lists of the W.M. for these charities were large ones, and one member of the lodge became an annual subscriber of five guineas to each of the three charities. The Treasurer's account shows receipts £638 9s., and an expenditure of £624 0s. 11d. Nothing has been spent on banquets, agreeably with the bye-laws of the lodge; but several donations had been made from the charity fund of the lodge for special cases recommended, leaving a balance to credit of that fund of £6 0s. 3d. The W.M. having initiated, and raised candidates, Bro. Richardson did the passings, and Colonel Burney proceeded with the ceremony of installation, for which purpose Bro. Captain R. P. Leeson, S.W., was presented to him. Bro. Col. Burney then formally installed Capt. Leeson, and after this ceremony had been completed, the new W.M. invested the following brethren as his officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Alfred Watson, S.W.; Wemyss, J.W.; Frank Richardson, Treas.; Capt. Portlock Dadson, Sec.; R. Fyers, S.D.; Francis Compton, J.D.; Capt. C. Compton, D.C.; A. J. Dyer, Steward; Sauerbery, Org.; Rigby Thorne, I.G.; and George Austin, Tyler. After Capt. Leeson had been installed, he said to Col. Burney that he was exceedingly glad to have received this honour especially at the hands of Col. Burney, as it was on the introduction of that brother twenty-two years ago that he became a Mason. Col. Burney said that if Capt. Leeson remembered this circumstance with pleasure, he (Col. Burney) remembered with equal pleasure that in the founding of this lodge he received very great assistance from Capt. Leeson; and it was with eminent satisfaction he now handed over the government of the lodge to a brother who had its interests so thoroughly at heart, who knew so well how to exercise his powers, and was so well qualified to carry out the principles of the Craft. Before the lodge was closed a massive Past Master's jewel was presented to Col. Burney, I.P.M., and a similar jewel to Bro. Frank Richardson, Treasurer, for their great services to the lodge during the first year of the lodge's existence. The W.M., in moving the votes, recalled to the brethren's recollection the exertions of Col. Burney on the lodge's behalf, and the admirable way in which he had conducted the lodge business; and with regard to Bro. F. Richardson he said that brother had not only been Treasurer, but had also acted as P.M., and his time was always at the disposal of the W.M., which to a business man was a very great sacrifice. Capt. Hunter seconded both motions, and returned his best thanks to Bro. Richardson for having performed the office of the P.M., which he (Capt. Hunter), through being away on his professional avocations in Scotland and the country, had been unable to perform. When he accepted the office of P.M., his inability to attend was entirely unforeseen by him, and the lodge was under a debt of gratitude to Bro. Richardson for supplying his place. Col. Burney, in acknowledging the presentation to him, said he felt most grateful for this token of the brethren's approval. The prosperity of the Bayard Lodge had been a great source of gratification and pride to him. Twelve months ago he first conceived the idea of forming the lodge, and he was fortunate in accepting for it a name which not only was a name known in history as applied to a knight who had for his motto "Sans peur et sans reproche," which motto should at all times govern the actions of the lodge; but from circumstances which occurred at the moment he was enabled at second hand to pay a compliment to a brother for whom he had the highest regard and esteem, and who stood so high in the Craft generally (Capt. Philips). From the good feeling that had existed in the lodge from its commencement, he felt very proud to have originated it, and he felt sure and confident that in handing over the gavel to his worthy successor no one could have been selected who would more carry out the principles on which this lodge had been founded. He prayed God to grant the W.M. health and strength, and a long and prosperous career to the Bayard Lodge. Bro. Frank Richardson in returning thanks for his jewel, said he was sure that the prospects of the Bayard Lodge amply compensated one for any little trouble taken in the formation and work of the lodge. Such a lodge was a credit to the Craft and a credit to the members who belonged to it. He should always consider the jewel the brightest he had ever worn. Col. Burney said that although time pressed he felt bound to say a word with reference to a remark of Capt. Hunter. That brother was one of the first founders of the lodge, and he (Col. Burney) was only too pleased to appoint him as acting P.M. circumstances however occurred which prevented Capt. Hunter's regular attendance. Such circumstances did not often occur in a man's life, and the brethren wished him every happiness and a long life under those circumstances. In Capt. Hunter's absence he, Col. Burney, naturally turned to Bro. Richardson, who was also one of the founders of the lodge. He most kindly and readily agreed to act as P.M., and in addition to his duties as Treasurer rendered very great assistance as P.M. There were many little things in the government of a lodge of which the members knew nothing; and in the midst of Bro. Richardson's active professional engagements he was always open to come and render assistance. It was chiefly in a new lodge that such assistance was most felt. Bro. Frank Richardson here presented the lodge with an elegant offertory bag in place of the charity box. This bag bore the Bayard arms on one side, and Bro. Frank Richardson's arms on the other. A vote of thanks was then passed for Bro. Richardson's handsome present, and the vote was ordered to be recorded in the lodge minutes. The vote was moved by the W.M. and seconded by Col. Burney, who hoped that the bag might be well filled. Lodge was then closed and the brethren adjourned to the Café Royal, where a choice banquet was provided for them. After partaking of the same, grace was said, and the usual toasts were proposed. In proposing "The Queen and the Craft," the W.M. said the brethren all knew that her Majesty took a pleasure in relieving the wants of the most humble of her subjects, and in sympathising with the griefs of those highest in the social scale. After the toast of "The M.W.G.M." had been duly proposed and honoured, the W.M. proposed "The Pro G.M., the D.G.M., &c.," and, in reply, Bro. Monckton said that the way in which the W.M. had proposed, and the brethren had received the toast was nothing short of truly touching. It really brought the Grand Officers up with a run, and if he could emulate the short, sharp, and decisive fire with which the W.M. proposed the toast he would be glad. He would be in harmony with the W.M.'s style if he said merely "Thank you," and sat down, but there would be a want of grace about it. This was the first anniversary of a lodge that had had no precedent in the history of the Craft. It really was a most remarkable condition of things that at the end of the first year, on the second installation in the Bayard Lodge, they had subscribed so much to the charities. They had heard it, not to-night for the first time, but for some time past; it had been a sort of table talk in the lodges they had visited what the Bayard Lodge had done under its gallant chief, Col. Burney. As visitors they would be altogether wrong, and as Grand Officers of the Craft they would be altogether wrong, if they had let the opportunity slip by without thoroughly and fairly speaking of what was really a matter of very considerable comment in Masonry. He felt that it was due to this young gallant, and great lodge, that he should make a few remarks on this topic. They knew that Masonry was charity, and that Masonry without charity was nothing worth. What this lodge had done was a grand and almost incomprehensible act. The lodge had done a great thing, and the brethren of the Craft were proud in consequence to belong to a Craft to which such a lodge was attached. Col. Burney proposed "The Health of the W.M." They had heard stated in the lodge that twenty-two years ago he (Col. Burney) was the favoured individual who introduced the W.M. into Freemasonry. It had almost escaped his (Col. Burney's) memory, till it was recalled to him. He remembered having twenty-two years ago made the acquaintanceship of the W.M. From that day to the present he had felt most strongly and friendly towards him, as he had had an opportunity of seeing and knowing his worth, not only in Masonry but in other walks of life. He felt that a certain apology was due to the brethren of the lodge for taking on himself that evening a duty which would have been better performed more by a experienced brother but he had two reasons for doing so, the one Masonic, the other un-Masonic. The Masonic was that it was the duty of the outgoing Master to instal his successor; the other, non-Masonic, was a selfish one, because he felt the great pleasure in installing in the chair of this lodge a much esteemed and valued friend and brother. Now, he did not take credit to himself for the prosperity of the lodge, though he did as the founder. Thirteen months ago it was not thought of. As they had been honoured by the remarks of a most distinguished Grand Officer, there was nothing to be ashamed of in this lodge, and he would therefore offer with the greatest pride and satisfaction to the brethren the toast of his well beloved brother, Bro. Leeson, long life, health, and prosperity to him, and every happiness that he so richly deserved. The toast having been enthusiastically received the W.M. in acknowledging it said that the enthusiasm of the brethren was sufficient to make him think they were on board the Thunderer, had it not been that he knew that vessel had broken down. For this display of their feeling he was greatly indebted to them. It was a very high honour to be second W.M. of the Bayard Lodge. It was said that a rolling stone gathered no moss. Now, he had gathered none for twenty-two years, but he was now glad he had not, because if he had he would probably not have gathered the moss he had now acquired. As to his own capacity to carry on the lodge, he was in a certain sense aware that he had it, and he thought that a man who had not some self-reliance was nobody. At the same time he should rely on the advice and experience of the P.M.'s, the co-operation of the officers, and the good feeling, the "entente cordiale" of the members of the lodge. He would say nothing more. "The Health of the I.P.M." was responded to by Col. Burney, who said that the W.M. had thrown out a hint that the best way of returning thanks was in two words, "Thank you," and he would adopt that hint on this occasion. He would sit down with that, but he would take this opportunity of returning his most grateful thanks to the officers and the brethren of the lodge for the support they had given him during the past year. They would understand that these few words came from the bottom of his heart. Most heartily he thanked them. In proposing "The Visitors," the W.M., after referring to the great services of Bro. Hervey, reminded the brethren that they had present the Prov. G.M. of Kincardineshire among them. The lodges of the United Kingdom pulled together, and there was between them that "entente cordiale" of which he had before spoken. He himself knew what the welcome of a Scotch Mason was as he was raised in Scotland after being initiated in England. Bro. John Hervey, G.S., replying, said that he and all the other visitors had been delighted with the manner in which the business of the lodge had been carried out that evening, and he could appeal to the other visiting brethren for confirmation of his opinion of the hospitable reception they met with at the banquet. Of the I.P.M. he could confidently say that what he had done was most satisfactory. Onerous as the work was he had performed not only the three Craft Degrees that evening, but had installed his successor with an ability which must make the lodge as well as the visitors proud of him. There was another officer, too, the Treasurer, who deserved a word of praise, for his catering had been marked by the most liberal regard for the wants of the brethren. It would be a satisfaction to the lodge to know that the visitors had thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Capt. N. G. Philips, G.D., as one of the godfathers of the lodge, heartily congratulated the brethren on the satisfactory way in which the first year of its existence had come to a close, the lodge having qualified as Vice-President of the three Masonic charities. If every lodge would follow its example of being a non-dining lodge, and would devote its money to the charities in lieu of banquet, it would be very much to the advantage of the Order. Lord Inverurie, in his reply, alluded to the remark of the W.M. as to the lodges in the United Kingdom getting on well together, although occasionally their opinions differed slightly. The Bayard Lodge had made its name and its mark in the province of which he was Prov. G.M. in the north of Scotland. It was thought of so well down there that when Dr. Sandford asked him what lodge he should be initiated in in London, he immediately replied, the Bayard Lodge, 1615. Bros. Giles and Sandford replied to the toast of "The Initiates," both expressing their gratification at what they had seen, and their appreciation of the ceremony they had passed through. Bro. Alfred Watson, S.W., replied to the toast of "The Officers." He and his brother officers had served the I.P.M. with all possible loyalty and devotion, and had derived a great deal of pleasure from doing so, because they felt they would have been very ungrateful if they did not do all in their power for one who had done so much for them. The W.M. who now so worthily occupied the chair would also do everything he could for the officers and brethren, and therefore they would do everything they could for him. If, under such circumstances, the Bayard Lodge did not progress during the coming year as it had in the past, it would not be the fault of the officers of the lodge, who very much admired and had great affection for their W.M. Bro. Frank Richardson, Treasurer, thanking the brethren for the toast proposed for "The Treasurer and Secretary," in which the W.M. had said that without a good Secretary it was impossible for a lodge to have a good Master, said that in Bro. Portlock Dadson's absence, concurring with what the W.M. had said, he could safely assert that Capt. Dadson was one of the best Secretaries that ever acted for a lodge. As to the Treasurer, his duties were most pleasurable in one respect, that of receiving the money; to pay was the difficulty. He felt it a great honour to be elected Treasurer of such a lodge as the Bayard. He confessed that he had embarked in it with his good friend Colonel Burney, and had taken it up con amore and to promote the interests of the lodge. As long as the Bayard Lodge lasted, at all events as long as he lasted in good health and activity, he should be connected with the lodge and would use his best endeavours to promote its interests. Bro. Riach proposed "The Charities." In the exceptional position in which this lodge was placed by having become in its first year Vice-President of all the charities, he thought the brethren would be forgetting their duty to the Craft and to themselves if they did not drink "Success to all those Charities." As many of the brethren present had served the office of Steward in various lodges, he could not do better than select as a sponsor for this trust Major Shadwell Clerke, who represented the Friends in Council Lodge. In the last four, five, or six years that brother had perhaps done more for Masonic charity than any brother; and he had served as Steward for all the charities in that time. Major Shadwell Clerke responded. He had during his life had many surprises, but he confessed that he had never been taken so much aback as he was now by having his name coupled with this glorious toast. He must protest most strongly against it being supposed that there was any applicability between his name and this toast, because he had never done more than other brethren to justify it. Bro. Riach had proposed the toast of the Masonic Charities, and he presumed somebody must say something on the subject, and he very kindly named him (Major Clerke). Having been called upon he would say that Masons should try to show that Masonry was not all pleasure, that there was a certain amount of work connected with it; it was not all banquets and pleasant jovial meetings; for when they were enjoying themselves they should remember their poor and distressed brethren, the widows and the orphans of their deceased brethren. If they could afford to enjoy themselves at the festive board, they should also be able to put their hands in their pockets—try to do something for those poor and distressed people, whether they be their ancestors, forefathers as it were, their brothers' widows, or their brothers' orphan children. He hoped this would be always present to their minds, that they would not say as some people said, that the Masonic charities were a bore and a nuisance; but let them remember that the more charity they exercised, and the more they did, they were the more fully carrying out one of the leading features of Masonry—charity. In every possible way they should try to exercise that grand feature. It was not for him to say more about this. They all knew the great and glorious Institutions of the Order; they had two grand Schools and a Benevolent Institution. They knew what good these institutions did, and it was quite unnecessary for him to expatiate upon it. The thanks of those Institutions were due to no lodge more than the Bayard Lodge, which had so nobly and munificently come to the front during the past year. Let them hope that that lodge would persevere in the course it had marked out for itself, and that other lodges would follow its example. Some other toasts followed, and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

HENRY MUGGERIDGE LODGE (No. 1679).—The first regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Prince George, Park-road, Dalston, on Saturday, May 26th, the lodge having been consecrated the Saturday previous. Bro. Henry Muggeridge W.M., presided, and was supported by the following officers: Bros. Francis Fellows, S.W.; E. F. Storr, J.W.; James Lorkin, S.D.; Henry John, J.D.; J. H. Wilkin, I.G.; W. F. Darnell, D.C. Bro. J. B. Scriven, P.G.S., P.M. No. 5, acting as P.M., was elected a joining member. Messrs. Alfred Lack, Edwin Charles Dyer, and Compton F. Brown were balloted for and afterwards initiated into Freemasonry. The ceremony of initiation was finely rendered by Bro. Muggeridge. The officers, by their attention to the duties, assisted in making it a great success. So soon did all settle down to the work that you could scarcely imagine it was the first meeting of a new lodge. The visitors were Bros. Benj. Head, P.G.D.; A. H. Diaper, P.G.S. 5; F. D. R. Copestick, P.G.S.B. Herts; S. G. Myers, P.M. 715; Chas. Arkell, 192; H. J. Thompson, P.M. 192, 869, P.P.G.S.W. Herts; S. W. Clarke, D.C. 1348, who expressed themselves delighted with the business-like manner in which the lodge was opened and closed, also the solemn and impressive working. Bro. J. B. Scriven was unanimously elected Treasurer of the lodge. Notices for initiation and joining members were given for next meeting. The lodge was afterwards closed and adjourned till the fourth Saturday in July. The brethren then sat down to a very prettily decorated table, and partook of a banquet exceedingly well served. The W.M., after "The Queen and the Craft" had been duly honoured, proposed that of "The M.W.G.M.," and in doing so expressed his gratitude for the great honour the M.W.G.M. had conferred in granting a warrant for the lodge. In giving "The Health of the Pro Grand Master, &c.," the W.M. said: We are honoured this evening by a Grand Officer, Bro. Benj. Head, a brother in every way worthy of his position, not only for a lifetime devoted to Masonry, but the great services rendered to the different Masonic charities. Bro. Head, in responding, said the brethren all knew how great were the services rendered to the Craft by the Earl of Carnarvon. He (Bro. Head) had been a Mason fifty years, and if successful in his services he was very pleased, and trusted the Great Architect of the Universe would spare him for a few more years to be useful to the Craft, for in trying to do good it really does oneself good. In conclusion, he remarked that the Henry Muggeridge Lodge was fortunate in having as their first W.M. a brother who had done such great service in Masonic education. He wished the new lodge the success it deserved. Other toasts were given and responded to, and the W.M. in proposing "The Officers," remarked that on this occasion he had something particular to say in reference to Bro. Francis Fellows, the S.W. It was Bro. Fellows who conceived the idea of the Henry Muggeridge Lodge, and asked him (Bro. Muggeridge), to accept the position of First Master. Bro. Fellows was a hard-working Mason, also a charitable one, and without him the Henry Muggeridge Lodge would not be an accomplished fact. The Tyler's toast followed, and the brethren of the Henry Muggeridge Lodge extended the hand of good fellowship to each other, and the first meeting was brought to a close.

LANGTON LODGE (1673).—An emergency meeting of this lodge, which was consecrated on the 17th ult., by Bro. John Hervey, assisted by Bro. Thomas Fenn, P.G.D.; the Rev. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C.; and Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, was held on Wednesday evening, at the London Masonic Club, 101, Queen Victoria-street, under the presidency of Bro. H. D. Stead W.M. The brethren present were Bros. Joseph Langton, S.W.; F. C. Dobbins, J.W.; J. K. Stead, Treas.; A. Rosenthal, S.D.; J. A. Read, J.D.; T. A. Rumpff, Steward; A. C. Cooper, Steward; J. Ridley, D. F. Cooke, and John Morley. The visitors were Bros. A. C. Hunter, 1494; J. Morrell, P.M. 111, P.P.G.S. of W., Durham, H. Thomas, P.M. 277; John Gale, W.M. 715; H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); and Bro. Dunn, Sec. London Masonic Club. After the lodge had been opened the following brethren were balloted for as joining members:—Bros. T. Land, Sec.; J. A. Reid, S.D.; A. Rosenthal, J.D.; the Rev. W. Rosenthal, D.D., Chap.; F. S. Fuentes, I. G.; T. A. A. Rumpff, A. C. Cooper, Stwds.; T. J. Smith, D.C. The ballot having proved successful, after ballot the following gentlemen were introduced separately and initiated by the W.M. in first rate style: Joseph David Langton, Charles Edward Barnett, Peter McKinlay, G. C. Boor, W. W. Blackstone, D. F. Cooke, F. Flint, A. P. Fabian, B. T. Fountain, H. Rockingham, Gill, H. Mathews, J. F. Morley, E. W. Parkes, J. Ridley, E. G. Sim, Geo. T. Thorns, W. F. Taunton, S. White, J. P. White. There was no other business before the lodge, and it was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. At the conclusion of the feast grace was said and the toasts were proposed. The W.M. in proposing "The Queen and the Craft" said he rose with peculiar pleasure at this first business meeting of the Langton Lodge to propose the toast which was always first in the estimation of Englishmen in general and Masons in particular, "The Health of the Queen." He was sure he would have all the brethren with him when he said there was no sovereign on the earth who took a deeper interest in the well being of the subject than did her Majesty the Queen of England; and when they considered that that interest was not only extended to Englishmen in general but to Masons' own immediate constitution, when he saw the three chairs at their glorious Grand Lodge filled by three Princes of the Blood Royal he could not help coming to the conclusion that another link was forged in the chain which united Royalty to the noble Order. The W.M. next proposed "The Initiates." He said, as this was an emergency meeting Masons at such meetings dispensed with some of the formal toasts, and having done due honour to the toast of "The Queen" he would on this occasion proceed to propose another toast. This was something out of the ordinary course of proceeding at a regular lodge meeting, and with the permission of the brethren they would next drink "The Health of the Initiates." It was said that new blood was always required in old and ancient institutions. It was his opinion that if new blood was necessary in old institutions, it became doubly necessary in a new one like this lodge, and they were indeed pleased to see so many initiates contemplated joining the Langton. In proposing "The Health of the Initiates," he would remind those brethren that a very important charge was given to Masters of all lodges on their installation. They had had the beautiful ceremony of consecration there on the 17th of May, performed by the worthy Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey; and it was given in a style worth remembering. That brother said, "impress upon your initiates the dignity and value of Freemasonry, seriously admonish them never to disgrace it; teach them to practise outside the lodge those excellent precepts they are taught within it; that by discreet, virtuous, and modest conduct, they might prove to the world the beneficial effects of our ancient institution; that when any one is said to be a member of it, the world may know that he is one to whom the burdened heart may pour forth its sorrow, to whom the distressed may pour forth their suit, whose hand is extended by mercy, and whose heart is expanded by the benevolence that actuates humanity. That was the mode in which the initiates had taken their obligations that evening, and he was sure there would be no cause to say they had been backward in imbibing these precepts. The initiates would carry out all the obligations they had agreed to perform to the best of their power, and he trusted there would be many successors to them in the Langton Lodge. Bro. Langton, who was the first initiate of the lodge, replied first. He said he thanked the brethren exceedingly for the way in which they had drunk the toast, so feelingly proposed by the W.M. It was a great pleasure for him to be there for the first time, to call those around him brethren. There were, however, other pleasures connected with it; one was being initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry, and it made him long to see more. It was also a great pleasure to be initiated in a lodge which was named after his own father. But there was still a greater pleasure in being the first initiate in the Langton Lodge. He hoped that what he had done to-day would only become a stepping-stone to some thing higher in Masonry than the position he now held. Bro. McKinlay next replied. He had been very much pleased at his first step in Masonry. The discourse from the W.M. was of a nature which made it go straight to his heart. It was something we should remember through life. He would not say he had not been practising to become a Mason, because such an observation would be considered fulsome; but at any rate the ceremony he had impressed quite harmonised with his own feelings, and he hoped he should not be in any way a disgrace to Freemasonry, but on the contrary somewhat of an ornament to it. He should endeavour to carry out to the best of his ability the principles, the tenour of which he had heard in the lodge. Bro. Barnett also responded. He had been very deeply impressed with the ceremony he had gone through, and he hoped he should fulfil the promises and undertakings that he had uttered. On a future occasion he hoped to have an opportunity of addressing the brethren at greater length; but for the present he would content himself by simply thanking the brethren for the cordiality they had shown in the drinking of the toast proposed by the W.M. Bro. J. K. Stead, P.M., Treasurer, proposed "The Health of the W.M." It was scarcely necessary for him to say with what pleasure he did so, first as Treasurer, and secondly because the W.M. was his revered father. The brethren would agree with him that they had in the chair a Master eminently gratified to do credit to it, and when they heard, as they had that night, from one of their brother initiates that the ceremony he had performed was such that he would recollect as long as he lived, he thought that was a great testimony in favour of the ability with which the ceremony had been performed. The W.M. was well known to most of the brethren, and the fact was an ample excuse for not troubling them with a long speech in proposing his health. The W.M. in responding said,—"I rise under peculiar circumstances this time, because it is to thank you for a compliment which I really cannot feel I deserve; but at the same time I thank our good P.M. Stead for the kind way in which he has introduced my name to you, and I thank you also, brethren, for the very cordial response to his proposition. It affords me great pleasure to attend these meetings of the Langton Lodge, and I assure you nothing will give me greater pleasure than to be able to behave when my duty calls me, and to perform the duty to the best of my ability. I shall be delighted to find if my performance is to your satisfaction. While I am upon my legs, brethren, and offering you my warmest acknowledgments for the honours you have conferred upon me, there is a toast which I always feel great pleasure in proposing, and that is "The Health of our Visitors." Of them we have to-night a very distinguished assemblage. We have Bro. Morrell, P.M. 111, and Prov. G. Sup. of Works, Durham, Bro. H. Thomas, P.M. 277, Bro. Massey, P.M. 619, Bro. Gale, W.M. 715, Bro. Hunter, 1494, and Bro. Blunt, 1492. I beg to propose the health of those visitors, and to assure them that the more frequently they honour our lodge meetings with their presence the more we shall be pleased. It will afford me always the greatest pleasure when those visitors are here, and I hope that as our meetings increase month by month the number of our visitors may increase, and that we may always give the same welcome as we give them at this present hour. A very hearty reception having been given to this toast, Bro. Morrell in acknowledging it said it had afforded him great pleasure to be present to witness the beautiful rendering of the ceremony of initiation which had been given by the W.M. He had been now a visitor for many years at 16 or 17 Grand Lodges in England, Ireland, Scotland, the United States, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, France and Italy, and he had never been so well pleased as he had been that night with the performance of the Masonic ceremonies. He did not think there had been a word missed or misplaced, and he believed heartily what the candidates said that it would never be forgotten by them. He had also been much pleased to find that the son of the worthy brother after whom the lodge had been named was the first initiated in it. He was sure that candidate was a good one, but he thought equally well of the other two. They had as fine a three initiates as could have been got together, and one of them (Bro. Barnett) had proved himself to be a good musician as well as a good Mason. He wished the S.W. every success and that he might see his "bairns," as the Scotch called them, rise to the chair of the lodge. Not only that, but he wished to see the other initiates attain to the same honourable distinction; and he had no doubt from the way in which they had conducted and expressed themselves that they would do so. Bro. Gale also replied: As W.M. of 715 he felt great interest in Masonry. He had been connected with it some seven, eight, or nine years, and it was a pleasure to him that evening to see so goodly a company. He had come by the invitation of Bro. McKinlay with whom he had been associated some time, not in Masonry, but in something which was quite as good as Masonry, in the City of London, which was promoting the cause of charity. He had listened very attentively, as he always did, to the ceremony of initiation. Belonging to one of the chapter lodges, he had paid much attention for some years to the working of the sections, which were as beautiful a thing as a man could listen to, and when he saw any ceremonies performed it was a great delight to him to see them performed well, as the ceremony of initiation had been performed that evening. Bro. Thomas said that the brother opposite had made so good a speech that there was scarcely anything left for him to say. It was with feelings of great pleasure that he had been there that night to see the ceremony of initiation performed on one who was very dear to him. He hoped and believed it had made a deep impression on him which would last during his life. Masonry, if properly applied, could do nothing but good to every one who was a Mason. He could not help, although it was reiterating the remarks of his friend opposite, expressing the great pleasure he had experienced at the admirable manner in which the W.M. had performed the ceremony of initiation. He himself was initiated in the Crystal Palace Lodge, No. 742, and he then went to Lancashire, where they thought they could teach a great deal; but he came back to London, and he found that in London the Masons could equal the Masons of Lancashire. It was no untruth to say that the ceremonies could never be better performed than the initiation of candidates had been performed that evening. Bro. Blunt thanked the brethren in nearly the same terms, and expressed the pleasure he had had in seeing Bro. Barnett introduced into the Order. The W. M. proposed "The Officers of the Lodge." In doing so, he said he would not expect the brethren to feel as he felt just then, but as Master of the lodge he would be worth very little if he had not a first-class crew. He had a first-class crew, and he had to propose their health. He had to thank them for their close attention to the business of the lodge in all its preliminaries. In the formation of a lodge there was a great deal to do. The officers had rendered him great assistance in getting up the lodge, and he had to thank them for what they had done so enthusiastically. Bro. Langton, S.W., in his reply, said he fancied the W.M. had rather flattered the officers in speaking of their ability, for up to the present time he had had very little opportunity of testing it. He hoped, however, that on future occasions they would be able to prove the justice of his remarks. In answering for himself and his brother officers he was quite certain they had but one feeling and one desire, and that was to be as efficient as they possibly could be and to work with their W.M., whom they all were proud to have over them, and whom they would all endeavour to assist to the utmost. With reference to the remarks made by the visitors as to the working of the lodge, as those brethren came from many old lodges where the work was perfect, he thought that it was in the kindness of their hearts that they spoke so highly of the lodge working. This lodge was young, but by and bye it would improve, and the officers would then show that they were worthy of the kind observations that had been made. In speaking to this toast he wished to be permitted to make one observation, which, perhaps, would not be considered out of place, considering that this was the first meeting of the lodge after its consecration. Personally, he felt very proud to think that he had been so honoured by having a lodge named after him, not owing to any good quality in himself, he knew, but the reason of it was, and he thought the visitors ought to know it, that he had been one of the founders of the London Masonic Club, and being chairman of the club, those members who wished to form a lodge thought they could not do better than name it after him. But there was one interesting part of this proceeding which he could not pass over, that his son had been permitted to become the first initiate, and he had also to return thanks to Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, for the very great interest he evinced, and the cordiality he exhibited in obtaining a dispensation for his son, who was under age, to be the first initiate. He would like to mention another matter. The Past Grand Chaplain, Bro. Simpson, had delivered an excellent oration at the consecration of the lodge, in which he made some very kind observations on the circumstances connected with the name of the lodge, and with his (Bro. Langton's) son being the first initiate. It certainly went very much to his heart to hear the kind observation made by Bro. Simpson. He also thought that all the brethren would regret that a reporter of the Freemason was not present on the occasion, not for himself or for the members of the lodge, because they all knew one another and what took place; but when they found the Grand Officers came down in such large numbers, and the great interest they displayed, and the great trouble they took, that no record was preserved or what took place, must be a matter of regret to them all. It was no wish of any of them to exclude reporters from that meeting; it was only the result of pure accident. Bro. F. C. Dobbing, J.W., said after the exhaustive speech of Sir Bro. S.W., really he felt in the position of being considerably flashed, but the S.W. had fortunately given him one opportunity. Before he availed himself of the opportunity he must thank the W.M. for the very kind way in which he had proposed the health of the officers, and also the brethren for the very kind and cordial way in which they had received the toast. He spoke for himself only. The S.W. had mentioned the circumstance that at the consecration of the lodge the reporters of the press were conspicuous by their absence. He had had the misfortune to act as Honorary Secretary for the incipient Langton Lodge, and he must take upon himself to express his very sincere regret that the reporters were not asked to come. The fault was quite his own. Being entirely new to the very important duties of Secretary, until about five minutes before the ceremony of consecration took place, he had forgotten there was such a being as a reporter to the Masonic press. It was then suggested that the reporters should have been invited, but it was thought that it would be a very poor compliment to send for them at only five minutes notice. As a reporter was now present, he thought it best to explain the matter in order that it might go forth that no slight was intended, but that the want of an invitation to the press for the consecration ceremony was the result of a pure oversight. Bro. J. K. Stead added that as Treasurer he should endeavour to do his duty to the lodge, and requested that the brethren would give him the power to do it nobly. Bro. Laing then gave the Tyler's toast, and the brethren separated after spending a delightful evening.

Report of the Board of General Purposes :—

1. It having been represented to the Board that a brother had been raised to the Third Degree in twenty-five days only after having passed to the Second Degree, the circumstances were fully enquired into, and, in result, it was ordered that the brother be re-obligated, and the Lodge (No. 529) fined one guinea, and admonished to be more careful in future.

2. A complaint having been laid before the Board alleging that a candidate had been initiated into Masonry by the W. Master of Lodge No 820, whose name and description had not previously appeared in the lodge summons, as enjoined by the Book of Constitutions, such candidate being afterwards passed to the Second Degree, in the face of a protest, the lodge was duly summoned to appear before the Board by its Master and Wardens with the lodge warrants and books, and after the complaining Past Masters had been heard, as also the W. Master J. P. Master and other members, the Board arrived unanimously at the conclusion that not only was the Masonic offence fully proved, but so unsatisfactory a condition of things was found to exist in the lodge, that the Board suspended it from all its Masonic functions for the space of six months, and directed that the candidate in question should be regularly initiated and passed, before being entitled to Masonic position and privileges.

3. The Board of General Purposes further report that the number of the trustees of the real property of Grand Lodge, originally ten, has become by death and resignation reduced to four, and the Board recommend that the original number be made up by Grand Lodge, and that it be referred back to the Board to take the necessary steps for vesting in them the real property of Grand Lodge.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON.
President.

At the meeting of the 16th May, after the ordinary business was concluded, it was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the best thanks of the members of the board are eminently merited by the President for the great attention he has paid to the duties of the office, for the admirable manner in which he has discharged them, and the great courtesy and kindness he has on all occasions evinced to his colleagues, and they are therefore fraternally tendered to him.

(Signed) PETER DE LANDER LONG, Vice-President.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge Accounts at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 11th day of May instant, shewing a balance in the hands of the Grand Treasurer of £5,035 3s. 5d.; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary, for petty cash, £75; and for servant wages, £96 15s.

Appeal of Bro. John Locke, W. Master of the Royal Prince of Wales' Lodge, No. 857, Trinidad, against a sentence of expulsion from the Craft, pronounced upon him, and the erasure of the lodge, by the District Grand Lodge of Trinidad.

The annual report of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, dated the 17th of May, 1877, will be laid before Grand Lodge, and the following proposed alterations in the rules, which was then agreed to, will, in accordance with the laws of the Institution, be submitted for the approval of Grand Lodge, viz:—

To add to Law 1, page 15, after the words "husband's petition" the following:—"And in the event of a widow marrying again being left a widow, she shall still be eligible to become a candidate."

Proposed motion by Bro. Benjamin Head, P.G.D.:—That the sum of £70 be given from the Fund of General Purposes; that the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and widows of Freemasons, to supply the residents of the Institution at Croydon with coals during the winter season.

The list of lodges for which warrants have been granted by the M.W. Grand Master since the last Quarterly communication of Grand Lodge, twenty-five in number, will be given in our next.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF KENT.

By Bro. W. J. HUGHAN.

The new bye-laws have just been issued by the Prov. Grand Lodge of Kent, under the Prov. Mastership of the R.W. Bro. Lord Holmesdale, M.P., the Deputy Prov. G. Master being the energetic Bro. James Smith Eastes, P.Mc 709, Ashford, P. Prov. P.G.W. of Kent.

Of the bye-laws it is not my intention to say much just now, save to note that they are generally well arranged, and most suitable for the purpose intended.

We see that no "fee of honour" is payable on appointment as a Prov. G. Chaplain, but a guinea for that of P.G. Organist. We have known the latter to be balanced by another law, which provides that on the Prov. Grand Organist appearing professionally at any Prov. Grand Lodge he shall receive one guinea for his services, thus practically requiring no payment at all.

The duties of the various officers are well defined, and cannot fail to ensure efficiency.

The dues appear heavy as compared with other provinces we know of. Two shillings to the Prov. G. Lodge Fund, and two shillings to the Prov. G. Lodge Fund, payable every year for each member of a lodge in the province, making a total of four shillings in a payment, is we believe, in excess of most provinces, the maximum being generally two shillings. Not that we object to the raising of the annual payments much, only we think that the class to pay the increase should be the initiates. Many become initiated, and after taking the Three Degrees, decline to contribute any more, and as those who do contribute are really the main support of the Prov. and Grand Lodges, it hardly seems fair to make them pay the additional. We beg to suggest the payment of five shillings at least on each initiate for the year, especially as it appears in Kent no payment is levied for them whatever, save as with the regular subscribing members from year to year. The Prov. Grand Lodge Charity Fund is applied in obtaining for the lodges of the province the advantage of Life Governorships in the various Masonic Charities as the Prov. Grand Lodge shall direct.

The Prov. Grand Lodge of Kent was constituted in the year 1773, when the Hon. Robert Boyle Walsingham was appointed Prov. Grand Master by the M.W.G.M., Lord Petre.

In the following year the R.W. Bro. Captain Charles Frederick became the Prov. G. Master; Captain George Smith was installed Prov. G.M. at Chatham on the 7th July, 1777, and continued as the Masonic chief of Kent for some four years. Captain Smith is well known as the author of the "Use and Abuse of Freemasonry," published in London, A.D. 1783, and likewise as the author of "A Charge to the Lodge of Friendship," at Dover, December 27th, 1778.

The R.W. Bro. was Inspector of the Royal Academy at Woolwich, and took an active part in the progress of the Royal Arch degree in connection with the regular Masons.

In 1785 Colonel Sawbridge was installed in the City of Canterbury, and ten years afterwards a similar honour was conferred upon the R.W. Bro. William Perfect, M.D.

At Maidstone, A.D. 1810, Sir Walter J. James, Bart., was saluted as Prov. G.M., and was succeeded in 1814 by General Sir Samuel Hulse, who was the first Master of the distinguished Prince of Wales' Lodge, London, and took an active part in its eventful career.

The Hon. Twisleton Fiennes (afterwards Lord Saye and Seale) was appointed his successor in 1830, and was installed at Chatham, 10th August of the following year.

Lord Saye and Seale died 31st March, 1847, and in August following the R.W. Bro. Lebbens Charles Humfrey, Q.C., was placed in the chair of the Province.

The R.W. Bro. Charles Purton Cooper, Q.C., succeeded his brother Q.C. in 1853, having been installed at Folkestone on the 20th June. His name is well known to the readers of the late Freemasons' Magazine as the writer of a series of answers to correspondents, many of which evinced much appreciation of the character and scope of the Ancient and Honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons. These communications were made subsequent to his resignation of the office of Prov. G.M. in May, 1860, after which he appears to have resided in France.

The successor, happily for the Province, was the able craftsman Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., installed at Greenwich, 22nd October, 1860.

Ten Deputy Grand Masters have been appointed since 1774 to 1859. In 1860 Bro. William Francis Dobson, M.P., was invested and installed in that important office, and was succeeded in 1873 by Bro. Edward Water, P. Prov. G. Secretary; and from 1874 Bro. James Smith Eastes has been the Deputy Prov. Grand Master (Prov. S.G.W. 1861.)

We are sorry to notice that in 1860, the Prov. G.M. conferred the rank of Past D. Prov. G.M. on Bro. Thomas Hallows Past Prov. S.G.W., and that there were also other appointments to past rank. All such honours are illegal, the Book of Constitutions especially provides that past rank can only be conferred by the M.W. Grand Master, or the Grand Lodge, and never by a Prov. G.M. or a Prov. G. Lodge.

In 1869 two clergymen were Masters of lodges in the province during the year, and were appointed Prov. S.G.W. and Prov. J.G.W. at the Prov. Grand Lodge held at Brompton, on July 14th, 1869. We do not remember another such series of appointments, and from these unusual character we make note thereof, at the same time we hope that the recipients of the honour (Bros. the Rev. G. W. Ticklemore, M.A., and the Rev. J. H. Timmins, M.A.), will be preserved for many years as useful ornaments of the Craft.

From 1777 to 1839 the office of Grand Orator has been held by five brethren, the last being Bro. Thomas Hallows, on whom the position of Past Deputy Prov. G.M. was conferred as before noted. It has since 1839 been discontinued, and advisedly, as it is not provided for in the Constitutions.

The Grand Registrars, now termed Record Keepers, until 1839, and in 1831 and 1836 two brethren were appointed Grand Seal Keepers, but since then the office has been discontinued.

From 1860 to 1872 eleven appointments were made of Assistant Grand Secretary, but being contrary to the laws, that office has also been shelved. The Grand Superintendents of Works were called Grand Architects until 1839, and from 1777 to 1836, Grand Architects occur among the lists of officers. The Grand Directors of Ceremonies were known as Masters of Ceremonies until 1839, and the Grand Pursuivants as Inner Guards until 1840. The number of Grand Stewards of the Province from 1777 to 1860 seem to have been a matter of fancy, sometimes as many as twelve being so honoured, and at other times as few as two.

There have been but six Grand Tylers appointed from 1777 to 1874, one holding that office for apparently more than half a century, and another for fifteen years.

After the list of Prov. Grand Officers, is the roll of lodges in Kent for 1876, numbering in all forty, ten of which were warranted last century and twenty-two since 1860, so that the majority of the lodges date from a very late period. The oldest is the Royal Kent Lodge of Antiquity, chartered originally to meet in London A.D. 1723. All the following, however, have wrong dates ascribed to them by the compiler, and doubtless being of the "Athol" Constitution, has led to the error; the Grand Lodge Calendar leaving their dates of origin blank. Many interpret these blanks to mean ditto, and so insert the years noted before, on which the moderns were granted.

From the Provincial Grand Lodge Charity Fund we find that grants of twenty guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and ten guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys have been made to seventeen lodges from 1851 to 1862 inclusive, and of £20 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution to thirty-three lodges in the provinces from 1862 to 1876. Also grants of twenty guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls thirty-four times, and a similar sum thirty-three times to lodges in Kent, and in addition to these grand contributions qualifying the W.M.'s of such lodges to votes in perpetuity, the Prov. Grand Lodge has given from 1860 to 1876, in different sums, about £650, making in all a total of nearly £2000. This very large gift, be it remembered, is exclusive of the donations of the particular lodges and the brethren. All honour to the Prov. Grand Lodge and its members!

At the end of the interesting little book is a record of the Provincial Grand Festivals, and where held from 1777 to 1876. Chatham comes first, having entertained the Prov. Grand Lodge thirteen times, and is followed by Gravesend, and then Faversham and Margate, etc.

The following on the record of No. 20, as quoted in the Prov. G. Lodge By-Laws and History:—

"Whereas it appears by the records of the Grand Lodge that a warrant bearing date the 28th March, 1723, was issued under the Seal of Masonry, enabling certain brethren therein named to open and hold a Lodge of Freemasons at the Crown, Cripplegate, London, under, called, or known by the number 13, and whereas by the general closing up of the list of lodges in the year 1740, the said lodge became number 12. In the year 1748 the same lodge was removed to Chatham, in the County of Kent and by the closing up of the list of lodges in the year 1756 it became number 10, and which lodge, in consequence of the union of the two fraternities of Freemasons on the 27th day of December, 1873, became and is now registered in the books of the United Grand Lodge No. 20. In the year 1873, on petition by the lodge a Centenary Charter was granted, with permission to wear the Centenary Jewel."

In conclusion, we should note especially that office has been held on the Prov. Grand Lodge of Kent by two distinguished brethren, one now numbered with the departed, the other, we are glad to state, active as ever in the interests of Freemasonry—viz., the Rev. Jethro Inwood, B.A. Prov. G. Chaplain 1806, and the Rev. Thomas Robinson, M.A. P.M. 88 and 709 Prov. Senior Grand Warden 1874. We consider the little work reflects great credit on the compilers.

Masonic and General Tidings.

We have seen four very excellent photographs, which we greatly admire, of Bro. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, which have been taken by Bro. Haigh, (of Haigh and Hemery, 213, Regent-st.) We commend them to the notice of our brethren.

A meeting of the Grand Lodge of Sussex will be held this (Saturday) afternoon at 3-45 at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, for the purpose of the installation of Bro. Sir Walter Wyndham Burrell, Bart., M.P., as R.W. Prov. Grand Master of the Province. The ceremonies will be performed under the presidency of V.W. Bro. John Hervey, P.G.D., Grand Secretary, by members and officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge. A full report of the proceedings will be given in our next.

The next meeting of the Original, or Premier Red Cross Conclave of England will be held on Monday next, the 4th inst., at the Regent Masonic Hall, 8, Air-street, Regent-street, W., on which occasion V.I. Sir Knt. Rev. Dr. Ernest Brette (G.H. Prelate), will be enthroned as M.P.S.

The regular half yearly Convocation of the Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales, will be held on Tuesday, the 5th June, at the Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen-street. A Lodge of Instruction has been formed under the sanction of the Royal Alfred Lodge No. 780, to meet every Friday evening at 7 30 p.m. at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge.

The yacht Sunbeam, with Bro. T. Brassey, M.P. for Hastings, Mrs. Brassey, and family on board, arrived off that town between twelve and one on Saturday last, after accomplishing a trip round the world, the distance traversed being 36,000 miles under steam and canvas, the journey occupying forty-six weeks.

On Wednesday, the 29th ult., a conference and public meeting on the subject of spelling reform were held at the Society of Arts. The conference was presided over by the Rev. A. H. Sayce, Deputy Professor of Comparative Philology at Oxford University; and Bro. the Rev. R. Morris, LL.D. (Head Master Royal Masonic Institution for Boys), was chairman in the evening. Among the speakers were Dr. Gladstone, Dr. Angus, Dr. Murray, Sir C. Reed, and Mr. I. Pitman. Letters in support of the movement were read from the Bishop of Exeter and Mr. Lowe. The object of the meeting was to support the resolution of the School Board for London in favour of a Royal Commission of Inquiry on the subject. Resolutions were passed, and a deputation was appointed to lay them before the Education Department.

The consecration of the Stortford Royal Arch Chapter No. 409 will take place on Tuesday next, the 5th inst., at the Chequers Hotel, Bishops Stortford, at four o'clock. The officers designate are Comps. J. B. Scriven, Z.; V. W. Taylor, H.; and B. Head, J.

His Royal Highness Prince Leopold arrived in Oxford on Thursday, and at once proceeded to his rooms, in Canterbury Quadrangle, Christ Church, where he will stay for a few days. His Royal Highness was expected to have arrived on Monday to receive a Past Master's jewel for the Apollo Lodge, but he was unable to attend.—Evening Standard.

ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE.—The approaching anniversary of her Majesty's birthday will be marked by an important extension of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. The several classes of the Order will be enlarged, a step rendered necessary by the growth of the Colonial Empire, and the old offices of Prelate and Chancellor of the Order, which have been in abeyance since the revision of former statutes, will be revived. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will, on this occasion, be appointed an Extra Grand Cross of the Order, and there will be an unusually long list of honours conferred on persons who have rendered distinguished services or held high offices in the Colonies! His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge continues to be Grand Master of the Order. Her Majesty has nominated as Prelate of the Order the Bishop of Lichfield, long eminent as first Bishop of New Zealand. Mr. Charles Cox, who has ever held the combined offices of Secretary and Registrar, will be promoted to the office of Chancellor; Sir Albert Woods will retain the office of King-of-Arms, and Mr. R. G. W. Herbert and the Honourable R. H. Meade, of the Colonial Office, will be appointed respectively Secretary and Registrar of the Order.

THE IRISH MASONIC ORPHANS' SCHOOLS.

We are glad to note that the report of these useful and valuable institutions is so satisfactory. The receipts for the Girls' School amounted, it is stated, to £5315 12s. 3d. This was made up of balance, £825 11s. 2d.; sale of stock, £1772 17s. 8d., the remaining amount being annual subscriptions and donations—which exceeded the former year by £81 1s. 6d.; the excess of the gross income over last year being £75 7s. 3d. The expenditure, including the purchase of a plot of ground, and the investment of £1000, amounted to £3746 10s. 3d., leaving on December 31, 1876, a balance to account of £1569 2s., out of which the further sum of £1046 2s. 3d. has been invested. There are now forty-five girls in the school, five have left, four having found the positions of governess, and one a situation in a business establishment. As regards the boys, the receipts appear to have amounted, during 1876, to £2375, being £493 5s. 6d. in excess of 1875, there being twenty-one boys in the establishment of the Rev. S. S. Skeen, at Merriem. During 1876 six boys left the school, of whom two have obtained clerkships in railway companies, three are studying for the medical profession, and one is pursuing his general education. We congratulate our good brethren in Ireland on the satisfactory state of their educational institutions, to which we wish all success and development.

NOT BAD!

In our entirely reliable contemporary the Key-stone, whose weekly pages we carefully peruse, we find the following paragraph, which has naturally startled and affected us very deeply:—"A tramp was arrested in New Jersey last week, taken before a magistrate, and sentenced to three months. The justice, in explaining the sentence, remarked that while there was no evidence that the prisoner had been guilty of any crime, he thought it prudent to commit him, as he had the wild, haggard look of a man about to start a Masonic periodical." How far, for once, our sagacious contemporary has been taken in by some slipshod exchange, or how much of truth lies at the bottom (not of the well), but of this little story, we do not profess to say or attempt to realize, but we feel strongly that if it be based on any particle of verity, it has much to commend it to the serious attention of all grave and laughing philosophers amongst us. Alas! at the outset we all must feel, we think, what a remarkable commentary is thus offered, both on the value of Masonic publications, and the success of Masonic publishers. The joke is too pointed and too true. Those of us who have had much to do with Masonic literature, know well, that the difficulty of offering to a fastidious body like ours palatable and tempting literary wares is very great indeed. Some like one thing, some another; some prefer reports of lodge meetings, some dislike reports of lodge meetings; some look for archæology, others for addresses, and a large portion of the Order rather doubt whether there is much of use or good in a Masonic publication at all. Hence come constantly the accounts to us, and mainly across the Atlantic, of periodicals started only apparently to vanish away; of prosperous ventures rapidly defunct; of the obstacles which, even amid 600,000 brethren, Masonic publishers, and editors find in securing an audience or establishing a Masonic journal on a permanent basis and with a margin of fair profit. The Freemason makes no complaints, because, thanks to the liberality of its publisher and the friendliness of its large circle of readers, it has assumed a position at home and abroad which no other Masonic journal has ever been privileged to assert or to maintain in this country. But we should not be doing our duty to our Craft, if we did not point out, (yes, for selfish motives if you like, good Brother Growler), that the support of the Masonic press generally, is capable of large extension and more fraternal consideration.

For many, like the brother humorously described in a letter a little time back, read the Freemason not at their own expense, others have it at their club, others look at it in their lodge, others don't see it at all. Were all to act so, nothing in the shape of Masonic literature, we beg respectfully to observe, could stand, as Masonic literature save the Freemason never has stood in England, mainly owing to the great apathy of thousands of intelligent Masons. Luckily, the Freemason, as we said before, is now so well established that it pursues the even tenour of its way, both independent and fearless, asking for no support, bidding for no popularity, offering good value for money received, and simply appealing, on its own merits, to the best of all courts, after all, the great public court of Masonic approval and criticism. But it is not insensible to the sufferings and lamentations of others. If it be successful itself it owes its onward march of prosperity, augmenting year by year, to the manly efforts and straightforward course of its publisher alone. He has had no one to "back him up," or "run with him." He has had no purse to fall back on except his own; he has looked for no support, beyond what a Masonically conducted paper can fairly ask for, from a kindly and considerate Craft. And, therefore, when to-day we hear of one Masonic journal failing, another failing—when we listen to the outspoken complaints of those whose best hopes have been disappointed—the Freemason takes jest and faultfinding, the skit and the grumble, quite complacently and calmly, as knowing that its friends are many and its circulation large, and feeling sure that in future, as in past and present, it will zealously uphold the fair fame of Masonic journalism, and earnestly labour for the best interests of the Craft.

THE INTOLERANCE OF THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

We take from the Monde Maconnique for May the following story, which appeared originally in the Independance Belge, and which we allow to speak for itself, in the language of the Monde Maconnique: "Un médecin de Mons devait épouser une jeune fille appartenant à l'une des familles les plus honorables de Fraternités, et il avait consenti, quoique libre penseur, à sacrifier au préjugé mondain et à passer par l'église. A la date fixée pour la publication des bans, aucune annonce n'est cependant faite au prône. Le père de la fiancée de courir chez le curé, qui le rassure:—Soyez sans crainte, M. M., il n'y a eu qu'un oubli, le cas s'est déjà présenté, et le mariage pourra avoir lieu à la date arrêtée par vous; mon vicaire se rendra à Tournai et reviendra avec l'autorisation nécessaire. Et M. M., d'attendre en toute quiétude la célèbre du mariage. Mais, le jour de la noce, au moment où la fiancée donnait les derniers soins à sa toilette, arrive une lettre de M. le curé notifiant à M. M., qu'il ne pourra y avoir bénédiction religieuse que si le futur s'abjure sa foi maconnique." Le futur de s'écrier qu'il n'abjure rien, et la fiancée de s'en rapporter, en femme intelligente, à la décision de l'homme qui, dans quelques instants, doit devenir son époux. Les parents hésitent un peu,—hésitation compréhensible, le préjugé est là,—puis enfin une bonne résolution est prise: pas de bénédiction religieuse. L'intolérance cléricale sert admirablement, on le voit, la cause de la libre pensée." By this it will be seen that the Roman Catholic Church in Belgium not only refuses to bury the dead, but to bless any living Freemasons. It is most lamentable, indeed, in 1877 to peruse such a record of rampant bigotry, to realize such a state of things, defended too on the grounds of religion and, pro pudor, Christianity. The Roman Catholic church need not feel astonished that "libres penseurs" abound, when such proceedings, so repugnant to right, reason, and common sense, take place openly, when such fanaticism prevails, which, condemned by all liberal and upright minds, must shock all deeply who are not hopelessly prejudiced by the irreligious outrages of a semi-pagan teaching. We say nothing of the young lady, of the story herself, whose sensitive feelings at that most serious moment were so unaccountably injured, but who was probably able to support even this "excess" of religious intolerance with the chivalry of a well dressed bride, and the presence of mind of one who was "quite in earnest." We call attention also, favoured by a kind correspondent, to a pretty little outburst of Roman Catholic intolerance in Ireland, which appeared in last Freemason, page 213. What, we would venture to ask, is the cause of the Rev. Father Burke's fervid diatribe? Whence this unceasing fear and hatred of Freemasonry? Is it that, like those whose empire is assailed by the progress of education and religion, the Roman Catholic clergy dislike light and truth, and loyalty and charity, and good feeling and brotherly love? Is it that they are making frantic efforts to preserve the faltering "regime" of intolerance, violence, irreligion, and superstition? For whatever be the cause just now, these violent words and unseemly oburgations and intemperate assertions pass all bounds of decency and decorum. Their dismay and their delusions, their fears and their facts, are equally contemptible, and we shall henceforth class all Ultramontane assailants among those nuisances which everybody most anxiously avoids and guards against, whether cantankerous complainants or Colorado Beetles, whether dancing dervishes or hopeless fanatics.

WHERE ARE WE GOING TO?

A French brother, H. Valleton, who lives in London at this moment, and is mixed up with the spurious so-called Grand Loge des Philadelphes, (a great impertinence, by the way, to the Grand Lodge of England, the only lawful and legal authority in this country), coolly makes the following proposition in the last Monde Maçonique, and which we regret to see in any way sanctioned by that Masonic periodical, to which we have elsewhere alluded in friendly terms. This ingenuous and ingenious youth suggests (page 23) a panacea of his own to take the place of the suppressed article of the Constitution relative to the "existence of God," &c., and which suppression, he calmly adds, draws with it the invocation to the G.A.O.T.U. This is his modest suggestion as a substitution:—"A la gloire et au développement du Progrès Humain! A la gloire de tous ceux et celles qui, illustres ou obscurs, Franc-maçons ou profanes, y ont contribué, y contribuent, ou y contribueront généreusement." This is Masonic socialism, revolution with a vengeance, and anything more childish, ridiculous, or pitiable we have never seen, and can only suppose that the writer is seriously suffering from "communism on the brain." We wish that Bro. Valleton would be particular as to his statements. He declares, "catégoriquement," that he has published these "formules claires, brèves et universellement compréhensives," . . . "sous notre initiative individuelle dans les journaux Maçonniques," "de Londres." We ask him openly as before English and French Freemasons, in what English journal this farago of nonsense has been allowed to appear? As far as we know the statement is utterly unfounded in fact. We shall recur to the subject.

THE "MONDE MACONNIQUE."

With the number for May the Monde Maçonique commences its twentieth volume. We congratulate it on its past; we wish it all good for the future. It is true that the Monde Maçonique and the Freemason have recently had a few words, but, like honest and honourable opponents, we bear each other no ill-will, and as brother Masons we are happy to shake hands. It is because we don't believe in "mealy mouthedness" at all, that we have spoken, as we always do, and always shall do, frankly and fearlessly, but our "heartly good wishes" go with the Monde Maçonique on its own merits, which are very great. We are fully sensible, and none more so, both of the importance and the difficulties and drawbacks of all Masonic journalism. The last number of the Monde Maçonique is a most interesting one in many respects, and we trust that it will retain its high character, carefully avoiding the Charibdis of Masonic twaddle, and the Scylla of Masonic socialism.

Some of its contributors do not appear to us either the wisest of mortals, or the most Masonic of Masons.

A LITTLE APOLOGY.

In our last Freemason appeared, in a letter of Bro. John Yarker's, which, unfortunately, escaped editorial supervision, the following line:—"Some Manchester agents, jewellers, and tailors." Now, on our avowed principle of non-personality, such a paragraph ought never to have appeared at all, inasmuch as it violates the two great canons of Masonic toleration and courtesy. "Agents, jewellers, or tailors," even may be just as good Masons as our correspondent, or anybody else, and have as much right to their opinion, and we are bound to pay as much respect to it. We can only repeat that the publication of these words was an oversight, and that we will be "better boys for the future." We apologise to those for whom, (be they who they were,) the remark is meant, which should never have appeared at all.

Original Correspondence.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for, or even as approving of the opinions expressed by our correspondents, but we wish, in a spirit of fair play to all, to permit—within certain necessary limits—free discussion.—Ed.]

CHARITY VOTING.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Although your article on "Charity Voting" takes an opposite view to that held by many, in common with myself, I am glad you have opened up the discussion, and I will ask your permission to say a few more words on this subject.

And, first, I must beg to take exception to the very basis on which your whole article was founded. I certainly did not in any sentence of my letter propose the abolition of voting, on the contrary, I clearly contended for a reform of the abuses attaching to the voting system.

I proposed to take from no brother or lodge their "voting privileges," and hence suggested no "revolution."

I proposed no "committee in London," although I am ready in all Masonic "charity" to believe that such a committee could act without "favouritism or partiality."

I hope, therefore, dear Sir and Brother, that you will kindly reconsider the real points at issue, which perhaps I did not put with sufficient perspicuity to avoid misapprehension.

I am very glad to find there is "one point" on which you agree with me, and that is a very fundamental one, the need of "a little more enquiry"—I would venture to say much more—and I look forward with hope to your urging this point at least on the attention of the brethren. The other points will, I hope, speak for themselves.

I must strongly demur to your arguments in favour of "the Exchange of Votes." It is true no one is compelled to use his vote; but, if he does so, he is bound to do so intelligently and with a sense of responsibility. If he does not do so, it is clear that the main object of the vote is left out of sight altogether—namely, the personal claims of the candidates. To vote, merely "to oblige a friend," or to assist A., about whom you know nothing, in order to aid B. next election, about whom you know something more, is, in my humble opinion, a mere gambling in votes, and sounds oddly, when mentioned in connection with the sacred name of "charity."

You say "all cases are deserving," and "assume that no improper cases are on the list."

If many of your correspondents and of our brethren be worthy of credit, these two assumptions cannot hold water for a moment. Besides, it is well known that amongst even twenty cases passed as "eligible," the antecedents, the surroundings, the relative claims are as far removed as the North and South Poles.

On principle, exchanges cannot be justified. In practice, they are the fruitful source of much misunderstanding, much bickering, much heart-burning. They have often led to something like dishonesty, and have been the subject of an expensive and not very creditable law-suit.

As to the poor candidates, what between canvassing, exchanging, and polling day, every struggle of self-help, and every sense of self-respect are apt to be stifled in waiting for the issue of a haphazard competition, the chances of which defy calculation. The anxious expectation of a whole family may end in nothing but an acquired taint of mendicancy. The lesson of solicitation once learned thoroughly, is likely to be repeated again and again at other times, and for other purposes.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

R. J. SIMPSON.

[We will call attention to our worthy brother's letter in our next, and explain what he appears to have misunderstood. As regard exchanges we hold our brother to be quite in error.—Ed.]

THE ANCIENT FREEMASONS AS OPERATIVE MASONS AND RELIGIOUS BUILDERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

It has long been a very general belief among the uninitiated that the world is indebted solely to the monks and regular clergy of the Church of Rome for the many splendid edifices that have been erected in mediæval times, more especially for religious purposes. Recent archaeological research has however given this general belief a rather rude shaking, and it is now considered by thoughtful enquirers into the subject that it is scarcely reasonable to suppose that the stupendous cathedrals, the famous castles, and grand cloisters which have been erected in mediæval times, with less wealth and, fewer mechanical aids than we now possess, can have been contributed by mere churchmen, however talented they may have been as artists or mere designers of outline. Even if it be conceded (for argument's sake) that we are to a very great extent indebted to the churchmen for the design of those splendid edifices, it must be admitted that the construction of these buildings would have been impossible without the intelligent co-operation of superior minds (such as the old peripatetic Master Masons) to direct the labours of the skilled workmen or fellow Craft Masons. This will be self-evident to any one who will take the trouble to consider what would be the result of placing an ordinary modern architect in command of a number of bricklayers, masons, carpenters, and other artisans without the assistance of a directing head who is perfectly familiar with the mechanical appliances required for the task. The architect may make a very beautiful design for a new building (say a cathedral), but he has not the least idea how to instruct the "hands" to carry out his design. This is not his business, and it requires many years and great experience to do this kind of work properly. Considering the greater invention, more accurate diversity, purer taste, superior judgment, and higher knowledge displayed in the old buildings in comparison with the wretched imitations of after ages, it must be self-evident that the builders of these edifices were a highly educated, intelligent, special class of men, such as were the Freemasons of old. A work I have lately been reading contains (although it is in no way connected with Freemasonry) some curious information which will be found very interesting, and bears so directly on the question above referred to, that it is desirable these particulars should be more generally known among the Craft. From this source we learn that the education and science of the old Freemasons remained known only to themselves, and were transmitted, not so much by writing as by memory. They handed down their special knowledge from one generation to another by word of mouth and by a rigid system. This knowledge included their science of memory, their methods of calculation, and the principles upon which they proceeded. It is said that they were trained to recognise and trace the laws of God's creation and the government of His creation in animal and vegetable life, and to combine the deductions of such study with the properties, the relations, and the combinations of the powers and proportions of numbers; the universe itself, the very elements, and the whole world, being in their belief created and preserved by the rhythm of numbers.

It will be interesting to Royal Arch Masons to know that Ravius in his "Steinmetzen Grund," published A.D. 1548, calls the Circle and the Triangle "the two most distinguishing principles of stone-masons," and also that "the divisions of the equilateral triangle are the primitive and most distinguishing marks of ancient cathedrals." Arithmetic and geometry were typified by those two signs, and were held to be the sole and only laws or stand-points which prevailed the whole of creation; laws so fixed and immutable that neither necessity nor time could influence them. These signs were given to the ancients as emblems of the highest science, and they remained among the Eastern nations as symbols of Deity itself. In India the Triangle and the Circle are recognised as the unchangeable Yantras or symbols of the Hindoo religion. The chronology of the Triangle is fixed as the mark or Yantra of Siva, the equal of Brahma, the Triune. The Triangle within the Circle represents the Yantra of the Hindoo Triad; the Circle within the Triangle the Yantra or symbol of Unity in Trinity; and the crossing of one Triangle on another Triangle is the Sherkum or sign of Vishnu and Mahadeva, signifying [their union and the oneness of their power. Those very Yantras or God-signs present the same shape and forms as Gothic architecture embodies in every possible combination and variety, from the first proposition of Euclid (the construction of the equilateral triangle), which gives the fundamental forms of the Cathedrals of Cologne and Milan, to all the other distinctive features of the old cathedrals. It appears that these primordial roots of form (which were the signs of Hindoo faith) were also the usual and ordinary signs by which the old Freemasons designated themselves in signing their work for the inspection of the overseer or master. It is stated that these marks are to be found very widely spread throughout nearly the whole of the then civilised world. This communication has however already so far exceeded all reasonable limits that I must defer to another occasion the further consideration of this most interesting subject.

I remain, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. E. N., No. 766.

ILLEGITIMACY AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Neither the answer to "Enquirer" in your issue of the 19th of May, nor the editorial remark on the letter of "Revivisco" in that of the 26th of May, seems to me fairly to meet the question raised by "Enquirer."

I had fully expected some remarks on the subject from some better known brother than myself, but I trust that you will allow the following observations to appear in the next number of your widely circulated paper, because, I think, there should be no misapprehension on such a matter.

You remark, in answer to "Enquirer," "The rule of he Craft is adverse to the reception of all not born of "honest parentage," and in commenting upon the letter of "Reviresco" you say, "There is no law on the subject," and then speak of the "unwritten law," and "the tongue of good report."

I would venture to remark that, on the contrary, the rule of the Craft is, in fact, clear and decided, "Every candidate must be a free man, his own master, and, at the time of his initiation, in reputable circumstances." I can find no reason for your putting the words "of honest parents" in inverted commas, as though it was a quotation from some written law.

Masonry, as I understand it, has nothing to say as to the circumstances under which any applicant was born, and, as regards his admission, "the tongue of good report" applies to him alone and individually.

The sole requisites are that a man shall be free, his own master, and in reputable circumstances.

Undoubtedly it is desirable for the safety and well-being of the Craft that he should be known as a good and moral man, and a believer in the Great Architect of the Universe.

We refuse admission to those who are under age, because in the eyes of the law they are not free, or their own Masters, but infants, and under the control of parents or guardians. At the age of twenty-one, or in the case of royalty at the age of eighteen, a man becomes his own master, and is therefore free.

I contend, therefore, that a "respectable and well-conducted man," who is a believer in God, and against whose individual moral character no objection can be raised, is not "ineligible to be made a Mason on account of his being illegitimate by birth."

"The majority of members present at any lodge duly summoned, have an undoubted right to regulate their own proceedings, provided they are consistent with the laws and regulations of the Craft" (Const., page 80, sec. 4), but I apprehend that unless on the ground of some collateral disqualification, by reason of ill temper, want of courtesy, or immoral conduct, which could hardly be expected in a "respectable and well-conducted man," no true member of a body whose actions should be regulated by the charity which is kind, which thinketh no evil, and which hopeth all things, would ever raise his voice against a "respectable and well-conducted man," and one who might ultimately reflect honour on his choice, solely on account of illegitimacy, which could not in any way affect his conduct as a just and upright man.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
H. JOHN HATCH, P.P.G.C. Essex.

CHARITY VOTING AND CHARITY ORGANISATION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As a member (since its first formation) of the Charity Organisation Committee of one of, if not the, largest Provincial Grand Lodges, I beg to be allowed to most cordially endorse your article and Bro. Hughan's letter.

I would not for a moment deny that Bro. Simpson may find flaws in the present system—but, then, what system is, or can be, absolutely perfect? But I must say that the experience of some years leads me to believe that the present system, supplemented by a charity organisation committee in every province as suggested by you, and as already tested by us, is about the best that can be devised.

The advantages are these, where this system is worked, and would be in all were it extended to them:—

1. An absolute certainty that the best case in every province, and that one only, is brought to the front.
2. That the entire voting power of that province is centred in that particular case; and, therefore,
3. That such case is certain of election, most probably at the first trial.
4. That from the number of vacancies to be filled compared with the number of provinces, all provinces (especially if the weaker ones join in partnership), would return a fair proportion of candidates.
5. That from the number of vacancies and the number of candidates being pretty well equalised, there would be fewer disappointments.
6. That from every candidate being thus vouched for, after selection, by his province, there could be but little, if any, discontent among subscribers.
7. That lists being issued as heretofore of all candidates, independent votes could be given from the description of candidates contained in such lists with far greater certainty as to the bona-fide nature of the claim for help than is, or ever can be, now the case.

I should have hesitated to have intruded upon your valuable space, but remembering that "a grain of fact is worth a bushel of fancies," I beg to forward you the former, and to remain, with kindly greetings of esteem,

Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
P.P.G.C.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I was much pleased with many of the excellent and pertinent remarks in the letter of our R.W., Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson, published in the Freemason of May 12th, in reference to our great Masonic Charities, and although not yet prepared to endorse quite all he has written, there is, I think, very much in the scheme that might be adopted with great advantage, and this without revolutionizing our present system of election, as some brethren think any change would do; I certainly was very glad to find he does not propose to deprive individual subscribers of their right of voting and vest it in the hands of a Committee, to do that would I think be simply to lose, after a year or two many individual subscriptions altogether. I quite think that more care should be exercised by the House Committees in their selection of candidates so that none are selected for election but those who are really deserving, and there can be no objection to the names of the most deserving and masonically stringent cases having a prominence given them over others; a few stringent questions put by letter both to the candidates and their nominators could soon settle this question, and I cannot help thinking that this plan might be much assisted and simplified if every province had a voice in the preliminary selection of their candidates, surely one or two "good men and true," might be appointed in each province to examine into and select from the list, (when more than one is brought forward), the most deserving case for recommendation to the House Committee, they must know more of local cases than strangers, at the same time I would not give them power to withhold the name of any candidate who was eligible, there would then be no necessity for the present plan of issuing cards and soliciting votes, both productive of many evils, nor would it be necessary to do away with the public polling day, as many of its evils would much mitigated, and all would then enjoy the extra security which they seem to think this gives them, although there is but little doubt but that, even this under proper management might be dispensed with eventually.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours truly and fraternally,
P.P.S.G.W.

GRAND LODGE OF MUNSTER.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I have read with pleasure our esteemed Bro. W. J. Hughan's note in the Freemason of 26th ult., as to the late valuable discoveries relative to this Grand Lodge.

For these discoveries I deserve no credit, they having been entirely made by our valued and esteemed brother the V.W. Robert Walker, P.G.S.W. Munster.

I am glad to inform you matters are being arranged as rapidly as possible for the publication of the History of this Grand Lodge, the profits of which are to be handed over to our Irish Masonic Schools. The R.W. Bro. Cooper, P.G.M., and Bro. Walker are most anxious about their being published.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES H. BILSON, P.M. 620, I.C.;
P.P.G.M. New Zealand, I.C.;

MASONIC QUERIES.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I saw in an illustrated book sent to me by a brother, a copy of an antique Master Mason's Jewel engraved on the two sides every emblem of Craft Masonry. Two or three brethren here (myself included) would like to have one each, but the question arises could we wear it in lodge? It is a gold jewel, and certainly very handsome. But I am in some doubt as to whether it could be worn in lodge; for this I apply to you, and beg that you will answer this question in the Freemason. Whilst on the question of jewels, will you kindly inform me if there is any kind of jewel recognised by Grand Lodge for Past Scribe or Past Sojourner in Royal Arch Chapter. Of course there are many good and zealous brethren who never pass the Principal's chair, but who may, nevertheless, have been Scribe or P.S. for years. They would, no doubt, be glad to be able to wear some such jewel if only to show that they had done something besides simply attending chapters or lodges; and I think a Past Warden equally deserving some such mark of distinction. Trusting you will favour me with a reply to this (I fear too long) letter, I am,

Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

SOJOURNER.

IRISH MASONIC NEWS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I rejoice to see some proofs in your paper that there is Masonic life going on in the "Green Island." But why is it that you have so few reports from Ireland? It is not that there are none, because I continually read reports of Masonic proceedings in Ireland in non-Masonic and even Ultramontane journals. Why, then, this reticence—this silence in the Freemason?

Yours fraternally,

SHAMROCK.

[We are most desirous to publish Irish Masonic intelligence, but the truth is, there is a great indisposition in Ireland, especially in official quarters, to publish anything. We suffer much from the inconsistency alluded to, inasmuch as reports will frequently appear in the Freemans Journal which we cannot obtain. We have often asked ourselves what is the reason of such a short-sighted policy.—Ed.]

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.

The General Committee of this Institution met on Thursday last at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. S. Rawson, V.P., in the chair. The other brethren present were Bros. John A. Rucker, S. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, the brethren proceeded to elect the House and Audit Committees for the year.

Bro. Dr. Ramsay brought on his motion for referring to the Board of General Purposes the want of accommodation in the Secretary's office for the transaction of business of the Institution.

The motion was seconded by Bro. Kenyon, and supported by Bros. Joseph Smith, J. A. Rucker, Rev. J. E. Cox, Raynham Stewart, and F. A'ldard, all of whom testified to the deficiency of the accommodation afforded in the offices of the Secretaries of all the Masonic Institutions.

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

Several petitions were read and received, and the candidates were placed on the list.

The following brethren were declared elected on the House and Audit Committees, at the close of the poll:

THE MASONIC MEETING AT DUBLIN.

Dublin was, on Friday, May 11, the scene of a ceremonial, in which a large number of the citizens took remarkable interest. The enormous Exhibition Building was filled, and the even greater desire shown than formerly to procure tickets could only be attributed to the attention bestowed upon the Masonic Order lately by its curious local enemies. The vigilant Freemans Journal was represented, we are sure, in the "function;" and if its reporter did not wear a decoration he was the better fitted to discover what the enthusiasm of others prevented them from seeing. He had ocular demonstration that many of the members are Reds, and they are sworn, of course, to revolutionize Europe and abolish Cardinals. What other worse iniquities lie in a lower deep of their guilty secrets he may have failed to fathom, but the crowd of ladies, and the gentlemen uninitiated, were the subject of a perfectly shocking deception. They thought these Masons innocent and estimable people, from the Duke of Connaught to the humblest brother, on the same level, and—"if they only knew but all." The pictures, pamphlets, and philippics of our contemporary at any rate have not made Masonic spectacles less attractive to the community. The brilliancy of the procession pleased every beholder. The mystic signs might be enigmas, but the closest scrutiny saw in them nothing deadly. The salutes, in admirable time, meant no harm to anybody. In a clasp of the hand there is nothing sectarian, and nothing political in the piano-playing of an orphan child. The speaking, if not sparkling eloquence, was genial, and in the interest of harmony and good will. There was no bitterness—no returning of railing for railing—no anxiety about absurd attacks—the result of a jealous ignorance or the work of a malignant rivalry. The evening passed over pleasantly, and the Order made new friends. We really condole with our contemporary on the disappointment which such an occurrence inflicts. The poisoned arrows of Ecclesiastical street fall blunted from the Masonic buckler. The journalist's club is wielded with just as little effect. The unpardonable sin of Masonry is that it brings men together creating confidences which differences of creed cannot disturb or necessary separation of classes obstruct. This process of union destroys monopolies of influence. It makes much of the individual, but enforces his social duties, and deprives him alike of narrowness and subversive. This is not conspiracy—it is good-fellowship. It contemplates no heinous ends—it dwells upon and magnifies the finer impulses of frank and manly association. Why should such an Order be held in abhorrence of Sacerdotalists? We must leave them to reply. It seems to us their craze. The fact that in Masonry Religion is without sect and Morality without other authority than the command of Heaven, may account for the opposition of those who wish to be thought the authors of religion and the source of authority. It may be so. But whatever the explanation, it is plain that the heavy cannonade of the Freemason's Journal has not diminished either the roll of actual Masons or the number of those eager to embrace the opportunity of witnessing their formalities, and sharing, so far as is possible in externals, in their public ritual. In the Exhibition last night was a splendid gathering, which the foes of Masonry, at all events, cannot parallel, and the spirit of the whole was peace. The Duke of Connaught—our own Prince—was welcomed with great heart, and is a workman that needs not to be ashamed.—Dublin Evening Mail.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF NORTH WALES AND CHESHIRE.

On Saturday week a provincial Grand Lodge of the province of North Wales and Cheshire was held at the Grosvenor Hotel, Chester, under the presidency of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P.

The following were among the principal officers present:—Bros. the Rev. E. Spencer Stanhope, D.P.G.M.M.; the Rev. N. Tanner, P.G.M. Chap.; Coates, P.G.M. Treas.; Newhouse, P.G.M. Sec.; Dr. Roden (Llandudno), acting P.G.M.S.W.; Higgins (Beaumaris), P.G.M.J.W.; and others.

In recognition of Dr. Roden's services to Mark Masonry the title of P.P.G.M.O. was conferred on him.

The following officers were appointed for the ensuing year:—The Deputy P.G.M., the P.G.M. Treas., the P.G.M. Sec., and the P.G.M. Chap. were re-appointed; Bros. Higgins, P.G.M.S.W.; W. Matthews (Chester), P.G.M.J.W.; Stevenson (Liverpool) P.G.M.M.O.; C. H. Hind (Stamford), P.M.S.O.; G. H. Woodley (Llandudno), P.G.M.J.O.; J. Salmon (Chester), P.G.M. Reg.; W. S. Stanton, P.G.M.S.D.; Collins, P.G.M.J.D.; F. Mothershill (Stamford), P.G.M.D. of W.; Richard Baxter (Stamford) P.G.M.D. of C.; T. Coxhead (Holt), P.G.M.A.D.C.; J. Corbett (Mold), P.G.M.S.B.; R. M. Townsend, P.G.M. St. B.; J. W. Burgess (Birkenhead), P.G.M.I.C.; A. Harrison, S. Mattison, and John R. Rees, P.G.M. Stewds. After the lodge had been closed in due form the brethren assembled at a banquet, which was presided over by the P.G.M.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

THE ROYAL FAMILY AND RELIGIOUS FREEDOM.

Some of our Irish Roman Catholic fellow-subjects, not satisfied with the religious freedom they enjoy, are greatly excited at the sight of the demonstration of general religious freedom made by the three Royal brothers—the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, and Prince Leopold—in occupying the three highest positions in the ranks of the English Freemasons. The heir to the Throne of Great Britain and Ireland was elected to the high position of Grand Master, and it was a mark of his esteem for the brotherhood (which is nothing if not "free") to select for his Wardens his natural, as well as "regular initiated," brothers. This is a demonstration of peculiar significance, regard it from whatever point of view we may. The Masonic brotherhood, though anathematised by the Pope, is an unsectarian religious body, restricted only in its tenets by the principles that the candidates for its mysteries shall be "good men and true," and that "let a man's religion or mode of worship be what it may, he is not excluded from the Order, provided he believe in the glorious Architect of heaven and earth, and practise the sacred duties of morality." Thus we have the future King of England declaring, for one thing practically, that he will respect the religious liberty, which is the glory of our Empire, and will ever take the Bible for his guide. We see, too, that he and his Royal brothers, by their being English Freemasons, give public testimony of their faith in the Great Creator, and in these days of fashionable infidelity this testimony is of no slight value in proving an example to those who need guidance. Then, again, when part of the Church of England appears to be drifting Romeward in doctrine and ceremony, the action of the Royal Princes is at once a protest against the action of the Ultramontanes, and a contradiction to the falsehoods freely spread abroad as to the inclinations of the Royal Family being in the direction of that encroaching thralldom, miscalled a Church. They probably knew how widely this falsehood was being spread in order to allure the aristocracy into the net of Rome, and they, doubtless, could see the recruiting sergeants of the Pope, in the Ritualists, beating up for proselytes. Hence the necessity of a demonstration against a system between which and English sympathies there must ever be war, and the Royal Princes made this demonstration by becoming the chief rulers of this system of morality. The Ultramontanes have accepted the action of the Royal Princes in this spirit, and have bitterly resented the action they have taken. They have even gone the length of publishing a book, or books, professing to teach "all the secrets" of Freemasonry. There is an initial difficulty about this book: it is an imposture, or worse. The secret of pure Freemasonry lies in good work hidden from the sight of those who do not seek, but as open as a book to those who look below the veil. An institution whose branches are extended all over the world, with the principle of being open to all men "good and true" believing in God and practising the sacred duties of morality, and having widely extending charity—a charity discriminate and helpful, not degrading, is no slight aid in extending the blessings of civilised society, and in lessening the dangers which arise where the classes are widely separated. The fact that our Royal Princes are the chiefs of this great and world-wide organisation binds them in sympathy with the lovers of religious freedom all over the globe, and is a guarantee to the subjects of great Britain that truth will still be a sword and shield.—Christian Globe.

Reviews.

We have received and read with much pleasure Bro. Walter Webb's interesting "Centennial Sketch of the History of the Lodge of the Nine Muses" from 1777 to 1877. We think that all who value the increase of lodge histories, and appreciate the reality of our Masonic annals, will hail another skilful effort by a perfectly competent writer to put before us a short and authentic account of a distinguished lodge. Bro. Walter Webb has taken, in our humble opinion, a most judicious course, and has made a great deal out of the lodge minutes, which, though too often utterly neglected, are a mine of information for the Masonic student. In the case of the Lodge of the Nine Muses, founded in 1777, by some worthy brethren, among them the well known Bartholomew Ruspini, the originator of the Girls' School, we have to lament that the minutes are wanting from 1777 to 1814, neither is it known where they are. They are probably stowed away among the books or papers of some descendant of an older Secretary, and we are in hopes that this little publication may lead to the discovery of the first and most interesting book.

Bro. Webb, in his modest record of the lodge and its members, mentions, not only with feeling the name of the unfortunate and weak-principled Dr. Dodd, but also that of Giovanni Battista Cipriani, who, one of the original members of the Royal Academy, painted for the lodge their beautiful jewels, which they still use.

Bro. Webb alludes very fully to the meritorious services of Sir Henry Rawlins, and points out affectionately, how as often happens in lodge, as we all of us know, the well known name vanishes for ever from the minutes, just as the pleasant friend and the familiar face are missing from "labour" and "refreshment." They pass away from us.

Bro. Webb touches with careful hand the passing dispute with the Prince of Wales's Lodge about the candlesticks, in which, to say the truth, the fault, if fault there be, seems to rest on the failing memory of the Chevalier Ruspini, or a little misapprehension as to the strict rights of "meum and tuum." Happily the question was soon settled between these two distinguished lodges, and no further traces of unpleasantness remain. In the earlier portion of its history many most distinguished persons became members of the lodge of the Nine Muses, among whom were Francis Bartolozzi 1771, Felici Giardini, Count Siedlecki, Lord Tamworth 1778, General Paoli 1779, Lord Effingham, Lord Cranston, Lord Kelly 1779, Marquis de Arconati, Lord Macdonald, Count de Ceyras, 1783, Count Soderini, Count Tosio, Marquis Trotti, Count Savadra, Count Lavezari, 1787.

Among its Worshipful Masters we note the well known names of R. Chapman, J. S. Tulloch, J. Addison, O. L. Rasch, R. B. Oakeley, H. Heather Bigg, Edwin Fox, F. J. Heseltine, E. Emanuel, H. Robinson, and G. E. A. Ross.

We also note that Bro. Webb records the services to the lodge as W.M.'s of Bros. John Probert, Francis Kearsey, C. B. Claydon, and especially of our distinguished brother, J. M. Clabon.

It may interest some to learn that the names of the original petitioners in 1777 were John Hull, Esq., Raphael Franco, Esq., Richard Barker, Esq., Robert Biggin, Esq., Abraham Teixeira, Esq., Isaac Sequeira, Esq., M.D., and Bartholomew Ruspini.

We know that the honour and efficiency of the lodge are happily in the safe keeping of Bro. Walter Webb, to whom we offer our thanks for a very interesting volume, and to whom we tender our best hopes for the future prosperity of the Lodge of the Nine Muses.

A SELECTION OF MASONIC SONGS SET TO POPULAR AIRS. By Bro. E. P. Philpots, M.D.

We wish sincerely that we had space enough in the Freemason to do full justice to this interesting little collection, but we can unfortunately do no more than commend it to the notice and patronage of our Order everywhere. It reflects much credit on Bro. Philpots, and we trust that it will meet with the countenance and liberal support which it so fully deserves. We are requested to state that our "Reviewer" will insert in the Masonic Magazine for July a full review of the little work.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.—Every variety of sore, ulcer, eruption, boil, and carbuncle is safely stopped by the timely application of this healing Ointment. It arrests unhealthy and substitutes healthy action, thus curing the inflamed, irritable, and spreading diseases affecting the skin. Holloway's Ointment has gained an imperishable fame for its facility in healing old inflammatory sores about the limbs and ankles, and for bad legs and old wounds it cannot be equalled; nor is it less efficacious in gathering breasts and abscesses. When the complaint has been of long continuance, Holloway's Pills will expedite recovery if taken in those doses which act as alteratives on the stomach and tonics on the constitution.—Advt.

Obituary.

BRO. F. ELLEN.

An interesting but melancholy event took place at the Islington Cemetery, at Finchley, on Wednesday the 23rd ult., which will long be remembered by those who were present. It was the occasion of the funeral of Bro. F. Ellen, J.D. of the Sir Hugh Myddleton Lodge, No. 1602, late superintendent at the Agricultural Hall, and who, a few days previous to his death, expressed a wish to have a Masonic funeral. Accordingly the lodge applied to Grand lodge, through Bro. J. Hervey, G.S., for a dispensation to carry out that beautiful ceremony, but as there did not appear to be any precedent for it, either in or near London, and as H.R.H. the M.W.G.M. had a great objection to any public display of the insignia of Masonry, the M.W. Pro Grand Master declined to grant it. Amongst those present were Bros. E. Somers, P.M. 1602; E. G. Sim, W.M. 1602; J. Weston, Treasurer, 1602; J. Osborn, Sec., 1602; A. T. Rowley, W.M., 917 and S.D. 1602; W. Norris, I.G. 1602; W. Poulton, D.C. 1602; H. Field, 1602; A. Dawson, 1602; J. Oppenheim, 1602; W. Payne, 1602; R. G. Thomas, 1602; J. Rimmel, 1602; J. Furlong, 1602; E. Abrams, 1602; R. Allison, 1602; J. Gibbs, 1602; J. R. Jamieson, 183; J. Humphreys, 167, and others. Mr. J. Francis and Mr. Mawbray (Mohawk Minstrels), and also Mr. Sidney, Sec., and Mr. Sharman, contractor to the Agricultural Hall Company, and, by the permission of the directors, the whole of the staff of that establishment were allowed to attend the funeral.

BRO. C. J. VIGNE.

We regret to record the death of another distinguished Mason this week. Bro. C. J. Vigne, J.P., was P. Prov. Grand Warden of Somerset, Prov. Prior of Dorset, hon. member S.S.C.C., N. and S.J.J., U.S.A., and P.M.P.S.G. Commander A. and A. Rite. His death took place at Westfield House, Bath, on Friday, the 25th ult.

UNITED GRAND LODGE.

The Quarterly Communication of Free and Accepted Masons of England was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. John Fawcett, Provincial Grand Master for Durham, presided, Capt. Platt acting as S.G.W., and the Hon. W. Warren Vernon as J.G.W. Among the brethren present, who were very numerous, were Bros. Dr. Hamilton, H. D. Sandeman, S. Rawson, Dr. Moore, J. W. Clabon, J. B. Monckton, Peter de. L. Long, Rev. R. J. Simpson, Rev. C. J. Martyn, Rev. Sir J. Warren Hayes, Æ. J. McIntyre, Q.C., A. J. Duff Filer, Rev. W. Lake Onslow, Rev. C. W. Arnold, Sir Albert Woods (Garter), the Earl of Donoughmore, S. Tomkins, John Hervey, H. G. Buss, Capt. N. G. Phillips, Major Shadwell Clerke, Col. Somerville Burney, James Glaisher, Benj. Head, H. Browne, Thos. Fenn, J. A. Rucker, Raynham W. Stewart, Major Penrice, Montague Guest, Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg, James Mason, Sir F. M. Williams, Hyde Pullen, C. E. Willing, ex-Sheriff Hutton, J. M. Case, Joshua Nunn, F. Robinson, Toller, Cottebrune, Brett, J. C. Parkinson, W. T. Howe, Brackstone Baker, Dubois, George Kenning, Fellows, Bingemann, Matier, Nelson Reed, Clever, Hammond, Stephens, Cubitt, Hogard, Newton, Hopekirk, Wright, and H. Massey (Freemason).

After Grand Secretary had read the minutes, and the Grand Lodge had confirmed them,

The acting Grand Master said that before the Grand Lodge proceeded to any other business he was quite sure the brethren would bear with him while he expressed a wish, which he knew would be the wish of Grand Lodge generally, that their brother, Lord Donoughmore, should now make a statement with regard to the report of the Committee of which he was a member, as to the lifeboats. (Great cheering.)

The Earl of Donoughmore, P.G.S.W., then rose, and said that in the absence of the two distinguished brethren who did him the honour to assist him on this Committee it devolved upon him, now that the minutes of the Grand Lodge had been confirmed, to state what progress the Committee had made with the task entrusted to them, and he was charged specially before proceeding to explain what had been done, to express great regret on the part of both the Earl of Carnarvon and of Lord Skelmersdale that they were not here in person. Lord Carnarvon himself was particularly anxious to inform them of what he had done, and it was only by the unavoidable pressure of business that he had been prevented from coming. He (Lord Donoughmore) therefore had to ask the brethren to be content with the man with the wooden spoon to tell them what had been done. The Committee had kept carefully in view the principles which were notably laid down in Lord Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master's speech in Grand Lodge, which he was sure was still remembered by the Craft. Lord Carnarvon told them in that speech that he desired, and that he felt that this Grand Lodge would desire, that this memorial should be as marked and as special as possible, and the Committee had had that idea on their minds in choosing the localities in which these lifeboats should be situated. They had had two difficulties to guard against—two particularly. One was that they should avoid going to some place where a lifeboat had been before, that the station should be an entirely new one, that it should be a new work, known as having been founded by the Freemasons of England; and, secondly, they wished to avoid going to any locality where a lifeboat, though it might be a very desirable thing, yet through a peculiar pressure of circumstances it might be very difficult to make it efficient. For instance, they might put a lifeboat in a place where the lifeboat-house might look very nice and where the boat would be very serviceable if they could only get a crew to manage it. There were many things of the sort that the Committee had to consider, so that they were guided in their choice of a spot by that principle. Again, there was another thing the Committee desired. As there were to be two lifeboats, they wished, and they thought it would meet with the approval of the Grand Lodge and the Craft generally if one of those lifeboats was in some locality near London, where it might be, so to speak, under the immediate eyes of the London brethren, who would thereby take a greater interest, if possible, in its success and in its work; while the second they desired to place in the most deserving locality they could find in the provinces. Well, he might say now that they consulted with the Lifeboat Institution, and he would like to bear witness now to the cordial co-operation and great assistance that the Committee had had from Bro. Lewis, the secretary of that institution, in all they had done. They had letters on every point, and this had helped very materially to bring about what he hoped Grand Lodge would consider to be the very successful result of their labours. Bro. Lewis had just received a return from the Lloyd's agents of localities where lifeboats were most wanted, and he submitted a list of six places, amongst which he gave the Committee the free choice. For the London lifeboat there were two places. The first of them was Ramsgate, a most important place, near the Goodwin Sands, and he need not tell the brethren, or remind them of the services of the Ramsgate lifeboats hitherto—they were well known; but there was this disadvantage about Ramsgate—there was one lifeboat there, and, therefore, they would not be founding an entirely new station. Then the Committee went over to the north shore of the mouth of the Thames, and he was happy to say that from the representations made to him (Lord Donoughmore), the Committee had anticipated in some degree the wishes of certain brethren—he hoped of a large majority of them—in the place they had fixed upon for the London lifeboat. They had fixed upon the village of Clacton-upon-Sea, (loud applause), which had an immense area of quicksand in front of it; and it was only very lately, in fact last year, that a very disastrous wreck occurred there, and wrecks constantly occurred there. The Committee, therefore, thought that a lifeboat there would be most useful to the institution, and besides this there was this advantage, that the lifeboat would be in connection with the Harwich lifeboat, which was situated a little further north. (Cheers.) With regard to the country or provincial lifeboat, there was one place in Carnarvonshire which was submitted to the Committee, but that, again, would have involved competition with a station which was already supplied, and it was open to more objections than Ramsgate was. But they had claims of a very important kind to consider, and he regretted, himself, that under the circumstances they were not able, for some reasons, to fix upon that station for a lifeboat. There were two places in Yorkshire submitted to them, but they were both open to the objection of the difficulty of providing crews, and further, from a donation which had already been made to the Lifeboat Institution, the first choice in Yorkshire had gone. The Committee then turned their thoughts to that part of the coast which was nearest to the great highway of our country's commerce, and they thought of Devon and Cornwall. They found on the coast of Devon two very important places where there were no lifeboats now, on a rock-bound coast, where he (Lord Donoughmore) had, himself, seen several unpleasant south-westerly gales. Those two places were Yealmpton, at the mouth of the River Yare, and Hope Cove, near Salcombe; and of the two they fixed upon Hope Cove, for while it commanded the storm-beaten coast of the west it was in connection with the Salcombe lifeboat. Those were the two localities which the Committee had decided upon to fix as stations for the two lifeboats of Grand Lodge. There was one other point, a smaller point he would not call it, though it might appear a smaller point to the brethren—that was as to the names to be given to the two lifeboats. He thought when he made the announcement in Grand Lodge of what the recommendation of the Committee was he might safely say beforehand would be received with unmitigated satisfaction. It seemed to the Committee the best titles of these lasting records of Grand Lodge's thankfulness for their Grand Master's return should be something to remind not only the present Freemasons, but their successors, of the expression of joy and satisfaction which the whole Craft poured forth on the preservation of the Grand Master; but the Committee felt also that it should remind them to call to their memory the illustrious lady whose name was inseparable from the Prince of Wales's and which was inscribed in all their hearts—the Princess of Wales (cheers). The Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master wrote to his Royal Highness to ask his permission to make use of his name and that of the Princess for these boats (applause), and he (Lord Donoughmore) was happy to be able to state that his Royal Highness had consented that their lifeboats should be called "The Albert Edward" and "The Alexandra." (Renewed applause.) There remained now just one other point which they had not touched upon in the announcement of what had been done. There remained the subject of the memorial tablet to be erected in Grand Lodge in commemoration of the event. Although there was not much room in Grand Lodge for a fitting monument to call to Freemasons' mind the action taken by this Grand Lodge, still he had no doubt that room would be found for it. That was the whole of the announcement he had to make; but before he sat down he would like to say this one word, that ever since this scheme had been started it was one which had had the very greatest interest to many, and, he would wish to add, the Committee thought they might safely say, without transgressing the bounds of that modesty which always accompanied true benevolence, that in establishing this memorial they had established one worthy of the Craft, worthy of loyal Englishmen, and that it was thoroughly approved of and appreciated (for he had it from his own lips) by the Grand Master; and also that it was one which would be of immense use and service to the suffering of our fellow-creatures. (Great applause.)

The election of members of the Board of General Purposes, of members of the Colonial Board, and of members for the Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons then took place, and the scrutineers who were appointed to examine the votes left Grand Lodge to perform their duties.

The acting G.M. announced that the Grand Master had appointed Bro. John B. Monckton again to be President of the Board of General Purposes, and Bro. Rucker to be President of the Colonial Board.

The report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter contained recommendations for the following grants:

The widow of a brother of the Lodge of Virtue and Silence, No. 332, Hadleigh ...	£75	0	0
A brother of the Lodge of Friendship, No. 206, London ...	100	0	0
The widow of a brother of the old Dundee Lodge, No. 18, London ...	150	0	0
The widow of a brother of the Burlington Lodge, No. 96, London ...	100	0	0

A brother of the Fitz-Roy Lodge, No. 569, London	50	0	0
A brother of the Polish National Lodge, No. 534, London	50	0	0
A brother of the Neptune Lodge, No. 22, London	150	0	0
The widow of a brother of the Welchpool Lodge, No. 998, Welchpool	100	0	0
A brother of Nyanza Lodge, No. 1197, Ilminster	75	0	0
The widow of a brother of the British Kaffrarian Lodge, No. 863, Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope	50	0	0

Bro. J. M. Clabon then rose and said that the moving of the confirmation of these recommendations gave him an opportunity of speaking on a subject which he had long thought of, and which had been presented to his mind by what he had seen at several meetings of the Lodge of Benevolence. The brethren at those meetings made various grants, differing in amount, and at the meetings at which the above grants were recommended the proportion which some bore to others was rather anomalous, when the services of the candidates were considered. In one case £100 was granted, where the brother had been but four years a Mason, while in another £75 only was granted to the widow of a brother who had been 21 years a Mason. He was not saying, nor did he intend to say, that the £100 was too much, or that the £75 was too little, but when £100 was granted to a brother who had been four years a Mason £75 appeared to be too little for the widow of a brother who had been twenty-one years a Mason. It seemed to him that justice was not meted out equally. Now, whether it was popular or not, he thought he was but discharging a simple duty when he suggested to Grand Lodge that it should consider whether the constitution of the Board of Benevolence was as it ought to be. Every Grand Officer was a member of it; there were twelve nominated members, and every Master and Past Master of private lodges was also a member. As there were now over 1600 lodges there were of course 1600 members of the Lodge of Benevolence. At every time he attended he saw numberless new faces, and it might be thought so many attending, for though it was not for him to say, that they came for the support of particular objects; but he thought that must sometimes be the case, though this, if it was so, was a direct violation of an express rule against the members of the Lodge of Benevolence being canvassed in any way for a case. The members of the lodge were to go there free and unbiassed. They had to do their duty on the evidence that was produced before them. They all knew that they had just done their duty in electing members of the Board of General Purposes and of the Colonial Board; and he thought that when brethren came together, some on one evening and some on another, it could hardly be that they could do equal justice in all cases. He did not pronounce any judgment on the matter, but he thought the time had come when Grand Lodge must consider whether the Lodge of Benevolence should not consist of a smaller number of brethren, carefully selected, the Grand Master having the appointment of some and Grand Lodge having the appointment, of course, of the larger number. He thought if this were done, and there were got into the service good and able men,—changing them every year if they liked, but good and able men,—the Lodge of Benevolence as so constituted would be better able to deal with the cases coming before them duly and properly. He could say something about the Lodge of Benevolence, as he had known it for many years. On two occasions he had brought forward motions on the subject of dealing with the surplus funds of that lodge. On one occasion, when the Fund of Benevolence was about £30,000, he asked Grand Lodge to devote a certain portion of the surplus every year in helping forward the boys and girls on leaving the schools of the Order, by apprenticing them, or granting exhibitions for them. This subject had come before the brethren lately very prominently when the two lifeboats were proposed to be founded, and the best thing which was on everybody's lips was that there should be exhibitions for schools in commemoration of the Prince of Wales's return. No doubt the Committee appointed by Grand Lodge to consider the matter had selected a very good object as a memorial, but when he brought before Grand Lodge the subject he had mentioned, the brethren thought the time had not come when they should devote a portion of their surplus funds towards the object which they had in view. Some years afterwards, when the funds had amounted to £37,000, Grand Lodge still thought that the time had not come, and that the fund was not large enough when they could deduct from it to establish the object which he proposed. The funds now had reached to the amount of from £40,000 to £44,000. They had been saving on the average for the last seven years £1300 or £1400 every year, and beyond question when the increase went on in that proportion it did offer temptation to the Lodge of Benevolence to be a little extravagant when cases of distress came before them. The brethren of that lodge might be tempted when such calls came, and a considerable sum of money was proposed to be given, to say "Oh! give it another £50, we have loads of money, and can afford it." He had no idea of saving the money for a century or more, and he would like to be encouraged to bring before the Grand Lodge once more the subject, and ask them whether they should not take a portion of their annual surplus for forwarding the boys and girls in life when they left the schools. It was a very sad thing, but there was no question about it, that many of the children when they left the schools, where they had been housed and clothed in comfort, were sent out to their parents to be, comparatively speaking, paupers again, and to live in squalor. Therefore, he would like to see this subject again considered, and he should bring it on again at no very distant time. He then proposed the confirmation of the recommendations of the Lodge of Benevolence.

Bro. Joshua Nunn seconded the motion, and concurred in Bro. Clabon's remarks.

After a few observations from Bros. Brackstone Baker, Rev. R. J. Simpson, and S. Rawson, the different recommendations were adopted.

The report of the Board of General Purposes, the discussion of which was the next business on the paper, and on the motion of Grand Treasurer it was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes. The report was as follows:—

1. It having been represented to the Board that a brother had been raised to the Third Degree in twenty-five days only after having passed to the Second Degree, the circumstances were fully enquired into, and, in result, it was ordered that the brother be re-obligated, and the Lodge (No. 529) fined one guinea, and admonished to be more careful in future.

2. A complaint having been laid before the Board alleging that a candidate had been initiated into Masonry by the W. Master of Lodge No. 820, whose name and description had not previously appeared in the lodge summons, as enjoined by the Book of Constitutions, such candidate being afterwards passed to the Second Degree, in the face of a protest, the lodge was duly summoned to appear before the Board by its Master and Wardens with the lodge warrant and books, and after the complaining Past Masters had been heard, as also the W. Master, I.P. Master, and other members, the Board arrived unanimously at the conclusion that not only was the Masonic offence fully proved, but so unsatisfactory a condition of things was found to exist in the lodge, that the Board suspended it from all its Masonic functions for the space of six months, and directed that the candidate in question should be regularly initiated and passed, before being entitled to Masonic position and privileges.

3. The Board of General Purposes further report that the number of the Trustees of the real property of Grand Lodge, originally ten, has become by death and resignation reduced to four, and the Board recommend that the original number be made up by Grand Lodge, and that it be referred back to the Board to take the necessary steps for vesting in them the real property of Grand Lodge.

(Signed) JOHN B. MONCKTON,
President.

At the meeting of the 16th May, after the ordinary business was concluded, it was proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the best thanks of the members of the Board are eminently merited by the President for the great attention he has paid to the duties of the office, for the admirable manner in which he has discharged them, and the great courtesy and kindness he has on all occasions evinced to his colleagues, and they are therefore fraternally tendered to him.

(Signed) PETER DE LANDE LONG, Vice-President.

The Grand Registrar said that the 3rd paragraph of this report was the only portion which required a substantive motion to be made. The number of Trustees there referred to was originally ten. By resignation and death this number had been reduced to four only, and it had been proposed by the Board that the brethren whose names he would now read should be elected as the Trustees of the real property of Grand Lodge. The names of the brethren proposed were—The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro-Grand Master; Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master; Lord Tenterden, Past Grand Warden; Sir Albert Woods (Garter), Past Grand Warden; the Earl of Donoughmore, Past Grand Warden; Bro. J. B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes; Bro. John A. Rucker, President of the Colonial Board; and Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., Past Grand Deacon.

Bro. Peter de L. Long seconded the motion, which was then put and carried unanimously.

The Grand Registrar then said it was customary at the Board of General Purposes at the conclusion of the year of office of the President of the Board to express their opinion of the way in which he had conducted the business. The very worshipful brother who presided over the Board last year had presided over it for some years; as year by year went by he had increased the confidence the Board had in him, and he had made himself a power in Grand Lodge, and one of the most useful members of the Craft. The Board, therefore, who had always found him presiding over them with the greatest ability, and the greatest possible urbanity, were doing only right in recommending to Grand Lodge the resolution proposed by them, and which he (Grand Registrar) would now venture to submit to it. He then moved the resolution.

This having been seconded, was put and carried unanimously.

On the motion of the Grand Registrar, seconded by Bro. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D., Grand Lodge allowed the appeal of Bro. John Locke, W.M. of the Royal Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 867, Trinidad, against a sentence of expulsion from the Craft, pronounced upon him, and the erasure of the lodge, by the District Grand Lodge of Trinidad; and reversed the decision of the District Grand Lodge of Trinidad. Grand Registrar gave a long and exhaustive recital of the complicated state of circumstances out of which the appeal arose, and caused great laughter among the brethren by showing the great ignorance of the Book of Constitutions on the part of the authorities in the district of Trinidad.

The annual report of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, dated 17th May, 1877, was laid before Grand Lodge, and the following proposed alteration in the rules then agreed to was, in accordance with the laws of the Institution, submitted for the approval of Grand Lodge, viz., "to add to Law I., p. 15, after the words 'husband's petition,' the following:—'And in the event of a widow marrying again and being again left a widow, she shall still be eligible to be a candidate,'" and it was formally approved by Grand Lodge.

Bro. Benjamin Head, P.G.D., then proposed "That the sum of £70 be given from the Fund for General Purposes; that the money be placed in the hands of the Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons, to supply the residents of the Institution at Croydon with coals during the winter season," and the motion being seconded was put and carried unanimously.

Grand Lodge was then closed in due form.

The ballot was unanimous in favour of the admission of Mr. Craddock Seymour as a candidate for initiation, also for Bro. James Payne, No. 245, as a joining member. The work, done in an able and efficient manner, was passing Bros. J. J. Howes, E. C. Crombie, F. West, G. H. Stephens, and H. J. Lardner to the Second Degree; raising Bro. W. Smyth to the Third Degree. Several gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and some brethren for joining. An important notice of motion was given by the Secretary. The lodge was closed, and adjourned to Thursday, the 10th July, to meet at half-past two. Bro. T. Butt, the courteous proprietor, under his personal superintendence had a splendid banquet served, which gave great satisfaction, and pleased every one. The usual loyal toasts were given and responded to. Songs, glees, and recitations were given, and passed away a pleasant and agreeable evening.

JERSEY.—La Cesaree Lodge (No. 590).—The twenty-sixth anniversary of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, on Thursday, the 24th ult. Bro. A. Grant, W.M., occupied the chair, supported by Bros. J. Pallot, I.P.M.; P. Messervy, S.W.; E. Carré, J.W.; A. Schmitt, P.M., P.P.S.G.W., Sec.; J. T. du Jardin, P.M., W.M. 244, P.P.S.G.W.; G. J. Le Sueur, P.M. 491, P.G. Sec.; R. Barrow, P.M. 491, P.J.G.W.; E. Hopwood, P.M. 141, 1512; B. Martel, P.M. 958, P.P.G.D.C.; F. Le Feuvre, W.M. 877, P.P.G.S.B.; W. H. Chapman, W.M. 958, Ass. G.D.C.; W. The only business before it was the installation of Bro. Capt. P. Messervy, W.M. elect. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, Bro. A. Schmitt took the chair as Installing Master, and at his request the W.M. elect was presented by Bros. Grant and J. Pallot. The customary preliminaries having been gone through, all the brethren below the chair retired. A board of Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Messervy was, according to ancient custom, installed in the chair of K.S. as W.M. of the lodge. The brethren were then re-admitted, and having saluted the new W.M., the Installing Master proceeded with the rest of the ceremony, and delivered the usual address. The following brethren were appointed as the officers of the lodge, viz.:—E. Carré, S.W.; A. Gallichan, J. W.; J. P. Dr. St. Croix, S.D.; Capt. T. Le Scelleur, J.D.; J. De La Marc, I.G.; G. Rogers, Tyler; and invested by the I.M. Lastly, the W.M. appointed Bro. A. Schmitt, Sec., whom Bro. du Jardin, the founder of the lodge, invested as such, with some remarks as well deserved by his past services in that capacity as they were complimentary and sincere. All lodge business being ended, it was closed at six o'clock in perfect harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, and forty-three sat down to an excellent dinner provided by the Curator of the Temple, Bro. Rogers. The W.M. presided. The cloth having been withdrawn, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The D.P.G.M. proposed "The Health of the W.M.," being convinced that the lodge will maintain under his rule its statu quo and prosperity. The W.M. in warm terms returned thanks. The D.P.G.M. then, in the course of an emphatic and feeling address, said: I am deputed by the Board of Management of the Jersey Masonic Temple Company to present this chaste gold pencil, of exquisite beauty and workmanship, to our esteemed Bro. A. Schmitt, in recognition of his indefatigable exertions as Hon. Sec. since the laying of the foundation stone till this very moment, that is to say, during a period of fifteen years, and handed it to the recipient, bearing the inscription—"Jersey Masonic Temple to A. Schmitt, its Hon. Sec., 1877." The Hon. Sec., in a few words, set forth the lively pleasure which had come to him in the unexpected presentation of the magnificent testimonial he had just received; he felt gratified in knowing that his Masonic labour of love gave satisfaction to the members of the province, and concluded by stating how dear and valuable the testimonial would ever be to him, and again he begged to thank them for this renewed tangible expression of their esteem and satisfaction. After the healths of "The Visitors" and "P.M.'s," the Secretary proposed "The Health of the distinguished absent Hon. Members," viz., Wm. James Hughan (Truro), and Dr. H. Hopkins (Bath), whose Masonic and literary labours, their truly fraternal attachment and good will towards the brethren of this province, particularly merit our esteem and admiration, and they are in every way deserving of our brotherly remembrance. The toast was received with the greatest warmth by the brethren. Two or three more were given, and the brethren separated at half-past nine, highly satisfied with the proceedings of the evening.

JERSEY.—St. Aubin's Lodge (No. 958).—The fourteenth annual meeting of this lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, on Tuesday, the 15th ult., when a large number of brethren assembled to congratulate Bro. E. Martel on the successful termination of his two years' labour, and Bro. W. H. Chapman on the commencement of his career as a ruler in the Craft, under auspices so favourable, with such an example before him and with the affairs of the lodge in so prosperous a condition. The lodge was opened by the W.M., supported by Bros. W. H. Chapman, S.W.; R. Barrow, P.M. 491, P.J.G.W., as J.W.; J. Oatley, P.M., P.P.S.G.W.; Jos. O'Flaherty, P.M., P.S.G.D., and many others. Among the visitors were Bros. A. Schmitt, P.M. 590, P.P.S.G.W.; P. W. Benham, P.M. 244, P.G. Treas.; J. O. Le Sueur, P.M. 491, P.G. Sec.; W. Z. Pugsley, P.M. 275, P.P.J.G.W.; C. Kingsnorth, P.M. 245, P.P.J.G.W.; O. Dodge, P.M. 245, P.P.G.R.; G. F. Baker, P.M. 491, P.G.D.C.; Dr. T. J. Aubin, W.M. 491, P.G.S.W.; A. Grant, W.M. 590; P. Bois, W.M. 1003; Frs. Le Feuvre, W.M. 877, P.P.G.S.B.; J. Moss, P.M. 245, and others. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were confirmed. Bro. Butfield being a candidate for promotion, and having proved his claim, was entrusted and retired. The lodge was opened in the Second Degree, the candidate was admitted, and passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. The W.M. informed the brethren that his two years of Master-ship having expired, he was highly pleased to be succeeded by a worthy brother, the W.M. elect, whom he should have the pleasure of installing. Bro. J. Oatley presented Bro. W. H. Chapman. The customary enumeration of duties was made, the ancient charges were read and assented to, and the obligation of W.M. elect administered. The lodge was opened in the Third Degree, and all who had not passed the chair withdrew. A board of sixteen Installed Masters was then formed, and Bro. Chapman was duly placed in the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom. After the board had been closed, the several classes of M.M.'s, Fellow Crafts, and Entered Apprentices were in turn admitted, and the processions and proclamations were gone through, respecting which it need only be recorded that Bro. Ed. Martel conducted the ceremonies with great exactitude and impressiveness. After the usual address to the W.M., delivered with great fervour, Bro. Chapman briefly remarked, that fully acknowledging the difficulty of the task he had undertaken, he was sensible of the honour conferred upon him. He accepted the responsibility, and trusted that, with God's help, he should not be found wanting in the worthy discharge of it, especially as he had been promised, and could confidently rely upon, efficient assistance from the Past Masters. The following appointments were made, Bro. Martel in each case officiating and offering appropriate observations:—Bros. S. Hurst, S.W.; Th. J. De Bourcier, J.W.; W. T. Campbell, S.D.; Ch. Naylor, J.D.; G. Ninnim, I.G.; J. Oatley, Treas.; J. O'Flaherty, Org.; G. Rogers, Tyler. Lastly the W.M. appointed Bro. Martel, Secretary, with some remarks as well deserved by his past services in that capacity as they were complimentary and sincere. It may be observed, en passant, that last year the lodge had fully acknowledged this worthy brother's indefatigable zeal, activity, and usefulness in presenting him with a splendid gold Past Master's Jewel. The lodge was closed at 6.30 p.m. in perfect harmony. The brethren adjourned to the banqueting-room, splendidly decorated for the occasion, and about eighty sat down to an excellent dinner, provided by the Guardian of the Temple, Bro. Rogers. The W.M. presided, having on his right Bros. Rev. Steward Patterson, P.P.G.M. for Manitoba (Canada); A. Schmitt, J. Th. du Jardin, Barham, Le Sueur, and on his left Bros. Martel, Oatley, O'Flaherty, Dr. Aubin. The cloth having been drawn, the usual loyal Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The W.M.'s was warmly received, as well as that of the Installing Master. The P.M.'s, with which the name of Bro. Dr. H. Hopkins (Bath), the founder of the lodge, was associated, for whom his brother and friend A. Schmitt, feelingly acknowledged that cordial mark of remembrance and fraternal esteem. "The Visitors" was answered by Bro. the Rev. S. Patterson. At intervals some excellent songs were given by Bros. G. F. Baker, O. Dodge, Giles, Bishop, S. Gilley, Bartlett, Oulton, but Bro. Campbell's were raptuously applauded, and thus a most enjoyable evening was spent, grave and gay alternating. The party separated highly satisfied.

SOUTHEND.—Priory Lodge (No. 1000).—The last meeting of the lodge, previous to the summer recess, took place at the Middleton Hotel, on Thursday, the 24th ult. Bro. Rev. S. R. Wigram, Past Grand Chaplain, W.M., presided, supported by the following officers and brethren, viz.: Bros. Dr. E. E. Phillips, P.M. 379, Prov. J.G.D., I.P.M.; W. Chaplin, S.W.; W. P. Belliss, J.W.; Rev. H. Hayes, Chap.; J. A. Wardell, P.M. 160 and 1000, P.P.G.D., Sec.; A. Lucking, P.M. 160 and 1000, Prov. A.G.D.C., D.C.; J. C. Johnstone, P.M. 20 (I.C.), S.D.; G. F. Fisher, M.D., 379, F. Calrony, 197. The ballot was taken for Messrs. E. Birkett and Bruce McMay Johnstone, which being unanimous in their favour they were duly initiated by the W.M. in a highly efficient manner, the charge being given by the J.W. and the lecture on the tracing board by the S.W. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment and passed a pleasant evening.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Lancaster, on the 7th inst. Bro. T. Jackson, W.M., presided, but there was only a small attendance. The lodge having been opened with the usual formalities, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Bradshaw, who was a candidate for the degree of F.C., having shown his proficiency for the same, was entrusted and retired, and the lodge having been opened in the Second Degree he was re-admitted, and passed to the degree of F.C., the working tools being presented by the S.W. The usual proclamations were afterwards made, and the lodge closed in due form.

LIVERPOOL.—Neptune Lodge (No. 1264).—The usual monthly meeting of this large and influential lodge was recently held at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, when there was a numerous attendance of members owing to the interest attaching to election night. The lodge was opened punctually at six o'clock by Bro. Alexander Cotter, who was supported by a full complement of his officers. Bro. Joseph Healing, the first W.M. of the Neptune Lodge, and now holding the honourable office of Treasurer, was duly elected W.M. of the lodge for the ensuing year. Bro. P. B. Gee, P.M. (who twice served the duties of the chair) was also elected Treasurer for the coming year. A hearty and unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. J. Healing, P.M., for the able and efficient services he had rendered the lodge by acting as Treasurer for the last eight years. The W.M. (Bro. A. Cotter) presented to the lodge three very handsome gavels, with suitable inscriptions engraved on silver plates, and for this valuable gift the thanks of the brethren were cordially given to Bro. Cotter. The Secretary, Bro. T. Walton, intimated to the brethren of the lodge the demise of Bro. Charles Seldon, chief engineer of the S.S. Tagus, which recently foundered in the Bay of Biscay with all hands. It was unanimously resolved that the Secretary should write to the relatives of Bro. Seldon, condoling with them upon the loss they had sustained, and expressing the deep sympathy of all the brethren with them in their bereavement. It was cordially agreed to that a sum of money should be voted towards purchasing a Past Master's jewel for Bro. Cotter on his retirement from the chair. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren proceeded from labour to refreshment.

HAMPTON.—Lebanon Lodge (No. 1326).—This lodge held its first meeting of the season on Saturday, the 19th ult., at the Red Lion Hotel, Lion-square, Thames-street, Hampton. Bro. Edwin Gilbert, W.M. opened the lodge. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and unanimously confirmed, and signed by the W.M. The ballot for Mr. W. Clark was declared to be unanimous in favour of his admission. The W.M., Bro. E. Gilbert, showed his proficiency by passing Bros. W. Priddy and S. Page to the Second Degree. He then raised Bro. W. Blakeley to the Third Degree, all the work being ably done. On the motion made by Bro. F. Walters, it was unanimously resolved that a congratulatory letter be sent Bro. R. W. Little, on his appointment as D.P.G.M. Middx. The subject of the Burdett testimonial was deferred until the next regular meeting, double the amount (on notice of motion made) being intended to be given than what had been proposed at this meeting. The usual notice of motion was given to present the W.M. with the customary Past Master's jewel, value seven guineas. Several names of brethren for joining and gentlemen for initiation were given in to the Secretary. Business ended the lodge was closed and adjourned to Saturday, June 21st, to meet at half-past three o'clock p.m. The usual good banquet was served, which reflected the greatest credit on Bro. Murphy, who personally superintended it. There were present during the afternoon and evening Bros. E. Gilbert, W.M.; C. W. Fox, S.W.; H. Gloster, J.W. 1351, as J.W.; F. Walters, P.G.J.D. Middx., P.M., Sec.; J. B. Shackleton, W.M., J.D.; W. Stanton, as S.D.; J.W. Baldwin, P.A.G.P. Middx., P.M., I.G.; G. Shott, D.C.; H. Potter, P.M., W.S.; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. Middx., P.M., and many others. The only visitor was Bro. H. Murphy, 1512.

HAMPTON.—Era Lodge (No. 1423).—An emergency meeting of this prosperous provincial lodge was held on Saturday, the 12th inst., at Bro. Tagg's Island Hotel, which is noted for its picturesque position, and whose pleasant environs are also dear to all lovers of the piscatorial art. There were present Bros. J. T. Moss, P.P.G.R. of Middlesex, acting W.M.; Sabine, P.P.G.S.B. of Middlesex, S.W.; Dubois, P.M., P.G.S.D. of Middlesex, Treas.; Wolfe, acting J.W.; B. Wright, Asst. Sec.; Baldwin, P.M., P.A.G.P. of Middlesex; W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex (hon. mem.); Johnson, I.G.; Faulkner, W.S.; Gilbert, Tyler. The visitors were Bros. T. C. Walls, J.W. 1381, and T. G. Tagg, Lebanon and Hemming. The meeting was convened to consider the following notice of motion—"That the Era Lodge be removed from the King's Arms Hotel, Hampton Court, to the Island Hotel, Hampton." The matter having been fully discussed by Bros. Dubois, Moss, Sabine, and others, it was finally and unanimously resolved that the lodge should be removed as suggested. There being no other business before the lodge, it was closed, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent cold collation, which reflected great credit upon the caterer, Bro. Tagg. Just before its conclusion Bro. Thielay, P.G.S.B. of Middx., the W.M., arrived, who stated that he had received a communication from the Secretary, Bro. F. Walters, P.G.J.D. of Middx., explaining the urgent reasons that had prevented him from attending the lodge meeting. The preliminary toasts having been disposed of, "The Health of the W.M." was proposed in a very neat speech by Bro. Moss. The W.M., in reply, briefly said that he was sorry that he had not been present at the lodge meeting, because he was aware of the great impression that punctuality always created, especially amongst Freemasons. In conclusion, he stated that he was very pleased that the brethren had decided upon the removal of the lodge from its old quarters to the Island Hotel, because the locale of the latter place was better calculated to promote enjoyment and to secure greater privacy in the carrying out of their Masonic work. "The Health of the Past Masters" followed, and drew from Bros. Moss, Baldwin, and Dubois some very excellent remarks. The brethren separated at an early hour, highly gratified with the whole proceedings.

BLACKPOOL.—Blackpool Lodge (No. 1476).—The annual festival and installation of the W.M. of the Blackpool Lodge was held on the 15th inst., at the Clifton Arms Hotel, when Bro. Edward Gregson was installed as the W.M. by Bro. S. P. Bidder, P.M., of Manchester, who also invested the following as officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. R. W. Braithwaite, I.P.M.; Henry Gardener, S.W.; Adolph M. Viener, J.W.; Thos. Blane, Treas.; F. Patterson, Sec.; J. Carter, S.D.; Thos. Watson, J.D.; H. Johns, Dir. of Cer.; J. Waddington, Org.; Willan Lister, I.G.; J. Butcher, Steward; and Wade, Tyler. Amongst those present were several visiting brethren, including Bros. Aronsberg, P.M., Manchester; J. Bonny, Blackpool, and others. A capital banquet was provided, and after the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, "The Health of the Visiting Brethren" was given and duly honoured.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. W. KUHE, P.G.O.

BRIGHTON.—St. Cecilia Lodge (No. 1636).—At the regular monthly meeting of this young lodge, held at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on Tuesday, May 29th, a gratifying presentation was made to the W.M., Bro. W. Kuhe, P.G.O. It consisted of the full-dress clothing of a Past Grand Officer. The recently appointed Deputy Prov. G. Master for Sussex, Bro. John H. Scott, W.M. 271, who is acting I.P.M. of the St. Cecilia Lodge, by the request of the brethren was the spokesman on this occasion, and addressing the W.M. said: "W.M., I have been requested by the brethren of the St. Cecilia Lodge to perform a most agreeable duty. It is to present you, W.M., with a token of their friendship and esteem. I need hardly say how willingly I have undertaken to do so, not only because it is very gratifying to me to be the means of paying a well-deserved compliment to one of my oldest and dearest friends, but because the whole transaction appears to me to be thoroughly Masonic in all its bearings. For we do not come to our lodges, brother, merely to go through a routine of ceremonies, but to foster and encourage those kindly feelings towards each other which are apt to become blunted, and too often estranged, in the rough battle of life in which we are all compelled to engage, and so we look on our W.M., not as a machine set to do certain work, but as an individual in whose welfare we take the liveliest interest, and if during his year of office any event takes place of more than ordinary occurrence, we gladly hail the opportunity of testifying towards him our goodwill and esteem. One such event has just occurred, viz., the expiration of the period of three years, in which our W.M. has held office in Grand Lodge. To become a Grand Officer is the summit of the ambition of all aspiring Masons, but that honour is attained but by few. It is conferred, as in the case of our W.M.G.M., and his Royal brothers, on Princes of the blood Royal; it is conferred on persons of high birth and position, such as the Grand Wardens, the Senior G.W. being usually selected from the House of Lords, and the Junior G.W. from the House of Commons. The G. Deacons and other officers are reserved for brethren who distinguish themselves in Masonry, whilst in other instances personal gifts qualify certain individuals to fill such offices as the Grand Chaplain, the Grand Registrar, the Grand Sup. of Works, and the Grand Organist. The first must be held by a clergyman, the second by a brother connected with the law, the third by an architect, an engineer, or a contractor, and the fourth by a musician. But whether the privilege of being a Grand Officer is attained by gifts or acquisitions the honour is the same, and those brethren to whom this honour belongs possess an influence and a status in Masonry which is not enjoyed by those less favoured—so that when a Grand Officer comes amongst us he gives additional interest to our proceedings, and sheds the lustre of his own dignity on those with whom he associates. This is one of the reasons which make the members of the St. Cecilia grateful to you. You have not only devoted a large portion of your valuable time to our service, you have not only performed a larger number of ceremonies in a short space of time than I should imagine, have ever been done before, but you have lent us the prestige of your name, your rank, and your talents. Such services, brother, demand an acknowledgment, and it is the way in which we are about to acknowledge them that appears to me to be so thoroughly Masonic. We might have waited till the close of his year of office, and then presented our W.M. with a handsome Past Master's jewel, or a piece of plate, or a vellum illuminated with our thanks; but there is more spontaneity, more heartiness, more friendliness, in the course we are about to adopt, and it will, I am sure, be more agreeable to our W.M. During the three years that he has filled the office of Grand Organist he was entitled to wear the splendid paraphernalia of Grand Lodge, but now if he wishes to attend Grand Lodge, or take part in any Masonic ceremonial, he must provide himself with similar clothing. Now, Grand Lodge clothing is a costly and expensive business, and so many of us thought that a whip round of a few shillings each would enable us to do our W.M. a friendly turn, pay him, as I have already said, a well deserved compliment, and save him considerable expense. I have, therefore, the greatest pleasure, Worshipful Master, in the name of the brethren of the St. Cecilia and a few others, who, having heard of our intention, wished to join us, in presenting you with the full dress clothing of a Past Grand Officer. May you live long to wear it. May it ever remind you of the friendship of your brethren, and when we see you arrayed in this magnificent apparel we shall not look upon it as so much purple and gold, as mere outside show, but as the appropriate adornment of a brother whose heart and conduct are actuated by the true and genuine principles of a Freemason. The W.M., who was heartily greeted, said he could not plead the usual excuse that he was unaccustomed to public appearances, but he was quite unable to thank them as he could have wished to do; he had not the eloquence of his friend Bro. Scott, besides which, their great kindness had quite overpowered him. All he could say was that some of the happiest hours of his life had been spent in Freemasonry, and he hoped he might live long to enjoy the goodwill and friendship of his brethren.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656).—An emergency meeting of this new but prosperous lodge, and which was very numerously attended, was held at the White Hart Hotel, on Monday, the 14th ult., when there were present, amongst others, Bros. W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, W.M.; B. Sharp, P.M. 84, S.W.; Bond, P.M.; Dobie, J.W.; Rev. De Crespigny, P.P.G.C. of Middlesex, Chap.; J. Hammond, P.M.; Jordan, W.M. elect 1512, acting I.P.M.; F. Walters, P.J.G.D. of Middlesex, and Baldwin, P.G.A.P. of Middlesex (honorary members); T. W. Ockenden, I.G. 1512, Sec.; Aston, S.D.; Hurst, W.M. 1512, J.D.; T. C. Walls, J.W. 1381, &c., I.G. The visitors, of which there was a goodly number, comprised Bros. Bowes, P.G.J.W. of Cumberland and Westmoreland, &c.; Raw, P.M. 926; Kraeutler, S.W. 1303; Griffiths, J.W. 1641; Martin, 201; Hiscox and Murphy, 1512. The W.M.'s agenda of business presented a very formidable appearance, there being no less than three initiations, five passages, and four raisings. The gentlemen initiated were Messrs. Masters, Malcolm, and Piller; Bros. Pinto, Jackson, E. Andrews, Forge, and Taylor were passed; and Bros. Marvin, Scott, Richer, and Featherstone were raised. There being two minor offices unfilled, the W.M. appointed and subsequently invested Bros. Marvin as D.C., and Scott as W.S., both of which appointments gave general satisfaction. A proposition for initiation at the next meeting having been taken, the W.M.'s labours, which had extended to a period of time of nearly five hours, terminated at the closing of the lodge at eleven. There was no banquet. The next regular meeting of the lodge will be held on the first Monday in October.

INSTRUCTION.

VICTORIA METROPOLITAN LODGE.

An exceedingly large muster of the brethren assembled at the Portugal Tavern, Fleet-street, on the 1st inst., to hear that piece of hard work, the Fifteen Sections. The lodge was opened by Bro. Dwarber, and then Bro. C. A. Woods, of the Prudent Brethren, whose dilatory train had prevented his attending the few minutes earlier necessary to make him perfectly punctual, took the chair, and the officers of his lodge were Bros. Stacey, P.M.; Farwig, S.W.; Giblen, J.W.; Dwarber, S.D.; Larham, J.D.; Vincent, I.G. The workers were Bros. Still, P.M. 1203; Creak, S.W. 157; Cowan, S.W. 1572; Dwarber, P.M. 55 and 1589; Snelling, 180; J. R. Stacey, P.M. 180; Ebbs, S.D. 733; Abell, J.W. 1599; Giblin, 860; Whitaker, W.M. 1572; Farwig, S.D. 180; Coulston, P.M. 382; Tate, 282; Gush, 1541; and Webb, 1388; I.G. each working the Section in the order here given. It was an entire agreement that a more perfect working was never heard, and Bro. C. A. Woods was unanimously elected an honorary member of the lodge.

MARQUESS OF RIPON LODGE (No. 1489). The usual weekly meeting of the above lodge was held on Monday, at the Pembury Tavern, Hackney. Bro.

Jacob, W.M.; Driver, S.W.; Grist, J.W.; W. Stephens, Preceptor; Defriez, S.D.; High, J.D.; and Mann, I.G. At the conclusion of labour it was proposed to adjourn during the summer months; this matter was, however, deferred (for the consideration of the members) until the last Monday in June, upon which occasion the ceremony of installation will be worked.

WILLIAM PRESTON CHAPTER (No. 766).

—The installation night of this flourishing chapter was held on the 24th ult., at the Cannon-street Hotel. Poor Dr. Whiteman was a year ago installed as the M.E.Z., but, as our readers know, had not served half a year before he was summoned by the Supreme to the Grand Chapter above. P.Z. Capt. Kain, at the request of the companions, kindly undertook to discharge the duties of the position, and at the meeting of which we speak he held the chair of M.E.Z., Comp. Newman being H.; and Comp. Braun, as J. P.Z. Comp. Garrod was Scribe E., in the temporary absence of P.Z. Worrall, who had taken a short holiday to visit, it was not questioned, the bosom of his family; for the happy marriage, recorded as having occurred last August, in our columns, had, on the day before the meeting, brought forth its fruit, in "pain-bought happiness," in the shape of a daughter. The other officers at the opening of the chapter were Comps. Dr. Kempster, Scribe N.; Newton, P.S.; and Cutmore and Gibson, as A.S. The companions present included Comps. J. Taylor, of the Doric; P. A. Naime, of the Caveac; J. Pringle, of the Crystal Palace Chapter; W. M. Goss, of the Caveac; C. F. Hogard, P.Z.; Turquand, of 1339; Williams, While (Freemason), and others. The bye-laws were discussed at the opening of the chapter, and agreed to, and Bro. A. Le Grand, of the William Preston Lodge, was duly exalted in a full convocation. The installation then proceeded, and Comp. Newman, who had been duly elected M.E.Z., was then installed into his high position; Comp. Augustus Braun, who had been duly elected, was installed into the Second Chair; and Comp. Dr. Kempster, whose high merits had been recognised by his election to the J. Chair, was placed in the position of the Great Ruler among the children of men. P.Z. Worrall again received his collar of office, as did P.Z. Garrod, amid cheers. The other officers received a step in advance, and Comp. Manfred Newton was nominated to the post of A.S. At the banquet, which was very excellently served, the usual congratulatory speeches on the advance of the chapter, and of the high merit of its officers, were made, and the visitors expressed themselves as highly pleased with the work and hospitality of the chapter. Comp. Kempster, in responding to the toast of his health, referred to the discoveries by Capt. Warren at Jerusalem, and, pointing to the corroboration given by those discoveries to the traditional history of Freemasonry, said that herein was a proof that the system of the Craft is no modern invention, but is really and truly an ancient Order.

WHITTINGTON CHAPTER (No. 862).

A regular meeting of this flourishing chapter was held on the 1st inst. at Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street. The chapter was opened by Comp. William Stephens, M.E.Z., Thos. Kingston, H., and W. A. Tinney, J. The minutes of the last regular convocation and Chapter of Emergency were then read and confirmed. Bro. J. Smout, sen., of Lodges 1489 and 1642, and Bro. J. Collinson, of the mother lodge, were then exalted to the Sublime Degree of R.A. Masons by the M.E.Z., which was rendered most impressive by the excellent working of the whole of the officers. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place, the result being as follows: Comp. Kingston, M.E.Z.; Tinney, H.; and W. J. Murlis, J.; William Stephens, Treas.; Jas. Weaver, Scribe E.; John High, Scribe N.; and Wm. Norman, P. Soj. A Past Principal's jewel was unanimously voted to the retiring M.E.Z. Several brethren were then proposed for exaltation, which will necessitate another emergency meeting during the next month. Business ended the chapter was closed, and the companions adjourned to banquet, when the usual toasts were proposed and duly honoured. Comp. Wright, P.Z. 27, and a companion of the G. Chapter of Ireland were the only visitors present. The former flatteringly replied on their behalf.

PRIORY CHAPTER (No. 1000).

—The installation meeting of this chapter was held at the Middleton Hotel, Southend, on Wednesday, the 16th ult. There were present, amongst others, Comps. E. E. Phillips, M.E.Z.; A. Lucking, H.; J. A. Wardell, J.; H. Muggeridge, P.G. Std. Br.; S. J. Weston, Treas.; J. C. Johnstone, P.Z. 20 (I.C.), Scribe E.; W. Pissey, Scribe N.; Jas. Willing, jun., P. Soj.; Rev. H. J. Hatch, 1st Asst. Soj.; T. Williams, E. Judd, F. Wood, J. R. Hemmann, G. F. Jones, F. Canton, F. Bernard. After the usual preliminary business, the Principals were installed by Comp. Muggeridge with his customary ability, viz., Comps. A. Lucking, M.E.Z.; J. A. Wardell, H.; Jas. Willing, jun., J. The officers invested were Comps. S. J. Weston, Treas.; J. C. Johnstone, Scribe E.; Rev. H. J. Hatch, Scribe N.; W. Pissey, Prin Soj.; E. Judd, 1st Asst.; J. R. Hemmann, 2nd Asst.; Mountain, Janitor. The ballot having proved unanimous in the favour of Bro. S. W. Fisher, M.D., Lodge of Honour, 379, and H. Luker, Priory Lodge, 1000, and Bro. H. Luker being in attendance, he was duly exalted. Comp. H. Muggeridge was elected an honorary member of the chapter, and a cordial vote of thanks was unanimously passed to him for his kindness in attending to instal the Principals. The convocation was then closed, and the companions adjourned to an excellent banquet. The usual loyal and R.A. toasts were given and heartily responded to. Comp. Muggeridge replied for the Grand Chapter. A handsome P.Z. jewel was presented to Comp. E. E. Phillips for his services to the chapter. The Janitor's toast brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Red Cross of Constantine.

ORIGINAL OR PREMIER CONCLAVE OF ENGLAND.—This conclave assembled on Monday evening, at the Regent Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street. V.E. Sir Knt. Henry A. Dubois, Grand Prefect, M.P.S., presided. The following Sir Kts. were present:—H. A. Dubois, M.P.S.; Sir Fredk. M. Williams, Bart., M.P.; Rev. Dr. Ernest Brette, Great High Prelate; Rev. J. M. Vaughan, S.G.; Rev. P. M. Holden, J.G.; Thos. Cubitt, Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, Recorder; Thos. Mason, Std. Br.; Henry Parker, Organist; Alfred Moore, Herald; Geo. Harrison, Sentinel; George Kenning, Past Sov.; E. Gumbleton, G.J.G.; J. T. Gower, J.J. Mason, W.H. Morey, Sir E. Lechmere, Joshua Nunn, H. A. Perrot, Hyde Pullen, H. Massey (Freemason), W. H. Hubbard, P.G. Treas.; John Thomas Moss, H. C. Levander, Sir Gilbert Campbell, and Col. Peters. After the confirmation of the minutes the following brethren were installed: J. Llewellyn Jones, W. H. Stephens, and Robinson. After the transaction of this business, Sir Kt. Little enthroned the Rev. Dr. Brette as M.P.S., and inducted as Viceroy Rev. J. M. Vaughan. The following Sir Knights were appointed as officers:—Rev. P. M. Holden, Senior General; Thos. Kingston, Junior General; Alfred Moore, High Prelate; Thomas Cubitt, Treas.; R. Wentworth Little, Recorder; H. C. Levander, Asst. Recorder; Hy. Parker, Org.; Thomas Massa, Orator; E. H. Thielay, S.B.; and J. W. E. Macartney, M.P. Herald. A collection was afterwards made for a fund that is being raised for an eminent Sir Knight, who has met with a number of serious disasters; and the Sir Knights, on the closing of the conclave, adjourned to the Café Restaurant, where an elegant banquet awaited them. The usual toasts followed and the new fire was given. The M.P.S. then announced that £10 had been collected for the fund mentioned above. Sir Kt. Levander replied to the toast of "The Grand Viceroy, and other Officers." In the name of Sir Kt. Little, and in his own name, as well as in the name of the other members of the Grand Council and Grand Senate, he could say that they were only too pleased to do all they could for the welfare of the Order. As to the services which had been rendered to this conclave and the Order in general by Sir Kt. Little, it would ill become him to say anything, as those services were too well known to the members of the conclave. Sir Kt. Little had worked hard on behalf of the conclave and the Order, and they owed him a hearty debt of gratitude for all he had done. It gave the members of the council the greatest pleasure to have seen the M.P.S. advanced to that high position, and also to congratulate him on his accession. Many Sir Knights greatly regretted that they were unable to be present at the enthronement, and they sent letters expressive of their regret. Sir Kt. H. A. Dubois proposed "The Health of the M.P.S." Dr. Brette, in reply, said, after thanking the Sir Knights, that it had always been a principle of his life to be at peace with all men. The principle was one which belonged to his cloth, and in Craft Masonry as well as in other Orders he had endeavoured never to be at issue with any brother whatever. He now entered on a new phase of his career, and during the twelve months he held the position of M.P.S. it would be not only his duty but his study to be at peace with all the members of the conclave. If in any proceeding he did anything which might give offence to any Sir Knight, and if he was wrong they might depend on it he should be the very first to apologise to the Sir Knight, and ask him to shake hands. Dr. Brette then proposed "The Health of the Visitors," and Sir Gilbert Campbell replied, after which Dr. Brette proposed "The Health of Sir Kt. Dubois, Past M.P.S." who had held the throne for the last year and had not only endeavoured but had succeeded in supporting the great prestige of the Premier Conclave. Sir Kt. Dubois responded. After some other toasts Sir Kt. J. T. Moss proposed "The Charities," and coupled with it the name of Sir Kt. Little. Sir Kt. Little acknowledged the toast, and gave an interesting account of the progress which had been made in the charities within the last few years. The Girls' School had increased its subscriptions in the time he had occupied the position of its Secretary from £4200 in 1872 to £900 in 1877. He hoped some proportionate advance would be made in the next year. He then referred to the progress of the Order, which was in existence long before the union in 1813, when the late Duke of Sussex was Grand Master ad vitam. There were Masons and Masons, and experience taught us that all Masons were not alike: there were good Masons and bad Masons. Let them try to eliminate from the Craft the best men they could possibly find and have them as members of this Order. Let them remember that this Order—and he would beg of them only to stick to tradition—was founded for proved Masons who had achieved a high position in the Craft, who had been Masters and gone through the various offices. He wished God speed to the American brethren who were extending the degree. Sir Knt. Dubois afterwards gave "The Press," and Sir Knt. Massey having replied, the proceedings terminated.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUSSEX.

On Saturday last a Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex was held at the Pavilion, Brighton, for the purpose of installing Bro. Sir Walter Wyndham Burrell, Bart., M.P., as Provincial Grand Master for Sussex. The brethren met at four o'clock in the afternoon, Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary, taking the chair, and having Bro. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason); and more than 100 members and visitors in addition to above list.

After the lodge had been opened, Bro. Freeman, acting as Secretary, read the minutes, which were put and carried unanimously. He afterwards read letters expressing regret for inability to attend from Bros. Lord Holmesdale, General Brownrigg, Hickman, Furner, Lord H. Tlynne, Sir Albert Woods (Garter), E. J. McIntyre, Q.C., W. Thompson, Dr. Richards, O'Brien, Fellows, Crossley, Duke, and Scott.

Bro. John Hervey then said: Brethren, you are all well aware of my appearing before you this evening and occupying the chair of our Provincial Grand Master; and I cannot but say that I do so with feelings of somewhat a mixed nature—feelings on one hand of regret, and on the other of congratulation—regret that a noble brother, who has long presided over you, has, from circumstances of bad health, been induced to lay his resignation of the office of Prov. G.M. for Sussex before the M.W.G.M., and this regret, I am sure, is shared by the province as well as by myself, inasmuch, as from the communications I have had from your Prov. G.M., I have always found him a man who acts most straightforwardly and courteously, and as he has acted most straightforwardly and courteously to myself, so I take it for granted he has acted towards the brethren of this province. On the other hand, it is a matter of sincere congratulation that a brother has been selected in his place whom, I am sure, has the kind feelings of every brother of the province, and whom you will support during the time he is your Prov. G.M. You cannot pay him a greater compliment than by at all times rendering him that support and assistance which as Prov. G.M. he is fully entitled to, and I trust that he will prove himself, as I am sure he will, as courteous to the members of the province, and as acceptable in every position in which he acts as Prov. G.M., as Lord Pelham has done during the last ten years. I think the only fault you can find with Lord Pelham is that he has left you, and that, under the circumstances, perhaps, where a man falls into bad health, is a very excusable one. I have come down here to-day with great gratification to perform the ceremony of installing your new Prov. G.M. I feel it a great compliment which he has paid me in asking me to present him to the Grand Lodge as Prov. G.M., and I can only repeat what I have before said, that I am satisfied he will conduct the business of his province in such a manner as to merit not only your support, but your kind and most generous feelings of respect. I will not detain you any longer because I am sure you will feel much more gratified at seeing the legitimate Prov. G.M. in this chair than you are at seeing me in it, and therefore I shall only say I hope and trust that the proceedings of the day will go off so as to merit your approval, and what little I have to do I will do as rapidly as possible, in order that the true owner of this chair may be in possession of the throne which he so well deserves.

At this point of the proceedings Sir W. Burrell demanded admission to Prov. G. Lodge, whereupon G. Sec. of England requested the Prov. G. P. to ask Sir Walter to send in his patent of appointment. This having been done a deputation was formed, consisting of the four G. Stewards—Bros. C. Sandeman, J. M. Kidd, G. Moren, and T. S. Byass—Bro. Dixon, Prov. G.D.C., and the Masters of Lodges 38, 40, 56, 131, Royal York, 341, 732, 851, 916, and 1110, to escort Sir Walter into the lodge. Having entered with the Prov. G.M. nominate, Prov. G. Sec. pro tem. (Bro. Freeman) read the patent, which was signed by the Prince of Wales, Lord Skelmersdale, and Bro. Hervey. The Chaplain offered up prayer, and Bro. Hervey congratulated Sir W. Burrell upon the trust which the G.M. reposed in Sir Walter by appointing him to the office of Prov. G.M. for such an important province of Sussex. He also offered his congratulations to the brethren of the province on the Prince's selection. Sir Walter then went through the requisite formalities, and was invested by Bro. Hervey with the gorgeous apron and collar of his office. Placing him in the chair he said he had great pleasure in delegating to him the trust which the G.M. had reposed in him.

The usual salute was thereupon given to the time of the Prov. G.D.C., and the new Prov. G.M. said he had considered it his duty to appoint the very best Deputy Prov. G.M. that he could choose from the province, and with that object in view he conferred the apron and collar of that office on Bro. John Henderson Scott, and he would call on the Prov. G. Sec. to read his patent of appointment. This having been read,

The Prov. G.M. said, addressing Bro. Scott, that he felt it would be useless to say much with regard to the duties of D.P.G.M. to so old a Mason, and one who was so particularly looked up to by the brethren of the province. All the brethren would agree that in choosing Bro. John Henderson Scott to be his Deputy Prov. G.M. he had selected the right man, and put him in the right place (cheers). They all knew how zealous Bro. Scott was in the cause of Masonry, and how efficient he was in all the Masonic working of the province. He would conclude by congratulating Bro. Scott on his appointment.

Bro. John Henderson Scott, at the conclusion of this short address, fulfilled the necessary requisitions, and was invested, proclaimed, and saluted.

The office of Prov. Grand Secretary being vacant, the Prov. G. Master appointed and invested Bro. Freeman, P.P.S.G.W., as Prov. G. Sec., and the following brethren were re-invested for the remainder of the provincial year:—T. Trollope, M.D. .... Prov. S.G.W.
C. J. Pocock ..... Prov. J.G.W.
Rev. E. Walker ..... Prov. G. Chap.
Woolley ..... Prov. G. R-g.
Dr. Tatham ..... Prov. G. Treas.
B. H. Thorne ..... Prov. S.G.D.
Bramwell ..... Prov. J.G.D.
Tomes ..... Prov. G. S. of W.
Joseph Dixon ..... Prov. G.D.C.
T. H. Cole ..... Prov. G.A.D.C.
Walter Smith ..... Prov. G.S.B.
A. King ..... Prov. G. Org.
J. Eberall ..... Prov. G. Purs.
Thor. Hughes ..... Prov. G. Tyler
C. Sandeman, J. M. Kidd, G. Moren, and T. S. Byass ..... Prov. G. Stewards

The Prov. G.M. said that in addressing the brethren for the first time as the Prov. G.M. of this province he thought he might fairly take some feelings of personal satisfaction to himself in consequence of the M.W.G.M. having appointed him to this position. He assumed the position with a great deal of diffidence, feeling that he might sometimes not do quite Masonically that which ought to be done. But he hoped and trusted that with the aid of his officers he would always be able to conduct the duties of his office. The gratification he had expressed was, however, much alloyed when he cast his eye around the room and missed two old Masons whom he had hoped to have seen present, Lord Pelham and Bro. Furner. The Prov. G.M. then referred to the circumstances of the retirement of these two brethren, and explained that Lord Pelham had retired on account of ill-health, and Bro. Furner on account of his engagements being too numerous to enable him to perform the duties of his office. He believed there would be some resolutions of thanks moved, both to Lord Pelham and Bro. Furner, and he was sure every brother would agree that those brethren richly deserved such resolutions of thanks. With regard to himself and his appointment, he hoped he should have health and strength to perform his duties. If he had such health and strength it was his intention to visit every lodge in the province; but, inasmuch as there were nineteen of them, and possibly might soon be one or two more, he did not think he could be expected to visit all in the course of one year. But, to the best of his ability, he would visit them all; and he trusted that with the assistance of the brethren and of the Grand Officers they would be able to conduct this province fraternally, shewing their good-will towards all people, and to the benefit of the Craft in general. He begged most sincerely to thank the brethren for their reception of him that day, and when next they met, in September, he hoped they would be able to see there had been good progress in Masonry. (Cheers.)

Bro. the Rev. O. McCarogher congratulated the province on the Prince of Wales's choice of a Provincial Grand Master for Sussex. There were few in that hall who could claim so long a friendship with Sir W. Burrell as himself. In the course of twenty-seven years of neighbourhood with him he had experienced many acts of kindness from him as a squire, a gentleman, a Mason, and a man. Although at great inconvenience, he had come that day to witness Sir Walter's installation, but more particularly he had come for one especial purpose, because he (Bro. McCarogher) was the Chaplain who assisted in consecrating the Ockenden Lodge, perhaps the most flourishing in the county. He believed Sir Walter Burrell would rule the province with all his power.

The Prov. G.S.W. proposed a committee for the revision of the bye laws, and said that it was the intention of the brethren to concentrate the strength of the province on behalf of the charities.

Bro. Mark Tanner seconded the motion.

The G.S.W. proposed that the committee should consist of the Deputy G.M., the Treasurer, Secretary, Bros Challen, Kidd, and Eberall.

Several other names were afterwards proposed, and the names of the Grand Registrar, Bros. C. J. Smith, and Dr. Cunningham were added.

An amendment to add the names of the Masters of all lodges in the province not otherwise represented was lost. The original motion was then carried, and it was resolved that five should form a quorum.

Bro. G. W. King then rose and said he felt it a great honour that he had been selected to move a resolution concerning the retirement of Lord Pelham from his post as Prov. G.M. for Sussex. He proposed this resolution partly because he was one of the oldest Provincial Grand Lodge officers. He was an officer when the Prov. G.L. was first instituted. He did not now propose to detain the brethren long; if he had so proposed, he could for the pleasure of the brethren, as well as for himself, spend a long while in dilating upon the merits of Lord Pelham, as shown in his management of Masonry during the time he was Prov. G.M. His lordship followed in the steps of two good and worthy men, Bros. Macqueen and Dalbiac, and during the years of office when he was able to come—and latterly to the brethren's regret he had not been able to come—he gained the goodwill and esteem of all he came in contact with. His urbanity and kindness of heart, his extreme zeal in fulfilment of his duties, were such as were a model for the imitation of every Mason, and it was with very great regret they saw him compelled by the pressure of bad health to retire actually from the performance of his duties until at last he was obliged to give them up altogether and leave the working in the hands of Bro. Furner. All the brethren regretted what then took place, because they saw it must end in his retirement from the post he had so well and worthily filled. It was, alas! unlikely that he would be blessed with returning health and strength, and he was too conscientious and devoted to the interests of Masonry to hold a post of which he could not carry out the duties. Fortunately for his lordship and for the brethren he found in Bro. Furner a good and worthy substitute; but they knew at the same time that a substitute could not do all that a principal might do; and regretfully they saw the time approaching when Lord Pelham would vacate his chair. They were pleased to see that chair filled now by one who would follow in the steps of those who had gone before him, and he (Bro. King) begged to move this resolution in honour of Lord Pelham and as an expression of their feelings towards him on his retirement—"The brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Sussex desire to express their sincere thanks to Lord Pelham for the services he rendered to Freemasonry during the time he held the appointment of Prov. G.M. They retain a lively recollection of the pleasure his presence amongst them during the first six years of his lordship's Mastership afforded them. They remember also the attention he gave, even in retirement, to Masonic matters; and they regret that any circumstances should have severed his lordship's connection with the government of this Prov. Grand Lodge."

Bro. C. J. Langtre, as one of the oldest officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge, begged to second the proposition. He could only echo the exhaustive remarks of Bro. King with reference to Lord Pelham.

The resolution was then put and carried nem. con.

Bro. W. R. Wood, Prov. Grand Secretary, said he had the pleasure to hold in his hand a resolution with reference to their late Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Furner. In relation to this resolution everything which had been said by Bro. King so appropriately to the late Prov. Grand Master equally applied to Bro. Furner, strictly and truly. It was their Bro. Furner's desire to retire from the office of D. Prov. Grand Master, and however much they might lament the loss of his grave, edifying, and excellent presence, they had to congratulate themselves on his place being filled by an able successor. Bro. Furner was a brother whom they all knew so well that it would be a waste of time to explain his (Bro. Wood's) own personal feelings with respect to him. It would also be in bad taste to do so, or it would give him great pleasure to say a vast deal in relation to Bro. Furner. It would likewise be superfluous because the brethren knew Bro. Furner so perfectly and loved him so much. Having glanced through the resolution he was about to propose, he would say it was in point, it included all that was pertinent; it was very succinct, and yet fully expressed the brethren's sentiments. "The brethren of the Province of Sussex, in open Grand Lodge assembled, tender to Bro. Edmund J. Furner, Past Grand Deacon, their hearty thanks for the admirable manner in which he discharged the duties of Deputy Prov. Grand Master for Sussex during the last twelve years. They remembered that he undertook that office with the understanding that active service would not be required of him." He would here digress for one moment. They knew how differently Bro. Furner had acted although such was the understanding. He most ably discharged all the duties of his office, by travelling great distances on many occasions, in consecrating lodges, and in doing various other duties connected with the craft. "And that unforeseen circumstances drew upon him the whole government of the province for the greater part of the time that he held the office of D.P.G.M., and that he never shrank from the duties imposed upon him, but discharged them with an ability and energy which reflected the highest credit on himself and the greatest advantage to Freemasonry in Sussex, is a fact which the brethren will always remember with the deepest gratitude. They regret that Bro. Furner should have resigned the important position he so long held in the province, but assure him he carries with him into his well-earned retirement the good wishes, the esteem, and the affection of his Sussex brethren."

Dr. Cunningham seconded the resolution. He had always found Bro. Furner a gentleman in every position he was placed in; he was a kind brother, an active man, always courteous, always willing to do what he could in every way to represent the dignity and honour of the Craft.

The motion was carried unanimously.

Dr. Trollope, S.G.W., said it would be a source of gratification to both Lord Pelham and Bro. Furner to have these resolutions embodied in a permanent form. Bro. Furner had one son who was a Mason, if not more, and the brethren hoped that this resolution would be a memorial for him of the esteem in which his father had been held, to be handed down from generation to generation. He therefore proposed "That the foregoing resolutions be inscribed and illuminated on vellum, signed by the Prov. G.M., the D. Prov. G.M., and Secretary, and forwarded to Lord Pelham and Bro. Furner with as little delay as possible."

Bro. Thorpe, J.G.W., seconded the proposition.

The Prov. G.M. put the resolution to the brethren, who adopted it unanimously.

On the motion of Bro. W. H. Hallett, P.P.S.G.W., a vote of thanks was proposed to Bro. John Hervey and Bro. Fenn for the honour they had done the province by attending, and installing the Prov. G.M.

Bro. Thorpe, J.G.W., seconded it.

The Prov. G.M., in putting the resolution to the brethren, said that he also thanked Bro. Hervey and Bro. Fenn, and many other Grand Officers who might be present, for their attendance, which he looked upon as a personal honour to himself.

The resolution was adopted nem. dis.

Bro. Hervey said that he was sorry the installation had not taken place on some other day, as to-day happening to be the Queen's birthday, a great many officers of Grand Lodge were prevented attending. There would have been a great many more Grand Officers present but for this circumstance. If the ceremony had been to the Prov. G.M. Master's and to the brethren's satisfaction, he was very glad to have been instrumental in it, and he felt highly delighted to have had the opportunity of placing the Prov. G.M. in the chair. He was quite sure he would conduct its business with dignity to himself and conciliation to the brethren of the province.

On the motion of Bro. J. W. Stride, seconded by Bro. Nokes, power was given to the Provincial Grand Secretary to purchase new collars for Provincial Grand Officers and Stewards.

Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren partook of an elegant banquet, supplied by Messrs. Sayers and Marks, caterers, Brighton. The Prov. G.M. presided. [The proceedings at the banquet will be given next week.]

Obituary.

BRO. REV. W. BEEBY, M.A.

We regret to announce the decease of Bro. Rev. W. Beeby, M.A., which occurred at his residence, Birkby, Maryport, Cumberland, on the 30th ult., after an illness of six weeks, culminating in heart disease. Bro. Beeby was a thorough Mason in every sense of the word, and his loss will be severely felt by the Craft in West Cumberland. He was P.M. of his mother lodge, Perseverance, No. 371, Maryport, as also P.P.G. Chaplain for Cumberland and Westmoreland; a companion of Sun, Square, and Compasses Chapter, No. 119, Whitehaven; a Past Warden of Whitwell Lodge, Mark Masters, No. 151, Maryport; and at the time of his death was M.P. Sovereign of Dyke's Conclave R.d. Cross Knights, No. 36, Cockermouth. Bro. Beeby for some years past lived on his own estate, and held no cure of souls. He was an active J.P. of his county, and a trustee of the town and harbour of Maryport. Our lamented brother, who was in his 45th year, leaves a son and daughter to mourn his loss. The funeral on Saturday week was attended by a large number of the Craft.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.—Lord Suffield, (the Chairman), and the Stewards of the late festival of this Institution will pay their visit to the School on the 18th inst.

Bro. the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, P.S.G.W., has consented to preside at the next annual festival of the Benevolent Fund of the Grand Mark Lodge, which will be held in July next.

A few words, though late, are due to the memory of the Rev. John Kenrick, who died on the 7th ult., well known to the English scholars of a former generation as the editor of Zumpt's Latin and Matthei's Greek Grammar, as the author of valuable works on "the Egypt of Herodotus" and on "Phoenicia." He was born at Exeter, on the 4th of February, 1788, and studied successively at Glasgow, Göttingen, and Berlin. Though merely a tutor at a Unitarian College at York, he was indisputably the greatest Nonconformist scholar of his own day, and never ceased contributing to organs of critical philology and theology, such as the "Philosophical Magazine," the Cambridge "Philosophical Museum," and the "Prospective" and the "Theological Reviews." He was also a progressive Biblical critic, long before "Essays" and "Reviews" had lighted the torch of controversy—yet never, in his anxiety for progress, affirmed more than he thought himself absolutely able to prove.—Academy. (We may add, that Mr. Kenrick wrote a most interesting paper on the Knights Templar, one of the most lucid we have ever seen.—Ed.)

The foundation-stone of a new Wesleyan chapel, at Gloucester, to cost about £7000, was laid by Bro. Alderman Hadley, Sheriff of London and Middlesex, on Wednesday week.

An election of children to the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum was held at the offices, Newgate-street, on Thursday week. Ten boys and ten girls were elected from a list of candidates. No formal meeting is held at this election, the votes being sent to the office, where they are made up by the scrutineers and clerks.

Bro. S. C. Hall has in the press a little work entitled "Words of Warning, in Prose and Verse; addressed to Societies for Organizing Charitable Relief and suppressing Mendicity." In it he combats the working of these societies, and in the notes appended to the work gives instances of bad results from their operations.

We are requested to state that the announcement which appeared that the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London and Middlesex will pay a visit in state to Sir John Bennett at the Banks, Mountfield, is incorrect.

The installation meeting of the Crystal Palace Lodge, No. 742, took place on Thursday, when Bro. R. Roberts was installed W.M. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

The following notification was posted at the Admiralty on Wednesday afternoon:—Their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert Victor Christian Edward of Wales and Prince George Ernest Albert of Wales, have received appointments as Supernumery Naval Cadets to H.M.S. Britannia.

A report of the proceedings at the Lodge of Amity, No. 171, on Tuesday last is in type and will appear in our next.

A meeting of the Knights Companions of the R.S.V.C.S., will be held on Monday next at 3 o'clock in the Masonic Hall, Golden-Square.

H.R.H. Prince Leopold has signified his intention to lay the first stone of the detached infirmary of the Earlwood Asylum some time next month.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Oxfordshire was held on Friday, the 1st inst., in the handsome hall of the Apollo University Lodge. Bro. H.R.H. Prince Leopold, R.W. P.G.M. presiding. A report of the proceedings will appear in our next.

The Stewards visit to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys and distribution of prizes will take place at Wood Green, on the 25th inst. Bro. the Rt. Hon. Lord Donoughmore, P.G.W., in the chair.

OYSTERS.—The enigma of the present age has been the progressive rise in the price of oysters. Taking a retrospective glance, say of some twenty years, this excellent and valuable bivalve was obtainable at a price that enabled all classes to enjoy a delicacy that, from the days of old Rome—and long antecedent—has been appreciated. But of late years oysters, like five year old mutton, have been a luxury for the few; the price deterring the limited pocket of participating in this very essential article of food. Happily, however, all this is removed, and through the energy of an enterprising firm, oysters at a "shilling a dozen" are once more in the market, and likely to continue for many years. Messrs. Paxton and Paxton of 27, King-street, Cheapside, challenge quality and comparison with the English Native at this price (one shilling per dozen), and in addition state that with the Anglo-Portuguese Oyster there are no closed months, and that the bivalve is obtainable "all the year round." We note that hampers, 10s. 6d., containing one hundred, and opening-knives, are forwarded, carriage free, to any railway station in England.

It is probable that General Grant will, in a few days, pay a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Sartoris, who lives at Warsash, a few miles from Southampton. In the event of his doing so the Corporation of Southampton will, if the General does not object, accord him a public reception.

CONSECRATION OF THE NEWTON LODGE, NO. 1661.

On Thursday, the 24th ult., whilst the bells of the parish church of Newark echoed with their merry peals in honour of the Queen's birthday, the borough was further enlivened by an influx of visitors from various parts of the country to attend the inauguration of a Masonic lodge in Newark. The new lodge, which is called the Newton Lodge, is No. 1661 on the register of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of England, and the ceremony of consecration was performed by the V.W. Bro. Jno. Hervey, G.D., Grand Sec., the officer appointed by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G., M.W. Grand Master. Bro. Hervey was assisted by upwards of a hundred of the brotherhood belonging to lodges in this country, as well as New Zealand and South Africa, amongst those present being Bros. Sir Henry Bromley, Bart., No. 278, Gibraltar; Danks, 402, P.P.G.S.W.; Vowles, P.G.S.W. Notts.; Robinson, P.M. 47; P.G.J.W.; Brough Maltby, 402, P.G. Chaplain; Newton, P.M. 402, P.P.G.R.; Dickinson, P.M. 297 (Mayor of Lincoln); Goodall, P.M. 402; Rawson, P.M. 402, P.P.G.R.; Allen, 1434, P.P.G.S.W. Notts.; Saul Isaac, M.P., P.P.G.J.W. Kent; Wragg, P.M. 402, P.P.G.S.B.; Smyth, D.P.G. 712, Lincoln; Greaves, P.M. 113, P.P.G.O.; Watkins, W.M. 297, P.P.G.D.; Fowler, P.M. 712, P.P.S.G.W.; Rice, 1435; P.G.S.B.; Harrison, P.M. 297, P.G.W.; King, W.M. 601; Lewis, 47, P.G.S.; Sutton, I.P.M. 47; Attenborough, P.M., Prov. G. Sec.; M. Irving, 477 (New Zealand); Neale, P.M. 402, P.P.G.W.; George Baxter, P.M. 939, P.P.G.S.D. Notts.; Edward Baxter, P.M. 939, P.G.S.B.; Hawley, P.M. 939; Hodgkinson, P.P.G.S.B.; Gore, 1085; Trueman, P.G. Sup. W.; Terry, P.G.D.C.; Comyn, W.M. 411, P.P.G.S.W. Notts.; F. V. Russell, P.M. 939; H. Shaw, P.M. 939; C. J. Neale, P.M. 840, 472, P.P.J.W.; A. J. Russell, P.M. 939; T. Boulton, J.D., 362; T. Tutin, P.M. 939; S. K. Marsland, 402, M.M.; E. Starey, P.M. 624, P.P.G.J.W.; H. Hodgkinson, P.M. 939, P.P.J.S.B.; Mallender, W.M. 939; and others. On the 5th of June, 1790, the Corinthian Lodge at Newark was consecrated at the Wing Tavern, and the brethren on this occasion assembled in the rooms adjoining the Council Chamber, which at that time formed the Wing Tavern. There can be no doubt, therefore, that the site of the meeting place was identical with that of the gathering in 1790.

The brethren assembled at two o'clock, and having signed the attendance roll took their places in the lodge. Bro. Hervey having asked the Provincial Grand Officers, Bros. Voules, P.G.S.W., Robinson, P.G.J.W., and Attenborough, P.G.S., to assist him in the ceremony, and Bro. Terry having arranged a procession to the lodge-room, the brethren proceeded into the room to the music of a grand march, performed by Bro. Caparn, Organist, the choir at the same time chanting a psalm. The lodge having been opened in due form the ceremony was proceeded with, and carried through in a most impressive manner, lasting about two hours. Subsequently Bro. Newton was presented to the lodge and installed first Master of the new lodge, and having taken the chair and received the congratulations of the brethren in Masonic form he invested the following brethren as officers of the lodge:—Bros. Brough Maltby, P.M. and Chaplain; C. Johnson, S.W.; R. F. H. King, J.W.; Irving, Treas.; Dawson, Sec.; Job, S.D.; G. Branstons, J.L.; Castle, D.C.; Caparn, Org.; Wildsmith, Assistant Org.; Myring and Curtis, Stewards; J. H. Tomlinson, I.G.; Liddell, Almoner; Ward, Tyler.

The other business having been transacted the lodge was closed in due form.

During the ceremony Bro. Hervey addressed the brethren, saying it was usual on these occasions for him to make a few remarks on the nature of the meeting, but he should not trouble them with many observations at the present time. He should not, however, like the occasion to pass without expressing the gratification he felt at coming down into this province to perform the ceremony of consecration of a lodge which he trusted might be of great benefit to the brethren, and also to the town itself. He was quite sure that the members would support the chair at all times, and exert themselves to carry out the directions faithfully and punctually, and to show that they were willing to work for the honours which the Craft gave, and for the offices which might be conferred upon them. No lodge could be carried on without good officers, and if the officers were good, yet if they did not attend there was a lapse; which, as all who had worked a lodge knew very well, created a difficulty. He had no doubt that the brother at the head of the lodge would so tutor his officers that there would be little chance of their not being efficient in the various duties they undertook to fulfil. Before he concluded he might be allowed to advise the brethren to be careful who they admitted as members of their lodge. One appointment made without due consideration might disturb the harmony of the lodge, and destroy its usefulness. He would also suggest that before any member was proposed it was desirable to previously consult the W.M., as nothing was more disagreeable and unpleasant than to have a candidate at any time blackballed. It might be, and he had known it to be the case, a candidate was in every way a fit and proper person to be a member of the lodge, but in consequence of some unpleasant feeling on the part of a brother he was submitted to the annoyance of a black ball, probably to be brought forward again at a future time and admitted. Now, all this could be avoided if the proposition was fairly considered and submitted to the Master previous to its being communicated to the lodge. They would pardon him making these observations, but from his experience he felt it his duty to do so.

Shortly after this address had been given by Bro. Hervey, an oration was delivered by Bro. Brough Maltby, the Provincial Grand Chaplain, in support of Masonry.

During the delivery of the address there were frequent marks of approval from the brethren, and the speaker was requested to allow it to be printed for circulation and distribution. A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded upon the minutes of the lodge to Bro. Hervey for opening and consecrating the lodge, and also to Bro. Terry for the services he had rendered. During the service a collection was made among the brethren, which was sufficient to endow the chair with two votes for the Benevolent Fund in perpetuity.

On the lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to the large hall, where a banquet had been prepared. The room was elegantly decorated, and arranged with great taste. The W.M. elect occupied the chair. A long list of toasts was given, and a most agreeable evening was spent. Several of the brethren left by the nine o'clock train, and the remainder broke up shortly after. In reference to the Old Corinthian Lodge, to which we incidentally alluded at the outset, it may be interesting to some of the brethren to know that it was consecrated on the 5th June, 1790; was No. 561, but ceased to hold any regular meetings after 1832, after which date the warrant was returned to Grand Lodge through the Provincial Grand Lodge of Nottinghamshire. Among other relics of that lodge which have been preserved are a very valuable black letter Bible known as a "Breeches Bible," and a sword, which is said to have been used during the siege of Newark. These relics were exhibited on Thursday, and were examined with considerable interest by the assembled brethren.

CONSECRATION OF THE TONBRIDGE LODGE No. 1678.

Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., Grand Master of the Province of Kent, presided at the consecration of a new lodge, to be called the Tonbridge, at the Old Town Hall, Tonbridge, on the 30th ult. The ceremony was performed by Bro. the Rev. T. Robinson, M.A., and an oration on the principles and objects of Freemasonry was delivered by Bro. the Rev. W. A. Hill, M.A., Grand Chaplain.

In the course of the proceedings it was stated by the Deputy Grand Master, Bro. J. S. Eastes, that the province of Kent, which now contained the youngest lodge in the Order, also possessed the oldest out of London, the Royal Kent Lodge of Antiquity at Chatham. There were now 2200 members of the Craft in Kent, the numbers having been trebled within the last twenty years, while the annual contributions for works of charity had increased in even larger proportion.

The petition addressed to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, for the warrant of Constitution was signed by Bros. W. Page, Mayor of Maidstone; G. Langridge, the Rev. Jas. Amos, the Rev. D. J. Drakeford, Grand Chaplain of Surrey; F. Spencer, C. F. Kemp, G. Angier, M.D., J. Hodgson, E. B. Smith, W. Monckton, B. S. Willmot, and H. D. M. Williams. The petition was recommended by the Krole Lodge, Sevenoaks.

The following were appointed officers of the new lodge:—Bros. George Langridge, W.M.; F. Spencer, S.W.; J. Amos, J.W.; George Angier, M.D., Sec.; W. H. Hodgkin, Treas.; and S.D.; S. P. Potter, J.D.; H. M. Lawrence, I.G.

Nearly all the officers of Prov. Grand Lodge were present to assist in the work, including Bro. A. Spencer, P.G. Sec.; A. F. S. Bird, P.G. S.W.; and C. Coupland, P.G.J.W.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF EAST LANCASHIRE.

The annual meeting of the above Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the National Schools, Todmorden, on Wednesday, the 16th ult. There was a numerous attendance of present and past Prov. Grand Officers and other brethren, with only one exception, the whole of the eighty-four lodges in the province being represented.

The Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in due form by the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Col. Le Gendre N. Starkie, at a quarter past one o'clock.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master appointed and invested the following brethren as Prov. Grand Officers:—

Bro. Edward Ashworth	Prov. S.G. Warden.

A grant of £300 was made from the Prov. G. Lodge fund to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows, £200 to be applied to the Aged Freemasons' Fund, and £100 to the Widows' Fund.

A grant was also made from the Prov. Grand Lodge Fund to the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution.

The business of Prov. Grand Lodge being concluded, the Prov. Grand Lodge was closed, and the brethren proceeded to the Town Hall, where a banquet was provided, which was attended by about 200 brethren.

THE INSTRUCTED AND THE PRECEPTOR.

A pleasant scene followed the "working" of the Victoria Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction on Friday week, a lodge held at the Portugal Hotel, Fleet Street. Bro. Dickens was the W.M. of the evening, and "the Third" was the work which was performed from beginning to end, the courteous Bro. J. R. Stacey, the Preceptor, being in his usual position, and among others there being present Bros. Dwarber, P.M.; While, P.M.; (Freemason) Brock, Snelling Secretary; Denison, Gush, Larchin, Squerril, J. Lee, and many others. A secret apart from the Preceptor had been well kept, and it was simply that the brethren were about to present him with a token of their esteem, friendship, and above all, their gratitude for his teaching and counsel. A few brethren had promoted this purpose, and testimonial haters became testimonial promoters "in this instance," and had not the limits been strictly circumscribed the affair would have grown, so great was the desire to do justice to a worthy man. It had been suggested, upon a change being made in the government of a charity, that two remembrances of the work done should be given. Circumstances into which it is unnecessary to enter prevented the realisation of the suggestion in full, and the result of the brethren's appreciation of Bro. Stacey's kindness, courtesy, and Masonic knowledge was the presentation to him as a worthy "apron man," as one who gives "level consideration" to all things, of a very handsome snuff box in massive silver, and splendidly engraved. Bro. Brock made the presentation, amid the plaudits of the brethren, and with a capital speech, and Bro. Stacey, who was almost inclined to refuse any testimonial, as such, was prevailed upon to accept the box as a token of the esteem and regard of his brother members. It may be mentioned that the Benevolent Fund, in connection with this Lodge of Instruction, for obtaining life governorships by payment of 1s. a week, is entering upon a fresh career of usefulness after qualifying a great many brethren. Bro. Stacey is President, Bro. Snelling is Secretary, and Bro. While Treasurer.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The meeting of the General Committee was held on Saturday, the 2nd inst., at Great Queen-street, when Bro. Captain Wordsworth presided. There was a large attendance, including among others Bros. B. Head, Moutrie, Raynham W. Stewart, T. H. Turner, Jesse Turner, H. Dubois, C. F. Matter, R. B. Webster, Dr. Ramsay, Col. J. Peters, Hyde Pullen, W. Paas, G. Banks, Browne, Morris, Rawson, Thompson, Vaughan, Row, Rose, Atkin, Thomas Cubitt, John Stohwasser, George Kenning, &c. After the formal business of confirming minutes, &c., it was moved by Bro. Dr. Ramsay, seconded by Bro. Raynham W. Stewart, that it was desirable that better office accommodation should be afforded by Grand Lodge for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Dr. Ramsay said that it was not necessary to occupy much of the Committee's time in a matter which carried conviction to every mind to which it was known. It was well-known that the offices devoted to the charitable Institutions were not such as they should be. He thought it behooved them to see how they could put the Institution into a better position, because it was a notorious fact that they could not have any interview with the Secretaries without either clearing the offices of clerks for the time or discussing affairs before half-a-dozen people. It was very desirable that some better accommodation should be afforded for the Secretary of this Institution. He sincerely hoped that the Board of General Purposes would find some mode of effecting an improvement in this respect, because it seemed to him that it was a matter of real necessity. He believed that notice to the same effect had been given by the other Institution. The motion was carried unanimously. The petitions of the following candidates for admission to the school were accepted: Woold, J. Word, A. T. Perrin, F. S. Shapland, and W. J. Parker.

An application by Mrs. Eliza Talbot (whose daughter, formerly in the sister Institution, and for whom in consequence of a spinal affection an expensive instrument was required), who petitioned that, in lieu of the usual grant of a suit of clothes to her son who was leaving the Boys' School, a grant of money might be made for the benefit of her daughter, was considered, and it was decided with regret that the funds could not be diverted as suggested.

The following twelve brethren were elected members of the House Committee for the year 1877-8 out of sixteen nominated: Bros. Browne, J. Gyles Chancellor, Benjamin Head, W. Henry Hunt, W. P. C. Moutrie, William Paas, W. Hyde Pullen, William Roebuck, Sigismund Rosenthal, James George Row, J. Bagot Scriven, R. W. Stewart.

The following nine brethren nominated were elected members of the Audit Committee: Bros. John Boyd, J. W. Dosell, Benjamin Head, W. Mann, D. W. Pearce, George James Row, Jesse Turner, Alexander Wallace, R. B. Webster.

The proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the Chairman and Scrutineers.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—The most effectual cure for Gout and Rheumatism.—A frequent cause of these complaints is the inflammatory state of the blood, which usually attends bad digestion, which produces lassitude with great debility, and indicates the want of a proper circulation of that fluid, which with its impurity superinduced greatly aggravates these disorders. Holloway's Pills are of so purifying a nature, that a few doses taken in time are an effectual preventive against gout and rheumatism; but whoever may have an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the searching properties of which, combined with the effects of the Pills, ensure a certain cure. The Ointment should at least twice a day, be thoroughly rubbed into the parts affected, after they have been sufficiently fomented with warm water to open the pores, and thereby facilitate the introduction of the Ointment to the glands.—Advr.

CHARITY VOTING.

So far as the discussion has gone, we do not see that we have gained much that is new or decisive in respect of this very important question. We note no argument of any force; we perceive no illustration of any power. We have a good deal of assertion, dogmatic opinion, "it is because it is," the "post hoc propter hoc," the arguing from a particular to an universal. And though we anxiously study the question, we are as yet exactly where we were, neither wiser, nor better, we fear, nor the least whit impressed by much effective writing and much eloquent language. For the difficulty we feel strongly cannot be decided in this way. If there is one thing, as sensible men and intelligent Masons, we should set ourselves against just now, it is the tendency to appeal more to sentiment than to reason, more to assertion than to proof, more to sensationalism than to fact. It is easy enough, as all who have had much to do with public life, the platform, or the "forum" well know, to appeal to human prejudices and sensibilities, in order to carry a point, or to silence an adversary. But truth and right-reason, as all philosophers know, will not be so dealt with, and the attempt so to treat them always brings its own Nemesis with it, in crude theories, and impracticable proposals, in unsound dogmatism and illogical arguments. It would be deplorable, were it not so very much "of the earth earthy," to realize, what a long way in all things just now, a few plausible platitudes, a few florid figures of speech, will lead some of us, and how often the clear and the careful, the thoughtful and the intellectual, have to make way in the noisy arena of life for the man blessed with a "gift of the gab," for the utterer of specious if preposterous inanities, the asserter of the hopeless magnificence of audacious personality. Now, though such is happily not the case, so far in our Masonic discussion on charity voting has proceeded, we are all, as it appears to us, running a little "riot," going somewhat "wide of the mark," as regards the exact question before us. It is asserted, with much readiness of language and clearness of conviction, that there are abuses in the present system of our charity voting system which require reform; and it is proposed to make a great change (may we not add, pace, one of our correspondents, "P.P.S.G.W.," a revolution?) namely by abolishing the voting day and canvassing, and giving autocratic powers to a central committee. Well! we deny the "abuses" in this sense, and we deprecate, in our opinion, a fatal change, fatal that is to the best interests of the charities themselves, to their independence and absolute fairness of election. We prefer publicity and the present system, with all its "weaknesses," (if you like), to privacy and a select committee. Despite the able arguments of our esteemed P.G. Chaplain, Bro. R. J. Simpson, (and we speak with some little experience, as he knows, on the subject), we cannot endorse any proposed return to a supreme central committee, because it is greatly inferior, in our humble opinion, to the general public opinion of the subscribers. As regards the evils he mentions, they are really infinitesimal, while those which a close system might introduce, may we not irreverently say, "Nomen illis legio est?" If now and then an improper case gets on the list, it is not, as a rule supported, (though there is no rule without an exception), whereas, under the new system, what guarantee can the subscribers have, that personal interest, or private prejudice, may not take out this case or put forward that case? The central committee is, remember, to have, as we understand Bro. Simpson's suggestion, "unlimited power" in this respect, and from it there is no appeal. Such a system cannot work satisfactorily, we venture to think, and must, from the nature of the case, be productive of many evils. That cases will get on the list, despite the committee, which ought not to be there we fully admit, but then we feel sure that though that evil will always exist until we are all conscientious, it is greatly checked by the present system of open voting and public appeal. But on the "silent system" and "secret system" what is to prevent it becoming more active, nay even rampant? We cannot see how this great evil is, under the new system, to be resisted at all, and for this reason. We take such different views ourselves of what constitutes a distressing case. We have known cases, not a few, which in our opinion were utterly unjustifiable per se, and yet which were openly supported by distinguished brethren, when the candidate's father, for instance, had only barely subscribed for his qualification, and had been out of Masonry for many years at the time of his death. If then, we are going to make these sweeping changes, we shall have to prescribe that no child shall be eligible, unless the father has subscribed five, seven, or ten years, and was a subscribing member at the time of his death, unless he was then, or for some time previously, living in "forma pauperis." Otherwise we should be deluged with cases, which have been taken up hastily or sentimentally, and where the brother having subscribed the "minimum" of qualification, leaves the Order, and then, after a lapse of years, the friends of the poor little orphan return to obtain all the benefits they possibly can from an institution, the deceased had left utterly and practically to itself. Now all these points have carefully to be considered before we talk of change or complaint of abuses, as we always think that it is better to "bear the ills we have, than fly to others that we know not of." And though it is easy to talk of wrong doing it is very difficult, in our opinion, to hit a blot, at least any essential one, in our charity voting, which is fair, most fair, we believe, to all. We cannot, therefore, concur in Bro. Simpson's complaints against "charity voting." Next week we will deal with the fallacy—for it is a great fallacy—that there is anything wrong in the exchange of votes.

BRO. SIMPSON'S LETTER.

As our worthy brother, the P.G.C., seems to think that we have misunderstood his previous letter on "Charity Voting," we beg to say that we have not done so in any way. The "revolution," to which ill-omened word, as a loyal Freemason, the P.G.C. naturally objects, is not in actual voting but in the suggested, in our opinion, violent and hurtful change, which would take away from the subscribers generally the power of approving or disapproving of the candidates, and give to a committee in London the special jurisdiction of taking out some cases, and recommending others. Now, though we do not deny that an excellent committee could be formed of impartial brethren, yet in all such legislation, whether Masonic or worldly, we have to deal with things as they are, not as they ought to be. We must provide against the possible misuse of autocratic power, and we feel sure that the subscribers never will consent to allow a committee in London, be it ever so good a committee, to act as a court of infallible authority, from which there can be no appeal. We therefore distinctly oppose any change in the actual working of our charity system, though we may be ready to admit that, like everything else here, it has its weak points. Those weak points are, after all, few and far between, and not very important in themselves. We quite concur, as we say elsewhere, in the proposed suggestion, that more strictness should be shown in deciding on the original application, but once on the list, it must be left to the general body of subscribers to deal with, and certainly, we should most strongly object to any committee having the power to recommend any particular case. For though that course is practicable in those eleemosynary institutions, where all the candidates are on a level of social position, and the tests of poverty are more easily laid down, it is absolutely impracticable in a charity like ours, which deals with the most contrasted classes, and in which there are hardly two of us who agree as to what are the most deserving claims on our Masonic sympathy and aid. Neither are we prepared to give up the polling day or canvassing cards. Certainly not the polling day, as it is admirably managed, and is generally presided over most carefully and impartially by some one of our most distinguished brethren. As regards "the exchange of votes," on which Bro. Simpson dilates, of course it is always easy to say a thing is wrong because we think it wrong; but such matters cannot be decided on the dicta, however weighty, of individuals, but by careful induction of evidence and facts. Bro. Simpson admits that a brother cannot be compelled to vote, but demurs to his right to allow another brother to do so for him, on the understanding that, for the very purpose, mind, of the charity itself, he is to receive a "quid pro quo" in votes. We may be very dull, and we probably are, but we cannot for the life of us understand what harm, morally or otherwise, anyone does, or can do, who uses his lawful privileges to carry out the election of a candidate in whom he takes deep interest, and which candidate, probably, but for such extra aid, would never get in. Both in principle and in practice we strongly hold, on every system of general or Masonic ethics, that exchanges can be perfectly justified, unless, indeed, we are becoming so subtle and so recondite in our applications of first principles, that we mean to erase from our language and public life, common sense and plain dealing altogether. Let Bro. Simpson place his hand on the one real blot in the voting system, and we will gladly aid him, although it is one which we hold can only be dealt with by public opinion. We mean the unwise support which brethren give to weak, to doubtful, to objectionable cases. If we all acted purely on principle, in this respect, many cases would never appear at all, but we all of us too often take up, hastily or through personal solicitation, or from some fictitious sentiment, feeble and objectionable cases, and the consequence is overwhelming competition, over crowded lists. To this one point, let us direct our efforts, namely, to bring about a higher Masonic morality on this most important subject, and we shall achieve a great moral triumph, and carry out a lasting and righteous reform.

MASONIC EXHIBITIONS.

In the abstract propriety of Masonic exhibitions, there are few who will, we believe, refuse to concur, the only question with many being the "modus in quo." Probably we are all arrived at the point in educationalism, and if you like a hard word, Paideiology, namely, that in order properly to carry out the true meaning of education per se, we must have gradations of schooling, so to say, from the elementary school, through the middle or grammar school, up to collegiate or university tuition. It is thus inevitable, if we are to make our education a reality, but that we must have, sooner or later, exhibitions for that valuable institution, the Boys' School, as well as for the Girls' School. It appears to us that a great deal of good might accrue to the cause of Masonic education if the two Secretaries of our Schools would convene a meeting of those who take an interest in such subjects, and consult as to the best course to be adopted and the wisest plan to be pursued in order to bring about so desirable a result. There are great difficulties attendant necessarily on Grand Lodge taking the initiative in such a matter. There are even obstacles in the Schools themselves setting up any great scheme, but a Masonic Educational Board, which simply confined itself to raising funds, appointing competent examiners, and paying the scholarships to the successful competitors, might aid to crown the educational edifice with a most useful and helpful organisation. For their labour would be very simple, their duty very precise. They would appeal for funds; they would appoint the examiners; and on the fair open principle of competition, without favour or partiality, they would permit the successful candidate to proceed to any proper college for the purpose of completing his or her education. The young men would go to college, or training schools, or medical hospitals, (their own selection); the young women in the same way, or they would hold these exhibitions as stewardships, and as everything would depend on the public examiners, the only thing to look to would be a fitting selection of examiners. But in the multitude of competent persons just now there would be no difficulty whatever in this task. Indeed, we apprehend that the committee might, if they thought fit, save much expense by simply sending the candidates alternately to the Oxford and Cambridge middle-class examinations. Now, this is a plan of the future, but, in the mean time, many of our Order may be glad to aid any practical efforts in this direction. We call attention to a letter which appears in another column by which it seems the "Mace Fund" is all but exhausted. The Mace Fund has in view the granting of help to a youth named Mace from our Masonic Boys' School, the orphan of a deceased brother, who has shown talents of a high order, and such as seem to demand a collegiate education. He has been for six months studying at Queen's College, Cambridge, and further donations are asked for, to enable him to continue his residence and university course. He has passed his preliminary examination, and will be ready in a few months to "undergo his final examination prior to presenting himself for ordination." He carried off the Maybury prize and silver medal at the Boys' School. He gained the Divinity prize in the evening classes at King's College, having obtained several first-class certificates, and the Associateship of the college. This is then a case on which Bros. W. Portlock Dadson and Frederick Binckes are fully justified in appealing to the Craft for support. And to all who value the policy, and believe in the need of exhibitions, we think that in this special case a commendable opportunity is afforded them of testing the value of the principle itself, and of advancing that good cause—education.

PLEASANT JUNE.

June is upon us, not as it should be, in sunshine and brightness, but somewhat dim and dull and hazy. Still to us Londoners and Cockneys, June is always redolent of green fields and fragrant flowers, of pleasant picnics and gay gatherings, grave encounters at Polo, sweet-scented flower shows, and innumerable pleasant dinners at Greenwich, Hampton Court, and Richmond. And to our fair sisters June also often appeals with pleasurable associations and agreeable souvenirs. Croquet and the archery meeting, a pull up the river, an afternoon tea under the "limes," seem to be bidding comely youth rejoice, and to say, "carpe diem," in all of innocent hilarity and genial sympathy. Far be from us that needless asceticism of some, which seems to make all gaiety wrong, and to consider all amusements hurtful. We are not puritans, and we do not believe in puritanism. We never did, and we never shall, inasmuch as human nature seems ever to rebel against the arbitrary laws of the tyranny of fanaticism, and by way of revenge, when needlessly hindered or interfered with, to plunge directly into hurtful excesses or unseemly license. Being then, on the good old teaching of Masonry, friends of social gaiety and legitimate relaxation, the agreeable gathering and the pleasant reunion of the cheerful and the decorous, we think it well to try and strike a key note of harmony which will accord, let us trust, with the genial season of an opening summer. Our lodges are mostly closing their half-year's campaign and thinking about a summer day's outing, somehow or somewhere. Shall we be considered very revolutionary or very silly if we suggest that with our summer St. John's we try the experiment of introducing the presence and the charm of our kindly and always sunny sisters? Surely many a little friendly meeting—many a summer St. John's would be made more agreeable in itself, more pleasurable in memory, if we gave to it the novelty and the charm of female association, of woman's improving personality. We have gone on in the old track for years. Mock turtle, and turbot and lobster sauce, perhaps whitebait, two or three entrees, boiled turkey and tongue, a saddle of mutton, and plenty of champagne and good claret, and, we have no doubt enjoyed our dinner. But after it, what then? If speeches are permitted at the summer St. John's (which sometimes wisely they are not), we know well all that our good W.M. will say, all that P.M. Tinkleton will advance, all that our excellent Treasurer will modestly affirm. We have listened to Bro. Brady's song and Bro. Timmin's sentiment over and over again, and we have cheered the most eloquent of Senior Wardens, and have done honour to the Tyler's toast. And in fact we know each other very well, as we are all fast mates, cheery companions, and good friends. But is there not a little monotony, however pleasant, in all this? Suppose, to vary the scene, to change the "venue," we ask our sisters to join the pleasant little festival, can any harm come of it? Will any evil be done? We think that, on the contrary, our Masonic gathering, and our Masonic life will be equally improved and elevated. Yes, as we believe in woman's gentle and truthful, and kindly and intelligent, and elevating mission, we are of opinion that new life will, so to say, be thrown into many a lodge outing, if with our well-known brethren we associate also that sisterly element, which will certainly lend a charm to all the accessories of the aggregation, and throw both grace and pleasantness around that friendly circle. It is not always good for us to give too full scope to the mere tendency to personal enjoyment, or male facetiousness. It is better for us all to find ever with us restraining influences or awakening sympathies, a gentle monitress, so to say, at our sides, rendering our "Alba Dies," alike happy in beginning, beneficial in progress, pleasurable in ending. We hardly realize sufficiently, perhaps, what the society of woman does to help and better us all. We are so much given up to club life, to man's way of thinking and acting, so isolated in our tastes and ways, and so select, so selfish, that we look upon female society, somewhat more as a necessary trial to be gone through with, than as a great blessing to be appreciated. Many of our social evils just now arise from the too separate lives of men, and we, therefore, are glad to have the opportunity of expressing how much we feel is the great value of female association. With our gatherings this summer, just now, and during a little space, let our good brethren endeavour to see if they cannot make them more lively and more agreeable, by bringing in our fair sisters to adorn and elevate, to charm and to please. They will bring with them, as we know full well, good humour and good looks, kindly voices and sunny smiles, true friendship and warm hearts, and we shall all be better for their company, and all be improved by their juxtaposition. Even our very distinguished young and rising Bro. Jorrocks, W.M. of the Lodge of "Manly Virtue," says that it is not a "bad idea, to ask the wimmen," especially as he adds, "he knows one or two, who like a good dinner, who won't refuse a glass of champagne, who can applaud a good song, who don't object to smoking, and who are, on the whole, as sensible and as easy to get on with as women can be." We are quite sure that Bro. Jorrocks is right, and we hope that our friendly remarks, will be taken in good part, and lead, perhaps, to a most beneficial reform.

"OXFORD REFERENCE BIBLES."—Mr. Henry Froude, of the Oxford University Press Warehouse, Paternoster row, has lately issued a most attractive and useful series, in four sizes, of what he terms "Oxford Reference Bibles." This Bible is not merely a Bible, but a library of Biblical information. Besides the text, it contains in an appendix entitled "Helps to the Study of the Bible," among many other particulars, a summary of each book; lists of miracles and parables; a Harmony of the Gospels; Biblical topography, natural history, and ethnology. In addition, there are an Index, the whole of Cruden's Concordance, and twelve very carefully drawn and finished maps. With all this, the type, as might, indeed, be expected of a work issued from a University Press, is beautifully clear, and the volume in its several sizes, can be had bound in such way as to make it an acceptable gift book.

CHARITY VOTING.

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I see that there is a great deal of discussion going on just now in the Freemason about a matter to which I have given very great attention for years, and with which, without any egotism, I fancy I am fully conversant. I, therefore, trouble you with a few lines to-day, though I trust not to tire your readers, the more so as I fancy I note in some of the communications I have perused many assumptions and more assertions, but little practical knowledge of the real difficulties of the case.

The whole question of charity voting is alike in the abstract and the concrete, a very serious one, and certainly not to be decided by declamatory appeals or hap-hazard statements.

I know of no more really difficult matter, per se, than the treatment of our Masonic educational and charitable lists.

The popular theory just now appears to be this:—

There is a list given you, say, of forty cases, and you are bound to select the most distressing case, and vote for it. Now, however fine and sentimental such a view may be for an argument ad hominem, or a "tag" to a speech or a letter, it will not, I apprehend, for one moment endure the rough shock of a logical criticism.

In the first place, it is not tenable in the abstract, it is not workable in practice. The subscriber is not bound, either "foro conscientie" or anything else, to select the most distressing case, and for this reason, because it is not possible to lay down what is objectively the most distressing case, we can only realize it subjectively. There are no possible rules or conditions that I am aware of, which can be appealed to, in order to render any one case the most distressing. All that the voter is bound to do is to select a distressing case, and give to it his best efforts. For all cases are supposed to be distressing cases, a fact too often forgotten, and no one case that is not a distressing case ought to appear on the list. But here comes in difficulty No. 1, to which I will allude later. Neither is the most-distressing-case theory practically workable. In this our practice always antagonises our theory. Why it is not notorious, as an illustration, to show the difficulty of the whole question, that many of us publicly, for some reason or other, put our names to cases which, strictly speaking, perhaps, ought not to appear on the list at all! I allude especially to those which emanate from indiscreet Masons, as I consider them, who, though the deceased brother had only subscribed the exact "minimum" of qualification, and was out of Masonry several years, actually put forward such cases and carry them, which shut out the children of those who have subscribed for years, until death took them from the lodge and the Craft.

Knowing the inconsistency of us all in this respect, and distrusting from old experience the "tall talk" of hasty generalists and would-be reformers, I deprecate the dogmatic assertion that we are all bound to select "the most distressing case." We cannot do so, for the reason I have before pointed out; we can only select what is "pro tanto" to us a sufficiently distressing case, what is comparatively the most pressing one on our sympathy, and help it as much as we possibly can. Now, the real difficulty in all this "vexata questio" arises from a want of conscientiousness in us all alike. We put forward cases which ought not to appeal to eleemosynary aid at all, and the only antidote for this fast growing evil is public opinion, public voting, not the power of elision or recommendation, for that would only intensify the evil. As a result of our present system, attacked as it is hastily and unjustly, we succeed in electing the most deserving cases as a general rule. When any case fails, it is through want of inward soundness or outward support for the most part, and the percentage of the failing cases is wondrously small. But, reverse the system, give a committee the power to reduce the number of candidates, or to recommend special cases, or to take out received cases, and there will be no limit, properly speaking, (owing to human weakness), to the number of unsound cases which will be foisted on to our charities.

I advocate, indeed, more inquiry in the initial process; more careful investigation of the actual merits of the case; the rank of the petitioner, and the position of the petitioner's friends; and I quite concur with Bro. Hughan in suggesting a special certificate from the W.M. and Wardens and Secretary in open lodge. Beyond that, I do not believe in the possibility of much change; and I am quite sure that Bro. R. J. Simpson's well meant suggestions would aggravate instead of diminish the evils he talks about, and which, I confess, after an experience of 18 years, I am, to a great extent, ignorant of.

As regards exchanges, I cannot understand the objection to them, or on what grounds such objections are made. It is all very well to say they are wrong—but why? How?

Exchanges proceed simply on the ground of possible election, and without exchanges are permitted many candidates never can get in at all. As for their being corrupt, or injurious to others, such a statement can only proceed from those whose acquaintance with the subject practically is most superficial and limited. But as the question is so large in itself, and so important, I propose to go into it fully in your next Freemason, if I have not tried the patience of your readers.

I am, dear Bro. Kenning, yours fraternally,

AN OLD CHAIRMAN OF A PROV. CHARITY COMMITTEE.

TO BRO. BEIGEL, VIENNA.

Dear Bro. Beigel,—

I have to use the medium of the Freemason to find out where you are. I answered your letter to Clifton, as you requested, by return of post, but only on Friday last received it from the Returned Letter Office, having been redirected to the Bell Hotel, Gloucester, the day it reached the hotel at Clifton Down. Another letter has been returned to me from the same hotel, so that our correspondence has been interrupted, and our meeting seems problematical. Fearing you should deem me deficient in courtesy, (for I wrote by return of post), and being most desirous to see you, I hope that this letter may catch your eye, and that we may arrange a meeting.

Yours most fraternally,

A. F. A. WOODFORD.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I notice in your report of my remarks, as a visitor at the meeting of the Langton Lodge (No. 1673), held on Wednesday last, a misprint occurs, which by substituting the word "they" for "he" casts a reflection upon those of whose working I have the highest opinion, and was then referring to with pride.

It should read, "he thought they could teach others a great deal."

I had previously had experience of the working of some of the Metropolitan Lodges, and was very pleased to be able to congratulate the W.M., Bro. H. D. Stead, that his rendering of the ceremony of initiation was equal to that of the Lancashire lodges, of whose very correct working I could but speak in the highest terms of praise.

Kindly insert this in your next issue, and oblige, yours fraternally,
HENRY THOMAS,

THE LAUSANNE CONFERENCE, &amp;c.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Please allow me to say that my letter in your impression of the 26th ult., brought me a long circular letter issued by the English Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite in regard to the charge of the abnegation of a personal God. It was made by the Supreme Grand Council of Scotland against that of England, and is, I should judge, a satisfactory contradiction to the charge so far as England is concerned.

I should be sorry if my letter has given offence to innocent brethren, for I by no means qualified it in such a way as to be personal to such. I simply gave the business instead of the name of three persons, of whom I was giving evidence. So I would like to allow the matter to remain.

There is nothing, in my opinion, so objectionable in Masonry as the intolerance of ignorance. The opinion of those qualified to give it should be listened to with respect, however it may clash with preconceived opinions in any branch of Masonry, and more especially when that branch has no legitimate history; and so far I am sure you will agree with me.

Although "W. E. N." has given us no further information about the marks at Jerusalem and Shushan, and their relation to the Phœnician character, he has yet given us a very interesting explanation of the circle and the triangle, and their relationship with Hindu science, and I would like to see him extend the application. There is an Indian Order (established in this country) called the Sat Bhai, which enters upon the same subject as developed in the sacred lotus—the grand symbol of the Order.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

JOHN YARKER.

[Our brother will see that his remarks were personal, and as such open to animadversion. But here let it rest.—Ed.]

ILLEGITIMACY AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am much interested in the communication from Bro. the Rev. H. John Hatch, P. Prov. G. Chap. Essex, and quite concur in his views on the subject of "illegitimacy and Freemasonry."

It appears to me that the qualifications for being proposed as a candidate, under the Grand Lodge of England, are simply these: "Just, upright, and free-men, of mature age, sound judgment, and strict morals." Hence the questions as to illegitimacy, or physical disqualifications, have no place in modern Freemasonry, and so long as the Book of Constitutions is observed, evidently an illegitimate, or one physically imperfect, may be fairly accepted for admission into Freemasonry.

My opinion is that the Editor is of quite the same opinion, and that his explanation meets the case, his remarks having had to do simply with an ancient but obsolete law on the subject. I have, myself, seen copies of affidavits of the last century, witnessing that the candidates had been born in "lawful wedlock," but, happily, now our desire is to be convinced of the moral qualifications, and if the candidates are "just and upright men," even if they are illegitimate, as Bro. Hatch says, "they may ultimately reflect honour on our choice."

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

P.S.G.D.

[As Bro. Hughan points out, we did not express any opinion ourselves on the moot point. All we did was to treat it archæologically, and to state what had been the custom of our speculative as well as the operative Order, and of which there can be no doubt. There is, however, no rule without an exception.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

With reference to the correspondence which has appeared in your columns on the above subject, I should be glad to be informed why you consider "Dunckerley is not quite a case in point," and what is the difference between his illegitimacy and that of any other person?

I have never heard that "the rule of the Craft" is adverse to the reception of all not born of honest parentage," but that their respectability and position in life only have been taken into consideration, and it occurs to me that the "tongue of good report" may speak as favourably of those who are illegitimate as of those who are born in lawful wedlock. If the rule of the Craft was adverse to the admission of illegitimate persons, would not lodges take special care that none such were admitted, whereas, at the present time (so far as my experience goes) there is nothing to prevent their admission, and certainly no law or rule in the Constitutions to that effect, and if they are otherwise worthy it would undoubtedly be a great hardship to them to be excluded solely on account of that which is their misfortune, and not their fault.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

B. A.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

If an Irish Mason may take part in the controversy begun by "Enquirer" in your publication of the 19th May, and in which I have taken much interest, I beg to ask your attention to Clause IV. of the "Ancient Charges," as published by the Grand Lodge of Ireland, in the second sentence of which it will be found that "No Master should take an apprentice that is not the son of honest parents," thereby, being a "printed law," as I would read it, to the effect that any one entitled to the badge of the "bar sinister" is not acceptable as a Free and Accepted Mason.

I am fraternally yours,

J. ORMISTON ANDREWS,

DISCREPANCIES BETWEEN ENGLISH AND AMERICAN FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Being a sojourner here, I apply to your talented journal for information on a subject which has given rise to much discussion in the new world, without settling the vexed question, or shedding that light which, as the necessary adjunct of truth, ought readily to be found by those who diligently seek her footsteps.

On the occasion of my former visit to England in 1875, I took the opportunity to be present at the meeting of a "blue lodge" and the convocation of the Capitular Degrees, and was forcibly struck with the great dissimilarity of their work and ritual to that in use in the United States, and I naturally inquire whence this anomaly, inasmuch as I am guided by the aphorism that Masonry is universal and unalterable?

It is absolutely certain, that Masonry, to be pure and identical, should have one—and only one—interpretation in every land where it is known, and the original text can alone be true, and all others which have been subjected to interpolation must be received with grave apprehension and adopted with extreme caution.

I am led to these remarks with the hope that some student of ethics may be able to lay before the fraternity the true and original work and ritual of the Cryptic Degrees, and that when so obtained the Grand Lodges of the world will decree their restoration in pristine form, to the exclusion of all other versions whatever.

While I can in no way agree with those writers, however erudite their arguments, who disclaim any great antiquity to the Institution, because its history and nomenclature are simply adaptations of earlier times, and are not comprised of any revelations or secrets which the student of theology cannot trace from the pages of the Bible and the writings of the inspired prophets, I am of the opinion that its principles are co-existent with the creation of man himself, and hence the actual data of the foundation of the Order (although wrapped in the impenetrable veil of obscurity) is not a matter to involve any doubt as to its being identical in its intentions to that first altar set up by our first parents in the gardens of Paradise.

It is not possible, perhaps, to prove that the Hindoos, Arabians, and North American Indians do really possess the traditions and the signs, &c., &c., of Freemasonry, although it has been asserted that many of the wandering Bedouins have received all the light, &c., and it is certainly known that the Indian chief, Tecumseh, was a F. and A.M.; but all these circumstances do not prove the universality of the Institution, which is its only great keystone.

That Freemasonry was intended for all men who are "free born, of lawful age," &c., is the maxim of the Order, without reference to nationality or colour; it being "the internal and not the external qualifications which recommend a man to be made a Mason," and I am therefore perplexed to know by what right some of the jurisdictions refuse to admit the African, notwithstanding that he has full evidence of being free-born, &c. Upon what principle is his exclusion from the "lights, &c.," of Freemasonry based? And, while entirely opposed to miscegenation, I cannot see by what course of reasoning the "noble savage" is admitted to the Order, and the Ethiopian excluded, because of the colour of his skin; or is the red man "Lo," better than the black man "Pompey?"

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ALFRED WELDEN.

London, May 30, 1877.

THE MACE FUND.

[We are glad to publish the following, wishing the good object of the appeal all success.—Ed.]

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

We have much pleasure in announcing that our appeal on behalf of the above fund has been so far successful as to have enabled Mr. Mace to study at Queen's College, Cambridge, during the last six months.

He has passed his preliminary examination, and will be sufficiently prepared by a few months further study to undergo his final examination prior to presenting himself for ordination.

We feel that, having gone thus far, the brethren will not allow the fund to lack support for so worthy an object as assisting one of our Masonic boys, who, having carried off the silver medal and Maybury prize at our school, pursued his studies, at his own expense, after his day's work was done, in the evening classes at King's College, London, and there, by hard work, gained the Divinity prize, several first-class certificates, and the associateship of that college.

We feel, therefore, justified in asking for further subscriptions, which we hope to receive soon, as the fund at present is entirely exhausted.

We are, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

W. PORTLOCK DADSON, Treasurer.
FREDERICK BINCKES, Sec. R.M.I.B.

MISUSE OF MASONIC EMBLEMS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Allow me to call the attention of the Craft, through the columns of your excellent journal, to the increasing use, or rather misuse, of the venerated emblems, of our Order. On bill-heads, business cards, signboards of public houses, &c., &c., are to be found Masonic emblems, simply for the purpose of trade. This I believe to be against the spirit of our Constitution. The harm done in this way would not, perhaps, be so great, were it not that a great many persons who are not Masons make use of these signs without, of course, having any right whatever to do so. This I know as a fact, several cases having come under my notice lately. But, I think, the greatest misuse which has been made of our well-known symbols, is that to which I now call your special attention.

There is a medical pamphlet called the "Golden Casket," or "Guide to Health" (issued by a firm of gentlemen, the name of one of whom recalls the shutting up, by the police, of an anatomical museum some time ago), distributed about the streets of London. On the front page of this most offensive pamphlet are to be found the usual Masonic emblems, doubtless with a view to drawing some poor unwary brother into their meshes.

Really, this parading of our ancient and venerated symbols is fast becoming a crying evil, and, in my humble opinion, some steps should at once be taken to put an end to it. I am not the only person who has remarked this growing evil, and, has noted the harm it does, by lowering, in the opinion of outsiders, and even of members, our grand and glorious Order.

Yours fraternally,

C. F.,
Lodge of Asaph, No. 1319.

THE EXCLUSION OF THE HEBREWS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As the letter of Bro. Findel confirmed my letter to you in the Freemason of the 28th of April in its whole substance, I think I am justified, for the sake of fair play, to hope that you will give me the satisfaction of mentioning in your next issue that my statements were throughout correct.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. STRAUSS,
Chaplain of Harmony, 600.

BRO. CONSTABLE'S DRAWING, ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the Freemason.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As you kindly inserted a letter from me some time ago, inviting our friends to assist in raising the "One Thousand Pound's Fund," on which my friend, Bro. Constable, has set his mind, will you not add to the favour by, my stating that unless all the counterparts are returned on or before Wednesday, the 13th inst., they will be too late for the drawing, which will take place that evening, as announced on the tickets. I am most anxious as to this, because several of my friends have not yet made a return of the tickets sold, and the counterparts should be in at least by the 11th inst., to allow of time for registration. It is a work of considerable magnitude, and I am delighted there is every prospect of such a grand total list as £1000 being realized.

I understand that the result of the draw will be advertised in the Freemason.

Yours fraternally,

WM. JAMES HUGHAN.
P.G.D.

AN ERRATUM.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The communication respecting the Grand Lodge of Munster was from our good Bro. James Horner Neilson, P.M., 620 (Dublin), P.M. 131, Truro, &c., &c., and not from James H. Bilson, as it is erroneously stated in the Freemason of 2nd June.

There are also a few typographical errors in my article on the Prov. G. Lodge of Kent, but mostly of little consequence. The sentence as to Records should read The Grand Registrars (i.e., of Kent) were termed Record Keepers until 1839, the word now being intended for work.

Yours fraternally,

W. J. HUGHAN.

THE RIGHT OF VISITING.

We have been requested to publish the following Correspondence:—

[COPY.]

Meridian Lodge No. 1469, E.C.,
Cradock, South Africa,
November 25th, 1876.

The Grand Secretary,
Freemasons' Hall, London.

Very Worshipful Sir and Brother,—

I beg respectfully to draw your attention to a bye-law of this lodge in its relation to the Constitution. Article "Visitors."

The bye-law is as follows:—

"No brother residing in Cradock shall be allowed to visit the lodge more than once without becoming a joining member"—and is confirmed by the Acting D.G. Master under date Capetown, August, 1874.

A respectable Mason residing in this town, who is a subscribing member of a lodge in another district, presented himself as a visitor at our last regular meeting, being the second occasion on which he had visited the lodge. The question arising whether, under the above bye-law, this visiting brother could be admitted, the W.M., Bro. W. Stoner Leigh, held that, notwithstanding the bye-law, under the Constitution, Article Visitors, Sections 2 and 3, the lodge could not refuse to admit him. That as Section 2 (page 89) declares "it is within the power of the lodge to refuse admission to any brother of known bad character," the obverse of the proposition must be maintained, that "it is not within the power of the lodge to refuse admission to a visitor who is not of known bad character," presuming him, of course, to be otherwise properly credentialled. And that as Section 3 states, "A brother who is not a subscribing member to a lodge shall not be permitted to visit any lodge in the town or place where he resides more than once during his secession from the Craft," the obverse must also be held good that a brother, who is a subscribing member to a lodge, shall be permitted to visit any lodge in the town or place where he resides.

The W.M., while fully approving of the intentions of the bye-law referred to, one of which was to prevent residents in Cradock from passing by the lodge in their own districts, and applying to lodges at a distance, where they might not be so well known, or where the fees might be less, ruled that though this bye-law had been confirmed by the Acting D.G. Master, yet, being in opposition to the Constitutions, it must give way, and is, in fact, of no effect whatever in the case of a brother who has not seceded from the Craft. The visiting brother in question was accordingly admitted.

I am now instructed by the W.M. to lay this ruling before you, so that, if right, it may be confirmed, and that the lodge may be properly guided for the future.

Should the bye-law be maintained, a possible issue presents itself. The visiting brother referred to might apply for admission as a joining member, and, in case he were rejected, he would be virtually debarred from Masonic communication with his brethren, though a recognised member of the Craft—a heavy penalty to pay for the error in judgment that he probably committed when he became a Mason in applying to a lodge at a distance for admission and not to the lodge in his own town.

I am, Very Worshipful Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,
(Signed) THOMAS R. SMALLMAN,
Secretary.

P.S.—The question appearing to be of some general importance, as involving the right of visitors, on which the Book of Constitutions is not very explicit, I am also directed to request your permission to publish your reply in some Masonic journal for the benefit of the Craft.

(Signed) J. R. S., Sec.

Meridian Lodge, No. 1469, E.C.
Cradock, South Africa,
November 29th, 1876.

The Grand Secretary,
Freemasons' Hall, London.

Very Worshipful Sir and Brother,—

Referring to my letter of the 25th inst. (per this mail), the S.W. of this lodge being of opinion that the ruling of the W.M., Bro. Leigh, in the case referred to, was incorrect, the W.M. has requested him to put in writing his reason for dissenting from such ruling, and holding that the bye-law in question is not opposed to the Constitutions, or Ancient Landmarks of the Order, and, therefore, not inoperative; and has instructed me to forward the same, that you may be more fully informed in the matter.

I am, Very Worshipful Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
(Signed) THOMAS R. SMALLMAN,
Secretary.

Cradock, 28th November, 1876.
MINUTE.

A brother from Albany Lodge, No. 389, having applied for admission, for a second time, as a visitor to the Meridian Lodge, No. 1469, and the W.M. having ruled that the lodge was bound to admit such brother, unless it could be shown that he was of known bad character, or had seceded from the Craft (vide Constitutions, Art. Visitors, Sec. 2 and 3), I expressed my dissent from the ruling of the W.M. upon the following grounds, viz:—

1. The bye-law of the Meridian Lodge, No. 1469, which expressly provides "no brother residing in Cradock shall be allowed to visit the lodge more than once, without becoming a joining member" is expedient and requisite in this town, where there is only one lodge, and some resident Masons not subscribers to it.

2. That, in my opinion, there is nothing in the Constitutions, either in the article "Visitors" or in any other, to prevent the lodge passing such a bye-law.

3. That the lodge having passed the bye-law, which was duly confirmed by the acting D.G. Master, is bound to enforce it until regularly altered or amended.

The argument of the W.M., that as Sec. 3 of the article "Visitors" prohibits a lodge admitting as a visitor more than once a brother who has seceded from the Craft, therefore, the obverse rule must obtain, and that a lodge is bound to admit every visitor who is in good standing with the Craft, is not, in my opinion, a correct reading of the section, and, however genuine or politic such a construction of the section may be, I cannot see how it can be held to debar a lodge from passing a bye-law to the contrary, as has been done by the Meridian Lodge.

Apart from the question of Bye-law 19, and supposing it had not been passed, I am by no means prepared to admit that a lodge is bound to receive a visiting brother as often as he may wish to visit it; it may do so as a matter of courtesy to the brother himself, or to the lodge from which he hails, but it is at the option of the lodge, I think, to receive him or not.

In the case above referred to I must respectfully, but firmly, dissent from the ruling of the W.M., and express my opinion that by Sec. 5, of article "Private Lodges," he is bound to observe and enforce Bye-law 19.

Meridian Lodge, No. 1469.

Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C., 1st March, 1877.

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 25th November, and the dissent of the S.W. of the 28th November from the ruling of the W.M. of the Meridian Lodge, No. 1469, relative to the admission of visitors.

I considered the question of sufficient importance to induce me to obtain the opinion of the Grand Registrar before answering it, and his opinion is to the following effect:—

"In my opinion the bye-law is bad, and must be rescinded. All Masons, whilst subscribing members of lodges, have a right to attend a meeting of a lodge, unless their presence therein would disturb the harmony of the proceedings of the lodge.

"The Book of Constitutions points out that it is in the power of the lodge to exclude persons of known bad character from entering a lodge. I think, however, that the right of denying admission to visitors is not limited to persons of known bad character. On the contrary, in my opinion, if any Mason should present himself as a visitor to a lodge, and any member of that lodge should object to his admission on personal grounds, such as those pointed out in the ceremony of initiation, I think the W.M. would be justified in refusing him admission. In the absence of any such objection, I think any bye-law which enacts a general right to exclude is bad, and must be held to be null and void. In this particular case, the ruling of the W.M. should, in my view, be upheld."

You will be pleased to understand that the right of visitors does not extend to partaking of the refreshments of the lodge, unless invited to do so, but simply to its working. I hope the opinion of the Grand Registrar, as above copied, will set the matter at rest.

Yours fraternally,

(Signed) JOHN HERVEY, G.S.

SCHOOL OF DRAMATIC ART.—The pupils of this institution gave two successful entertainments, on Saturday and Monday evenings, at Ripon House. The piece chosen for representation was W. S. Gilbert's, "Pygmalion and Galatea." Miss E. Welshman as Galatea acted with great refinement, Mr. A. F. Lewis (Pygmalion) was also very successful. Mr. Ettison, who played Chrysolos, the Art Critic, has all the elements of an excellent low comedian, and Miss Lee acted Daphne with great dramatic power. Miss Ricardo was excellent in parts. The performance altogether went smoothly, and there was throughout evidence of careful study and good training.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as sampler, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary

Br.; and a large number of Masters, Past Masters, Wardens, Overseers, and brethren of private lodges.

Bro. Binckes, Grand Secretary, having read the minutes of last half-yearly communication, the same were put and confirmed.

The next business being the receipt of the report of the General Board, it was taken as read, on the motion of Bro. C. F. Matier, seconded by Bro. Thos. Mortlock.

The following is the report of the General Board:—

The General Board have the gratification of being able to announce the continued prosperity of the Mark Degree, which is shown by the fact that during the six months ending 31st March, 1877, the number of certificates issued from the Grand Secretary's office was 522.

During the same time, warrants for new lodges were issued as follows:—

- No. 196 "Earl of Chester," Chester.
- " 197 "Studholme," London.
- " 198 "Croydon," Croydon.
- " 199 "Duke of Connaught," Dalston.
- " 200 "Lazar," Hokitika.
- " 201 "Wahab," Bengal.
- " 202 "St. Mark's in the South," Tasmania.

On the 5th April, 1877, Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, M.W.P.G.M.M.M., assisted by several of the Grand Officers Present and Past, constituted at Newport, Mon., a new Mark Province of Monmouthshire, and installed as the first R.W. Prov. G.M.M.M., Bro. Lorenzo Augustus Homfray. From the high respect and esteem in which this distinguished brother is held by every member of his Masonic province, the best and most happy results may confidently be anticipated.

The Board are happy to report the revival of the old time immemorial Mark Lodge, "The Lebanon," meeting at Liverpool, which has accepted a warrant of confirmation from the M.W.G.M.M.M.

The Board recommend to Grand Lodge for favourable consideration grants from the Benevolent Fund of £20 to Mrs. P., wife of Bro. J. P., a lunatic in Bethlehem Hospital, £25 to Bro. E. B., £20 to Mrs. W.

With a view to facilitate the recognition of the services of brethren of worth and merit, the Board have to ask the Grand Lodge to give the M.W.G.M.M.M. power to increase the number of Grand Deacons from Two to Four.

The proceedings of the Grand Commandery and the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Massachusetts have been received.

The question having arisen, whether it was within the prerogative of the M.W.G.M.M. to confer the rank of Past Master upon brethren who had not served their full year in the chair of a lodge, without the consent of the Grand Lodge, and the G.M.M. having been pleased to refer the matter to the General Board for their opinion and advice, the Board have unanimously advised the M.W.G.M.M. that, inasmuch as the rank of Past Master confers a seat in Grand Lodge, it is not within his prerogative to create Past Masters without the consent of Grand Lodge.

The Board recommends that the Audit of Grand Lodge Accounts shall take place monthly, and that the Auditor's fee be increased to £25. The accounts of Grand Lodge, as audited by the official Auditors, are subjoined.

(Signed) G. R. PORTAL, Past G.M.M.,

May 16th, 1877.

President.

Bro. Portal, P.G.M., moved the adoption of the recommendation to increase the number of Deacons from two to four. He said that there had been a great increase in the Order, and the applicants for office had also greatly increased in number. They were brethren who deserved office by the great zeal they had shown in promoting the interests of the Order, and he thought that Grand Lodge could not do better than adopt the course taken in Craft Grand Lodge, and have four Deacons.

Bro. Sir F. Williams seconded the motion, which was then put and carried.

Bro. Portal then moved the adoption of the recommendation "That the audit of Grand Lodge accounts shall take place monthly, and that the Auditor's fee be increased to £25. He said that the same reason that he had given for the former motion applied to this. The monetary transactions of Grand Lodge had so much increased, that the reason which induced Grand Lodge some years ago to order a quarterly audit now necessitated their having the accounts audited monthly. In the Secretary's office there was a great deal of correspondence carried on, and it was impossible for the Grand Secretary to be also Grand Accountant. It was very important, with a view to the accuracy of the finance accounts, that some one should be professionally employed to see what money was due from lodges, and whether it came in regularly or not to the Treasurer. By the Auditor proper directions would be given for the application for money due to Grand Lodge, and for this purpose it would be better that the Grand Lodge accounts should be kept by Bro. Meggy. It would relieve Grand Secretary of trouble which he ought not to have to take upon himself, and a great deal of difficulty would be thereby saved.

Bro. Matier seconded the motion, which was put and carried.

The recommendations for making the three grants advised in the report were also moved by Bro. Portal and carried.

Bro. Portal then moved, and Bro. General Brownrigg seconded, that the report be adopted and entered on the minutes.

Grand Secretary, in reading the minutes of last Grand Lodge, mentioned that a letter had been written by a brother to that Grand Lodge which was remitted to the Board for consideration. The Board had come to the conclusion that when that brother in his letters conformed to the Constitution, and wrote in a becoming manner, they would take anything into consideration which he wrote about. They had not yet received a letter from him couched in proper terms, and, consequently, had not considered it. He mentioned this to show that the matter had not been lost sight of.

The M.W.G.M. then said that before he put the motion for the adoption of the report he wished to make a remark on the last paragraph but one, that referring to the rank of P.M. More than one application had been made to him to grant either a dispensation to brethren who had not held the office of P.M., or were not qualified by holding the office for one year, or to create by patent a Past Mastership for long service or for services to the Order, or for the long time they had been in it. As it appeared to him very doubtful to what extent the prerogative of Grand Master went in this respect, he thought it well to refer the matter to the General Board. Their report was before the brethren, and in that report he entirely agreed. He thought that it was important and right that Grand Lodge should consent to grant past rank to any brother who was not qualified. There were two questions in regard to this, however, which stood on a different footing. There was the case of a brother who, being Master of his lodge, had not served his full time. Such a case might well be considered. Some brother might have done his duty as a lodge and not have served his time, or he might have been put into office for only a short time. That was a case in which the Grand Master might consider the request, and ask Grand Lodge's sanction for conferring the rank of P.M., although the full time had not been served. But there was also the case of a brother who, from change of place or some other good reason, not having been put in the inferior offices, had not been placed in the chair at all. He was inclined to think that that was hardly a case in which the Grand Lodge, as a rule, would be inclined to recommend that the rank of P.M. should be conferred. He did not think the rank of P.M. should be conferred on any brother who had not been in the chair of a lodge for at least a portion of the time required. They should not give virtual past rank to a brother who had not been in the position of Master of some lodge. That was a very different case to that of the brother who had been in the chair, but for some circumstances which arose from no fault of his own, by removal or otherwise, had not occupied the chair for the full term. During his (the Grand Master's) year of office, if a case of this kind came before him, he did not think he should fail to recommend to Grand Lodge to confer the rank of Past Master on any one who had in that way not filled the chair of a lodge for a twelvemonth. Those were the principles which he should think it his duty to follow.

The report was then put to Grand Lodge and carried.

Bro. F. Davison, Grand Treasurer, next read his accounts as follows:—

Examined and found correct,
10th May, 1877. THOMAS MEGGY, Auditor.

On the motion of Bro. Edis, seconded by Bro. Sabine, this account was ordered to be received and entered on the minutes.

The Earl of Limerick was then installed as Grand Master for the year, and proclaimed and saluted accordingly.

The M.W.G.M. then said: Brethren, by your favour I now enter on the third year of my office, the closing period of time for which it is the custom of Grand Lodge to appoint the same Grand Master. When I was first elected to the chair of Grand Lodge, I expressed a hope that at the time of finally leaving office I should not leave the Order in a worse state than that in which I received it from these distinguished brethren who preceded me. I could not ever hope to do more than continue the good work which had been begun under them. We are now, as I said before, entering on the third year of my office, and I think I may express and entertain the hope that what I then gave utterance to may be fulfilled. I have during the last year seen five new provinces formed, fourteen new lodges either consecrated or sanctioned, and a continued steady increase in the number of brethren of our Order. I trust that this steady increase, which has been the marked characteristic of this degree, may be still kept up, and that my hope may be fulfilled that I may hand over my office to my successor next year with a still growing prospect of success. That it has increased already is owing to the great assistance I have received from all the Grand Officers, and from the firm support which all members of Grand Lodge have given to me in the discharge of the duties of my office. It is most gratifying to me not only to meet with the support which has been extended to me, and also to notice the feelings of friendship and brotherly love which pervades the members of the Degree wherever I have visited lodges, whether London or provincial. I trust that this feeling may continue, and so long as it does I am sure that the Order will steadily increase, and will maintain the high position among the degrees of Ancient Masonry which it does now. His lordship then apologized for the absence of Lord Skelmersdale, and stated that his lordship requested him to explain that it was caused by an important meeting of a society of which he was president. He also added that Lord Skelmersdale felt much disappointed at being unable to meet the brethren in Grand Lodge.

Bro. Sabine proposed, and Bro. Magnus Ohren seconded the re-election of Bro. F. Davison as Grand Treasurer.

Carried unanimously.

The following brethren were invested and saluted as Grand Officers for the year:—

Rt. Hon. Lord Skelmersdale	Deputy G. Master
Rt. Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore	Grand Sr. Warden
Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart.	Grand Jr. Warden
Rev. P. M. Holden	Grand Chap.

A. B. Cook	Grand M. Overseer
D. M. Dewar	Grand S. Overseer
J. D. Moore, M.D.	Grand J. Overseer
W. Rowe	Grand S. Deacon
R. C. Else	Grand S. Deacon
A. Spears	Grand J. Deacon
T. C. Roden, M.D.	Grand J. Deacon
W. Wigginton	Grand S. of W.

W. T. Belcher	Grand Organist.
Thomas Poore	Grand I. Guard.
J. Tomlinson, S. S. Pearce, M. Crowden, S. Robinson, G. J. McKay, H. M. Baker, George Boulton	Grand Stewards

The M.W.G.M. appointed Bros. the Rev. G. R. Portal, W. E. Gumbleton, Thos. Meggy, S. Rosenthal, R. W. Edis, Dibdin, and C. F. Matier as members of the General Board. Bros. Sabine, Ohren, Dewar, Cubitt, and Roebuck were elected by the Grand Lodge to serve on the Board.

The M.W.G.M. then said that at the last Grand Lodge an invitation was received from the Province of Cumberland and Westmoreland to hold the moveable Grand Lodge in the Lake District. He then postponed giving any answer, as it was very early to appoint a meeting. The invitation had now been renewed, and on behalf of Grand Lodge he had accepted it, and he appointed the meeting to take place between the beginning and middle of next September.

Bro. G. J. McKay, of Kendal, promised the Grand Master and brethren a hearty welcome.

Grand Lodge was thereupon closed with the usual formalities, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet. The M.W.G.M. was unable to stay to the banquet, and the Earl of Donoughmore presided in his stead. At the conclusion of the banquet the toasts were proposed.

Lord Donoughmore having proposed the first toast of "The Queen and Mark Masonry," which was drunk with enthusiasm, proposed "The Grand Master of the Order, and the Past Grand Masters." He was sorry the Grand Master was absent because he usually liked to get him (Lord Donoughmore) on his legs and to get a speech out of him, and he would have liked that evening to have returned the compliment. Lord Limerick had presided now for two years as Grand Master of the Order. Every brother of the Order deeply sympathised with his lordship some months ago on a domestic affliction overtaking him, and he was afraid that that affliction had something to do with his absence that evening. There were several Past Grand Masters—Lord Leigh, Lord Carnarvon, Lord Holmesdale, Bro. Beach, Bro. Portal, and Lord Percy. He was happy to say they were all alive and kicking, and he thought this spoke very well for the good dinners of the Mark Degree.

Lord Donoughmore then proposed "The Health of the Deputy Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, and the Grand Officers." They all knew what good Lord Skelmersdale was doing in the Craft Grand Lodge of England and its centre of operations next door, and there was another centre of operations in Golden Square, where many brethren could bear witness to the excellent service to Masonry which Lord Skelmersdale performed. There was also another part of the kingdom too where Lord Skelmersdale was performing signal service in Lancashire, and he should call upon Bro. Matier, of Lancashire, to respond.

Bro. C. F. Matier responded.

Bro. S. Rawson proposed "The Grand Master in the Chair" and said that no apology was necessary from Lord Donoughmore for taking the chair, as he had discharged the duties of his office admirably.

Lord Donoughmore, in reply, said it was difficult for him to express properly the very great appreciation he felt at the kind words that had been used by Bro. Rawson in proposing his health to the brethren, and of the kind way also in which it had been received by all of them. Bro. Rawson was good enough to say that he had associated with him for the last eighteen months or two years in different departments of Masonic work, and he was good enough to speak in very complimentary terms, more so than he deserved, of their work together. He could only say that from the very beginning he, and he thought others, who could look back to the old days of the Apollo Lodge, when they were noisy young boys at Oxford, to those days when it was his fortune to take Masonry up again after being out of England many years, his labours in Masonry had always been a labour of love. It had been his fortune to meet many whom he should have been sorry if he had not met, and to have known he was not going to meet, to work with those whose good will and good opinion always produced a lasting impression upon his mind. This last rank which the M.W.G.M.M. had been good enough to confer on him had brought him, he felt, in closer connection with them on the work of the charities. It was his fortune to serve this year as Steward for one charity which it was hoped would be very successful, and he begged to assure Bro. Binckes that no efforts of his would be spared to make it successful. The other charities he should also serve, and he hoped to devote his efforts to them on some future occasion.

Bro. F. Davison proposed "The Provincial Grand Masters and Grand Officers." He remembered that he had been present at a great Mark gatherings in Lancashire under the presidency of Bro. Romaine Collender. He remembered meetings in Birmingham, Bristol, and Leicester, and with many pleasing recollections of those meetings he proposed the toast. He drew the brethren's attention to the fact that Bro. Captain Wordsworth would soon be installed as Prov. G. M. of Yorkshire, and he was sure that Mark Masonry there would succeed in his hands. He coupled Bro. Rawson's name with the toast.

Bro. S. Rawson responded. Although of old entitled to attend this lodge, to-night was the first time he had attended. He took his Degree in China, and he conferred the Degree there on fifty or sixty brethren. When he returned to England he found he had not been authorised to confer it. After making three efforts to become legal, he had at last taken a step which would render it legal. When one look on the Mark Degree he would not help knowing how the lodge was supported.

Bro. Binckes proposed "Success to the Masonic Institutions of the Mark Benevolent Fund." All were so well known that it would not be necessary for him to say anything for them. They had all been well supported, and the Mark Grand Lodge had been engaged in this work for some years.

Bro. Meggy said: The Boys' School will be well supported on the 27th inst., and when the brethren knew that Bro. Beach was going to preside, he was sure the brethren of the Mark Degree would strongly support it. He hoped to have Lord Donoughmore as the President of the next festival of the Mark Benevolent Institution, which would be held in July. Already the dividends on investments almost paid the grants to cases of distress, and he was sure if Lord Donoughmore would preside at the next festival the amount collected would enable a sufficient sum to be invested, so that its interest would pay all the claims of the distressed upon it.

Lord Donoughmore then consented to take the chair at the next Mark Benevolent Festival; and the brethren shortly afterwards separated.

The musical arrangements, which were excellent, were under the direction of Bro. F. Cozens, and were executed by Bros. T. H. Simons, Evison, and Theodore Distin.

FREEMASONRY IN THE UNITED STATES.

GRAND LODGE OF MARYLAND.

During a brief visit to Baltimore last week, we had the honour of being present at the semi-annual communication of this Grand Lodge, in one of the large rooms in the Temple. In the absence of Grand Master Latrobe, the R.W. John M. Cartar, Senior Grand Warden, presided with great dignity and courtesy, and there was a large attendance of representatives of lodges.

At the invitation of the acting Grand Master, we had the honour of addressing the Grand Lodge on the questions of interest now engaging the fraternity.

After the disposition of some routine business, the Grand Lodge, on the report of the committee on correspondence, by its chairman, R.W. John S. Tyson, unanimously recognised the Grand Lodge of the Island of Cuba, and received and saluted its representative, W. Bro. Ramon Illa.

During the visit, we had the further pleasure and privilege of meeting Ill. Bro. Albert Pike, 33°, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council for the Southern Jurisdiction, who, notwithstanding his advancing years and great labours in the cause of the Institution, still finds time to devote to the furtherance of Ancient Craft Masonry.

On the present occasion he delivered a lecture before the Master Masons of Baltimore, occupying a little over two hours in its delivery, the subject being the symbols and their teaching. The scene was a most impressive one. The large hall was filled with brethren, who listened with the rapt attention of men who desired to learn, and not one moved from his place until the last syllable fell from the lips of the venerable speaker. Seated on the platform, where all could see as well as hear him, he gave his audience the benefit of his long experience, ripe judgment, and profound learning, and we argue that while such teachers and such pupils can be found, the marvellous growth and stability of the Craft is easily to be accounted for.

We had the pleasure of meeting Sir Edward T. Schultz, Grand Captain-General of the Grand Encampment of the United States; M. E. Comp. Geo. McCahan, P.G.H.P., and Wm. A. Wentz, Grand Secretary of the Grand Chapter of Maryland; R.W. Bro. Jacob H. Medairy, Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge; R.W. James W. Bowers, Grand Lecturer; Stephen C. Brush, Grand Marshal; W. Gilman Meredith; Ill. Wm. M. Ireland, 33°, and many others; to all of whom we are largely indebted for courtesies.—New York Dispatch.

BRO. GOULEY'S LAST ARTICLE.

We take from the Voice of Masonry, to which he was a regular contributor, the last article written for the press by our departed friend. Like all that he wrote, it will be found plain, practical, and to the point.

MASONRY HAS MANY MISSIONS.

It has often been a mystery among thinking people why Freemasonry has held such a firm place in the affections of its votaries, and why, under all systems of opposition in years gone by, when other associations were disrupted and passed out of existence, it alone remained in its quiet and solid character as the exponent of human fraternities.

Its answer is simple and yet comprehensive. It is in full sympathy with the highest aspirations of mankind in all that relates to the improvement and elevation of human society. It is not confined to the charity of moneyed assistance, but encompasses that higher and grander charity of opinion and judgment. It is not confined to the inculcation of fraternal love, but leads its novitiates into the sublime paths in search for the truth. It not only recognises and teaches, through His works, the existence and attributes of God, but, being composed of members having human impulses, it teaches the purest lessons of morality, without which there is no true religion. Without being a total abstinence society, it realizes the necessity of temperance in all things—in speech, in acts, in opinions, in resistance to wrong, in advancing self-interests, in daily work, in sleep, and in eating as well as drinking. It endeavours to impress upon the mind of its initiates at their first instruction the safeguard of prudence in all things; teaching them by emblems the most expressive the importance of upright walk and conversation, governing their entire life by the principles of exact and undeviating justice. It appreciates the impossibility of such an improved, if not perfect manhood, without also advancing with the age in its development of educated thought, and calls the attention of the initiate to the ennobling studies of the liberal arts and sciences. To these lessons, so great and so important, it adds the absorbing problem and demonstration of the immortality of the soul and its relationship to its author, the Great Architect of the Universe.

It is not, and cannot, be expected that all who enter its mysterious portals shall fully comprehend this immense scope of study and practice, but that is no fault of the institution, but due to the frailty of human nature; and the most that can be expected is that it will make men wiser and better than it found them. Even this it cannot, do by any power of inspiration, but alone by close attendance, study, and reflection. If a lodge accepts a candidate whose mental structure is deficient, or who by nature possesses none of the higher and holier aspirations of heart and soul or who inherits a base and low disposition, it has made a mistake for which it cannot always be justly held responsible. It often has to accept men whom it has not personally known for years, hence its errors of acceptance are not to be wondered at when we daily witness the errors committed by men and women on the knowledge of each other's character and disposition, even after years of intimacy; also by men of long acquaintanceship forming the most unfortunate business copartnership. Even the Church, with all its sacred surroundings, and with all its impressive sacraments, reforming the most earnest declarations of penitence and reformation, has been deceived and disappointed, not excepting its most honoured and trusted priests. Such has been, and will always be, the case as long as man is human. Notwithstanding all this, Freemasonry has stood through its entire history a remarkable association of faithful and moral citizens in all lands and among all men.

Its lodge-rooms afford a quiet retreat from the turmoils and prejudices of daily life, and they are capable of being used for the highest purpose of intellectual improvement. If a lodge has no library, at least some of its members have a collection, which, however small, contains works from which selections may be made and read, when there is no ritualistic work to occupy the spare hour after regular business is transacted. Readings and lectures need not necessarily be confined to strictly Masonic questions, but topics of scientific interest, of social or artistic culture, or of agriculture, history, geography, discoveries, &c., with which so many valuable periodicals are replete, are all in order. The general Masonic law of our ancient regular lodges only prohibits the introduction of questions the discussion of which may disturb the peace and harmony on the lodge. In this age of general education and cheap publications, there is no excuse for any lodge not always being fully and satisfactorily entertained at every meeting. This is one of the missions of Masonry at this day, and it should at once and everywhere fulfil it.

BANK NOTES.—Few of the persons who handle Bank of England notes ever think of the amount of labour and ingenuity that is expended on their production. These notes are made from pure white linen cuttings only, never from rags that have been worn. They have been manufactured for nearly 200 years at the same spot—Laverstoke, in Hampshire, and by the same family—the Portals, who are descended from some French Protestant refugees. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are carefully counted, and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. The printing is done by a most curious process in Mr. Coe's department within the Bank building. There is an elaborate arrangement for securing that no note shall be exactly like any other in existence. Consequently there never was a duplicate of a Bank of England note except by forgery. It has been stated that the stock of paid notes for seven years is about 94,000,000 in number, and they fill 18,000 boxes, which, if placed side by side, would reach three miles. The notes, placed in a pile, would be eight miles high; or, if joined end to end, would form a ribbon 15,000 miles long; their superficial extent is more than that of Hyde Park; their original value was over £3,000,000,000; and their weight over 112 tons.—City Press.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF AMITY (No. 17).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at the Ship Hotel, Greenwich, Bro. Charles Perry Whiteley, W.M., in the chair. There were also present Bros. J. H. Batty, who acted as S.W. in the absence of Bro. Partridge; J. W. Clever, J.W.; C. Harcourt, Treas.; Joseph Clever, Sec.; J. H. Batty, S.D.; W. H. Bateman, J.D.; E. Phillips, I.G. Among the members present were Bros. Dawson, E. D. Maddick, J. D. Birch, Leslie, Straith, Austin, and Mardon; and among the visitors Bros. J. W. Smith, W.M. No. 14, Tuscan Lodge; W. P. Willson, Hertford, 403; S. L. Joyce, late No. 715; S. D. Birch, 1365; H. Massey (Freemason). After the confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting, the ballot was taken for Mr. Grantham Robert Dodd, solicitor, and Mr. Frederick Charles Dutton Fenn, civil engineer, and having been declared in their favour, Messrs. Dodd and Fenn were admitted and initiated in due form into the mysteries of the First Degree, after which Bro. Frederick Groombridge Dawson was passed to the Second Degree, both ceremonies being performed in a very able manner by the W.M. The ordinary business of the evening being now concluded, the Secretary, Bro. Clever, assumed the chair, and the W.M., Bro. Whiteley, presented to him Bro. Joseph Henry Batty, the W.M. elect, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation, and he having been obligated, was afterwards presented to a Board of Installing Masters, and duly installed into the chair of K.S. The brethren were afterwards re-admitted, and paid the usual honours to the newly-installed W.M. The ceremony was very ably performed by Bro. Clever, whose delivery of the orations appropriate to the occasion were delivered in a most thoughtful, feeling, and impressive manner. The officers appointed for the ensuing year are Bros. Clever, jun., S.W.; Bateman, J.W.; Harcourt, Treas.; Clever, sen., Sec.; Phillips, S.D.; Mardon, J.D.; Leslie, I.G.; Smith, Tyler. On the last-named being summoned and re-invested, he returned thanks for the honour conferred on him for the twentieth time, and took advantage of the occasion to thank the members of the lodge for the great assistance they had rendered him in securing his election as an annuitant upon the funds of the Institution for Aged Freemasons. Bro. Green, P.M., said: I have very great pleasure, W.M. and brethren, in proposing that a Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. Whiteley for his services as W.M. during the past year. I had the pleasure of installing Bro. Whiteley, and it is a pleasure to me, as I am sure it must be to all of you, in reviewing the work of the year to note the success with which Bro. Whiteley has performed the duties of his office, and the prosperous condition in which he has left the lodge; and I therefore move that a Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. Whiteley, with the greatest confidence as to the manner in which the motion will be received. The motion having been seconded by Bro. Clever, Secretary, was put and carried nem. con. The W.M. said: Bro. Whiteley, I have great pleasure in thinking that one of the first acts of mine, as Master of this lodge, is to present you with this jewel, and I only hope that at the end of my year of office the brethren may deem me worthy of such commendation as they have given you, and that I may deserve it as much as you do. Bro. Whiteley having returned thanks, the report of the Audit Committee was presented, received, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. An application for relief from Bro. Outridge, formerly of Australia, and of St. John's Lodge, Alexandria, was read by the Treas., and a sum of £2 was voted to his immediate relief, and it was agreed that before any further assistance was rendered inquiries should be made by Bros. Harcourt and Cooper. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was served in a style worthy of the Ship Hotel. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been proposed and duly honoured, Bro. P.M. Whiteley rose and said: Brethren, there is yet a little duty devolves upon me as a sequel to my year of office; it is that of proposing the health of our W.M., Bro. Batty. Bro. Batty has been installed into the chair this evening, and, so far, he has given every promise of a successful year of office. His subordinates, I think, may all congratulate themselves on the prospects of the year before them. He has worked hard, and has made himself a most efficient

Master, and I have no doubt he will do the great things we all expect of him. The W.M.: Brother Wardens and brethren, all I can say in reference to the hearty way in which my health was put in the toast just now, is that I hope it may come to pass. As I told you before, I intend to make the lodge, in my year of office, a thorough working lodge, but you must remember that it does not depend upon the Master alone. If the Master is not supported it is utterly impossible you can carry on the work of a lodge in the way that it should be carried on. We have every prospect that, during my year of office, there will be a great deal more work than heretofore, and it will be to our disgrace if we do not show that we can do the work. I have been in a great many country lodges, and have seen the work anything rather than what it should be, but I must say that in the Great Hertford Lodge, where I was some time ago, I saw such a wonderful example of good working that they quite took the conceit out of me as a London Mason. I trust, that, though not very large in numbers, the Amity will become a great working lodge, but it depends upon the officers; and I therefore trust that the officers will come and work with me in will and deed, more especially as they know it to be my fixed intention to do my duty. The "Health of The Initiates" was then proposed by the Master and responded to, and acknowledged by Bros. Dodd and Fenn. The other toasts "The Visitors," "The Past Masters," "The Officers," "Prosperity to the Amity Lodge," were also duly proposed and honoured by the brethren present; the "Tyler's" toast, as usual, closing the proceedings. During the evening, the pauses between the speeches were enlivened by some excellent songs and instrumental music by members of the lodge, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Bro. Leslie, the songs being all pre-arranged in a printed programme. The musical arrangements were most successfully carried out, and Bro. Leslie certainly deserved the thanks accorded to him in an extra toast which was proposed by the W.M.

CRYSTAL PALACE LODGE (No. 742).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held on Thursday week, at the Star and Garter, Kew Bridge, Bro. Thomas Elsey, W.M., presiding. The other brethren present were Bros. Chas. D. Hume, S.W.; Robert Roberts, J.W.; T. Foxall, Treas.; W. Land, Sec.; H. Speedy, S.D.; Past Masters W. M. Baxter, S. P. Acton, H. Cox, G. Palmer, W. Watson, and H. T. Thompson; and Bros. G. Weeks, B. Blunsum, Ed. Ayres, J. W. Lassam, Seymour Smith, Fredk. Eyre, Fred. Speedy, H. Hagelman, H. J. Rolfe, Dick E. Radcliffe, and G. Cole; and visitors, Bros. G. Cole, Dixon, P.M. 209, P.P.G.D.C. Berks and Bucks; J. D. Carter, P.M., 209, P.P.G.D.C. Berks and Bucks; J. Wilson, P.M. 209, P.P.G.D.C. Berks and Bucks; John Maclean, 1319 (Gaiety Theatre); John S. Tolley, P.M. 771; E. T. Henman, 1423; H. Cassilton, 95; E. W. Mackney, P.M. 134; and H. Massey, P.M. 619 (Freemason). The W.M. passed Bro. Ayres to the Second Degree, after which Bro. Foxall, Treas., assisted by Bro. C. D. Hume, W.M. 209, installed Bro. R. Roberts as W.M. The brethren appointed to office were Bros. C. D. Hume, S.W.; H. Speedy, J.W.; Thomas Foxall, Treas.; H. Land, Sec.; Blundell, S.D.; Hadwick, J.D.; Eyre, I.G.; Seymour Smith, Org.; W. J. Lassam, W.S.; and T. Woodstock, Tyler. The newly installed W.M. initiated Messrs. Rolfe and George Cole. The report of the lodge was received, from which the following satisfactory state of affairs was gathered. Cash received during the year, £125 2s. 6d.; lodge expenses, £110 10s. 6d.; donations made during the year, £60 15s. 0d.; balance in hands of the Treasurer, £28 14s. 3d. Benevolent Fund account: Boys' School, £15 15s. 0d.; Benevolent Institution, £40; donation to a brother, £5. Five guineas was voted to be placed on Bro. Baxter's list as Steward for the next festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Bro. W. Watson thanked the brethren for their votes, and announced his election at the last annual meeting of the Benevolent Institution. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a choice banquet, provided by the proprietor of the Star and Garter; after partaking of which they honoured the usual toasts. As time was running very short, the brethren wishing to get back to town by an early train, there were no formal speeches. The opening toast of "The Queen and the Craft" was introduced by the W.M., with an apology for being given shortly on account of the flight of time, but with the assurance that, though briefly given, the heartiness of its reception would be none the less. "The Health of the M.W.G.M." was even shorter, and that of "The Pro G.M., the D.G.M., and the Grand Officers" was the first that led to any remark, and this remark was that it must be a source of great gratification to all Masons to see three princes of the Blood Royal in the three principal chairs of Grand Lodge. "The Initiates" was then given, and the W.M. having informed them of the pleasure lodges always felt in introducing good and worthy men into the Order, told them that though the brethren liked to see one at every meeting, three or four would please them better. Bro. Cole responded, hoping he should never see any cause to regret his introduction into this time-honoured Craft. In proposing the toast of "The Visitors," the W.M. said it was not often he was fortunate enough to see all those to whom he sent invitations present (which was generally the case with other brethren of the lodge as well), still he had much pleasure in having his invitation availed of by those who did accept it. Bro. George Dixon, P.M. 209, in the course of his reply said he had been associated with the W.M. and S.W. in another lodge, and both of these brethren were in this peculiar position, that the W.M. of this lodge was S.W. of the other lodge, while the S.W. of this lodge was the W.M. of the other lodge. It was with great pleasure the visitors saw the W.M. installed in the chair of the Crystal Palace Lodge. He was much beloved in the Etonian Lodge, and never went there without being met with the smiles of all the brethren. The brethren of that lodge would only be too pleased when they could see him installed as their Master. Bro. John Maclean, 1319 (Gaiety Theatre), also replied, and said he was somewhat unfortunately placed, for while he frequently had invitations to lodges it was seldom he could avail himself of them. It was his misfortune, not his fault. But when on a few occasions he was able to accept an invitation he had thoroughly enjoyed himself, as he had that evening, for he had always found himself well entertained and most heartily welcomed. Bro. Charles Elsey, the P.M., proposed "The Health of the W.M." The brethren were most delighted at having placed in the chair so good a W.M. Ever since he had been in office in the lodge he had done his duty, and now that he was W.M. the dignity of the lodge would be quite safe in his hands. The W.M. responded. He felt that he hardly deserved the compliments which had been bestowed on him by the W.M., but he sincerely trusted that by his conduct of the business of the lodge he would give entire satisfaction to the brethren. He then proposed the toast of "The Past Masters," and to save time included the names of the Treasurer and Secretary. Without the assistance of the P.M.'s the duties of W.M. would be very onerous and difficult. He had been in the Crystal Palace Lodge long enough to know that every W.M. was indebted greatly to the P.M.'s, who brought their experience to bear on the conduct of the business of the lodge. Those brethren who had been in the lodge some time would be able to add their testimony to his of the importance of the P.M.'s assistance in the working of the lodge. Bro. G. Palmer, on behalf of himself and the other P.M.'s, thanked the W.M., but thought that while there were so many good singers present it would be a pity, as time was short, that speeches should take the place of the admirable harmony which the brethren were so ready to give. The W.M. next gave "The Health of the Officers of the Lodge," thanking them for the aid they were always ready to give, and congratulating them on their having obtained the distinctions which had been conferred on them. The S.W. (Bro. C. D. Hume) replied, and "The Tyler's Toast" brought the evening, which had been enlivened with some excellent singing by Bros. Seymour Smith, E. W. Mackney, John Maclean, and other brethren, to a close. The meeting was a most agreeable one, and the business was conducted with an order, calmness, and regularity which rendered the enjoyment of the brethren complete.

THE ECLECTIC LODGE (No. 1201).—The "Feast of reason and the flow of soul" is a quotation which may in part introduce a report of the proceedings at the last meeting of this lodge, held on the 8th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, and serve to indicate the high character of its work. The quotation can give no exaggerated idea of the intellectual feast in the lodge, from the very perfect manner in which each performed his task, or of the pleasantness of the after lodge meeting. We can heartily congratulate the W.M., our Bro. E. J. Harty, that the heavy and responsible duty of preparing the grand Masonic picture has not in the slightest interfered with his perfect knowledge of the ceremonies, and his knowledge, memory, and strength were alike put to the test on this occasion, for our brother had to work the three ceremonies, and one of these was performed in part four times over. "Like master like men" is an old proverb, and its general truth (for we know some instances, in Masonic lodges, too, which show that it is not universally applicable), was evidenced in the officers of the Eclectic proving themselves to be "eclectics" truly in working. They might, some of them, be termed "perfect to a fault," seeing that in one respect the candidates were prompted to an answer which ought to be the unprompted response of every fit candidate for our mysteries. There is no necessity to indicate the point we touch upon—those who know the ceremonies and the laws of the Order will see our meaning at once, and those who do not have yet to learn both. One broad hint we may give to all who have to discharge the office of Deacon, and that is to read the first of the "Ancient Charges of a Freemason" given in the Book of Constitutions, and they will at once see the point on which there should be no prompting—a point of great and of growing importance. Bro. Taylor was in the S.W. chair, Bro. Saul in that of the J.W., Bro. Watts gracefully occupied the pleasant position, when the W.M. knows his work, of I.P.M., Bro. P.M. Higgs as Organist, Bro. W. H. Barber was at his laborious and responsible post as Secretary, Bro. Lee as S.D., Bro. Dobbing as J.D., and Bro. Moss as I.G. There was a great array of visitors, most of whose names we shall mention presently. The lodge being raised to the Second Degree, the W.M. proved two brethren in their then positions as Apprentices, and finding that they were not wanting gave them the benefit of a step. Four gentlemen, one the son of a Mason, Mr. Everett, son of the Senior Warden to the Worshipful Company of Coopers, Mr. Manchester, the Rev. James Browne Dixon, LL.D., and Mr. P. Caralambur Bavers, a Greek gentleman in business in London, were severally initiated. The first named, being the son of a Mason received the benefit of his father's position by being initiated first, and the task of the W.M. and officers was rendered an arduous one from the candidate being very hard of hearing. There was in the minds of some a fear that the ceremony could not be proceeded with in this case for this reason, but the great capabilities of the W.M. surmounted all difficulties, and the young man was rescued from the path of the profane. They were of course excluded while their brother of a higher degree was still further taught, by undergoing the mysteries necessary before one can attain to the three rosettes—a ceremony which was most touchingly rendered, and with a religious force which added greatly to the effect. The organ accompaniment of Bro. Higgs, most appropriate throughout, was especially exquisite at certain points, as the solemn chords of gloom and doubt gave way to the sweet cadences expressive of hope and joy; and here we would urge upon our brethren the increasing importance of music being introduced into lodges, developing and materially assisting as it undoubtedly does the solemn teaching of the ritual. The time did not seem at all long, but when the lodge was closed the brethren found they had been "at work" for nearly four and a half hours—without a break—no calling off, and the Worshipful Master at work all the time. The brethren then betook themselves to the Holborn Restaurant, and restoration, many of them were reminded, was earnestly needed. With the brethren were Bros. Everett (the father of the initiate of that name), T. Winter, of 234; James Stevens, of The Great City Lodge; Longley, S.W., of the Golden Rule; J. While (Freemason), P.M. of United Strength; J. Mather, P.M. 65; Major Tyler, 215; M. J. Jessop, J.W., 1261; Burt, W.M. 551; G. N. Watts, I.P.M. of the St. Paul's Lodge, A. Woodcock, S. Hart, P.M. (the brother of the W.M.); J. Levy, S.D., 1261; Capt. O. T. Hearne, Maybury Lodge; Dr. Payne, honorary organist, Golden Rule; Wade, 1475. The W.M. after an ample banquet gave with his usual grace and heartiness, and with the eloquence inherent in the children of the "Green Isle," the toasts of "Her Majesty and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M.," "and the Chiefs of the Order," and all these were warmly responded to. The W.M. then gave "The Initiates," and pointed out to them that it was found throughout the Order that it contained the very essence of religion, which might be summed up in the commands respecting, "your duty to your neighbour," and "to do to others as you would be done by." He touched upon other points, and then concluded by calling upon the brethren to give the initiates a welcome to the Craft and to the lodge. Bro. Dr. Dixon in response, said that until he had entered the lodge and was initiated, he had no idea of the class of service in which Freemasons were engaged. He had had, of course, his own ideas of what Freemasonry was. He had gathered, perhaps from his own thoughts, that it had reference to the universe, which God, the Great Architect, had created, and the work of the Almighty evidenced design, organisation, and wisdom. The work of man upon the earth was as only an imitation of the work of God, and it occurred to him that men as Freemasons sought to perfect the work of their fellow men. He saw in the work of past times, followed out in the symbolised work of the Craft, the foundation for all that was good in man, that it stood apart from the turmoil of nations, that it was founded upon a rock by being based upon that which was true—the canon law of God; but now that he had gained an insight into the Order he found that, beyond all the virtues he ascribed to it in his mind before he was permitted to enter, it possessed a degree of brotherly feeling of which he had no conception; and he was most thankful to the Providence of God that he had been led to enter into a brotherhood wherein was practised the highest religion in God's universe without the slightest sectarianism. The other initiates also responded, and then P.M. Watts proposed "The W.M.," whose virtues as a Mason, whose biography as an officer, and whose energies as W.M. were dilated upon at length, and the greatest praise was given to him for having raised the lodge from a "starvation" one to an assemblage where the brethren could dispense hospitality in return for that they received in other lodges where they might visit. The W.M. in response stated that as a fact the change in the regime would result in a financial triumph for the lodge funds at the end of the year, thus showing that carrying out the principles of the Craft to their fullest extent led to complete success. The Officers were then toasted, and the visitors came in for their share of honour and glory in this respect. Among those who had intended to be present was Bro. Oliver of Brixton, who unfortunately fell a victim to the "Bridge Accident" at Bath. He was to have been a visitor of the Secretary, and his unfortunate accident led to many expressions of sympathy. It was not until close upon midnight that the Eclectics and their friends found their way into Holborn.

MOUNT EDGECUMBE LODGE (No. 1465).—A meeting of this lodge was held on Saturday, the 9th inst., at the Swan Hotel, Battersea, when the following officers, brethren, and visitors were present:—Bros. Denham was raised in a very impressive and perfect manner by Bro. A. M. Thomas, the W.M. Bro. Joseph Wright, S.W., was unanimously chosen as the W.M. for the ensuing year. The retiring W.M. passed a high eulogium on Bro. Wright, who is P.M. of the 1585, and is also an earnest worker both for the Royal Arch and Craft Masonry. Bro. W. Ough was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. G. T. Fox, Tyler. Bros. Collings, Weavell, and Griffiths were chosen as Auditors. A jewel of the value of five guineas was unanimously accorded the retiring W.M., Bro. Thomas. The lodge was then closed in due form. The brethren were afterwards refreshed by a capital cold collation, provided by Bro. Knight in good style. A very pleasant evening was spent.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE (No. 1524).—The regular meeting of this lodge was held at the Sisters Tavern, Pownall-road, Haggerstone, on Thursday, the 31st ult. Present: Bros. Shackleton, W.M.; Chapman, P.M.; Treasurer; Lee, P.M.; Secretary; Green, S.D.; Brand, J.D.; Brasted, Steward; Young, Organist; Russ, Assistant Grand Secretary. Visitors, Bros. Lovelock, 212; Shackleton, 1445. The lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes were read and confirmed. Bros. Cracknell, Brame, and Watkins were raised to the Third Degree, and Bros. Davis and George to the Degree of Fellow Craft, after which Mr. G. J. Reynolds was regularly initiated into Freemasonry. The lodge was closed and the brethren sat down to an excellent repast, after which the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. The future meetings of this lodge will be held at the Havelock Tavern, Albion Road, Dalston, the M.W. Pro Grand Master having given his sanction to the removal.

BEACONSFIELD LODGE (No. 1662).—An emergency meeting of this lodge was held at the Chequers, Marsh-street, Walthamstow, on Saturday, June 9th. Present:—Bro. W. T. Christian, W.M.; Bro. W. Groome, S.W.; Bro. W. B. Brand, J.W.; Bro. J. Pinder, P.M.; Bro. F. Hallows, Sec.; Bro. C. T. Saunders, S.D.; Bro. Franklin, J.D.; Bro. T. Oldroyd, I.G.; Bro. Upward, Organist; Bro. J. H. Cambridge, W.S.; Bro. Goddard, (acting) Tyler, and the following gentlemen, viz., Bros. W. G. Hallows, H. Field, Hunt, Clark, Denny, and Delvalle. The lodge was opened in due form with solemn prayer. The candidate for raising being late in arriving the W.M. worked the first, second, and third sections of the lecture, after which the lodge was opened in the Second Degree, and Bro. William Moffatt, the candidate for raising, answered the usual questions. The lodge was then opened in the Third Degree, and the candidate was raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason. The lodge being resumed in the First Degree, the ballot was taken for Mr. Henry Charles Rubery and Mr. Charles Stockwell, which proved unanimous in their favour, and they being in attendance were duly initiated into the Order, according to ancient rite. The lodge was then closed with solemn prayer, and adjourned until Saturday, Oct. 6th. After the business was over the brethren sat down to a cold collation, and the usual Masonic toasts were given and responded to by the officers and visitors. Visitors present:—Bros. F. Rothschild, S.W., 1238; E. P. Baldwin, 382; S. North, 382; W. Snellgrove, 907; E. A. Trebeck, 1445; W. Claridge, 1598; and E. Brown, 1598.

COCKERMOUTH.—Skiddaw Lodge (No. 1002).—The ordinary meeting of this lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 5th inst. Present: Bros. W. Taylor, W.M.; J. Evening, S.W.; W. Shilton, P.M., P.P.G.S.B., as J.W.; R. Robinson, P.M., P.P.G.S.D., Treas.; W. T. Lamonby, P.M., Secretary; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M., Organist; T. Bird, S.D.; C. Gibson, I.G.; W. Potts, Tyler; and others. The lodge having been opened in form, and the minutes read and confirmed, Bro. Lamonby took the chair, when the lodge was opened in the Second Degree. Bro. W. Rule was then passed to the degree of F.C., after which Bro. Robinson delivered the lecture, and explained the tracing board appertaining thereto. The lodge being reduced to the First Degree, the usual vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Robinson, and Bro. Lamonby gave notice of two motions for next lodge night—firstly, that, in accordance with the Book of Constitutions, the regular place of assembly be removed from Market-place to the new lodge premises, in Station-street; and secondly, that, in the event of their being no business after July, the lodge stand adjourned till September, in order to facilitate the removal of the lodge furniture to the new premises in time for consecration. Bro. Lamonby also announced that he had had an opportunity during the previous week, when in London, of visiting the Girls' School, and was highly gratified at everything he saw. He also reported very favourably as to the progress being made by a little daughter of a deceased brother of Skiddaw. Nothing further remaining to be done, the lodge was closed in form.

OTLEY.—Royal Wharfedale Lodge (No. 1108).—This flourishing lodge held its festival of St. John the Evangelist on Monday, 4th June, at the Masonic Rooms, Boroughgate, Otley. As it was the eleventh anniversary of the consecration of the lodge, and the W.M. for the ensuing year was to be installed, there was a large attendance of members and visitors, including Bros. J. R. Croft, W.M.; W. T. Croft, S.W. and W.M. elect; W. P. Pinder, J.W.; Newstead, P.M., Treas.; Whiteley, Sec.; Tosh, S.D.; Dawson, J.D.; Laycock, I.G.; and Pratt, P.M.; Atkinson, Barber, Carter, Lee, A. Marshall, W. T. Marshall, Payne, Walker, and Wm. Pratt, P.M. 1034; Installing Master Flaxington, W.M. 1034; Monckman, P.M. 1018; Hardwick, J.W. and Ball, P.J.W., 1034. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read and passed, the W.M. opened the lodge in the Second Degree, and Bro. Barber having intimated his wish to take a further degree, he was examined and entrusted, after which he retired, was re-admitted and raised to the sublime degree of a M.M. by Bro. C. J. Newstead, P.M., in his usual exact and solemn manner. The next business was to instal Bro. W. T. Croft, S.W. (son of the retiring W.M.), into the chair of K.S. This ceremony was performed by Bro. W.M. Pratt, P.M., C.S., 1034, in a most able, impressive, and emphatic manner. The brethren below the chair were then re-admitted, and saluted the new W.M. according to ancient form, who returned thanks for the high honour conferred upon him, and hoped that the Great Architect would give him health and strength to discharge the important duties appertaining to his office in a satisfactory manner, and that at the end of his term of office he would be able to deliver the lodge warrant as pure and unadulterated as he now received it. He trusted that the brethren would not stand upon their strict rights, and if there should be any difference of opinion he hoped that the brethren would exercise that Masonic forbearance which was due from one brother to another. He then invested his officers as follows, and delivered appropriate addresses to each of them: Bros. W. P. Pinder, S.W.; G. Lee, J.W.; C. J. Newstead, P.M., Treas.; A. Walker, Sec.; D. J. Whiteley, S.D.; T. S. Atkinson, J.D.; W. Laycock, I.G.; T. Howling, Tyler; J. Carter, M.C.; J. Dawson and J. Barber, Stewards; and W. A. Nicholson, Organist. Bro. Newstead, P.M., was re-elected Charity Member and on the motion of Bro. Atkinson, seconded by Bro. Newstead, P.M., a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Wm. Platt, P.M. C.S., 1034, for his kindness in officiating as Installing Master. In replying, Bro. Pratt said he was greatly pleased when asked to perform the ceremony, as it was the first he had conducted; and his pleasure was enhanced by the fact, that it was he who initiated Bro. W. T. Croft into Masonry. He sincerely wished him every success during his year of office, and thanked the brethren for their vote. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was of an excellent character. The cloth having been removed and the usual loyal and Masonic toasts having been given and honoured, Bro. Newstead, P.M., rose to propose the health of the retiring W.M., whose zeal and earnestness he praised, and instanced as a result, the fact that the lodge had nearly doubled in number during his year of office. He referred to the visit paid to the lodge rooms last year by Bro. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, K.G., and his consent to application being made for permission to prefix the word "Royal" to the name of the lodge in commemoration of the honour, which permission has been obtained. Further, he urged younger brethren to imitate the hard work and enthusiasm of the retiring W.M., and success in the Craft would be sure to follow. Bro. J. R. Croft, I.P.M., then returned thanks, for the toast was drunk with full Masonic and musical honours, and asked to be excused saying much, as his feelings of gratitude to the brethren of the lodge, (and especially to Bro. Newstead, P.M., from whom he had received such valuable support), were so great that he would express his thanks to them practically by his deeds in the future, as he felt spurred by the kind way they had thanked him for his past services. Bro. R. M. Pratt, P.M., proposed "The Health of the Worshipful Master," and after congratulating him on being elected to the highest office in Craft Masonry wished him health and strength during his year of office, which he hoped would be as successful as his father's had been. The toast was duly honoured, and the W.M. replied, stating how earnest his wish and desire was that the lodge should prosper and become renowned through West Yorkshire for correct and accurate working, and that no effort on his part should be spared to bring about that desirable end. Many other toasts were given and responded to, the principal being "The late Officers," "The present Officers," "The Past Masters," responded to by Bro. Newstead and J. R. Croft; "The Installing Master" proposed by the W.M., in felicitous terms, and feelingly responded to by Bro. Wm. Pratt, P.M., who is every inch a Mason. Other toasts were given, the last being the Tyler's toast, after which the brethren separated.

LIVERPOOL.—Neptune Lodge (No. 1264).—The annual installation meeting of the members of this numerous and influential lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-st., Liverpool, on Monday, the 4th inst., and the popularity and attractiveness of the appointment and ceremony were clearly shown by a large and distinguished assembly of "Mystics." The proceedings were announced to commence at half-past two o'clock, and shortly after that hour Bro. Alexander Cotter, W.M., took his place in the chair and proceeded to open the lodge in solemn form. We observed that there were also present during the afternoon's business Bros. P. B. Gee, P.M. (Treasurer elect), Hugh Williams, P.M.; J. S. Dixon, P.M., D.C.; J. Korn, J.W.; J. Healing, P.M., Treasurer (W.M. elect); T. Walton, Secretary; W. C. Webb, S.D.; A. C. Wylie, J.D.; T. H. Arden, I.G.; W. Fish, S.; C. Fothergill, S.; W. H. Ball, Tyler; Bros. J. Beattie, J. Morris, R. Edwards, J. C. Fish, S. Daniels, W. H. Dawson, W. Owen, G. Crute, J. H. Linaker, P. Williams, A. Magnus, B. Parkes, J. Hughes, S. Oxton, T. Grant, E. J. Woodburn, R. Black, C. Rigotti, J. C. Balfour, R. S. Ogle, F. Draper, J. Grindell, W. Champitt, J. Hill, J. Hughes, A. Fletcher, J. Ashworth, O. Boyce, E. Jones, W. Barr, W. D. Mylom, and J. Monkhouse. The list of visitors contained the names of Bros. J. Skeaf, P.G.O.; M. Corless, P.M. 673; T. Shepherd, P.M. 1276; W. G. Veale, 249; J. Tickle, 249; W. Wilson, W.M. 823; T. Shaw, P.M. 823; J. E. Jackson, P.M. 667; W. Doyle, P.P.G.J.D.; J. R. Gotham, 823; J. Wood, Treasurer 1094 (Freemason); F. Knight, W.M. 1325; J. Jones, P.M. 594; J. Devaynes, P.M. 667; H. Ashmore, P.M. 1325; R. P. France, W.M. 594; T. Dilcock, P.M. 594; T. Sabar, 1502; J. Carruthers, 667; J. Walker, 203; M. Hart, W.M. 1502; A. Hart, S.W. 724; J. Hayes, P.M. 249; J. Sherwin, 667; E. J. Fraser, 1502; H. Appleton, 1356; R. Collings, 249; J. Neil, 1359; 1356; T. L. Jones, 1303; S. P. Gore, T. Holden, 1182; J. Le Comber, S.W. 594; and J. Archdeacon, 667. After the minutes had been read and Masonically confirmed, Bro. Alexander Cotter concluded his year's admirable services in the eastern chair by installing Bro. Joseph Healing, P.M., into the office of W.M., a ceremony which was performed in so masterly a manner as to secure the hearty approbation of all the brethren. It may be interesting to state that Bro. Healing was the first W.M. of the Neptune Lodge at its consecration in 1869, and this renewed honour of being voted to the chair for the second time indisputably proves that the brethren have not been slow to recognise the active and valuable services he has given towards the furtherance of the lodge. The re-chaired W.M. invested the following as his officers:—Bros. A. Cotter, I.P.M.; J. Korn, S.W.; W. C. Webb, J. W.; P. B. Gee, P.M., Treasurer; J. Linaker, Secretary; J. S. Dixon, P.M., D.C.; A. C. Wylie, S.D.; T. H. Arden, J.D.; Thomas Walton, I.G.; C. Fothergill, S.S.; James Hughes, J.S.; C. Rigotti, A.S.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. Immediately on the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. said he could not allow that opportunity to pass without expressing to Bro. Cotter the sense of the obligation he cherished after seeing the most impressive and efficient manner in which he had done the work of installation. He further moved that a special vote of thanks should be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Cotter for the excellent manner in which he had performed the ceremony of installation. This was seconded by Bro. P.M. Dixon, and carried unanimously. The compliment was briefly acknowledged by Bro. A. Cotter. The W.M. then commenced his year's labours by giving the First Degree in a most effective and telling style. At the conclusion "hearty good wishes" were given to Bro. Healing by the representatives of about a dozen lodges, the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. Here the W.M. presided, and proposed the standard loyal and Masonic toasts, the Prov. Grand Officers being acknowledged by Bro. Hugh Williams, P.M. Bro. Cotter, I.P.M., then rose, and said he was sure the next toast—"The Worshipful Master"—would be received with enthusiasm. Bro. Healing was the first Master who reigned over the Neptune Lodge, and since that time he had never been out of harness. In every office he has occupied he has fulfilled his duties faithfully, zealously, and honestly, and to the entire satisfaction of the members. The lodge had prospered under his influence, and he (Bro. Cotter) hoped it might go on prospering for many years to come, enabling them all to stand together as one man in the onward progress. If they followed the example of the Master the good ship "Neptune" would go prosperously on her voyage. Let the S.W. pay attention in the West, the J.W. in the South, and let the junior officers look well to their positions, so that when the Master telegraphed on the bridge they might have harmony, brotherly cordiality, and attention to duty throughout the ship. The brethren had taken the right step in again appointing Bro. Healing to the chair, and he (Bro. Cotter) hoped they would give him hearty support. The W.M., after the toast had been honoured musically and Masonically, said he was sure the brethren were sincere in the words—in so receiving the words which they had heard, and giving them the enthusiastic endorsement which they had done. The ship "Neptune," he was proud to say, still gallantly sailed on, on that 4th of June, 1877, as she had done since the 1st of June, 1869. She had neither gone ashore, lost a sail, nor broken a rope, and the officers throughout had been faithful to their duties. He (Bro. Healing) had endeavoured to do his duty during the voyage, and in again taking command of the vessel he looked to every P.M. and officer for the hearty co-operation which he had always received. Without their assistance it would be impossible to carry the ship safely over another year's voyage. He, however, placed himself entirely in their hands, knowing full well that they would give him the assistance which he so much needed and desired. After giving "The Installing Master," the W.M. followed with the toast of "The Immediate Past Master," and in giving these toasts the W.M. referred to the very conscientious and efficient way in which Bro. Cotter had discharged the duties of the day and year in the capacities of Installing Master and W.M. He said "Bro. Cotter had filled every office in the lodge, from that of Junior Steward to the W.M., and in every one of these offices he had secured the esteem and admiration of the brethren by his courtesy and diligence. He (the W.M.), in these circumstances, had much pleasure in presenting Bro. Cotter with a valuable Past Master's jewel, in the name of the brethren, as a token of the love, esteem, and respect they felt for him. Bro. Williams also bore testimony to the many excellent qualities displayed by Bro. Cotter during his official connection with the lodge. Bro. Cotter suitably and feelingly acknowledged the compliments and presentation. Other toasts followed, and a capital musical programme was given by Bros. Skeaf, Queen, Hobart, Veale, &c.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUSSEX.

After the banquet the usual toasts followed the singing of grace, and after giving "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M." was proposed. He said that not three years ago, on the retirement of the Marquis of Ripon, His Royal Highness accepted the office of Grand Master. Long might he remain at the head of the Craft; long might he rule the Grand Lodge of England and all the Provincial Grand Lodges; long might he be spared to be the Grand Master; and long might his mother live to rule over the country as its sovereign.

The Prov. G.M. next said, in proposing "The Earl of Carnarvon, Pro G. Master," that as a Mason his lordship was always anxious and willing to attend to his duties in Grand Lodge. He (the Prov. G.M.) was a witness of this the other day, when Lord Carnarvon went from his office to attend Grand Lodge, and the moment business there was over he was off again to his office. That showed that he was a man who was always ready to attend to his duties, whether Masonic or governmental. Lord Carnarvon was well known as a Mason; the brethren knew him perfectly well as a man, a gentleman, upright and downstraight, who would do his duty in whatever position of life he was placed.

Bro. Dr. Trollope, P.S.G.W., who was entrusted with the toast of "The Deputy G.M. and Grand Officers," said he was sorry on this occasion that Prov. G. Lodge was not honoured with the presence of more Grand Officers; but he was sure that those who had honoured the Grand Lodge were heartily welcome, and he also trusted that they had been pleased with the reception they had met with. It was no easy task, although many brethren might think it was, to fill the post of a Grand Officer, because the higher they advanced, and the greater the honours that were heaped upon them, the greater were the duties and services expected of them. If this applied to the province, much more did it apply to the Grand Officers. When the Grand Master appointed them in Grand Lodge they were impressed with the honour and dignity of the office they sustained; and the brethren of the Province of Sussex were deeply indebted to those who had come to see them that day. As regarded Lord Skelmersdale he was extremely popular in his province of Lancashire, and he was also one of the most popular Masons in the Craft, as he fulfilled his duties with energy and zeal. Long might he be, as he held the eminent position he now filled in Grand Lodge. All the brethren could bear testimony to the efficiency with which the Grand Officers discharged their duties, and those who had witnessed it that evening could not but think it fortunate that Bro. Hervey had come among them and taken upon himself the performance of the ceremony of installation. Unfortunately, on account of trains, Bro. Hervey and Bro. Fenn had been obliged to leave, but there was still one Grand Officer left, Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe. It was not necessary to mention in what honour and esteem Bro. Kuhe was held, because having for three years held the post of Grand Organist, the brethren were acquainted with his merits. Bro. Kuhe was also much honoured in Sussex, and no one could more than himself (Dr. Trollope) express the proud feelings he had at seeing in what esteem Bro. Kuhe was held in Grand Lodge of England.

Bro. Wilhelm Kuhe replied. When he came there that evening and sat next to such distinguished Grand Officers as Bros. Hervey and Fenn, he did not think it would devolve upon him to reply to this toast, and he had been in hopes that it would have been in abler hands than his. However, those two brethren had been unfortunately obliged to leave by an early train for London, and they deputed him to reply to this toast, and at the same time to express their extreme regret that they had been obliged to leave so early. They had enjoyed themselves very much; they had enjoyed the reception they had met with, and the way in which the work had been done; and it was a matter of great regret to them that they could not remain to return thanks for themselves.

Bro. W. Hallett proposed "The Health of the Prov. G.M."

The Prov. G.M., in reply, said he had to thank all the brethren who had attended that day and given him so kind a reception. Some two or three months ago, when he first heard that the Grand Master proposed to appoint him, he felt considerable hesitation in accepting the appointment, because he knew there were many Masons far higher in the Craft as regarded knowledge. But Bro. Scott, and two or three other brethren, persuaded him and told him that he ought to take the office, and he at last gave in, but with some doubts of his power of conducting the duties of the office properly. It was no slight duty that a brother took upon him when he undertook the task of ruling a province. It was a serious thing, and a matter that ought to be dealt with in a spirit of determination to do one's duty if possible. That he should endeavour to do. There were two lines in a song they had just heard which were very appropriate to this occasion, for while they enjoyed pleasure they ought to study harmony to the greatest extent, and when they met upon the level, then, if there was harmony, they could part on the square. He hoped and trusted that during his rule of the Province of Sussex that would be the case in all lodges, and whenever he did meet them that love and harmony would be displayed on all occasions. Not only then, but whenever he did not meet them, whether he had or not the "tongue of sweet air more tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear," he thought that when the mind was spoken fully and truthfully, generally the right thing would follow in the end. With regard to this province, they all knew it was of very great length, and of comparatively small width, and it was for the purposes of Freemasonry a very inconvenient province, as the railways did not suit well. Take it from Rye to Hastings, and from Hastings to Brighton, there was always an inconvenience for the Prov. Grand Lodge, have the Prov. Grand Lodge where they might, it was always inconvenient for the brethren to get from Brighton back again. To the other end of the county and Horsham there were the same inconveniences to put up with, and some of the brethren in the immediate neighbourhood of Horsham could not get home that night by any possibility. There were some also from Chichester, and it would be very inconvenient to them if they could not get home the same night. He therefore appointed Saturday, thinking it might be more convenient as the brethren could spend the Sunday in Brighton. One brother came from Nut-hurst, whom he had known for twenty-seven years, and that brother, on account of the inconvenience of access, was not able to remain even to the end of the banquet, for if he had he would not have got home in time to perform Divine Service to-morrow in his church. He (the Prov. G.M.) however balanced the inconveniences, and finding there were fewer if he appointed Saturday, chose that day for his installation. As he had said that day, he intended to visit every lodge in the province, and so long as he was blessed with health and strength he should continue to do so. But when old age came on and health failed, he hoped they would not find fault with him if he was not able to visit them. He knew perfectly well there were people outside lodges who took hold of every little idle report, and magnified those reports to an extent which was prejudicial to Masonry, not so much because they disliked Masonry, but because they did not know anything about it. Such reports ought never to be listened to. The members of the Craft should exercise truth and charity towards each other, and also to those who were outside, and if they did we should be a happier people in England than we were. Let them always maintain true fraternity; let them encourage to the utmost extent they could charity and love and truth, morality and loyalty; and who on earth could then say there was anything to be alleged against Masonry?

The Prov. G.M. then proposed "The Health of the Deputy Pro. G. Master." This was a toast which should be accepted with the greatest pleasure, as it was the health of a Mason who had done much for the Province of Sussex. He had attended, whenever he had been requested, if it had been in his power, to assist lodges; and all the brethren appreciated his services in the cause of Freemasonry. He (the Prov. G.M.) had himself experienced Bro. Scott's great assistance, and so had the brethren of the Ockenden Lodge. He knew perfectly well that Bro. Scott would do anything he could to assist any lodge in the province. They had been told that day that the Ockenden Lodge was the most prosperous in the province. He could not quite agree in that assertion, for he did not think that with eighteen or nineteen brethren they could be so styled. Nevertheless, it was a lodge firmly determined to carry out their duties, and its members were determined to be, if not the most prosperous, one of the most prosperous of Sussex lodges. Beyond that he did not think it was right that he should exalt the Ockenden Lodge. In consequence of a resolution passed by that lodge by the late S.D., now unfortunately departed, since March, 1874, they had been able to subscribe to the charities so as to constitute themselves governors of each of them. At the next meeting of the Ockenden Lodge he hoped they would again assist the charities. He did not speak of it as a brag or boast, but merely to show that they wished to set an example to the other lodges. The S.G.W. had whispered to him that in his lodge they had passed a resolution, so that every member by paying a shilling a week would in the course of four or five years become a life governor of one or other of the institutions. That was carrying the principle out rather further than had been done in the Ockenden Lodge, where it depended on what brethren might give and what they were able to give; but in the S.G.W.'s lodge the resolution was that they would give a shilling a week towards the charities. This was certainly a good precedent for the other lodges to take. The strength of the province in voting was thus concentrated, as they accumulated their votes for one particular candidate. This was a principle he had adopted himself. In matters of correspondence he advised the brethren to address the Prov. G. Secretary, who would communicate with him, and so matters would be put in perfect order. After again thanking Bro. Scott for his assistance the Prov. M. concluded by proposing "The Health of the Dep. Prov. G.M."

Bro. Scott, D.G.M., replied as follows: Right Worshipful Prov. G.M., Grand Officers, and Brethren,—Allow me first of all to thank you, Rt. W. Sir, not only for the kind manner in which you proposed my health, but also for the honour you have conferred on me in placing me in the distinguished position in Freemasonry which I now occupy in Sussex. I am deeply sensible of that honour, and I can assure you that it will always be my delight as well as my duty to assist you to the utmost of my power, whilst I shall ever deem it a privilege to serve under a brother who is so thoroughly imbued with Masonic principles as yourself. To you, brethren, who have so kindly greeted me on this occasion I also owe my grateful thanks. It has been very gratifying to me during the past few weeks to receive, from all parts of Sussex, congratulations from the brethren of the province, and not only congratulations but assurances that my appointment has given general satisfaction. For, believe me, brethren, high office would have little charm for me unless I held with it your good will and esteem. During the twenty-four years that I have been a hard-working Mason many honours and distinctions have been conferred upon me, but I have never coveted or coveted them—on the contrary, I have repeatedly stood aside that others might pass before me. I will give you only one instance. Twelve years ago Col. Dalbiez, the then Prov. Grand Master for Sussex, offered me the same position in which I have been installed to day. He asked me to be his Deputy. I was urged to accept office by brethren no less distinguished than Bro. Furner and Bro. Gavin Pocock. I have in my possession a letter from a very eminent Mason, who was for many years the Prime Minister of the Craft in England—it is dated June 10th, 1865—and he writes—"It is very desirable that Col. Dalbiac should have a good Deputy, but that I should imagine would not be very difficult to find. I could tell him of a good one at once, one John H. Scott." I do not tell you this, brethren, in any boasting spirit, but that you may know that I have not greedily snatched at all the good things which have come in my way. I declined that offer. I resisted the temptation, for it was a temptation, and I maintained that Bro. Furner was the proper man to fill the post, and after much persuasion and with the distinct understanding that he should have nothing to do he accepted it. Twelve years ago, brethren, I was comparatively a young man, and I felt that there were older men in the province, older in years and in Masonic experience, who might naturally feel aggrieved and take umbrage if one so much younger than themselves was put over them. But since then, twelve years, not of idleness or retirement but of active and continual service, have passed over my head, and now that I am verging on fifty years of age I have no hesitation in accepting the honourable position I shrink from twelve years ago, now that it is offered me a second time, unsought, unsolicited, and unexpected by me. Nevertheless, I feel that I shall have a difficult task to perform in following my predecessor. Bro. Furner embodies in himself all the qualifications which go to make up an excellent Mason, and when I remember the dignity of his demeanour when he presided over us, the wisdom of his counsel whenever we sought his advice, and the sweetness and amiability of his disposition, I fear that it will be at a great distance, if at all, that I shall be able to tread in his footsteps. At the same time I intend to do my best, and I trust that in my new and exalted position I may do nothing to forfeit, but always retain, the kindly feelings and the good wishes which the brethren of the province have hitherto evinced and expressed towards me.

The other toasts were then given, and the brethren separated after spending a delightful evening.

Under the direction of Bro. Frank Elmore a charming selection of music was performed by Bro. Henry Taylor, W. Rowe, and Charles Tinney.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF OXFORDSHIRE.

The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Oxfordshire was held on Friday, June 1st, in the handsome hall of the Apollo University Lodge, when Bro. H.R.H. Prince Leopold, K.G., Prov. G.M., presided. There was a very large attendance of Past and Present Provincial Officers, Masters and Past Masters of lodges, and the brethren generally, including the Deputy Prov. G.M. (Bro. Reginald Bird), Bros. the Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, P.G.Ch. Eng.; F. P. Morrell, P.G.D. Eng.; R. J. Spiers, P.G.S.B. Eng.; Rev. H. Adair Pickard, P. Prov. S.G.W.; S. P. Spiers, P. Prov. J.G.W.; Rev. L. Sargent, C.B.; Col. the Hon. Sackville West, H. R. Cooper Smith, and many others.

H.R.H. arrived shortly after twelve o'clock, accompanied by Bros. Collins, C.B., Comptroller of his Household, and Douglas Campbell.

A procession of the Provincial Officers was then formed to the Hall, and the lodge was constituted as follows:—H.R.H. Prince Leopold, P.G.M.; R. Bird, D.P.G.M.; J. Bue, M.A., P.S.G.W.; H. O. Wakeman, B.A., P.J.G.W.; Rev. R. M. W. Pope, M.A., P.G. Chap.; Ald. T. Randall, P.G.T.; W. Pepper, M.A., P.G.R.; J. E. C. Bodley, P.G.S.; J. Reade, P.J.G.D.; F. W. Ansell, P.G.S.W.; J. Stewards; W. Stephens and G. Norwood, P.G. Tylers.

The Prince having opened the lodge in due form, the minutes were read and confirmed, and a letter was received from the Prince of Wales thanking the Prov. Grand Master, the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and the Officers and brethren of the Province of Oxfordshire, for their address of congratulation on his Royal Highness's safe return to England from his visit to India.

The report of the Charity Committee was then received, and on the motion of the Dep. P.G.M., seconded by P.M. S. D. Spiers, adopted, as was also the Treasurer's report.

The re-election of Bro. Ald. Randall as Treasurer was proposed in eulogistic terms by the Dep. Prov. G.M., seconded by the Past Dep. Prov. G.M., and carried amidst much applause. Bro. Randall having suitably responded, the Dep. P.G.M. submitted his report on the lodges in the Province, which was of a satisfactory character, and showed that Masonry was on the increase. The W.M. then announced that he appointed Bro. Reginald Bird, M.A., fellow of Magdalen Coll., as his Deputy, and the hearty applause which followed unmistakably testified to Bro. Bird's popularity.

His Royal Highness then appointed and invested the remainder of his officers as follows, shaking hands with each as he came up to the throne:—Col. the Hon. W. E. Sackville West, M.A., Keble Coll., W.M. of the Apollo University Lodge, Senior Warden; W. Thompson, P.M. of Alfred Lodge, Junior Warden; Rev. H. Deane, B.D., St. John's Coll., of Apollo Lodge, and Rev. Dr. Whitmarsh, St. John's Coll., of Apollo Lodge, Chaplains; Ald. Randall, of Alfred Lodge, Treasurer; Col. Sargent, C.B., of Churchill Lodge, Registrar; Fentham Hedges, B.A., Exeter Coll., of Apollo Lodge, Secretary; J. W. Long, of Marlborough Lodge, Senior Deacon; T. F. Plowman, Prescott, of Marlborough Lodge, Pursuivant; H. Robbins, of Alfred Lodge, Assistant Pursuivant; R. H. Collins, M.A., Lincoln Coll., of Apollo Lodge, W. H. White, T. H. Janson, Christ Church, of Churchill Lodge, T. W. Holland, of Cherwell Lodge, J. Cavan, Christ Church, of Apollo Lodge, and W. R. Bowden, of Alfred Lodge, Stewards; W. Stephens and G. Norwood, Tylers.

Charity jewels were then presented to Bros. Bird, Deane, Bue, and Ansell, and bars to Bros. H. R. Cooper Smith, Juggins and Potts.

On the motion of the Prov. G.M., seconded by the Treasurer, the sum of ten guineas was voted to the Boys' and Girls' Schools, and the same amount to local charities, and the lodge was then closed in due form and order.

At the conclusion of the proceedings in lodge, a procession was formed to the Assembly Room of the Clarendon Hotel, where a luncheon, of a very elegant and recherché character, was served. The Prince presided and introduced the various Masonic toasts in well chosen and felicitous terms, many of his remarks being exceedingly happy. The toast list, which was necessarily a short one, included "The Queen and the Craft," proposed by the R.W. P.G.M., "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W. Grand Master, and the Officers of Grand Lodge," proposed by the W.G.M., and responded to by Bro. the Rev. T. F. Ravenshaw, P.G.C.; "H.R.H. Prince Leopold, R. W. Prov. G. Master," proposed by Bro. F. P. Morrell, P.J.G.D. of Eng., and responded to by Prince Leopold; "The Deputy Prov. Grand Master and Prov. Grand Officers," proposed by the R.W.P.G.M., and responded to by Bro. Bird and Bro. Col. the Hon. Sackville West, P.G.S.W.; and the Tyler's toast.

The Prince in responding to the toast of his health thanked the lodges of the Province for the generous support that they had given to the Charity of the Girls' School, at the anniversary festival of which he was to have presided. He expressed his great regret that he was prevented by illness from being present, as he should have been very proud of the extent of the subscriptions. In proposing "The Provincial Officers" His Royal Highness alluded in complimentary terms to the services rendered to the province by Bro. Bird, the Deputy Prov. G.M., and also congratulated the lodge upon its acquisition, as Grand Registrar, of so distinguished a soldier as Col. Sargent, C.B., the Col. Commandant of the Military Depot of which Oxford is the centre. He coupled with the toast the names of Bro. Bird and the Senior Warden, Bro. Col. the Hon. Sackville West. Bro. Bird in responding alluded to the flourishing state of the Craft in the province, as evidenced by the reports which had been read that day in lodge.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Lincolnshire was held on Thursday, the 7th inst., at the Corn Exchange, Horn-castle, under the banner of the "Olive Union" Lodge, No. 1304. There was a large attendance of the brethren, every lodge in the Province, now numbering 20, being represented.

In the unavoidable absence of His Grace the Duke of St. Albans, R.W.P.G.M., the throne was occupied by Bro. W. H. Smyth, of Elkington Hall, D.P.G.M., who was supported by W. Bro. Rev. Geo. Colman, P.D.P. G.M., and the following officers of Prov. Grand Lodge: W. Bros. Wm. Pigott, P.G.S.W.; F. Watson, P.G.J.W.; Rev. G. W. Lowe, P.G. Chap.; H. Watson, P.G. Reg.; F. D. Marsden, P.G. Sec.; Jack Sutcliffe, P.G.S.D.; Jas. Robinson, P.G.J.D.; E. Chamberlain, P.G.S. of W.; Geo. Nelson, P.G.D. of C.; Robt. Nicholson, P.G.A.D. of C.; W. S. Bladon, P.G.S.B.; W. Mason, P.G.O.; J. Queenborough, P.G.P.; F. Goodhurd, 712, H. Sharp, 1304, E. R. Dibben, 588, A. Field, 1282, P.G. Stewards; Benj. Box, 422, P.G. Tyler.

Letters of apology were received from Bros. C. M. Nesbitt, P.G. Treasurer, 712; E. E. Jevons, 1286, P.G.S.; W. Smith, 272, P.G.S.; also Bros. W. G. Moore, P.P.G. Reg.; W. E. Howlett, 422, P.P.G.D. of C.; and J. Hurup, 792, P.P.G.J.D.

Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in form punctually at 1 p.m., the roll call of the lodges producing no less than 200 representatives; but on making allowance for several of the brethren being members of more than one lodge, it was found that the actual number of brethren present was 172.

The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Brigg, on Thursday, June 6th, 1876, having been read and confirmed,

The financial statement was read by Bro. Watson, P.G. Reg. (in the absence of Bro. Nesbitt, P.G. Treas.), showing a balance in hand of £26 6s. 6d.

The Provincial Grand Registrar's returns showed a total of 845 members in 1876, as against 784 in 1875, being an increase of 61 subscribing members.

The report of the Committee of the Provincial Grand Lodge Fund of Benevolence was read by Bro. Marsden, P.G. Sec., and Sec. of the Committee, showing a balance in hand of £76 7s. 1d., out of which grants to the amount of £35 had been awarded to various petitioners at a meeting of the board held that day at the Masonic Hall, Horn-castle. We have much satisfaction in recording the fact that this fund has now £550 securely invested, and that for several years past it has been the means of alleviating a large amount of misery and distress.

Bro. W. H. Radley, 838, P.P.G.J.W. and Sec. of the Provincial Grand Charity Committee, read an interesting report of the children and aged Freemasons of Lincolnshire now provided for in one or other of the three great central Masonic institutions, which we regret that want of space will prohibit us publishing; also a report of the Provincial Grand Charity Committee, held at Horn-castle that morning, at which it was determined to give the unanimous support of the province at the next election of candidates for admission to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls to Kate Louisa Parker, daughter of the late Bro. H. J. Parker, 588, W.M. of the St. Botolph's Lodge in 1866.

Bro. James Fowler, P.P.G.S.W., stated that he had received £737 17s. 7d. towards a memorial of the late Bro. Rev. George Oliver, D.D. who for many years held the appointment of D. Prov. G. Master of this province, whose name is well known throughout the world as a zealous advocate of Freemasonry, and the author of several Masonic works. The sum of one thousand guineas is required for this memorial, which, it is contemplated, will secure a perpetual presentation to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded to Bro. Fowler for his exertions hitherto, as also to Bro. Radley, and Bro. Fowler kindly undertook to receive further subscriptions until the object of the memorial was accomplished.

Bro. C. M. Nesbitt, 712, was unanimously re-elected as Provincial Grand Treasurer, and Bros. Fowler and Griffin were re-elected as Auditors.

The following officers of Prov. Grand Lodge were appointed for the ensuing year by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master:—

R. J. Ward, 297	Prov. G.S.W.

Hearty good wishes having been expressed, Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed in form, and the brethren adjourned to a banquet provided at the Bull Hotel, under the care of Bro. Caswell Box, the proprietor. The chair was occupied by the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, supported on his right and left by Bro. the Rev. G. Colman, 426, P.D.P.G.M., and Bro. the Rev. Wm. Lynes, M.D., 588, P.G. Chap., and many other distinguished brethren. The cloth having been removed, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the brethren separating at an early hour.

Too much praise cannot be given to the W.M. and officers of the Olive Union for their attention to the comfort of their visitors. The very tasteful arrangement of the Corn Exchange, where the lodge was held, was greatly admired; not the least noticeable item of adornment being a very elegant and valuable banner lately presented to the Prov. Grand Lodge by Bro. John Hadfield, 792, P.P.J.G.D., which appeared for the first time this day in a Provincial Grand Lodge. It was designed by Bro. James Fowler of Louth.

PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF WEST YORKSHIRE.

A Provincial Grand Chapter was held in the Masonic Hall, Great George-street, Leeds, on Wednesday, May and, under the banner of Chapter Philanthropic, No. 304. Present:—M.E. Comps. Bentley Shaw, J.P., D.L. P.Z. 273, Prov. G. Superintendent; M. M. de Bartolomé, M.D., P.Z. 139, Prov. G.H.; T. W. Tew, J.P., P.Z. 495, P. Prov. G.H.; Manoah Rhodes, J.P., P.Z. 302, Prov. G. J.; W. W. Widdop, P.Z. 275, P. Prov. G.J.; Henry Day, J.P., P.Z. 208, P. Prov. G.J.; Thomas Hill, P.Z. 302, P. Prov. G.J.; Henry Smith, P.Z. 302, 387, 495, Prov. G.S.E.; Benjamin Broughton, Z. 302, as Prov. G.S.N.; John Booth, P.Z. 258, P. Prov. G.S.N.; Thomas Ruddock, P.Z. 275, as Prov. G.P. Sej.; and Acting Principals, Past First Principals, and companions of Chapters 139, 154, 208, 242, 258, 265, 275, 289, 590, 296, 302, 304, 306, 308, 337, 387, 441, 495, 521, 690, 827, 837, 1224.

The Prov. G. Chapter was opened in due form by Ex. Comp. Bentley Shaw, Prov. G. Superintendent, and the officers of Prov. G. Chapter, at 4.15 p.m.

The Prov. G. Superintendent was then saluted according to ancient custom, and in acknowledging the same expressed the great satisfaction it gave him to see so splendid a meeting, and warmly thanked the companions of the Philanthropic Chapter for their invitation to meet once more at Leeds.

In referring to the progress of Royal Arch Masonry in the province, he had come to the conclusion that it had not progressed as he had anticipated and desired, there being at present upwards of 3000 Craft, and only 838 Royal Arch Masons; he found that in 1866 there were 23 chapters and 563 Royal Arch Masons; in 1870, 576; 1871, 616; 1872, 644; 1873, 671; 1874, 733; 1875, 797; 1876, 838, and 26 chapters; he hoped that those who listened to him would use all proper and legitimate means to encourage eligible brethren, desirous of doing so, to join their ranks. With the exception of Chapter Integrity, No. 380, Morley, he rejoiced to find that all the returns had been made, and thanked the Prov. G. Registrar for his exertions, and the interest he had taken in the resuscitation of several chapters. His best thanks were also due to Comps. Hopkinson, 265; F. W. W. Booth, 387; and D. Allison Shaw, 827; for their successful endeavours to promote the prosperous action of their respective chapters.

He must allude in passing to the very suitable notice placed upon the agenda paper by the Prov. G. Registrar, relating to the bye-laws of private chapters. It had long been his anxious desire that each chapter should be provided with properly certified bye-laws for their guidance, and he held in his hand a printed draft of bye-laws, which he had hastily perused, but believed that they would be found, with the necessary variations, to embrace all that was required for large as well as small chapters. In conclusion, he desired earnest consideration to the several matters to be brought before the chapter.

The minutes of Prov. Grand Chapter, holden at the new Masonic Hall, Darley-street, Bradford, on Wednesday, the 15th November, 1876, were confirmed.

Moved by Comp. W. W. Widdop (pursuant to notice), seconded by Comp. W. Blackburn, and resolved:—"That the sum of ten pounds be paid out of the funds of the Prov. G. Chapter to the R.M.B. Male Annuity Fund."

Moved by Comp. C. L. Mason, Prov. G. Registrar (pursuant to notice), seconded by Comp. M. M. de Bartolomé, and resolved:—"That the draft proposed bye-laws, a copy of which was submitted in print, should be furnished to the three Acting Principals of each Chapter, for their consideration, with a view to their being adopted by each Chapter in this Province, with variations of names, fees, &c., and such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the respective Chapters, and that each Chapter be requested to send such amended draft for approval before the end of the present year."

The Prov. G. Superintendent here took the opportunity of impressing upon the Acting Principals of Chapters now present, the great desirability of their giving immediate attention and earnest consideration to the subject of this resolution, involving so materially as it does, the good government of the several Chapters in this Province, and he expressed a strong wish that each draft bye-laws may be sent in as early as possible, but certainly not later than the 31st December next, so that they may be duly examined, approved, and certified before the annual meeting of Prov. G. Chapter in May, 1878.

The balance sheet having been read by Comp. John Wordsworth, on behalf of the Treasurer.

Moved by Comp. M. M. Bartolomé; seconded by Comp. Manoh Rhodes; and resolved:—"That the balance sheet now read be adopted and entered on the minutes, the balance in the W. R. Union Bank being £282 6s. 1d."

The companions having resigned their collars, the Prov. G. Superintendent appointed and invested the following companions as officers for the ensuing twelve months, viz:—

W. Blackburn, P.Z. 337	Prov. G.H.
J. Booth, P.Z. 258	Prov. G.J.
H. Smith, P.Z. 402, 387, 495	Prov. G.S.E.
M. E. Naylor, P.Z. 154	Prov. G.S.N.
J. Hopkinson, P.Z. 265	Prov. G.P.S.
J. Fawcett, P.Z. 258	Prov. G. 1st A.S.
C. J. Walshaw, P.Z. 448	Prov. G. 2nd A.S.
J. Fisher, P.Z. 61 (Elected)	Prov. G. Treas.
C. L. Mason, P.Z. 404	Prov. G. Sec.
J. Rhodes, P.Z. 208	Prov. G. Swd. Br.
W. F. Wilkinson, P.Z. 441	Prov. G. Std. Br.
F. W. W. Booth, P.Z. 387	Prov. G.D.C.
J. Marshall, P.Z. 521	Prov. G.O.
R. E. Collinson, P.Z. 837; W. F. Smithson, P.Z. 289; A. M. Matthews, P.Z. 302; C. M. Hartley, P.Z. 242	Prov. G. Stwds.

Moved by Comp. W. Widdop, seconded by Comp. T. W. Tew, and resolved:—"That Comp. John Fisher be re-elected Treasurer, and that the best thanks of Prov. G. Chapter be accorded to him for his past highly-valued services."

Moved by the Prov. G. Superintendent, seconded by Comp. W. Blackburn, and resolved:—"That the best thanks of Prov. G. Chapter be presented to the Acting Principals, Officers, and Companions of the Chapter Philanthropic, No. 304, for their hearty reception and liberal entertainment of the Prov. G. Chapter."

The Prov. G. Superintendent enquired if any Chapter desired to invite Prov. G. Chapter for the next meeting on Wednesday, the 7th of November, when Comp. W. W. Widdop, on behalf of Perseverance, No. 275, invited the companions to meet under their banner at Huddersfield upon that occasion.

The Prov. G. Chapter was then closed in due form at 5.30 p.m.

The companions repaired to the banquet hall, where upwards of eighty partook of a substantial repast, the Superintendent presiding. Several loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and responded to, and a most harmonious meeting was brought to a close about 8 p.m.

The Birmingham Post reports the death, at Saltburn-by-Sea, of Bro. John Jones, the founder of the Iron and Steel Institute, of which he was the secretary until his death. Bro. Jones was one of the most ardent advocates of arbitration in connection with the manufactured iron trade, and has done much to promote the success of arbitration in the settlement of trade questions. He was the principal mover in the establishment of the British Iron Trade Association, and also founded and edited the Iron and Coal Trade Review. He was about 44 years of age.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of this Institution met on Wednesday last, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Col. Creaton in the chair. There were also present Bros. S. Rawson, Hyde Pullen, Captain N. G. Philips, Dr. Jabez Hogg, John G. Stevens, John Newton, L. Stean, W. Hale, R. Wentworth Little, James Brett, George Bolton, Raynham W. Stewart, H. Browne, T. Cubitt, W. Hilton, Chas. F. Hogard, Benj. Head, Charles Lacey, E. Gottlieb, H. Massey (Freemason), and J. Terry (Secretary).

After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of last meeting, Bro. Terry announced the death of four annuitants, after having received respectively £253, £165, £31, and £198. Bro. Terry next read the list of members on the Board of Management who were elected at Grand Lodge of Wednesday week, and which appeared in our last issue.

The Chairman, in reference to the repairs lately conducted at the asylum at Croydon, said that the Committee had been down there to inspect them, and he was able to say that all the work had been extremely well done. Any one who would be good enough to go and see, he felt sure would say the same. The comfort of the inmates had been carefully attended to, and it would be much greater now than ever it was before.

Bros. Col. Creaton, Benj. Head, R. W. Stewart, J. A. Farnfield, and S. Rawson were then elected the Audit and Financial Committee for the year. Half her late husband's annuity was granted to one widow, and a cheque was ordered to be sent to the Provincial Grand Treasurer for South Wales, Western Division, for £10 10s. 0d., being the amount he had erroneously overpaid as the Provincial Grand Lodge's subscription at the last festival.

A letter having been received from a brother, asking whether he was not entitled to six votes for a gift of £10, without his being a Steward, the brethren decided that that was not the meaning of Law 19 of the Institution, but that the gift only carried four votes.

The brethren then placed one unsuccessful candidate from Denham at last election on the list of annuitants, one annuitant having died.

The case of a widow was recommended to the Board of Benevolence, under peculiar circumstances. Previous to the last election a letter had been received from a widow of the same name, and from the same province, withdrawing her name from the list of candidates; and the candidate's name had "withdrawn" printed against it in consequence. Votes were, therefore, not polled for the candidate, who was much disappointed afterwards to find that she had not been elected. On enquiry being made, it was found that the candidate on the list had never been withdrawn, or authorised any one to withdraw for her. She will, therefore have to come forward for election next year, and, in the meantime, the brethren resolved to recommend her to the Lodge of Benevolence for relief.

Bro. Terry asked for and obtained permission to have the use of the hall at the Asylum at Croydon for the summer entertainment to the inmates, the Institution defraying the expenses of the same. Bro. Terry afterwards informed the Committee that from the 1st of Jan. last to the present time he had received and paid into the bankers of the Institution subscriptions to the amount of £11,997 12s. 6d., or only £2 7s. 6d. short of £12,000. The Committee then adjourned.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

The following circular relative to the 79th Anniversary Festival, on Wednesday, 27th June, 1877, has been issued:—

Office, 6, Freemasons' Hall, W.C.
June, 1877.

Numerous enquiries having been received on the subject of the "Festival Stewardship" and its privileges and qualifications—the attention of brethren serving the office of Steward for the ensuing Anniversary is respectfully directed to the following:—

1. The fee of £2 2s., payable by each Steward, includes his own dinner ticket, and badge, but does not include ladies' tickets.
2. Ladies' tickets may be obtained in any number on payment of 15s. each.
3. Ladies and gentlemen will dine together at the same tables.
4. Gentlemen, not being Masons, will be admitted to the banquet.
5. Morning dress will be worn; ladies, with or without bonnets, as may be preferred.
6. By command of the M.W. Pro Grand Master, "Masonic clothing or jewels must not be worn."
7. A donation of £5 5s. by a Steward does not carry with it a vote in virtue of the Stewardship, and secures to the donor a Life Subscribership with one vote only, and does not assist in qualifying him to wear the Charity Jewel.
8. A donation of £10 10s. by a Steward, secures a Life Governorship with two votes for life, and an additional vote in virtue of the Stewardship, i.e., three votes for life, and assists in qualifying him for the Charity Jewel.
9. The Stewardship being a personal service, no Steward derives any personal advantage from money voted by a lodge, &c., in its corporate capacity, unless such money be voted specifically in his name as an individual.

FREDERICK BINCKES, Secretary.

Masonic and General Tidings.

A list of the successful numbers in Bro. Constable's ballot for Life Governorships of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will be found in the advertisement which appears on page 248.

The following announcement reached us too late for insertion in our last:—Bro. Charles Bennett, official shorthand writer to Grand Lodge, desires to inform those members of the Craft to whom he is personally known that he is not the person of the same name and occupation, who has lately been the subject of certain legal proceedings.

PHOTOGRAPHY.—This is an art delighted in by all who are lovers of the artistic, and has in the present age reached a degree of excellence, that, contrasted with the crude efforts of a few years back, leaves little to be desired. But there are photographers and photographers—some who lay claim to the title without the faintest shadow of a right, whilst others have devoted years, under careful tuition and practice, to the study of this very delightful process. These remarks are suggested by noting at Bro. Goodwin's "City Studio," 102, London Wall (who has devoted many years to the study), some very superior Cartes de Visites, Cabinets, both large and small, most telling in expressive likeness, and finished in a high style of art and at most moderate prices. Brethren, Masonic Halls, or Mansions are photographed to order by appointment, in the first class and perfect style referred to. The studio is well worthy a visit.

UNITED PILGRIMS LODGE OF INSTRUCTION (No. 507).—The Fifteen Sections will be worked by the members of the United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, No. 507, at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell, on Friday, the 29th June, 1877. The lodge will be opened by Bro. Mark S. Carlham, who has kindly consented to preside on this occasion at half-past six precisely. Brethren are invited to attend.

A new book is announced by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Abbott, head master of the City of London School, entitled, "Bacon and Essex: a sketch of Bacon's Earlier Life" (Seeley, Jackson, and Co.).

FREEMASONS IN THE LAW COURTS.—A letter on this subject from Bro. Samuel Poynter, P.M., &c., will appear in our next.

MR. C. L. KENNY.—A benefit will be given at the Gaiety Theatre on the morning of Wednesday next, on behalf of this gentleman, and the result ought to be particularly satisfactory, seeing that the beneficitaire is a writer who has done much excellent work in his time, and that he will receive the support of such artists as Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Alfred Mellon, Messrs. Irving, Sims Reeves, Santley, John Clayton, &c. Mr. Kenny has for a long time been prostrated by a very painful and dangerous illness.

On Wednesday evening the sixty-second festival of the Caledonian Asylum took place at the Freemasons' Tavern, the Duke of Buccleuch in the chair. Subscriptions amounting to upwards of £1000 were announced.

On Wednesday afternoon, the musical fête given by the Apollo University Lodge of Freemasons was held in the beautiful gardens at Worcester College, Oxford, and was largely attended.

A marriage, which will take place in August next, has been arranged between the Lady Mayoress (Miss White) and Mr. Cecil Price.

It has been suggested by numerous season ticket-holders in, and passengers by, the South Eastern Railway (North Kent and Mid Kent Lines), that some substantial recognition should be made to Bro. George Abbott of his efficient services, uniform courtesy, and marked attention, whilst discharging his responsible duties as station master of the Cannon-street Terminus since its opening, nearly eleven years ago. Bro. Abbott's connection with the company exceeds a period of thirty-two years, and the highly satisfactory manner in which his multifarious and difficult duties have been discharged, justly prove him to be a most valuable as well as trustworthy public servant, and it is proposed that a suitable monetary testimonial should be presented to him by his friends. In order the more effectually to carry out this proposition, numerous influential gentlemen have formed themselves into a committee.

THE WEST-END IN WHITECHAPEL.—The improvements of late years in the East of London are amongst the most marked features of this age of progress. The two main streets, Commercial-street and Great Eastern-street, which connect the East of London with the West, bear evidence to the success which has attended the efforts of the local authorities in the direction of improvements. We may further notice the general improvement in the style of shops, of late years, in the East of London, which are becoming in appearance, though not in prices, more assimilated to the establishments in the West-end, but amongst these the most noticeable is the general drapery and furnishing establishment of Messrs. Venables and Sons, in Whitechapel, facing the celebrated obelisk, which adorned the Exhibition Palace of 1851. The establishment is made up of ten buildings. Nothing could be more perfect than the arrangement of the separate show-rooms, devoted as each is to some special article, as for silks, carpets, School Board materials, and ladies' costumes. Dresses are made in a separate department, and the silks sold here are, it is said, cheaper in price than any other house in London, and altogether free from adulteration of any kind. We can quite understand this diminution of the current prices, from the simple fact that the rent and taxes, necessarily so high in West-end quarters, do not press on the East-end merchant, who can thus afford to sell at lower figures.

The Freemason,

SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1877.

THE LAST QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION.

The proceedings of the last Quarterly Communication will have been perused with the interest they deserve by all our readers and correspondents. Indeed, a more creditable Quarterly Communication, creditable, that is, to the Order and to all who shared in the debates has never taken place. Bro. Lord Donoughmore's speech will be hailed with genuine satisfaction, not only on account of its straightforward, simple, and manly tone, but also for the promise it holds out of one who is likely to do the State and the Craft much good service. We have never read any address which has given us more genuine pleasure and satisfaction, and we fancy that many of our brethren will share in our sentiments. The remarks of our distinguished Bro.
J. M. Clabon will meet with, as they always merit, respectful attention from us all. We agree with his view, though it may not be popular, of limiting the Board of Benevolence.
Once upon a time we thought otherwise, we freely admit, and feel that the objections to such a change were insuperable. But we have lived to see the "error of our ways," and we fully concur with Bro. Clabon, in thinking, as we have ourselves ventured to point out previously, that a permanent Board will give unity and system to charitable administration, which are now, in our humble opinion, sadly wanting. But the change requires to be carefully considered, as it will, when completed, be the greatest alteration ever introduced into our Constitution for over one hundred years. We are very glad that Bro.
Clabon has drawn attention to the subject of "Exhibitions," about which there can be but one opinion in the abstract, though there may be many in respect of the "modus in quo" by which they are to be set up and worked.
As regards Grand Lodge giving exhibitions to the schools, our difficulty is this. The funds to be employed are the funds of the whole Craft, contributed by all our lodges and brethren. Can you then limit fairly the use of such exhibitions, out of such funds, even to the Masonic Schools? We hesitate very much in thinking that we properly can. But why not form an "Educational Board or Scholarship Board," or whatever you like to call it, and grant exhibitions to all sons and daughters of Masons who pass a requisite examination? We do not for one moment contend, that Grand Lodge in its munificence cannot grant a sum for exhibitions for the schools, because it clearly could do so. But if all sons and daughters of Masons, educated at the schools or not, could compete for the exhibitions, more justice, we think, would be done to all alike. We need not go into the machinery of such a useful appropriation of our surplus funds, because there is no practical difficulty in the way of the necessary examinations.
But we shall be glad to have the opinion of those in our pages who have considered the subject carefully, only asking them to avoid all needless points and any personal topics, and simply to write "ad rem," and as those who sincerely desire to advance the good cause of educational progress.

FREEMASONS BEFORE THE LAW COURTS.

We print in another column an extract from the law courts' report, which must raise very serious thoughts in all our minds as regards the evil tendency, just now, of Freemasons to rush into the law courts. The observations of Mr.
Justice Field will not fail to commend themselves to the notice of all our readers, and we trust will have a proper effect upon all law-court loving Masons amongst us. It is clearly a burlesque on our Masonic profession, a proof of the hopeless unreality of much that we descant upon, when, as Freemasons, we unnecessarily apply to the law courts on matters in which Masonic questions are involved. We do not say that Freemasons are never justified in appealing to the courts of law, because there are undoubtedly occasions when it is both competent and necessary, perhaps, for them to do so, and the Queen's courts are open to all her subjects. But we object to and we do find fault with, an apparent readiness to come before the public with Masonic disputes, and on very trivial grounds, and we trust that Mr. Justice Field's seasonable words may have a good effect upon us all alike.

As far as we can make out the subject matter of dispute, it seems to be essentially Masonic, and we feel sure that if it be brought before the Grand Master, it can at once be disposed of and properly adjudicated. We trust that we have heard the last of these needless Masonic appeals to a court of law, on questions, above all, which might be settled within the Craft, and not come before the public at all. We may probably recur to the subject in our next.

ARE EXCHANGES WRONG IN CHARITY VOTING.

By a discussion which has recently been going on in the Freemason, it will be seen that our esteemed Bro. R. J. Simpson, P.G.C., dogmatically declares that all exchanges are wrong, and cannot be defended on principle, and that they lead to all sorts of evil, &c., &c. We, on the contrary, as dogmatically declare, in our opinion, that exchanges are right, can be defended on principle, and lead to no particular sort of evil whatever. When doctors differ who shall agree? As, however, there is a "rationale" for everything here, we think it well to point out why, as far as we are able to discern the point in dispute, there is nothing wrong in exchanges on any grounds you like to take up, legal, moral, reasonable, or even sentimental. If Bro. Simpson's argument is good for anything it must go to this extent, that the voter must use his voting paper, because, although Bro. Simpson concedes, (as how could he do otherwise), that a voter cannot be compelled to vote, he says, that if he does vote he must vote for a proper case, &c. Here then we see that the two following points in the argument are already conceded, first, that no one can be compelled to vote at all, and, secondly, that "the most distressing case" theory is given up as no longer tenable. Where then are we now? Simply in this position: that if a subscriber votes he must vote for one of the cases on the list, (a self-evident proposition, as he could not vote for a case on another charity list), and that a voter cannot give his votes to another voter. Can he not? Why not? What is there to prevent him, legally or morally? The whole object of the voting power and privilege being to secure the election of accepted candidates, it follows, as a natural consequence, that all arrangements which tend to the election of a candidate, unless forbidden by the laws of the Institution, are not only lawful and equitable, but morally proper and right. The whole theory and practice of exchanges proceed on this assumption, that the case is a proper case, and can thus only be rendered successful. There are many cases put on our lists which come from provinces where the voters are few, and where they are not strong enough to carry a candidate. To contend that there is anything wrong in a province endeavouring, by a friendly arrangement with another province, to support its candidate next time, so as to carry in its own candidate next time, is, begging our good Past Chaplain's pardon, a sublimation of sentiment, as unreal as it is unpractical. For see what the result must be.
One of our smaller provinces has a case on the list. It has, so to say, 600 votes after much exertion, while it requires 1000. Is it not lawful as an illustration, for East Lancashire to say to West Yorkshire—if you will aid us to elect our candidate this election, we will aid you next election, because if it is not able to do so its poor candidate is inevitably left out in the cold. This is no imaginary case, but one that happens every day, and what the province may lawfully do the individual brother may do. Our kindly publisher has lately succeeded in carrying two excellent cases, one for the widows, the other for the male annuitants. Was it not lawful for him to secure the election of two thoroughly good cases, by saying to another brother, if you will help me this election I will help you next? Surely it was, on every ground, both of legal custom, moral right and fair play, and it is really pushing Masonic ethics beyond all proportion and out of all common sense, when it is gravely laid down that it is Masonically wrong to exchange votes. The difficulty in this world is always to keep the golden mean as between hyper-sentimentality and hyper-laxity, alike of teaching and duty, and we feel sure that it is Masonic puritanism and Masonic precisianism in the highest degree, to declare on any grounds whatever, or on no grounds at all, that exchange of votes is wrong or unmasonic. There is nothing to forbid an exchange, nothing against it in our laws and regulations, and having demonstrated on every ground of justice and morality, the fallacy of the argument against exchanges generally, we can only repeat, that in practice they are alike needful and expedient, proper and equitable, rightful and defensible in the highest degree.

A RECENT INCIDENT IN PARIS.

Some of our friends and many of our opponents seem inclined to make a "little capital" out of the arrest of the "President du Conseil Municipal" of Paris, a few days ago, and so we allude to the subject to-day. It appears that M. Bonnet Duverdier is a Freemason, and was arrested on his return from a lodge meeting, when up goes the cry, of course, "Oh, those wicked Freemasons!" Now we beg to say that with the political views of M. Bonnet Duverdier we, as Anglo-Saxon Freemasons, have nothing whatever to do, neither do we in the smallest measure sympathize with the alleged proclivities of our excitable and unwise brother. All Freemasons deplore the excesses of the Commune, alike in the violence of the revolutionary and barbaric tendencies then manifested, and protest against the brutal massacres of La Roquette and the Rue Haxo, and the absurd proceedings of a clique of French Freemasons, (not the Grand Orient, by the way), which brought, contempt and disgrace upon Masonry in general and French Freemasonry in particular. If it be true, as one of the correspondents of our English papers states, that M. Bonnet Duverdier, Freemason though he be, terminating an inflammatory address to the radicals of St. Denis, [exclaimed, referring to the recent act of Marshal MacMahon, "Let us first fight them at the ballot box, and if we are beaten there let us employ those legal means which we have the right to use against traitors;" if it be also correct that after he had uttered these words, according to the testimony of a number of those who heard them, he made use of a gesture, to give greater emphasis to his meaning, that suggested to his hearers the massacres of La Roquette and the Rue Haxo," then we can only say that he is, in our opinion, properly consigned to prison, to appear before the criminal courts of his own country. But we do not in England assume a man to be guilty until he is proved to be so, and we will therefore hope that such allegations are exaggerated or mistaken. For if there is one thing which we learn as Freemasons, it is a due obedience to the laws of any country, whatever its form of government may be, which for a time becomes the place of our residence or affords us its protection. And that, therefore, never can be the true teaching of Freemasonry, in our opinion, which leads either to violence of language as against lawful authority or any participation in plots and conspiracies against the ruling power, to social disorder or riotous proceedings of any kind. As an Order, as we before observed, we have nothing in common with the heated reveries or the turbulent proceedings of Revolution, Socialism, or Communism in which some mistaken persons like to indulge. We distrust violent speeches, we disavow illegal acts, we resist social disorder, we repress anarchical violence, and as patriotic citizens, as well as Freemasons, we would make any sacrifice to uphold tranquillity and order, to maintain good government, and lawfully constituted authority. We are taught in all our lodges always to remember the unqualified allegiance due to the Sovereign of our native land, and warmly to demonstrate our devotion and affection to all the members of her Royal House. In former days of dark and cruel menace, the Freemasons in Great Britain rallied as one man round the throne of their august Sovereign, and should circumstances require it (which we trust will never again be the case) WE WILL DO THE SAME IN OUR TIME AND GENERATION. We are emphatically a most loyal Fraternity, and will ever remain so. Over our portals and on our banners are inscribed in letters of gold "LOYALTY AND CHARITY;" inasmuch as we are charitable to the brotherhood and charitable to all men, and loyal—yes, always most loyal—to our Queen, our Country, and our God. We had written the above when we see in the Times that on Tuesday, June 8th, before the Police Correctionnelle, M. Bonnet Duverdier was charged with MM. Chambard, Alexandre, and Boyer; for having "insulted and threatened the Marshal," and sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment and 2000 francs fine. We are told that the accused persons did not appear. The witnesses confirmed in a more or less precise manner the terms of the accusation, according to which M. Bonnet Duverdier had insulted and threatened the Marshal. There was no defence. M. Symonet, the Deputy of the Procureur-General, supported the prosecution. While we deeply regret that any such incident should have taken place at all, we once more repeat that as Freemasons we openly disavow the slightest sympathy with or the remotest participation in principles which we repudiate, and proceedings which we detest.

A NEW MENU.

Some of us who are particular about our dinners, (and why should we not be?) may be glad to hear of a "New Menu." For as there is a sameness in everything here, so we find, that there is but little variety in our "bills of fare," for the most part, which are drawn up so carefully to entice the hungry or to gratify the fastidious. And, therefore, the following paragraph from the World, which has also been noticed by the Times, seems to us, to be worthy alike of preservation and consideration. As our contemporary truly observes—"There is such a sameness in the menus this season, that the following dishes, which were served at a dinner given by his Excellency Kuo at the Chinese Legation on the 29th of May, may be interesting and instructive."—Yan tsai, yü ch'e tang, kuo shao yü, chiang yao chu, kuo shao ya, chiaotsz, bombe à la Ignatieff. The first 'plat' is strongly recommended; it is the celebrated swallow-nest soup. Naturalists still differ as to whether its principal components are of animal or vegetable production. Anyhow, prejudices apart, it is excellent, and they say nutritious." Now, though this is only a "Chinese menu," and is perhaps somewhat obscure even to the "brighest" Mason amongst us, to the most "skilled" of our dining brethren, yet do not let us for that reason despise it, or pass it by either with a shrug of the shoulders or an expression of contempt. For there is a great deal of important information and of undeniable interest bound up in the composition and reality of a good menu. Some of us may remember that in that voracious and always pleasant legend, the "Last Chronicle of Barset," Mr. Crawley's friendly cousin, a genial London solicitor, objects to French dishes, and a "diner à la Russe" altogether, because, as he says, people don't like the "kickshaws" and can't enjoy the "show and flowers." He prefers to give, and he says, he finds that his friends do, a good joint and a bottle of old port. In a novel once read, but almost perhaps forgotten, Mrs. Stokes, of the De Clifford Arms, declares the following menu to contain "a dinner fitting for a marquis"—"Turbot and lobster sauce, gravy soup; removed with haunch of venison, chickens in white sauce, Scotch collops, maitre d'hotel cutlets, remove with jelly, blanc mange, Charlotte of happle, and custards." But some of us may prefer the French menu, and to those who do we refer them to page 34, vol. iii. Masonic Magazine, where they will see a bill of fare, which will be equally appropriate to a larger gathering, as it was to Henckaby Budgington's limited and select little dinner party. In this they will be able to discover the "grundwerk," as the Germans say, of a dinner that may be eaten and enjoyed anywhere. Those of us who have perused the "Art of Dining," or pored over Walker's "Original," will realize what an indispensable ingredient in the "battle of life" a good dinner is, how it affects our digestion and our temper, our bodily health, and mental quietude, and not only will they feel how much of absolute importance for us all, poor hungry bipeds, is involved in a good dinner and a befitting "menu," but they will gratefully acknowledge our reasonable kindness, in calling attention to a matter so bound up just now with their prevailing interests, and their personal enjoyments.

FREEMASONS IN THE LAW COURTS. QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION, JUNE 9. (Before Mr. Justice Field.)

VOIGHT V. TREVOR AND ANOTHER.
Mr. Wilberforce appeared for the plaintiff. It was, he said, a demurrer to two paragraphs in the defendant's statement of defence. The action was for libel, and the statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff was formerly a member of a lodge of Freemasons, of which the defendants were also members. The statement set out a letter, written and published by the defendants, about the unsuccessful election to the lodge of certain persons who were proposed for members.

Mr. Justice Field.—Are you a Mason?

Mr. Wilberforce.—No.

Mr. Justice Field.—Are you, Mr. Cave?

Mr. Cave.—Yes.

Mr. Justice Field.—It is contrary to the rules of Masonry to come into a Court of Law on such a matter. It will be much better to ask the Grand Master to interfere, and decide the question.

Mr. Cave.—We are perfectly ready to do so.

Mr. Wilberforce said that plaintiff had made application to the Grand Master, and he had said that it was a case for a Court of Law.

Mr. Justice Field.—There must be some error about it. Looking at the matter in dispute, I think it is eminently a matter for the Grand Master.

Mr. Cave.—I quite agree.

Mr. Justice Field.—Let it stand over, to go before the Grand Master. From what I see of it, it is a case that he will entertain.

ARE EXCHANGES WRONG?

Dear Bro. Kenning,—

I threatened you with another letter on this subject, in this Freemason, and you will see that "more meo" I am as good as my word. Are, then, exchanges wrong? It is said they are—morally—for numberless reasons unexpressed and not a few, I venture to think, altogether imaginary. What is an exchange of votes? It is simply this, that A says to B, and C says to D—"We have here, say 100 votes, in this charity. We have looked over the list. There are no doubt thirty distressing cases, but there is not a case which so commends itself to our individual judgment, as being a distressing case in itself, as to demand our support, so that we do not mean to vote at all. But, as we have a case next election, which we know to be a thoroughly bona fide case, and we also are aware that you, Bro. P.Q., consider Case 21 on the list, a very distressing one, we will lend you our votes (which otherwise we should not use), if you will help our case, which stands sadly in need of all the aid we can obtain, if it is to be successful."

This is the simple "modus procedendi," the "raison d'être" of the exchange, and though, no doubt, it is open to abuse, as is everything (what is not I should like to know here?) it has nothing wrong in it morally, in any respect whatever, nor can it possibly, properly, or fairly be arraigned as objectionable. If, indeed, the rules of the Institution said "every subscriber must use his votes," that would be a different thing altogether, but as that is an impossible regulation, and for the "must" we only read "may," so we are not bound, to make use of a "reductio ad absurdum," in order to show that the whole argument based on such a theory, is utterly unsound, illogical, and untenable.

If the voter cannot be compelled to vote, of course he equally cannot be compelled to select any one particular case; (which is a self-evident proposition, as it appears to us), but our good Bro. Simpson says, if he does not vote he is bound to exercise his own vote for some one of the candidates, and not vote through another friend. But is he? If he cannot be forced to vote at all, there is equally nothing to compel him to vote personally, and he has a perfect right legally and morally, unless the laws of the institution positively forbid it, to transfer, pro hac vice, his voting paper to another. Suppose a good brother is living far away. The Secretary sends him his voting paper, where shall we say to?—well, Erzeroum, where the Turks and Russians are blazing away at each other. But Bro. Philo returns the voting paper to a brother in London, and says: I cannot, for many reasons, enter into the merits of the cases, and I beg you to vote for the case you consider the most deserving. I have signed my voting paper; can he not do so? Is there anything wrong in what he seeks to accomplish? We cannot think there is, the more so, as it is the very principle Bro. Simpson is contending for indirectly, namely, that a local and central committee is to have the power, through superiority of knowledge, to recommend the most distressing cases. We have only to extend this principle a little further, and then we can see at once, I think, how utterly puerile is the allegation that an exchange of votes, in the abstract or concrete, is morally wrong.

I quite admit that if money is given for votes, or Masonic votes are exchanged for non-Masonic votes, something may be said as regards such a proceeding, but these are exceptions to the general rule of "exchanges," and are so "few and so far between" as not to be really worthy of notice here. For, usually, all exchanges are most fair, open, and "above board," and conducted on the principle I have enunciated above, for the object of the institution and the benefit of some particular case. But then it is averred that much evil has come of exchanges, and that many deserving candidates have been disappointed thereby. Now, my long experience tells me, just the reverse, that many most deserving cases never would get in at all if it were not for the possibility of exchanges, and that where cases fail, they are either weak per se, or the supporters are lukewarm, or the province or district with which they are connected does not do its duty. In my long Steward chairmanship, I can truly affirm that I have never known a really good case fail, though I have seen many bad cases get in; and the change advocated by our reformers will lead to more bad cases getting in, because we shall have lost "public opinion," a great "levelling power" as to exact merit, and the best antidote to jobbery and the "caucus." So I end as I commenced. Let us "leave well alone." Our charity voting is on the whole as fair as fair can be, and wants no tinkering; but let us all seek, be we who we may, to educate our Order up to that high-minded pitch of conscientiousness, somewhat difficult I admit, so that we may set our faces against weak cases and bad cases, and improper cases, that is to say, when for one or more satisfactory reasons the case never should appear on our lists at all.

I am, yours fraternally,

AN OLD CHAIRMAN OF A CHARITY COMMITTEE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

I am very sorry that the two articles in the Freemason of last week, together with the letter of "An Old Chairman," are based on an assumption (which I have twice openly and clearly repudiated), that I am advocating a "committee in London" which is to supersede the votes of the subscribers. I have done no such thing. I do not mean to do such a thing.

I advocate the removal of certain well-known abuses, which by time and custom have grown over the voting system, and which hundreds of Masons (and these "clear" and "careful," "thoughtful" and "intellectual") thoroughly condemn, and would fain remove.

I pass by the many hard adjectives which you apply to the proposer, as well as the propositions on these points. I leave our brethren to judge between us, and I may at once say that your courtesy in opening the discussion has already brought a host of converts to the views I have ventured to set forth.

One favour I ask—nay, one claim I must make—and that is, that I must not be credited, or discredited, with views which I have never held or put forth. I never advocated "a central committee," much less one "with unlimited power." I distinctly said in my last letter to you (June 2nd) "I proposed no committee in London."

And yet, after this, you have an article on the ground that I do!

This does not seem to me very fair, and looks a little like throwing dust to clear the air and make men see.

Our charities are the back-bone of Masonry, but if by any indirection, or abuse the wrong persons get into the right place, then it were better that the charities should not exist, as the brethren are subscribing to support those for whom the charities were not intended. While some are enabled to shirk the responsibilities which God and nature have imposed upon them, and the sacred name of charity is made a proverb and a by-word.

I am glad to find, dear Sir and Brother, that you consider many "unfit" and "objectionable" candidates are thrust in upon our charities. If so, I trust that you will strongly advocate a strict preliminary investigation of claims, and then a fair and pure system of election, "leading us not into temptation," and upholding the straightforwardness of Englishmen, and the justice of Masons.

I am, yours fraternally, R. J. SIMPSON.
[We note Bro. Simpson's remarks, and will allude to them in our next.—Ed.]

CURTAINED REPORTS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Why have you not given the details of the appeal case decided in the last Quarterly Communication, because the full statement of the ignorance of the brethren would have been very useful and beneficial. It is one thing to state the fact, simply as a fact, it is quite another, and much more important, to give us the "ipsissima verba" of the speaker.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

IGNORUS.

[We agree with the writer, and will see what we can do to remedy the deficiency, if not this time, at any rate, another; though probably our Reporter exercised a wise discretion.—Ed.]

AN IMPOSTOR.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

A few days ago, a man, about thirty-two years of age, and representing himself to be a distressed Mason named "William Harrison," an engineer, late of Newcastle-on-Tyne, called upon me for assistance, stating that he was anxious to get to Cardiff, his native place, whither his wife and children had already been dispatched.

He stated that he had been initiated at Cardiff in Lodge No. 36, and that he was still a member of that lodge, and he gave other particulars.

I felt it my duty to write to the W.M. of No. 36, and have, by return, his polite and business-like reply to the effect that he had "caused the books of the lodge to be looked through for several years, but could not find any reference to the party named," &c.

I learn that this person has imposed upon other brethren, and I therefore ask you to publish this note as a safeguard to others.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. BAXTER LANGLEY,

P.M. 1423; S.W. 871, &c.

THE ORDERS OF ARCHITECTURE.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

The question arose among some young Masons as to the order of architecture the columns of the W.M. S.W., and J.W. should severally represent. All were agreed that they were the Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian, but could not agree as to how they were to be appropriated.

The question has since been submitted to older Masons and to several Preceptors, but the conflict of opinion has placed the point in a greater state of doubt and uncertainty than ever.

Will you, Sir, either personally, or by the insertion of this letter, cause an authoritative opinion to appear in the Freemason.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

J. C.

THE ENEMIES OF THE ORDER.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

In a recent newspaper I noticed a singular appeal, by a "Staunch Roman Catholic," to the priest of his parish, to exert his influence to suppress the "abominable Freemasons," on the grounds that they do not recognise the temporal, ecclesiastical, and spiritual power of the Pope, and are opposed to the doctrines of Christ's Church.

These are, indeed, grave charges to answer, and belong to that class of antagonism to Freemasonry which, ever and anon, arises in different parts of the world among those who are opposed to, and do not understand, its teachings. A very short time ago I had occasion to refer to a charge, somewhat similar, and still more sweeping in its character, made in Paris, and I have the honour to submit it to you now under the caption of

"It occurs about every decade that a senseless tirade of invective is levelled at Freemasonry, and the attack on this occasion does not (as is usual) arise within our own borders, but comes from la belle France, the birthplace of Lafayette, one of the best Freemasons that ever lived, and the staunchest friend of the American republic during her trials. Usually the hue and cry is from some itinerant divine (?) who has been refused admission into the Order, or seeks to gain an ephemeral popularity by denouncing an Institution, than which none more benign was ever erected. These are the men who plainly see the mote in their brother's eye, forgetful of the beam that is in their own."

"The last shot from an elder gun would be the occasion of much mirth if it were not freighted with evil attempts to falsify and injure the institution of Freemasonry, and it is cause for surprise that a dozen intelligent Frenchmen could be found in all France, in this nineteenth century, to appeal to the Corps Legislatif to suppress a Masonic lodge on the grounds that it was impious and guilty of sacrilege in its work. Their allegations was in substance (for we need not go into the absurdity of their detail) that the effigy of Christ was burned and the body desecrated and trodden under foot amid a series of diablerie and cabalistic incantations, &c., and so on ad infinitum. What the result of these monstrous falsehoods were is easily surmised, for there is no holier place on God's footstool, the earth, than the altar of a Masonic lodge."

"It would be well for this batch of Frenchmen if their clever countryman, Monsieur Renan, who wrote one of the best lives of Christ extant, should handle them severely and teach them, if possible, a little common sense. So far as any attempt to desecrate the person or the character of Christ, we are sure that no true Freemason could be guilty of the impious act, and every word and syllable of the so-called 'Lord's Prayer'—the Pater Noster—is revered by every Freemason, of whatever origin, whether he be Jew or Gentile. What Masonry requires of every man is faith in God; and whether he joins with the inspired psalmist in worshipping his Creator in the grand language of the 95th Psalm, or adopts the modern hymn 'Jesus of Nazareth passes by,' there are none in the Order to question his right to worship and praise God according to his own conscience, its tenets being Faith, Hope, and Charity. Freemasonry was born when the everlasting hills came looming up in chaotic silence from depths profound; it was christened by the holy prophets; it accompanied the children of Israel as they wandered through the wilderness, and its foundation is upon the 'Rock of Ages.'"

"The value of Freemasonry is in its universality; its strength in its humanising influences upon all mankind. It is not necessary for the true brother to 'hang the instructive symbol o'er his door,' nor do flaunting jewels, badges, and regalia make him a corner stone, but that inherent sense of the dignity of true manhood which makes 'all the world akin,' and renders it impossible that he can do wrong to any man."

"We have no doubt that many secret societies exist which are inimical to good governments and injurious to the peace and welfare of the people, but they are comparatively powerless before the onward march of the civilisation of our times, and although some remnants of the 'Thugs' and the 'Stranglers' may still exist in Asia, and pursue their nefarious vocations, even those are rapidly becoming extinct; so we may also say of the terrible 'Holy (?) Vhone' and the 'Klu Klux Klan.' Where are they, except in the imagination of the credulous?"

"As we have not contemplated a defence of Freemasonry, but simply treated it from the standpoint taken by the handful of frightened and sapient (?) Frenchmen, we can assure them that the beneficent and allwise plan of creation for the spiritual, mental, and physical development of man is the absolute test of Freemasonry—its whole principles being guided by, and resting upon, the almighty power of Truth!"

Thus it will be seen that the views of the gentleman from Ireland and those of the twelve Parisians are, in a great measure, identical, and we recommend the study of Freemasonry to them, before they are again guilty of the absurdity of condemning or impugning it.

Whether, as is asserted, Pope Pius IX. is a Freemason we are not prepared to prove; but it is a well settled point that a very good Roman Catholic can be a very good Freemason—otherwise the universality of the Order would be at once brought into question and dispute—hence that is the "argumentum ad hominem."

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

ALFRED WELDEN.

MASONS' MARKS, RUNIC SIGNS, AND LETTERS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

Owing to being absent from home I did not get my Freemason of May 26th until it was too late to reply to Bro. John Yarker's letter, and my books being inaccessible (for the same reason), I was unable to give Bro. Yarker the information he requires, but if he wishes to see the marks found on the composition bricks used in building "Shushan the Palace," he will find six columns of such builders' marks in Mr. W. K. Loftus's "Researches in Chaldea and Susiana."

This I stated in one of my former letters.

As regards Runic signs and letters, they seem to resemble the roots of form (the signs of the Hindoo faith), which are derived from the triangle and circle. Modifications or combinations of these were (as I stated in my letter of June 2nd) also used by the old Freemasons to designate themselves in signing their work for the inspection of the overseer or master. The Runes and Binderuners of Scandinavia are known to have been of Eastern origin, and they resemble the Coelbreun y Beirdd of the Celtic Druids. They also resemble the Cuneatic alphabet, and are found on the monuments of all religions.

Mr. Deutche states (as I said in my letter of May 19th) that these marks are found in the foundations of the Temple of Jerusalem. These old Masons' marks are also found in Egyptian and Phœnician ruins, on Druidical rocks, and on Persian altars without temples, also on Persian palaces, Etruscan vases, Turkish buildings, Mohammedan mosques, and on Hebrew tombs, as well as on Christian castles and cathedrals. One of these marks (the number five of Buddha, the Solomon's seal of Gnostic art) appears as a Masonic sign at the side of the sign of the candlestick on the tomb of one Mellecosa, a Jewess of Tortonia, in Catalonia, about A.D. 500.

Wilson, in his "Pre-historic Annals" (p. 535), gives 11 letters of the Runic alphabet, and these are found to be identical with the marks of mediæval Masons. Others may be obsolete Runes, such as northern antiquaries recognise in the Bomaerker or house marks used by the Swedish and Norwegian peasantry to sign or indicate their personal property. Many of the marks are the same as the caste marks or Yantras of India. It is believed that they date from some ancient civilisation whence the Freemasons also proceeded. By their "marks" or signs the works of the several Masons were known, and his "sign" was quoted when the Mason came for payment of his due, or had to suffer fines for damaged blocks.

O'Brien, in his work on the "Round Towers of Ireland," says that "Saer," the Celtic word for a Mason, had three significations—viz., (1) free, (2) Mason, and (3) Son of God. The Hebrew word "aliben" expresses less than this, but the English title "Freemason," gives two of the meanings which O'Brien attaches to the word "Saer."

In France, upwards of 2000 Masons' marks, ranging from the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries, have been collected. Both England and France are rich in Gothic art, which dates even further back, but no trace remains of the contracts or labours connected with the erections of buildings containing these treasures.

In the year 1780, Father Guglielmo della Valle found in Sienna the original contract of an agreement dated October 3rd, 1266, and made in the church of St. John at Pisa, by the Master Mason or Operarius of the Duomo of Sienna. By this document (which is in Latin) he agrees to take with him to Sienna, as his disciples or scholars, Nicolo, Arnolfo di Cambio di Colle, and Jacopo di Lapo. The Master Mason doubtless carried out his agreement, as these names afterwards became great and famous.

Bro. Yarker says that some years ago he pointed out that a large proportion of the old English marks were well formed letters of the Runic alphabet, but occasionally Masonic symbols and even Roman letters. I am much surprised to learn that as 'this truth did not square with the assertions of the recently concocted and modern Mark degrees,' he was voted heterodox.

As a Past Registrár in Mark Masonry, I cannot help saying that I am afraid Bro. Yarker in his statement has omitted some of the facts or some important details, as in what he states in his letter I fail to see anything very heterodox, and, as a matter of information, shall be glad to learn what there is in his statement that "does not square" with Mark Masonry.

I am, dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,
W. E. N., No. 766.

MISUSE OF MASONIC EMBLEMS.

To the Editor of the "Freemason."

Dear Sir and Brother,—

As inexperienced brethren may possibly be misled by the display of the emblems of Masonry by those who have no right to use them, I am glad to see a brother call attention to the evil.

To add my mite for the information of the Craft, I may mention that in many shops for the sale of imitation jewellery, scarf pins, having the square and compasses in imitation silver, may be bought for one penny each.

Beside the pamphlet mentioned by "C. F." other medical adventurers use the same means of calling attention to their publications; and even the proprietors of travelling shooting galleries, and the photographic caravans seen at every fair, impudently use Masonic insignia.

Yours fraternally,
ROUGH ASHLAR.

Reviews.

A BRIEF MEMOIR OF THE REV. R. MOREHEAD, embossed in Moon's Type for the Blind. 104, Queen's-road, Brighton.

We have seen this most interesting work, which does very great credit to Dr. Moon, alike for the simplicity of his system of reading so clearly manifested, and the admirable execution of the work itself. We have looked over many specimens of Dr. Moon's invaluable labours, but there is not one of them which appears to us more clearly to demand notice, (though it be only a passing one) or more truly claim our admiration and approval. Some of our readers may not know how many and great have been Dr. Moon's unwearied labours for the mental, and we will add, spiritual illumination of all who are suffering the great privation of sight. It is impossible to read his list of works, now happily within the reach of all blind people, once, alas, really and literally consigned to "outer darkness," so to say, as far as any intellectual improvement was concerned, without feeling strongly what thanks are due to that good worker in the great army of humanitarian toilers, and how much he deserves, not only the gratitude of all who, like himself, are unable to enjoy the great gift of sight, but in truth of all who value honest efforts for the improvement and welfare of mankind. Indeed it may be a fair question whether the valuable services of Dr. Moon should not be rewarded by a national pension, and though the fund at the disposal of the Prime Minister is very limited, few claimants, in our humble opinion, possess a better case or a fairer claim. For how can we measure what comfort and happiness the embossed type has brought to the mind of many a blind person? The more so, as the blind are, as we all know, keenly sensitive of and deeply influenced by intellectual and religious influences, as if in God's providence, though one great faculty, in his inscrutable wisdom, was denied them, others were invigorated and even developed beyond their fellows. We feel that we cannot say too much, honestly, in favour of the zealous and philanthropic labours of Dr. Moon, and did our space permit, we should be glad to say a good deal more. The book he has so admirably reproduced is a very interesting one in itself, being the life of a very able and worthy clergyman, Dr. Morehead, who, to use the old Scotch phrase, did his duty "God-ward and man-ward," faithfully and truly in his time and generation. A companion and friend of many of those distinguished men who at one time shed much intellectual greatness and brightness on Edinburgh society, he ended his peaceful and useful career in a quiet English parsonage, among the hills of Cleveland. A man of many gifts and much power, his life and correspondence have been edited by his son, Dr. Morehead, well known by his long medical services in India. Sir Charles Lowther, the munificent supporter of Dr. Moon, (himself a fellow sufferer), and who married a daughter of Dr. Morehead, has thought well thus to preserve for all alike the memory of a good man.

He, as well as ourselves, will agree with Old Shirley, when he says

Your heads must come
To the cold tomb.
Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in their dust.

We will only add that should any of those for whom we write, know any one in want of any of Dr. Moon's valuable works, we shall be happy to hear from them, as we can, we believe, obtain them for them.

THE ROSICRUCIAN. G. Kenning, 198, Fleet-street.

The number for April is before us, and maintains its reputation and ability. For those who delight in the theories and researches of mysticism and of hermetic "aporrata," the Rosicrucian has many attractions, and we have no doubt but that it is largely patronised by the members of the High Grades. It is admirably printed and carefully edited.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—When rheumatism becomes chronic, and as it were fixed in a limb or part, it is truly a terrible enemy to encounter. The joints often become stiffened and excessively painful when obliged to be moved, or on exposure to changes of temperature, dampness, &c. Holloway's Ointment exercises a wonderful effect in alleviating this torture, for by its use the blood vessels of the part have their tone restored, and the irritated and painful nerves soothed and calmed. It must be persistently and perseveringly used, for the disorder is a most obstinate one, and will not yield unless resolutely attacked. These remedies will also be found to be most useful in cramps and muscular spasms. ADVT.

The late Southwark Conference created a demand for Compressed Tea beyond all expectations. Eminent Analysts declare it is only when tea is in its pure and native state that it will yield to pressure under hydraulic power. The London and Provincial Press unhesitatingly assert that if you want a cup of tea in perfection it must be brewed from tea that has been Compressed. Economists advocate the use of Compressed Tea, and say if you want to get double the value out of your tea use it Compressed. Testimonials in thousands speak highly of the increased value and advantages in using the finely selected teas of the Compressed Tea Company (Limited). Families are making constant applications for the smallest wholesale quantity supplied, and say, "We are compelled to send to the warehouse for Compressed Tea; because the tradesmen in our locality appear to know nothing of it; and as one pound weight of Compressed Tea goes as far as two pounds weight of loose tea, we hope you will supply us." Sold in handsome cabinets—1lb. 2s. 6d., 2lbs. 5s., 4lbs. 10s.—got up specially for the Easter trade as sampler, carriage free to any part of the kingdom. Works and Warehouse, 36, Southwark-street, London. Arrangements have been completed whereby Tea dealers can have their own blended and selected teas Compressed at a nominal cost per pound for compressing. All applications for Agencies for the sale of Compressed Tea, or from traders desirous of opening up wholesale depots for the sale of Compressed Tea throughout the kingdom, must be addressed to the Secretary.

REPORTS OF MASONIC MEETINGS.

Craft Masonry.

LODGE OF JOPPA (No. 188).—This lodge held its last meeting for the season on Monday, the 4th inst. at the Albion, Aldersgate-street. The lodge was opened pursuant to summons by the W.M., Bro. Lewis Lazarus, at 4 p.m., and the minutes of the last lodge were read and confirmed. Bro. Cogswell was passed to the Second Degree, and Bro. De Silva, of the Lodge of Israel, was, by the courtesy of the W.M., raised to the Third Degree, his own lodge having adjourned till October. The lodge was then closed, and the brethren, numbering 110, including several visitors, among whom were Bros. Clarke, P.P.S.W. Devon; States, P.G.S.; Cohen, W.M., 205; Austin, P.M.; Williams, P.M.; and De Silva, 205, adjourned to the banquet hall, where a splendid dinner and dessert were provided. During dinner the usual Masonic toasts were proposed, and were enlivened by a vocal and instrumental concert, by Bro. P. E. Van Norden, Miss Patty Laverne, and others. Bro. E. P. Albert, P.M., P.G.P., responded for the Grand Officers; Bro. L. Alexander, P.M., the president, for the Joppa Benevolent Fund; Bro. Clarke for the visitors. The brethren passed a very pleasant evening, and parted shortly before 12 o'clock.

MIZPAH LODGE (No. 1671).—An emergency meeting of this young and flourishing lodge was held at the Albion, on Saturday, the 9th inst. There were present Bros. Nelson Reed, W.M.; D. R. Still, S.W.; W. W. Medcalf, J.W.; J. J. Avery, P.G. Treas. Devon, Treas.; H. G. Buss, Asst. G. Sec.; Sec.; W. Vilven, S. D.; J. Bergman, J.D.; C. Schmidt, J.G.; Shaw, Tyler; also Bros. Klotgen, Morgan, Wright, Coppard, Wells, Lewis; and visitors, Bros. W. S. Whitaker, W.M. 1572; J. Chaney, 180; J. Kimpton, 1601; C. Daubert, 238. Lodge was opened at 2.30. Bro. Klotgen was raised by the W.M., and Bros. Morgan, Wright, Coppard, Lewis, and Wells were passed to the Second Degree. The ballot was taken for Messrs. Parkyns, Knott, Warden, Alpetter, and Nelson, which proved unanimous in their favour, and Messrs. Warlen, Alpetter, and Nelson being in attendance, were each severally initiated into Freemasonry according to ancient rite. Lodge closed at 5.30 in due form. The brethren were afterwards refreshed by a capital collation provided by Bro. Jennings. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been proposed and duly honoured, Bro. Buss replying for the Grand Officers, the healths of the "Initiates," "W.M.," "Visitors," "Officers," and Tyler's toast brought a very pleasant evening to a close. During the evening some excellent songs and instrumental music were given by Bros. Bergmann (who presided at the pianoforte), Morgan, Avery, Medcalf, Whitaker, Warden, &c.

LANCASTER.—Lodge of Fortitude (No. 281).—The monthly meeting of this lodge was held on the 13th inst., in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, Bro. R. Taylor, W.M., presiding. There was a good attendance of members and visitors. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, and Bro. Melrose and Johnson having given proofs of their proficiency, the former was raised to the Sublime Degree of a M.M., and the latter passed to the Degree of F.C., the working in both being gone through by the W.M. It was resolved that the festival of St John be held on the 28th inst., at the house of Bro. Hartley, the North Western Hotel, Morecambe. The usual proclamations were then made, which elicited hearty good wishes from the visiting brethren, and the lodge was subsequently closed in peace, love, and harmony.

MARYPORT.—Lodge of Perseverance (No. 371).—The festival of St. John the Baptist, in connection with this lodge, was held on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Maryport, when Bro. Thos. Carey, S.W., W.M. elect., was duly installed in the chair of K.S. The W.M., Bro. T. Mandle, opened the lodge about four o'clock, assisted by the following officers:—Bros. T. Carey, S.W.; T. Moore, J.W.; J. Nicholson, P.M., Treasurer, P.P.G.S.W.; J. W. Robinson, Secretary; J. Smith, Organist, P.P.G. Org.; J. Fulton, S.D.; G. Goodhall, J.D.; E. G. Mitchell, I.G.; and Harris, Tyler; and a goodly number of other members of the lodge, including Bros. J. R. Tickle, P.M., P.P.G. Purs.; J. Gardiner, P.M., P.P.G. Tyler; W. Armstrong, P.M., P.G.D.C.; J. Adair, P.M.; J. Walters, P.M.; &c. The visiting brethren also mustered in strong force from Whitehaven, Harrington, Workington, Cockermouth, Carlisle, and Wigton, amongst whom we noticed Bros. G. W. Kenworthy, P.M. 119, P.P.G.J.W.; W. B. Gibson, P.M. 119, P.P.G.S.W., P.G. Secretary; R. Robinson, P.M. and Treasurer 1002, P.P.G.S.D.; A. Taylor, P.M. 1532, P.P.G. S.B.; W. Alsop, W.M. 119, P.P.G. Pour.; E. Atter, P.M. 119, P.P.G. Pour.; J. J. Beattie, P.M. 692, P.G. Supt. Works; J. Young, P.M. 1400; P. de E. Collin, W.M. 962, P.P.G.A.D.C.; W. H. Lewthwaite, P.M. and Organist 1002; W. H. Hoodless, P.M. 327; W. F. Lamonby, P.M. and Secretary 1002 (Freemason); &c. The lodge having been opened and the minutes read and confirmed, Bro. Kenworthy took the chair as Installing Master, when Bro. Carey, the W.M. elect, was presented and obligated, subsequently also being duly installed into the chair, in a Board of Installed Masters numbering no fewer than twenty. The ceremony, we may add, was as usual performed by Bro. Kenworthy in his usual impressive and workmanlike style, ably assisted by Bro. Gibson, the Provincial Grand Secretary. The newly installed W.M. subsequently appointed his officers, and they were invested as follows:—Bros. J. W. Robinson, S.W.; J. Fulton, J.W.; Jos. Nicholson, P.M., Treasurer; E. G. Mitchell, Secretary; John Elliot, S.D.; Stoddart, J.D.; J. Smith, Organist; G. Goodhall, I.G.; R. Hetherington, D.C.; Milburn and Waite, Stewards; and Harris, Tyler. With respect to the Treasurer, however, it should be mentioned that Bro. Nicholson has held that important office for a number of years, and on the present occasion wished to shirk his responsibilities, in fact, objected to that part of the minutes referring to his re-election, by reason of his not being present when proposed. He also stoutly refused to come forward for investment; but happily, his brethren would not be denied, and so the old veteran felt at last bound to relent, and he was invested with much acceptance as a matter of course. Hearty good wishes having been tendered from Lodges 119, 327, 872, 962, 1002, 1400, and 1532, the lodge was closed in form. An adjournment then took place, in order to prepare for the banquet, which was provided and served in the lodge room, with much taste, by Bro. Fletcher, of the Freemasons' Arms, Maryport. Bro. Carey, W.M., presided, faced by the two Wardens, Bros. Robinson and Fulton, and a couple of hours were harmoniously spent, though the proceedings were necessarily curtailed, in consequence of the near departure of the last trains north and south. The conventional list of toasts was gone through, and the only item we have room for is embodied in the remarks of Bro. Gibson, the Provincial Grand Secretary, in proposing "The Health of the Earl of Bective," M.P., R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Cumberland and Westmoreland. Therein Bro. Gibson forcibly alluded to the dull routine into which he feared the whole of the province had fallen. Members went to lodge night after night to hear nothing but the ceremony of initiation, passing, or raising, and beyond this they knew absolutely nothing of Masonry. This he characterised as the "dry bones of Masonry," and the only way to effect a revival was to adopt and encourage the working of the sections and lectures. These remarks were well received by all present, and we trust that the initiative will at once be taken by the W.M.'s and P.M.'s of every lodge in the united Province of Cumberland and Westmoreland. Apropos of the above, our correspondent hints that the whole mystery is explained in the almost total absence of regular lodges of instruction throughout the two counties, as, although there are now twenty lodges in the province, only two are actually registered as lodges of instruction. He thinks that if each lodge registered itself as a lodge of instruction, and appointed a Preceptor, twelve months would work wonders, and a great aid to proficiency and uniformity would likewise be provided in the interchange of visits by the Preceptors of each lodge.

CHESHUNT.—Gresham Lodge (No. 869).—The installation meeting of this lodge took place on Saturday, the 9th inst., at Cheshunt Great House, Cheshunt Park, under the presidency of Bro. John Grogott, Prov. G.S.W., the Wardens' chairs being filled by Bro. Etherington, S.W., W.M. elect, and Bro. E. G. Pottle, J.W., P.G.S.B. The ceremony of passing Bro. Johnson to the Second Degree having been completed by the W.M., the chair was taken by Bro. W. E. Gompertz, P.P.G.F., and a numerous Board of Installed Masters having been formed, Bro. Etherington was duly installed in the chair of K.S. The lodge having been called for three o'clock, the short time at the disposal of the Installing Master did not permit of much elaboration, and this beautiful ceremony was therefore shorn of much of its beauty, a circumstance much to be regretted, particularly in the hands of so capable a worker as our Bro. Gompertz. The shortcomings in the lodge were fully compensated at the banquet table, around which sat, as visitors, Bros. F. Binckes, P.M. Grand Stewards' Lodge, Sec. R.M.I. for Boys; George Bilby, P.M. 185; George Mickleby, P.M. 449, P.P.G.D. Herts; G. Levick, P.M. 1227; George Phythian, S.W. 22; W. J. Walsham, 1491; and H. W. Gompertz, J.W. 1364, and who, in response to the toast of "The Visitors," one and all expressed the gratification they felt at their visit to the Gresham, which, from the historical associations of their lodge room, may be termed unique. Bro. Binckes, in responding for "The Charities," spoke of the great pleasure he had in revisiting the lodge after an absence of nine years, and said, although he missed many old faces from the festive board, he felt very great pleasure in seeing so many earnest Masons still in connection with it, and wound up by strongly urging the brethren to give a hearty support to them all. The brethren appointed for the ensuing year are Bros. Pottle, S.W.; Chapman, J.W.; Perry, S.D.; Cheese, J.D.; Mayo, Chaplain; Copstick, Treas.; Gompertz, jun., I.G.; Discon, Org.; Benard and Holland, Stewards.

PLUMSTEAD.—Pattison Lodge (No. 913).—The last monthly meeting of the above lodge, which was held at Bro. Tucker's, the Lord Raglan, Burrage-road, was honoured by the presence of Bro. Eastes, the Deputy Grand Master for Kent, and the Rev. Bro. Hill, P.G. Chap. for Kent; Bro. C. Cotpland, P.G.J. Warden, who is a P.M. of the lodge, was also present, as well as the following, who were among the brethren and visitors:—G. Tapp, W.M. 706; F. Pownall, W.M. 13, and P.M. 1536; W. Weston, W.M. 1536; A. Le Feaux, P.M. 30; J. F. Croisdale, P.M. 706; J. Griffin, P.M. 933; G. Spinks, S.W. 1536; A. Woodley, J.W. 700; D. Deeves, 1536; E. Sweeney, 706; H. Carlin, 1536; G. H. Masters, 13; W. Bidgood, 700; G. W. Hill, 700; C. Jolly (Freemason), 913, and others. Bro. W. T. Vincent, W.M., presided, supported by the following officers—Past Masters Tongue, P.P.J.W.; Kent Ellis, McDougall, Penfold, I.P.M.; H. Butter, S.W.; T. D. Hayes, J.W.; A. Jessup, Treas.; E. Denton, Sec. and P.M. and P.P.G.P. Kent; C. Cooke, Organist; W. B. Lloyd, S.D.; J. Chapman, J.D.; R. J. Cook, I.G.; H. Mason, D.C.; and R. Lester, Tyler. On account of the death, recently announced in the Freemason, of Bro. F. Pattison, late P.G.W. England, who was the patron of the lodge, the whole of the lodge was dressed in deep mourning, the walls were hung with black cloth, and the hatchment of the deceased hung over the W.M.'s chair. Upon the arrival of Bro. Eastes the brethren rose and saluted him with the honours of "five," and he took his seat immediately on the right of the Master. The only degree worked was the Third (Bro. Haslett receiving the benefit of it), which was most impressively done by Bro. Vincent; the fine harmonium, under the hands of Bro. Cooke, and the heavy funeral appearance of the lodge, produced an effect at once solemn and effective. The lodge was then resumed to the First Degree, and the W.M. rose to address the brethren upon the death of our beloved Bro. Pattison. He said they had met that day under the most solemn circumstances, to mourn the loss of one whom they revered as the father of the lodge, the distinguished Mason whose name they hoped to hold and perpetuate as long as the Pattison Lodge endured, one who was not only a Mason himself for forty years, but whose father was a zealous member of the Craft before him. When, fifteen years ago, it was decided to found a lodge of Freemasons at Plumstead, its founders were not long in discovering that the chief representative of the Pattison estate was a distinguished Mason, and hence the name, which at once stamped its locality, and gave it an immediate introduction to the Craft at large, to whom the name of Pattison is as familiar as "household words." He need hardly tell them that their late brother was a Grand Warden of England. Many of them who had seen him in his seat of honour at Grand Lodge had been proud to see one of their lodge so exalted among the chiefs of their noble Order. In the name of the lodge he thanked the many brethren who had come to join their regrets with them; especially he thanked the Deputy Grand Master of their Province, and their Grand Chaplain (who if they had sought their pleasure might have found a more festive occasion), for lending their honoured presence. Their Bro. Eastes, whose name was honoured and revered amongst them, and was never omitted from their gathering, had come many miles to be with them that day, and Bro. Hill, whom they knew so well, could never pay them a visit without sacrificing some two days of his valuable time. He hoped, as there would be no festive gathering that night, that before they closed their Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, in whom they practically recognised the working centre of the province, would tell them something of Masonry in that part, and he would also ask Bro. Hill, who he had reasons to know was as well beloved throughout the province as he was here, to address a few words to them befitting the occasion. In conclusion, he moved that the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons desires to express its profound sorrow at the death of their distinguished Brother Frederick Pattison, Past Grand Warden of England, P.M. of the Lodge of Friendship, No. 6, and a member of this lodge from its foundation. In the worthy character of their late Brother, his estimable charity, his warm hearted and generous friendship, and his constant walk in the undeviating line of rectitude, the members of this lodge recognise the personification of the genuine principles of Freemasonry, and a bright example for their imitation. They therefore place on the minutes of the lodge this expression of their respect and sorrow, and direct that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the family of their late Brother F. Pattison in token of their sincere and earnest sympathy in the loss they have sustained. At the request of the W.M., the Rev. W. A. Hill, P.G. Chaplain, and vicar of Throly, Kent, then addressed the brethren, and commenced by remarking that there were times in every man's life when he would gladly maintain silence, and like Aaron of old on the decease of his sons, "lay his hand on his lip, and lock up his strength." The proceedings of the evening seemed singularly to move to this—the mourning attire assumed; the strains of sad music poured forth, what they had just witnessed in the raising of one from a figurative death to a companionship with them in their toil; the emblems of mortality presented to their sight, conspired to produce a craving for quiet meditation, and to ponder on one's own inevitable destiny; but as he knew it would be a breach of duty to yield to that silence, he would speak. This was a sad day of mourning, as they all felt. They had sustained a serious loss. A "cedar of Lebanon" had fallen and lay prostrate. The sympathy of the departed founder of the Pattison Lodge and his valued counsel could henceforth be no more elicited. With good reason they had felt quite incapable of offering their wonted hospitality. In sorrow nature withdrew the appetite for food, and that night they would share only the "bread and water of affliction." And yet, possibly by this, the mind might the better flourish. From their lasting good might arise in the soul. They might better remember lessons concerning the mutability of all earthly things, and of the need of a personal preparation for death. The depart-ture of their lamented brother suggested solemn thoughts of the closing in of their own earthly day. That as Adam, their great ancestor, lived 930 years and then died; and Methuselah for the long period of 969 years; and our ancient master, Moses, with an eye undimmed by age, and with natural fire unabated, succumbed on the height of "Nebo's lovely mountain," at the age of 120 years, so we must depart after the fulfilment of the brief space of three score years and ten, and less than that in the case of many then present. The distinguished founder of the gorgeous temple at Jerusalem, the royal Solomon, King of Israel, whose wisdom is to this day so highly admired, and whose pre-eminence is acknowledged in the person of the chief of this lodge he who stood pre-eminent for his proverbs, and was gifted as a naturalist and a botanist, "who spake of trees, from the cedar that is in Lebanon, even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the walls, and spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes," he has left us words—inspired words—which may well receive the thoughtful attention of the assembled mourners. "It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting, for that is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to his heart." Evidently this great teacher intimated in these words that rejoicing on suitable occasion was not unbecoming the most gifted and prudent; yet the suggestion seemed to convey also, that such scenes are fraught with danger. "The feast of reason and the flow of soul" might be allowed the association of friend with friend was lawful, if attended by prudence and temperance; but because too many men were easily allured by the passing present, and so forget the future, he declared that better results would arise from visiting the mourners in their grief, and alleviating their sorrows, than attending a sumptuous banquet in a great man's palace. A constant round of festivity was a mode of living most unfavourable to reflection. The calls of religion found but a poor response with the self-indulgent, while the sight of the broken-up family suggested good thoughts of the vanity of earth, a wish for a better state, and led men to ponder the solemn declaration of the sacred law as to the result of a holy life, or its opposite, and such language is the following:—"Hear the conclusion of the whole matter, fear God, and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." The Rev. Chaplain then proceeded to exhort the brethren to the fulfilment of their duty to God, and to their neighbour; inviting them to follow the footsteps of the faithful departed; confiding that at death their faith and patience would not be forgotten. "The bright and morning star" would dispel the shadow of the tomb, and raise his loved ones to permanent mansions in heaven. To this consummation, as to a day without a cloud, he encouraged the brethren to look, and so amid separation, and change, and decay, be kept calm and confiding, and steadily progressing in every good word and work. The whole of the rev. brother's discourse was breathlessly listened to, and at its conclusion the applause was both hearty and spontaneous. The resolution, which was seconded by Bro. Coupland, was then put and carried unanimously. The D.G.M., Bro. Eastes, then in the course of an eloquent address expressed his thanks for the kind and cordial greeting extended to him, and regretted not having been able to visit the Pattison Lodge before; but during the three years he had held that office he had had so many calls upon him, that he felt sure they would excuse him for not having done so. He was well aware of the importance of the Pattison Lodge, not only on account of its numbers, but by the position held by so many of its members, past and present, in the high offices of the province. He then gave a few statistics showing what had been done in the cause of benevolence in the province, which, however, we will not anticipate, as they will be fully shown at the approaching Grand Lodge gathering at Erith, on the 4th of July. He then, after a splendid eulogium on the merits of Lord Holmesdale, P.G.M. Kent, proceeded to say that the Pattison and the United Military Lodges were two of the largest in the province. Last year he had the honour of recommending one of the members of this lodge, Bro. C. Coupland, for the office of P.G.J.D., and by his energy and ability it had been matter of congratulation among the whole of the officers that he had accepted that office. Their Grand Master had, too, looked at the position taken in the province by the United Military Lodge, and had determined to give its first and respected W.M., Bro. F. G. Pownall, the position of a P.G. Supt. of Works. He had been greatly impressed by the manner in which the beautiful ceremony had been worked by their worthy W.M.; it was excellently done, and reflected great credit upon both him and the lodge. He had been deeply touched by the eloquence of Bro. Hill; it was worthy of him and the solemn occasion that had called it forth. After feelingly referring to the great loss, both to the lodge and the Craft in general, by the decease of Bro. Pattison, he concluded a brilliant address by trusting soon to have the honour of being with them on a more happy and auspicious occasion. It was then proposed and carried unanimously, that a vote of thanks should be inscribed on the minutes of the lodge to Bros. Eastes and Hill for their attendance that evening, and Bro. Hill returned thanks. Bro. Eastes then withdrew, amid rounds of cheering, our esteemed brother evidently feeling the warmth of the brethren's good wishes. The election of W.M. for the ensuing year then took place, and Bro. S. Butter, S.W., was unanimously chosen. Bro. A. Jessup, who has well and worthily held the position of Treasurer for many years, was then re-elected, and Bro. R. Lester as Tyler. Bro. Penfold, I.P.M., then proposed, and it was unanimously carried, that a Past Master's jewel of the value of ten guineas should be presented to the W.M., as a token of the esteem in which he is held by the lodge, and to mark their opinion of the able manner in which he had during his year of office carried out the duties of that position. After the W.M. had returned thanks, the lodge was duly closed, and the brethren dispersed their respective ways, there being no social board under the circumstances above mentioned.

LANCASTER.—Rowley Lodge (No. 1051).—The regular monthly meeting of this lodge was held in the Masonic Rooms, Athenæum, St. Leonard's Gate, on the 4th inst. The W.M., Bro. Thos. Jackson, presided, but there was only a small muster of members present. The lodge having been opened with the formalities of the Craft, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. J. Bradshaw having given proficiency as a F.C., was entrusted and retired, and the lodge having been opened in the Third Degree he was re-admitted, and raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason by the W.M., the working tools being presented by the S.W. The usual proclamations were made, and the lodge was closed with the formalities of the Craft.

NORTH WOOLWICH.—Henley Lodge (No. 1472).—An emergency meeting of the above prosperous lodge took place on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at Bro. E. West's house, the Three Crowns, for the purpose of getting through with some pressing work that had been lately accumulating on the hands of the worthy and respected Master, Bro. W. Steele, who presided, assisted by the following officers: Bros. J. Ives, I.P.M.; E. W. , P.M., and P.M. 1076, P.P.G. Officer Herts, &c., &c.; A. J. Manning, S.W.; W. T. Turner, J.W.; T. Geller, Treas.; N. Stanford, S.D.; J. Plume, J.D.; M. Sherwin, Org.; W. J. Vance, I.G.; E. Davis, Steward. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Gaskill, P.M. 1076; Treadwell, 1076; S. Carter, 13; C. Jolly (Freemason), 913, and others. The work before the lodge consisted of raising Bros. Lloyd, Fenn, and Beasley; passing Bros. Turner, Jones, and A. Plume, and the initiation of Mr. J. Fairbairn, the whole of the ceremonies being admirably worked by the W.M. The historical portion of the Third Degree was eloquently rendered, and the whole of the working was most excellent. After the lodge was closed a committee was formed for the purpose of carrying out the summer banquet, and then the brethren adjourned to an adjoining room, where a cold collation awaited them. On re-assembling, the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. Bro. Ives, in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," called the attention of the brethren to the manner in which their W.M. sought by every means in his power to make a name for the lodge, for its good work done among the lodges of the district. In the arduous duties of that evening their hearts were with him, and they were proud of such able and perfect Masonic work. Bro. Steele assured them, in response, that he felt highly gratified to hear their hearty reception of the eulogy passed upon him by Bro. Ives. He believed he had been successful up to the present in fulfilling the expectations formed of him when their united votes placed him in that chair. He knew that much was expected of him, and he had tried hard to come up to their standard of excellence, and by their acclamations he felt that at least he had not lost their confidence. He trusted they would soon be in a position to have funds enough to have a good lodge of instruction, and they might at all times depend upon his assistance and support. "The Initiate" was then toasted, and returned thanks. "The Visitors" followed, and Bros. Gaskill and Jolly severally replied. In returning thanks for "The Past Masters," Bro. Ives, in eloquent terms, advocated the cause of charity, not only that charity that consists in giving money, although that was of the first import, but that beautiful charity that shows itself in kindness and brotherly love. They might give money to a man and not be thanked, because of the way it was given, but the smallest trifle, if given with sympathy and a "kind word" was more precious than "gold without love." He trusted every brother would not only be brothers inside that lodge, but would carry the divine principle of their noble Order with them into their everyday life, and the beautiful "charity of Christianity" would adorn and beautify that Masonic charity they were taught to love and practise. The toast of "The Officers" concluded the pleasures of the evening, which were much enhanced by the excellent singing of Bro. Plume and others.

TEDDINGTON.—Felix Lodge (No. 1494).—The installation meeting of this lodge was held at Teddington, on Saturday, the 16th inst., Bro. Francis Bradley Archer, W.M., in the chair, supported by Bros. W. G. Moore, P.M., S.W.; T. S. Archer, J.W.; F. Sumner Knyvett, P.M.; P.G. Stwdr, Treas.; Ed. B. Grabham, P.M., Prov. S.G.W. Middx, Sec.; E. A. Woolley, S.D.; H. R. M. Belward, I.G.; Geo. Hancock, P.M., P.P.G.D. Somerset, D.C. Visitors: R.W. Bro Col. Burdett, Prov. G.M. Middx; Bros. A. H. Lilley, P.M. 12; T. L. Fox, P.M. 19; Dr. Wm. O'Connor, P.M. 28; J. B. Sorrell, P.M. 176; F. Rath, P.M. 534; S. Carey, 901, and many others. The lodge was opened and the minutes confirmed. Mr. Henry Geo. Bevington and Mr. W. Rose, F.R.C.S., were balloted for and duly initiated by the W.M., after which Bro. W.G. Moore, P.M., was presented for installation, the ceremony being exceedingly well rendered by Bro. Knyvett, P.M. The W.M. appointed his officers, Bros. F. B. Archer, I.P.M.; T. S. Archer, S.W.; Woolley, J.W.; Knyvett, P.M., P.G. Steward, Treas.; E. B. Grabham, P.M., P.S.G.W. Middx, Sec.; Kingsmill, S.D.; Belward, J.D.; Sadler, I.G.; Geo. Hancock, P.M., P.P.G.D., D.C. The lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, presided over by the W.M. The usual loyal toasts having been honoured, "The Health of Bro. Col. Burdett" was drunk with much enthusiasm, who, in responding to the toast, expressed his satisfaction with all that he had seen of the working of the lodge, and announced his intention of paying another visit on the completion of the new lodge-room. Bro. Archer, in proposing "The Health of the W.M.," gracefully alluded to the satisfactory manner in which Bro. Moore had filled all the offices in the lodge, and predicted for him a very happy year of office. The W.M., in responding to the toast, said he felt sure from the exceedingly kind way in which the I.P.M. had proposed his health, and the hearty response given to it by the brethren, that his year of office would be to him a labour of love, and in emulating the good example of his predecessor he hoped to retire from the chair retaining the good opinion of all the members. He had now a very pleasing duty to discharge, and that was to present to Bro. F. B. Archer a very handsome Past Master's jewel, in recognition of the eminent services rendered to the lodge during the past year and as a slight mark of the high esteem in which he is held by every member. The past year had been a very prosperous one for the lodge, and this is in no slight degree due to Bro. Archer, whose year of office has been a very arduous one. The toast was very warmly received. Bro. Archer suitably acknowledged the toast, which had been so feelingly proposed by the W.M.; the jewel which had been presented to him that evening would always remind him of the kind way in which his services had been received by the lodge, and his endeavours would always be for its continued prosperity. Bro. A. H. Lilley, P.M. 12, responded for "The Visitors," and Bro. T. S. Archer, S.W., for "The Officers of the Lodge." The Tyler's toast then brought the evening to a close, and most of the brethren returned to town, after the enjoyment of an exceedingly pleasant meeting.

LIVERPOOL.—Lodge of Israel (No. 1502).—The last monthly meeting of this lodge, held on Monday evening, the 21st May, at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, was very largely attended, and the whole of the evening's proceedings was marked by an unanimity and efficiency which could hardly have been excelled. Bro. Maurice Hart, the W.M., occupied his place in the E., and he was ably supported by Bros. A. J. Henochsberg, I.P.M.; R. Robinson, P.M., D.C.; A. Jones, S.W.; S. Schonstadt, J.W.; Rev. Professor Prag, Chaplain; Isaac de Freece, Treasurer; B. Levy, Sec.; Rev. H. D. Marks, S.D.; S. J. Henochsberg, I.G.; W. G. Veale, Org.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. The members present were Bros. Julius Franks, W.M. 203; M. H. Edwards, A. Babow, M. T. Tieski, T. Saber, H. T. Wright, W. Woolf, A. Hart, H. Henochsberg, S. Levy, D. Gabrielson, H. Geldhard, W. Levy, H. Burnett, M. Aronsberg, M. Parkes, D. Isaacs, J. Simmons, S. Jacobs, A. M. Lyons, G. J. Somers, A. Liebschutz, A. Cohen, J. E. Davidson, &c. The visitors' list included the names of Bros. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec.; J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C.; G. Peet, S.W. 241; A. Cotter, W.M. 1264; J. W. Newman, 220; T. J. Harris, 1264; and W. Aronsberg, 1055. After the transaction of some routine business, one candidate was initiated and two brethren passed to the Degree of F.C., and the almost perfect style in which the W.M. (Bro. M. Hart) performed the ceremony (in which there were displayed all the weight of impressiveness and graceful delivery so essential in the working) elicited the universal admiration and commendation of all the brethren. The brethren subsequently sat down to an excellent banquet, and during the evening the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and cordially responded to. Bro. H. S. Alpass, P.G. Sec., who responded for the P.G. Lodge Officers, paid a high compliment to the superior working shown by the W.M. and his officers.

PLUMSTEAD.—United Military Lodge (No. 1536).—The usual monthly meeting of the above lodge took place on Friday, the 8th inst., at Bro. Plaisted's fine hall, on Anglesea-hill. As it was the occasion of the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, more than ordinary interest was attached to it, and there was a good assembly both of the brethren and visitors present. Out of respect for its neighbour, the Pattison Lodge, whose founder and patron, Bro. F. Pattison, P.G. Warden of England, has just died, the lodge was in full mourning. Amongst the visitors were Bros. C. Coupland, P.M. 913, and P.G.J.W. Kent; W. T. Vincent, W.M. 913; J. Henderson, P.M. 13, &c.; A. Penfold, P.M. 913, &c.; S. Wilkinson, 948; F. Butterworth, 1604; H. Burnett, 1604; W. Pean, 1604; T. Davis, 87; A. Upperton, 913; G. Beaver, 700; E. Palmer, 913; J. Wilkins, 700; H. Tucker, 913; E. W. Crews, 13; T. Carter, 13; W. Cobb, 700; D. Capon, 613; W. McCoy, 700; and C. Jolly, (Freemason), 913. The officers present were Bros. W. Weston, W.M.; F. G. Pownall, I.P.M., and W.M. 13; R. Croisdale, P.M., and P.M. 706; G. Spinks, S.W., and W.M. elect; H. G. Picken, J.W.; W. Murphy, Treas.; T. Cooper, Sec.; H. Shaw, S.D.; J. McCaffery, J.D.; H. Harding, Org.; Wilding and Wright, Stewards; and J. Lackland, Tyler. The lodge having been opened, the Three Degrees were splendidly worked by the W.M., and then Bro. Spinks, S.W., was almost unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year, Bro. Murphy Treasurer, and Bro. Lackland Tyler. After those brethren had returned thanks, a Past Master's jewel, of the value of ten guineas, was unanimously voted to Bro. Weston, for his ability in the chair, and then the lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned for refreshment. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts had been duly honoured, Bro. Pownall proposed the toast of "The W.M.," and said that twelve months had now elapsed since Bro. Weston took the chair, and there was not one member of the lodge who could not look back with pleasure to that time. For himself, he could safely say that no one could have been more anxious for the welfare of the lodge, or worked harder for its prosperity than Bro. Weston had. He sincerely trusted that he might long be spared to them, still to do in the future as he had done in the past, and he could assure him, that when he left that chair there would go with him the "hearty good wishes" of not only every brother of the lodge, but of the district. Bro. Weston, in reply, said for the last time he thanked them for their kind expression. He thanked Bro. Pownall, who in his position of I.P.M. had been of most incalculable service to him in carrying out the duties of the chair. To his brother Wardens he returned thanks for their good and loyal service to him, both here and at Grand Lodge. To his brother Deacons he gave his warmest thanks, and well might the lodge be proud of them, for many visitors had spoken to him with especial commendation of the earnest and excellent manner in which they had performed their duties. To the whole of the brethren he returned thanks for their universal kindness and courtesy to him, and while he felt conscious that he had done his duty, he hoped to their satisfaction, he should ever look back to the time when their help and sympathy had made those duties a work of love and pleasure. He again thanked them, and resumed his seat amid great cheering. The visitors were next honoured, and Bros. Vincent, Woodley, Davis, Butterworth, and Saville responded severally. The W.M. elect feelingly replied to a warm reception of his name. The toast of "The Past Masters of the Lodge" was well received, and Bro. Pownall responded, saying he held it a great privilege to be a Past Master, and some of the most treasured memories of his life would be associated with his Immediate Past Mastership of the United Military Lodge. He felt pleased and gratified to hear their W.M. say that his humble assistance had been of service, and he could assure them that, such as they were, they were at the service of any one in the lodge who might require them, and Bro. Spinks might at any time rely on him in carrying out the important duties to which he had just been called. After a graceful compliment to P.M. Bro. Croisdale, who had retired, he concluded a brilliant speech by assuring them of his affectionate esteem and regard. "The Officers" followed, coupled with the name of Bro. J. McCaffery, who replied, as well as did Bro. Wright, and then, after Bro. Jolly had replied to a high eulogy from the W.M. for his services since the foundation of the lodge, in reporting its doings faithfully and truly in the Freemason, the Tyler's toast closed the meeting.

GREAT STANMORE.—Abercorn Lodge (No. 1549).—The second regular meeting of this summer lodge passed off with the usual success on the 2nd ult., Bro. J. W. Garrod, W.M., presiding, assisted by the officers, Bro. Helsdon, I.P.M., and a good muster of the brethren. Visitors—Bros. Smith and Thompson, of the Westbourne Lodge, No. 733, both of whom were proposed as joining members for next meeting. The lodge was opened by W.M. at 4.20. The minutes of previous meeting having been confirmed the ballot was then taken in favour of Bro. C. W. Hunt, No. 1425, as joining member, and proved unanimous. The election followed of W.M. for the ensuing year, which resulted as expected in favour of Bro. Vincent, S.W., that of Treasurer being equally unanimous for reelection of Bro. Dr. Rogers. Bro. Middleton was again reappointed Tyler. Several brethren were then selected on the Audit Committee to meet prior to the installation in July. This was the first occasion of the lodge meeting on Wednesday, permission having been obtained since last meeting for that day in future. On the W.M. making the usual inquiries, Mr. W. F. Middleton and Mr. E. F. de Pontchalon were proposed as initiates. Much regret was also expressed at the unavoidable retirement of Bro. Patterson, S.D. A communication in favour of a testimonial to the Prov. G.M. was favourably supported, and will be again brought forward at the next meeting. The usual Past Master's jewel was then voted to the retiring Master, and after the I.P.M., to the great interest of the brethren, had very ably worked the Second Section of the Second Lecture, the lodge was closed in perfect harmony at 5.30. The usual banquet followed, and the brethren dispersed at 9 p.m.

MORECAMBE.—Morecambe Lodge (No. 1561).—The annual festival of St. John and installation of W.M. was celebrated by the brethren of the Morecambe Lodge on Friday afternoon, the 1st inst., at the Masonic Hall in Edward-street. There was a numerous attendance of brethren, including also a number of the Craft from Lancaster, among the latter being, Bros. James Hatch, E. Simpson, Jno. Hatch, T. Atkinson, H. Longman, R. Taylor, J. Jowitt, W. H. Baginall, F. G. Dale, J. T. Jackson, &c.; Mawson and Brewer (Bradford), &c. The chair at the opening was occupied by Bro. Capt. Garnett, the retiring W.M., who went through the preliminary business of the lodge. The chair was then vacated, when it was occupied by Bro. Dr. Moore, P.G.S.B. of E., who officiated as installing officer, and in a very effective and impressive manner went through the ceremony of installing Bro. William Duff as Worshipful Master of the lodge, delivering also the charge to the Master. The Master then proceeded to elect his officers as follows:—Bros. T. Longmire, S.W.; W. Longmire, J.W.; W. Stephenson, Sec.; R. Stansfeld, S.D.; W. W. Wiede, J.D.; R. Bannister, I.G.; A. E. Poole, S.S.; and G. Bingham, J.S. The charge to the Wardens was given by Bro. Longman, and that to the brethren by Bro. Jno. Hatch. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Moore for the efficient manner in which he had performed the duties of Installing Master, and also to Bro. Garnett for the urbanity and courtesy with which he had filled the office of Master during the past twelve months, both votes being ordered to be recorded on the minutes. The brethren subsequently adjourned to the house of Bro. T. Longmire, the West View Hotel, and sat down to an excellent dinner under the presidency of the W.M. The usual loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to, and in the course of the evening Bro. Garnett, I.P.M., was presented by the W.M. with a very handsome Past Master's jewel, in recognition of his valuable services as W.M. The jewel bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. C. H. Garnett, I.P.M., by the brethren of the Morecambe Lodge, June 1st, 1877."—Bro. Garnett, in acknowledging the gift, said he was completely taken by surprise, and the jewel would ever hold a place in his estimation equal to his love for the Morecambe Lodge and Freemasonry in general.

lodge was held on Tuesday afternoon, the 22nd ult., at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool. Bro. J. Bell, W.M., presided, and the officers present were Bros. B. B. Marson, P.M.; J. W. Chapman, S.W.; L. Courtenay, J.W.; A. Woolrich, Treas.; J. Skeaf, P.G. Org.; W. Sandbrook, J.D.; J. Atkinson, I.G.; A. Collinson, S.; J. Pyer, S.; and W. H. Ball, Tyler. Amongst the members present were Bros. H. Leslie, F. Emery, F. Wilkinson, Levy, Ray, Durden, Whittle, Savage, Squire, Buck, Williams, Keet, Ballard, Avan, Cotton, and others. The visitors were Bros. R. R. Martin, P.M. 1094; C. Heywood, 186; and J. Burfield, 220. Mr. Thomas S. Bailey was duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order; and Bros. Bowden and Durden were passed to the Degree of Fellow Craft, the work being most efficiently performed by the W.M., assisted by his Wardens. Bro. Dr. Henry Yates Pitts was unanimously elected a joining member. The following motion, proposed by Bro. Sandbrook, J.D., and seconded by Bro. Ray, was unanimously agreed to: "That the joining fee for non-professional brethren be raised from £2 2s. to £4 4s. od., the joining fee for professional brethren (those connected with the dramatic, musical, and literary professions) to remain as at present." After one or two propositions for initiation, the brethren adjourned to banquet, over which the W.M. presided. A pleasant evening was spent, several first-rate songs and recitations being given by Bros. C. Heywood, J. Burfield, L. Courtenay, H. Leslie, W. Hildyard, and others.

HAMPTON WICK.—Wolsey Lodge (No. 1656).—An emergency meeting of this recently constituted lodge was held at the White Hart Hotel on Monday, the 4th inst., and notwithstanding the almost tropical heat of the weather it was numerously attended. When the founders petitioned the R.W.P.G.M. to recommend to G.L. that a lodge should be constituted in this particular locality, it was urged that it would only be supplying a want that was greatly needed, and that it would be a sure success. This favourable augury has been fully realised by the great number of local gentlemen who have joined the "Wolsey." Under certain conditions the number of bona fide subscribing members is limited to thirty, and in consequence of the W.M.'s zeal and energy in allowing so many emergency meetings to be called, for the purpose of meeting the wishes of many residents anxious to receive Masonic "light," that stipulated number of members is almost complete. There were present on the 4th inst. Bros. W. Hammond, P.P.G.D. of Middlesex, W.M.; J. Hammond, P.M. 201, W.M. elect of 1512; Hon. I.P.M. Bentley, P.M. 193, acting S.W. in the absence, through illness, of Bro. Sharp, P.M. 84; J. Hurst, W.M. 1512, J.D., acting J.W.; Honeywell, P.M.; Dobie, Organist; T. W. Ockenden, I.G. 1512, Secretary; Marvin, D.C.; Scott, W.S. Bro. Pickering, P.M. 30, was a visitor. The ballot having been taken and declared unanimous, Messrs. J. H. Duffell and A. Elphick were duly initiated. The ceremony of passing Bros. Masters, Malcolm, and Piller to the Second Degree was then performed, and the labours of the evening were brought to a close by the raising of Bros. Taylor, Pinto, and Forge to the degree of M.M. The W.M. as usual conducted the whole of the ceremonies most ably and impressively. The lodge was closed at ten, and the brethren adjourned. There was no banquet.

Royal Arch.

MOUNT LEBANON CHAPTER (No. 73).—An emergency meeting of this most prosperous and flourishing chapter was held at the Bridge House Hotel, Borough High-street, Southwark, on the second Thursday in May. The chapter was opened by Comps. J. W. Baldwin, M.E.Z., F. Walters, P.P. 1st A.S.G. S. Middx., P.Z., as H.; J. T. Moss, P.P.G.R. Middx., P.Z., as J.; W. Smeed, P.Z. The following companions were then admitted: M. D. Loewenstark, S.N.; B. Isaacs, P.S.; J. H. Spencer, J. H. Sweasey, L. Samuel, W. Dunham, T. W. Adams, and others. Strange to say, there were not any visitors. The ballots, taken separately, were declared to be unanimous in favour of the admission of Bros. Henry Moore, 1326, and James Moore, 1326. Comp. William Smeed, acting as the M.E.Z., exalted Bros. Barney, Lamb and H. Moore into Royal Arch Freemasonry, the other officers being well posted in their duties, which rendered able assistance to the good, correct, and excellent working of the acting M.E.Z. Business ended the chapter was closed, and adjourned to meet on Thursday, the 18th October, at six o'clock p.m. Banquet and dessert followed. Songs, glees, and recitations were given. The usual toasts were gone through. The members separated, well pleased with a delightful evening's reunion, which had been so agreeably spent. Apologies were received for the absence of Comp. John Mason, H., caused through illness, also for Comp. James Cattley Mason, J., who was out of town.

LIVERPOOL.—Mariners' Chapter (No. 249).—The annual installation meeting of the companions of this chapter, which took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 17th ult., was very numerously attended. Jackson, as H.; and T. Oclshaw, as J.; the work of installation being performed in a remarkably efficient manner. The M.E.Z. then invested the following as his officers: Comps. Joseph Wood (Freemason), as Treas. (for the eighth time); John Ellis, S.E.; Henry Firth, S.N.; A. Cotter, P.S.; and Peter Ball, Janitor. Bro. Thomas Hunt, of 1182, and Bro. Thomas Walton, of 1264, were duly exalted to the Sublime Degree in an impressive manner by the Principals. Before the chapter was closed a splendid P.Z. jewel was presented to Comp. Pearson, I.P.Z., as a token of the esteem in which he was held by all the members of the chapter. A first class banquet was provided by Comp. Ball, and a pleasant evening was spent.

JERSEY.—Cesaree Chapter (No. 590).—The anniversary convocation of the chapter was held on Thursday, June 14th, at the Masonic Temple. The chapter was opened by Comp. Ph. W. Binet, Z.; supported by Comps. Jos. O'Flaherty, H.; G. J. Renouf, P.Z., as J.; A. Schmitt, P.Z., P.G.S.E., E.; J. Oatley, P.Z.; A. Viel, P.Z.; W. H. Chapman, N., and others. After the confirmation of the minutes Comp. A. Schmitt proceeded to instal, with all the forms proper to the occasion, the following companions to their respective offices, they having been duly elected, viz., Joseph O'Flaherty, First Prin.; A. Viel, Second Prin.; G. J. Renouf, Third Prin.; A. Gallichan, N.; Jos. Pallot, P.S.; J. Durell, P.Z., Treas.; George Rand, Aest. Soj.; and G. Rogers, Jan. Agreeably with his notice of motion, the S.E. proposed, seconded by Comp. J. Oatley and others—"That Comp. Constable be elected an hon. member of the chapter, for his spontaneous, generous, and benevolent services rendered to the Province of Jersey." The mover briefly stated the nature of his helping hand so fraternally extended to Jersey Craft, its fruits being generally known to and appreciated by every member in the Province. The proposition being put was carried by cordial acclamation. Several matters of local importance having been disposed of, the chapter was closed in love and perfect harmony, and the companions partook of a supper provided in the banquetting room, and when the usual introductory toasts had been duly honoured, the S.E. proposed "The Health of our highly esteemed and distinguished Hon. Members, De. H. Hopkins (Bath), W. James Hughan (Essex), and James Constable," which was warmly and enthusiastically received. The other toasts having been suitably acknowledged, the companions separated with most fraternal love and good feeling towards each other, highly pleased with the evening's proceedings.

HAMPTON.—Era Chapter (No. 1413).—An emergency meeting of this new chapter was held at the "Island" Hotel on Saturday, the 12th inst., to consider a notice of motion that the Chapter should be removed from the "Kings Arms" Hotel, Hampton Court, to the above mentioned place. There were present Comps. Sabine, M.E.Z.; Moss, P.Z., acting H.; Baldwin, M.E.Z. Lebanon, acting J.; Faulkner, acting S.N.; Dubois, acting S.E.; Wallis, P.S. 185, acting P.S.; Johnson, acting first A.S.; W. Hammond, P.Z., D.C.; Gilbert, Janitor. The subject of the removal of the chapter having been fully ventilated, it was unanimously resolved that it should be forthwith carried out. The convocation having been adjourned until the second Saturday in the ensuing July, the companions partook of a well served collation. The customary preliminary toasts having been fully done justice to, "The Health of the M.E.Z." was proposed by Comp. Thielay, the Second Principal. In introducing the toast the worthy companion expatiated at length upon the great services of Comp. Sabine to the cause of Freemasonry in general. He had but recently vacated the chair of the Chaucer Lodge, he was on the road to the Master's chair of the Era, and last but not least, he occupied the high position of founder and first Principal of the Era Chapter. He went on to state that the principal members of the Lodge and Chapter were the proud recipients of Prov. Grand honours, which distinctions not only gave a lustre to their own names but shed a ray of brightness upon No. 1413. In conclusion he said that he hoped the M.E.Z. would live many years to enjoy the society of his colleagues and companions of the Era Chapter. Comp. Sabine in reply made a very telling speech, in which he augured a very bright future for the Era, and which had met under such happy auspices that day. In conclusion he told them that nothing should be wanting on his part to make the chapter a great success. The remainder of the evening having been agreeably spent, the companions separated.

Red Cross of Constantine.

COCKERMOUTH.—Dykes Conclave (No. 36).—The quarterly assembly of this conclave was held on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at the Masonic Rooms, Cocker-mouth. The proper date of meeting should have been the third Wednesday in April, but the illness and subsequent death of the M.P.S., Em. Sir Knight Rev. W. Beeby, M.A., caused a postponement. There were present Em. Sir Knights R. Robinson, P.S., as M.P.S.; E. Tyson, V.E., J. Pearson, P.S.; W. Shilton, P.S.; W. F. F. Lamony, P.S., as Recorder, High Prelate, Prefect, and Herald (Freemason); Sir Knights J. R. Banks, S.G.; R. Bailey, J.G.; T. Mandle, Treasurer; J. Evening, St. Bearer; W. H. Lewthwaite, Organist; W. Potts, Sentinel; T. Bird, and Stephen Thwaite. The minutes of the previous assembly at Maryport having been read and confirmed, Bro. James Quay, of Curwen Lodge, No. 1400, Harrington, was duly installed, proclaimed, and invested a Knight of the Order. The election of officers for the ensuing twelve months was next proceeded with, when Em. Sir Knight E. Tyson was unanimously chosen as M.P.S.; Sir Knight T. Mandle, as V.E.; and Sir Knight W. H. Lewthwaite, as Treasurer. Em. Sir Knight Tyson next proposed, Em. Sir Knight Lamonty seconded, and it was carried unanimously, "That the Sir Knights of Dykes Conclave of Knights of Rome and the Red Cross of Constantine, No. 36, now assembled, herewith record their deep and sincere appreciation of the great loss to Freemasonry in West Cumberland through the lamented decease of their M.P. Sovereign, the Em. Sir Knight Rev. W. Beeby, M.A.; and further, that the same be duly recorded in minutes of the said conclave." A discussion next arose as to the best means to be adopted to infuse more vitality in the working of the conclave, and it was thought that the annual assembly in August should be a proper time to ensure a strong muster for once. Dykes Conclave was constituted four years ago, and there are now 49 members on the books.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF WORCESTERSHIRE.

Tenbury was the place selected by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Worcestershire Freemasons at which to hold their meeting for this year, and on Wednesday the 13th inst., the pleasant and picturesque old town on the banks of the Teme received its Masonic visitors. It appeared to be generally known that such a gathering was to take place and that portion of the proceedings which were of a public character was watched with eager interest by the inhabitants of the town. The Freemasons connected with the Provincial Grand Lodge assembled in good force, and the proceedings were marked by the usual novel—to the uninitiated—and interesting features. The brethren from Worcester left Shrub-hill Station a few minutes before nine o'clock, a saloon carriage being attached to the train for their convenience. Other members of the Craft were taken up at intermediate stations, and Tenbury was reached at eleven o'clock, the bells of St. Mary's Church ringing a welcome to the brethren as they entered the town.

The weather, although not bright, and at times threatening, was not unpleasant, and after refreshments had been partaken of at the Swan Hotel, at half-past twelve o'clock a Craft lodge was opened in the Third Degree by the Worshipful Master of St. Michael's Lodge, 1097. The Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. Masfield (the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. A. H. Royds, being unable to be present), and the Provincial Grand Officers, then entered the lodge, and having been received with the customary honours, the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in due form. The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge having been read and confirmed, the muster roll of lodges was called, and the accounts of the Provincial Grand Treasurer (Bro. C. C. Whitney Griffiths) having been audited, they were received and adopted. The next business was the election of Provincial Grand Treasurer, and Wor. Bro. C. C. Whitney Griffiths was again unanimously re-elected to that important office.

The body of the church was set apart for the use of the Masonic brethren; nearly the whole of it was occupied by them, and there was a fair attendance of the general public. The service, which lasted an hour (being a shortened form), was choral, the prayers being intoned by the Rev. J. Hampton, and the lesson read by the vicar, the Rev. T. Ayscough Smith. The preces and responses were to a setting used at St. Michael's College, the choir of which was also in attendance. The anthem was well chosen for the occasion, being—"Behold how good," by Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley. Only one hymn was sung (one written for festivals of this kind), and that at the end of the service. The preacher was Sir F. A. Gore Ouseley, Past Grand Chaplain of England, and Provincial Grand Chaplain, who preached a sermon, brief, forcible, and appropriate, from the words—"Two are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow; but woe to him that is alone when he falleth, for he hath not another to help him up." (Ecclesiastes iv. 9 and 10.) Having announced that the collection would be in aid of the funds of St. Mary's Hospital, the preacher said that in all great undertakings, whether social, political, or religious; in every organization, whether it were a national government or an ecclesiastical order; and, again, in every family circle, there was one principle absolutely necessary to the well-being of either, and that was the great principle of united action. The great Church, Sir Frederick Ouseley went on to point out, was framed on that ideal. Dwelling on the same thought he said, take away the principle of united action, and substitute selfish interests, and the society, or association, body politic, or benevolent association, whatever it might be, would totter and fall. That principle of unselfish, mutual aid was well set forth in the text. Having spoken of the principle of unitedness in relation to history, and to religious and secular life and in a social sense, and having insisted upon its being absolutely essential to well-being in each case, the preacher said, in conclusion, that undoubtedly those were the best Christians and the best citizens who had acquired the rare habit of thinking and working for the general good rather than for their own selfish ends. If such a spirit of disinterestedness and self-abnegation universally prevailed, this jarring, discordant, and struggling world would be converted into an earthly paradise—peace and contentment would prevail. Accordingly, every scheme which had for its object the promotion of the principle of mutual help and unitedness was worthy of most cordial support. That such principles were professed by his hearers that day was a very pleasing thought; he hoped such profession was not profession only, but something more real. He hoped they were all so deeply impressed with the fundamental principle of unitedness that it permeated their whole lives, influencing every thought, word, and action, and thus rendering them more powerful instruments for working good to their fellow-men, their country, and their religion. The preacher drew attention to the prayer written for the anniversary of her Majesty's accession, with the reading of which he brought his sermon to a close. The collection amounted (with subsequent donations) to about £25.

The brethren then re-formed in procession, and returned to the Swan Hotel, where a banquet was served shortly after four o'clock. The list of toasts was as follows:—"The Queen and the Craft," "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of England," "The Earl of Carnarvon, Most Worshipful Pro. Grand Master of England; the Earl of Skelmersdale, Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of England; and the Officers of Grand Lodge, present and past," "Bro. Albert Hudson Royds, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master for Worcestershire," "Bro. William Masfield, Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master for Worcestershire, and the other Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge, present and past," "The W.M. of St. Michael's Lodge, 1097, and the Worshipful Masters of the other Lodges in the Province," "The Visitors," "The Provincial Grand Stewards," and "The Tyler's Toast."

A special train left Tenbury at 7.20 for the convenience of the brethren, and Worcester was reached shortly after half-past nine o'clock.—Worcester Journal.

SUDDEN DEATH OF A BROTHER IN LIVERPOOL.

Many brethren in Liverpool and other places will regret to hear of the decease of Bro. George Adams Bond, master of the Prince's and Waterloo Docks, who died at his residence, Waterloo Dock House, Liverpool, on Sunday evening, the 19th inst., after a brief illness, in the 53rd year of his age. It would appear that late on the previous Friday evening, Bro. Bond was sitting chatting cheerily with some friends, apparently in the most robust health, when he was taken suddenly ill, and almost immediately became unconscious. Dr. Cross, of Islington, was immediately summoned, and he then discovered that one of the vessels of the brain had been ruptured, and that Paralysis of the whole of the right side had supervened. Bro. Bond remained in an unconscious state till Sunday evening, when he died at half-past eleven o'clock.
